George Barr Baker is chief of the Republican party's corps of press agents. He has headquarters in New York and commutes to Washington and Chicago at frequent intervals. Robert W. Woolley, who was for many years on the staff of the New York World, is chairman of the Democratic national publicity committee with headquarters in Washington, while Dr. Ernest Gruening, representing La Follette, also operates mainly from the national capitol.

Each of these super press agents directs publicity men representing their parties in Chicago, New York, and Washington.

But the political writers are by no means content with publicity tissues merely, and the publicity men have arranged personal contact for them with the candidates themselves and prominent party leaders at the various divisional offices.

Because Davis was in New York again after his western tour making that city his headquarters before starting on another speaking trip to New England and to Baltimore Oct. 1, the writer happened first to go to the Democratic headquarters for the eastern division, which is housed in luxurious rooms on the two top floors of the Belmont Hotel.

When Davis is in New York, he meets newspaper men from afternoon and morning newspapers and press associations every day at 2:30.

The writer attended the press conference Monday. Fourteen newspaper men and one newspaper woman were present. Davis sat at ease behind a desk, smoking a cigar and answering questions asked him with little formality by press representatives.

There was none of that strained atmosphere of prominent men and interviewers trying to make each other feel at ease. Davis was fluent and direct in his answers. The news writers didn't hesitate to ask any form of question which might develop a news story.

The importance of radio in the present campaign was one query.

"It is of extraordinary importance," was the Davis reply, "but it will never take the place of the newspapers."

"My speech at Omaha," he continued, "was broadcast by the powerful radio station at Hastings, Neb., and I was informed that this station has received postal cards from every state in the Union and Canada, stating that my address had been heard."

Radio, while proving a great help to politicians in the present campaign, has also had its restrictions on the more fiery speakers.

"It is as though your feet are nailed to the floor," is the Davis description of addressing a microphone as well as an immediate audience. "One has to speak slowly and in measured tones. And it is certainly shortening political speeches."

La Follette, according to newspaper men covering this candidate, experienced the same trouble when speaking recently at Madison Square Garden. As with Roosevelt, a favorite La Follette gesture is the energetic shaking of his pompadour and the waving of his clenched fist. Free use of this is curtailed when the speaker has to remember his radio public.

Nevertheless, all parties, according to New York leaders, plan to increase the use of radio during October. In that month, speakers from each party will be "on the air" at least twice a week.

After the Davis conference, which occupied 15 minutes, the writer completed inspection of the Democratic headquarters, which has the atmosphere of a large club.

This office collects and distributes Democratic news for the eastern division, the New England States, New York, New Jersey, and Delaware. Offices at Washington and Chicago at present handle the remaining states. Plans are being made to establish other centers in Denver, San Francisco and Detroit.

John P. Donlon, at one time managing editor of the New York Telegram, is publicity director for this eastern division. He has two former newspaper men as assistants, Edward Chapman, formerly city editor of the New York Commercial, and Roy Crandall, formerly with the the Buffalo Courier.

Miss Molly McEllen, known to most of the political writers of the country, takes all interviews between newspaper men and prominent Democratic leaders in short hand, to insure accuracy.

The publicity men dig up news from the various bureaus in operation at the headquarters, which are the bureau of organization, the women's department, the finance department, the labor department, the negro department, correspondence department, and the bureau of naturalized voters, where stories are translated for the foreign language press.

This "canned stuff" is sent out in mimeographed form to all newspapers in the eastern division and is also distributed in a special room set aside for the New York newspapers and press associations.

In addition to receiving this material, the newspaper men assigned to Democratic political news hold daily interviews with Thomas J. Spellacy, eastern divisional manager, and also the department and bureau heads. When Clem Shaver, national chairman, is in town, and other prominent politicians, they are also interviewed for news.

When newspaper men go out on speaking tours with Davis, they are assisted in many ways. Jack Nevin, who handles personal publicity for Davis, is there to help them, while William Donaldson, superintendent of the House press gallery, goes along to handle transportation, hotel accommodations, and the detail of advance speeches, in order that the news writers will have nothing but the candidate to worry about.

Leaving the Democrats and going to Republican headquarters at 2 West 46th street, one immediately notices a change from the club atmosphere to one of an efficient business organization. The two floors of the office building they occupy are petitioned off and neatly labeled. The press room is fully equipped with desks, telephones, and typewriters.

The New York office has a staff of 6 practical newspaper men who gather news from the various bureaus to be handed out to regular news writers assigned to cover Republican developments in the campaign. These bureaus are labeled as follows: Club Activities, Economic and Features, Woman's Bureau, Speaker's Bureau, Labor, General Headquarters, Caravan and Specials.

The Republicans are well pleased with the breaks, which the newspapers are giving them. During the first week of September, the New York newspapers alone printed 18 full pages of favorable Republican news.

"The established publicity policy of the Republican Party in the present campaign is to see that every facility is offered both to Republican and to Democratic newspapers for whatever material they may desire in the form of reports of news events, statements by recognized leaders of the party, and special articles for feature display," Baker explained.

"The physical organization of the Bureau provides for headquarters at Chicago, Washington and New York, where staffs of competent newspaper men are prepared to furnish desired information, and where advance copies of speeches are prepared for newspaper and press association distribution.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Copyright, 1924, by EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

THE COLUMNIST

(To that vast aggregation of altrustic egoists of whom I have been variously with sundrily and frequent. May they all live long enough to forget that there was The American Press Humorists until railroad passes gave out! H. E. W.)

I

Luck's blessings on that man who wields a pen
To sprinkle chuckles down the paths of men,
To cheer the downcast, lighten leaden hours,
And as he goes to scatter verbal flowers.
As fits his mood, so bends he to his task,
Asking no fortune as the greedy ask,
Singing his song, and going sun to sun
His toil sufficient to the day it's done.

II

Laughter there is, and smiles there are to pay
His toll in full, as his unselfish way
He takes; . . . or ever loses that fine sense
That counts appreciation recompense.
And in the smiles, comes tightening of the throat
At some low minor, some more sombre note
Slipped from the mood that sounds the muffled tread
Of sympathy, by some white-covered bed.

III

Friend of the World! . . . Long may you live, to be Comforter, strength, to weak humanity!
Long may your quips and jests make light the path
And fend the stings of sorrowings and wrath!
And when in deeper mood you strike the strings
That sound responsive chords of greater things,
May you sing true, and may your note be clear
To raise the weak, to dry the mourner's tear.

"Material for release in Chicago is made available also to the newspapers and press associations in both Washington and New York. Copy prepared at the New York headquarters is also available to newspaper representatives likewise at Washington and Chicago.

"A record of Republican copy published throughout the country reveals the fact that the Democratic papers are frequently giving to Republican news as much space as given by the Republican papers."

Since William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, is in Chicago, Republican offices there are considered the party's official center. Clinton W. Gilbert, of the New York Evening Post describes Chicago headquarters as follows:

"The offices from which the campaign is conducted look to me more like the offices of a corporation than those of a political party. They spread more or less over three floors of a big office building.

"Signs on doors all around indicate subdivisions of the voters: "Farmers," "Labor," "Women," "Colored Women," "Foreign-Language Press." There are a dozen of others. It is vast and, if you may believe signs on doors, it is thorough.

"I don't see the familiar faces or names. Headquarters have always been informal and rather rural. They were always a social center; the social atmosphere predominated. Good fellows dropped in mostly to talk. First names were the rules. I wonder if any one calls Mr. Butler 'Bill'? One or two from Massachusetts, perhaps. I should say that virtually everybody about was a 'Mister' except the numberless stenogs. And the difference! You always felt as one national chairman banged away at a rival that the two had a luncheon engagement a few minutes later and would lounge together and laugh together over the drinks. Boies Penrose and Bill Stone used to indulge in savage talk at each other's expense and then leave the Senate floor arm in arm. That was politics."

The La Follette organization differs from the others in that it is on a smaller scale. National headquarters are in Washington and there are about 10 regional offices in as many different important cities.

Officials expressed themselves as "entirely satisfied" with the space they are receiving in news columns of the newspapers.

Harold Kellock, at one time on the staff of the New York Sun, is in charge of the publicity in the New York regional office.

"Newspaper men find our news a little more dramatic than the others, and report it fully," he said. "When Senator La Follette spoke at Madison Square Garden, 100 newspaper men reported the occasion, some coming to New York from as far west as Chicago, and Minnesota.

"The backbone of our campaign is the labor press. Three hundred labor newspapers are supporting La Follette. A great majority of the organs that operate under the American Federation of Labor have given us their support, and have been turned literally into campaign documents. They are the most loyal and ardent supporters we have. Their circulation numbers between 8 and 10 million.

"We also have the hearty support of the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

"We are not spending one twentieth as much on publicity as the other two parties.

"In the eastern industrial territory, we have a volunteer advisory publicity committee, made up of editors of a number of labor papers. McAllister Coleman, former editor of the Illinois Miner, is chairman and Leslie H. Allen, editor of the Liberal, is secretary. Other members include Edward Levison, editor of the New York Leader, Louis G. Burdenz, editor of Labor Age, and A. G. Dill, business manager of the Crisis, a negro organ."

LaFollette makes Washington his headquarters, and when he is there he grants the press daily interviews.

Thus from the 3 major parties is the political news of each day carefully gathered and placed in newspaper columns, leaving the final choice to the voters themselves.

CANADIAN PRESS OPERATORS ACCEPT CONCILIATION OFFER

Appoint Representative to Confer With Wire Service—Ordered to Resume Work by Chiefs—Livesay Refuses to Recognize Union

ACCEPTANCE by striking operators of the Canadian Press management's offer to arbitrate, and an order from union headquarters telling the men to report back to work Monday, Sept. 22, while differences were being arbitrated, were the week's outstanding developments in the strike of Canadian Press telegraphers, which began Sept. 11, when 77 men left their keys.

The offer of the Minister of Labor at Ottawa to appoint a board of conciliation, refused by the men at the time they went on strike, was accepted Monday. E. Norman Smith of the Ottawa Journal, president of the Canadian Press, was appointed to represent that organization while the union named J. G. O'Donough K. C., to represent its interests.

"The company has always offered to arbitrate," said General Manager J. F. B. Livesay, "and so far as we are concerned this dispute has never been a question of wages. The men made exorbitant demands of a wage increase to which we replied by a notice of a small reduction which we think fair seeing that since the agreement was made 4 years ago the cost of living has tumbled. We offered to arbitrate the question of increase or decrease under the arbitration clause we contend was inserted in the agreement for that very purpose. Or we would first of all arbitrate the interpretation of that clause. The men refused, offering indeed to arbitrate only the existing wage or an increase, which from the company angle was absurd. Being then threatened with a strike, we applied as a public utility to the Minister of Labor for a board of conciliation which was then granted. The men struck in spite of this and in doing so placed themselves on a very insecure ground.

"It is necessary to bring this out," Mr. Livesay continued, "because the men have claimed they struck to avert a decreased wage on which the company insisted. Nothing could be further from the fact. In taking the strike vote they used these very words, 'Your committee strongly recommends immediate and drastic action to enforce our demands for an increase.' They thought they could tie up the news service completely and beat us in 24 hours However, not a single newspaper in Canada has missed receiving a news service by telegraph, telephone or radio since the strike started. Somewhat reluctantly, because that means the permanent replacement of a large number of Morse men, the company has set about the task of installing automatic printers. Our first printer circuit, connecting Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto with New York and each other, is already working. Other circuit equipment has been ordered from the Morkrum company of Chicago, the very last word in automatic printer service.

"Realizing that they were misled by their union officials and recognizing that in the past they always have had a fair deal from the Canadian Press, some of our former telegraphers have voluntarily returned to work and are now being employed. It is regrettable, indeed, that we cannot find positions for all of the 77 men that went out, but blame for that must rest elsewhere.

"I have received a letter from J. Clark, the strikers' general chairman," went on Mr. Livesay. "When after notifying us that they were appointing their member to the board of conciliation, Mr. Clark went on as follows: 'This will be your official notification that all telegraphers in your employ are being instructed to return to work effective with all night shifts Monday, Sept. 22.' This strikes the management as a little naive; they went out on strike and by that act ceased to be employees of the company. It is an unfortunate fact that we cannot take them all back even if we so desired."

"I am replying to Mr. Clark," said Mr Livesay, "by sending him a memorandum of the conditions under which alone we can take back to work such of our former employees as we can find positions for. They must agree to these conditions and they must come back individually. This memorandum is as follows: 'Before taking any former employes back to work the management of the Canadian Press must have the following clearly understood:

" 'The management has stated publicly that because the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America broke its agreement with the Canadian Press by refusing to arbitrate and by then calling a strike in face of the appointment of a board of conciliation by the Minister of Labor at Ottawa, the company cannot further recognize this union. Modification of that decision and future recognition of the union must depend absolutely on whether the company can secure adequate protection against similar attempted paralysis of its functions.'

"Owing to the strike, which was aimed to entirely tie up the news services of the Canadian Press, the company has found it necessary to start the reorganizations of its primary news circuits on an automatic printer basis, thus dispensing with the need of any considerable number of Morse telegraphers. It is impossible at the present time for the company to say how many men ultimately will be thus displaced. Any men taken into the service now must necessarily be on a temporary basis.

"The Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, having by this breach of agreement cancelled its contract with the Canadian Press, the company cannot recognize any clauses of that agreement but the management undertakes to give the men equally as good treatment as they could receive under that agreement. The seniority list being thus automatically cancelled the company proposes to use its own discretion in the selection of such men for whom it can find immediate positions. These men who have already returned to work will head the seniority list.

"The company will pay the old scale of wages on the understanding that any changes in such scale arrived at by future negotiations shall be made retroactive to the date of re-employment. Accepting these conditions, such men as desire re-employment must file individual application by person or by wire with the chief traffic managers at Toronto and Winnipeg respectively.

"Procedure with the board of conciliation rests upon whether these preliminary conditions are accepted.

"Only Morse telegraphers will be included by the company in any new agreement, and any such agreement must contain a comprehensive clause providing for arbitration before strikes of any kind for any cause at any time and on renewals or modifications."

Veteran Celebrates 90th Birthday

Dudley S. Crandall, Wisconsin's oldest newspaper editor and telegrapher, has just celebrated his 90th birthday at Sylvan Lodge, Sturgeon Bay. He is in good health and hopes to arrive at his 100th anniversary. He was formerly editor of the Sturgeon Bay Advocate. His first newspaper writing was done at Champaign, Ill. He established the Chicago Union Park Banner and then became connected with the Menominee (Mich.) Herald and the Sturgeon Bay (Wis.) Independent.

Daily Occupies New Home

Keokuk (Ia.) Gate City this week occupied its new home on North Sixth street. The business office occupies the entire first floor, while the second floor houses the editorial and composing rooms.

FEMINIST TRIUMPH COMPLETE IN BALTIMORE

WE'VE often heard that a groom was unimportant at a wedding. But "Billy Batchelor" who writes society notes for the Baltimore News, ignored the nonentity entirely in the following society note in which the groom's name is not even mentioned:

"Westacre was the scene of Margaret Alvey's marriage at 6 P. M., near Darlington, Md. Mary Alvey, in orchid chiffon, was her sister's maid of honor, and powder blue and apricot chiffon were the motifs for the four bridesmaids—Sarah Johnston, Virginia Poor, Mary Duvall and Anne Mitchell of Hagerstown, Buchanan Shreve was best man, and William V. Elder, Jr., Barrington Hall, William T. Shackelford, Jr., and Professor Tabb were ushers."

LONDON MUSIC CRITIC ON N. Y. POST STAFF

Henry T. Finck, Who Resigns After 43 Years Service on Newspaper Succeeded by Ernest Newman for 1924-25 Season

Ernest Newman, of London, who is considered one of the foremost European music critics, will join the staff of the New York Evening Post as guest critic for the season of 1924-25.

He will arrive in New York Sept. 28, on the S. S. Cleveland, and will begin his duties on the Evening Post immediately, succeeding Henry T. Finck, who resigned this summer, after 43 years' service with that newspaper. Finck intends to live in Europe on the Riviera, resting and writing.

Mr. Newman is the second noted English critic to join the staff of an American newspaper, and the first to act as guest critic for an entire season. H. C. Colles of the London Times, acted in a similar capacity for the New York Times from October 1923 to January 1924.

Born at Liverpool in 1868, preparing for the Indian Civil Service and engaged in business for a time at Liverpool, Mr. Newman's enthusiasm for musical art led him to become a professor of music at the Midland Institute, Birmingham, in 1903.

He retained the post for two seasons, and then began to lay the solid foundation of his critical renown, as musical editor of the Manchester Guardian in 1905 and of the Birmingham Post in 1906. He remained with the latter organ until 1919, when he settled in London as critic of the Sunday Times, at the same time serving as critic for the Guardian.

He is the author of "Gluck and the Opera" (1895), "A Study of Wagner" (1899), "Musical Studies" (1905), "A Musical Motley" (1919), and biographies of Wagner, Elgar, Hugo Wolf, and Strauss. In addition to his orginal writings he has translated Weingartner's "Treatise on Conducting," Schweitzer's monumental classic on Bach and the texts of Wagner's operas.

Mr. Newman also contributed to "The Art of Music" (1914-17), and has edited "The New Library of Music" and fifty of the songs of Wolf. In 1920 he issued a volume on "The Piano-Player and its Music."

New Cable to Cuba

John L. Merrill, president of All America Cables, Inc., has announced that a new cable between New York and Cuba for "express service" will be laid and in operation by the end of the year. Since 1920 the company has added more than 5,000 miles of submarine cable to its system in North, Central and South America.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

(Continued from Last Issue)

Record of the Herald During the Civil War

The Civil War gave Mr. Bennett the opportunity to reveal his splendid powers of organization and to manifest his wonderful foresight in covering every phase of the gigantic conflict. The first shot fired at Fort Sumter found him already prepared to promptly get the latest authentic information from the Southern States through his trained staff of correspondents, and during the early months of the war, the Herald gave to the public one well nigh unbroken chain of "beats" over its less enterprising contemporaries, who lacked a head like Bennett's to systematize the work of news gathering. Mr. Bennett never hesitated to pay the price to get the first news of battles, military movements and plans of campaign, and in 1863-4 had 63 reporters and correspondents in the field, besides many volunteer contributors, who knew that Bennett paid liberally for authentic news. A news "beat" over his competitors was more precious to him than gold as was well demonstrated on many occasions. He never questioned or examined the accounts of reporters who obtained news in advance of their rivals, and frequently paid contributors double rates for exclusive stories. Once he paid a correspondent $25 for a news telegram of 3 words, for which a bill of one dollar had been rendered. On another occasion he ordered $100 to be paid to a contributor for an article of 6 columns, which had already been contracted for at $8 a column, adding by way of explanation to Mr. Hudson, "He may have something else as good." He never tolerated defeat in news gathering, and once refused to pay the expenses including an item of cost of a horse killed in battle, of a correspondent who was beaten a whole day by the World correspondent, remarking in his half humorous, half satirical manner, "A horse which couldn't beat the World wasn't worth paying for."

It cost him $525,000 to gather the news of the 4 years of war, besides additional expenditures for maps, telegraphic reports, and direct information from the Southern States by "underground" channels. One of the most remarkable feats of the Herald was the compiling of the roster of the entire Confederate army and navy, obtained with the greatest difficulty during months of secret effort by trained representatives. The heads of the Federal Government and especially the officials of the War Department always scanned the Herald closely for advance information of the enemy's movements, and old Charley Farrell (later the city editor) once said: "Bennett knew more about what was going on than President Lincoln did!"

Naturally the circulation of the Herald expanded by leaps and bounds. The presses were kept running night and day, and the paper was eagerly read throughout the entire North, for its lists of killed and wounded were always the fullest and generally the first to appear.

On April 6, 1861, Mr. Bennett said:

"Civil war, like the sword of Damocles, hangs suspended over this country by a single hair. As we predicted, the anti-slavery radicals of our new Administration have gained the control of it, and the rebels and traitors of the seceded States are to be whipped into submission."

On April 12, on the same page with a picture of the Confederate flag and other illustrations, the Herald, under the editorial head of "The War Begun," referred sadly to the beginning of hostilities at Fort Sumter.

"Through the events of the last few days, the last blow has been given to the fabric of freedom, raised at such cost by the Fathers of the Republic. Civil war has put an end to a Confederacy which had existed for three-quarters of a century, and the Constitution of 1789 has been replaced by military governments. The time for argument has ceased, and the appeal that has been made to arms precludes the possibility of foretelling what may be the issue of the present melancholy crisis."

Denial that the Herald Was Threatened by a Mob

The news of the bombardment of Fort Sumter created intense excitement in New York. The Tribune in urging the crushing of the rebels, spoke of "traitors" at home, and reported that a mob had made a hostile demonstration against the Herald; that an attack on the office was planned on the night of Sunday, April 14, and that a police force was kept in reserve, ready to protect it if necessary.

The Herald characterized the reports as "false, mean and malicious." However the Tribune insisted on the truth of its story, saying that "The popular manifestation was so unmistakable that its effect upon the Herald was made strikingly manifest, for yesterday (the 17th) it went so far as to say: 'In regard to the display of the American flag, no one has asked us to do so. It was unnecessary to take that trouble. The glorious flag of the Union is our flag, and long may it wave.' It was perhaps unfortunate (continued the Tribune) for the Herald, that when the people gathered and demanded the raising of the American flag, it was obliged to send out and purchase a supply, having a day or two before, in anticipation of a very different feeling among the people, provided itself with a set of Secession colors!"

The Herald indignantly denied the truth of the story, insisting that the crowd in front of its office was gathered there to read the war bulletins and buy the paper, not to try to sack the establishment. The Herald further said that the crowd "did not compel us to display the American flag from our windows; nor that Mr. Bennett, the proprietor of this journal was followed by a crowd and hooted in the street. As to the latter statement all that we need say in refutation is that Mr. Bennett is quite unaware of having been offered any such insult, and that in the street as well as out of it, he has been treated with perfect courtesy."

The Tribune continued its irritating attacks on the Herald, and nicknamed it "The Daily Tumbler," due to its alleged contradictory editorial policy, hinting at disloyalty, and presenting extracts in parallel columns from a Herald article in proof of its inconsistency.

On April 10, 1861, the Tribune entered on the twenty-first year of its existence, and Mr. Greeley, then in early manhood, was its sole editor and publisher, "but 20 years of incessant labor and care have since made their mark upon him, and he does not seek to conceal that he is older in feelings than in years."

At this time the Tribune claimed a circulation of "hardly less than 300,000, much larger than that of any newspaper."

The Draft Riots

The terrible Draft Riots in New York, beginning on July 13, 1863, and continuing for 5 days, were fully reported in the Herald. Fifty buildings were burned; negroes were mobbed and numbers hung or beaten to death, and it was estimated that 500 rioters were killed by the military forces called back from the seat of war to suppress the disorders at all costs. The Mayor of the city surrendered his authority to Governor Seymour, and the greatest alarm prevailed everywhere. The columns of the Herald, clogged with page accounts of the bloody fighting at the war front, forced the managers to place the stories of the riots on its editorial page, and comments were necessarily brief and disconnected.

Joe Howard's Hoaxing of the Newspapers

In May, 1864, occurred one of the remarkable incidents of the great war. It was the issuing by Joe Howard, one of the most erratic and brilliant journalists of the period, of a bogus proclamation, purporting to have been signed by President Lincoln in Washington, and appointing a day of fasting and prayer, and calling for the enlistment of 400,000 men! Copies of it were sent to all the newspapers, but only two, the World and the Journal of Commerce, were tricked into publishing it. Its appearance caused intense excitement, followed by popular indignation against the author of the hoax, when the "Proclamation" was denounced by the Government as a forgery.

The Federal authorities began an immediate investigation; suspended the publication of the World and Journal of Commerce for several days, while Joe Howard, then city editor of the Brooklyn Eagle to which paper he had gone from the Times shortly before, was promptly snatched from his desk and sent to Fort Lafayette, where he was held a prisoner for 14 weeks. Joe always insisted that he wrote the bogus document on the spur of the moment as a good joke, and told the writer once, that he had never ceased to regret his impulsive act. The Herald, however, at the time, thought differently, charging that Howard had been speculating in Wall Street, and deliberately issued the "Proclamation" in hope it would influence the market in his favor.

As the Herald said in regard to Howard's detection and arrest:

"Everywhere the most decided satisfaction was expressed, except by the Tribune. It couldn't believe that 'Howard of the Times' was the criminal. This is the first time the Tribune ever hesitated to believe anything bad. The cause of its incredulity was the fact that Howard is a prominent Republican of the Plymouth Church variety, and his father is a deacon in the church."

The real nature of the document was suspected by Mr. Bennett, and therefore it did not appear in the Herald.

In the 'eighties, Joe Howard became a valued member of the Herald staff, and Mr. James Gordon Bennett, 2nd, had him assigned to report many great events.

(To be continued next week)

U. S. CHAMBER'S RETAIL TRADE SURVEY PRESENTS INCOMPLETE PICTURE

Taking Average Retail Purchases from 12,000 Family Budgets, Its Total for Nation Runs 30 Per Cent Below Other Reliable Estimates of Business Volume

By ARTHUR ROBB

POPULATION'S Purchasing Power is the title of an extremely interesting pamphlet issued this week by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Domestic Distribution Division, at Washington, D. C. For the first time, so far as the writer knows, U. S. Census population figures are correlated with Bureau of of Labor Statistics material, in an effort to show what the public buys and what price it pays. The idea is one of vital interest to advertisers, general and local, as well as to newspaper publishers and to all other business men.

Of chief moment is the purported showing of the total retail business transacted in 31 centres of distribution, including 34 cities. This money total was calculated by multiplying the 1920 trading area population by the average individual's budget expenditures for food, clothing, furniture and furnishings, fuel and light, and miscellaneous items. The approach is new, and the result is not all that might be expected.

The budget figure, which is the keystone of the structure, was found by the Bureau of Labor Statistics after surveys covering 12,000 workingmen's families in all parts of the country. With these 12,000 "cases," all drawn from substantially one group of the population, the Chamber of Commerce sets up a figure of $207.62 as the average expenditure in 1923 of each individual of the 105,710,620 people that the Census man counted 4 years ago. The original statistics divided the average budget as follows:

Food, $97.58
Clothing, $48.03
Furniture, $18.15
Fuel and Light, $20.18
Miscellaneous, $22.94.

The average family surveyed consisted of 4.9 persons, the booklet sets forth, and the average retail purchases of this average family totalled last year $1,027.34. That doesn't ring like heavy metal.

Then the Chamber's statisticians multiplied the 105,710,620 population figure by the individual budget and produced "total retail business" of 1923 as $21,947,638,923. Other estimates of this figure, just as unofficial and no more scientifically compiled, place it from $3,000,000 to $9,000,000,000 higher—hardly a variation to be passed off with the wave of a hand. Of the several guesses, the Chamber's appears to be far too conservative.

Dr. Paul H. Nystrom, director of the Retail Research Association, estimated retail business for 1920 at $35,000,000,000 and for 1922, at $30,000,000,000. Dr. Nystrom had the positive basis of retail business figures compiled by the State of Pennsylvania for 1920, 1921, and 1922, as well as the figures used by the Chamber of Commerce, and he is to that degree more certain in his analysis. Assuming that his figures are more nearly correct than those of the Chamber, it can hardly be argued that 1923 business fell behind that of 1922 by more than $8,000,000,000!

Further check against the Chamber's figures, which are intended as a sales guide to manufacturers and merchants, and are therefore intimately in contact with newspaper advertising affairs, was made by EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Comparison of the retail business of 6 cities with the money paid to newspapers in those cities for display advertising space verifies the statement that the Chamber's figures are so far out of line with the facts as to be worse than useless.

In the accompanying table are aligned against each city its trading area population, newspaper circulation, the Chamber's retail business figure, and the estimated amount spent in the newspapers for national and local display advertising, with the ratio of the latter figure to the Chamber's estimated amount, as shown in the report.

In every city the indicated percentage ratio of advertising money to retail business volume is far higher than is known to be the case. In two cases the disparity from the fact is ridiculous.

The advertising revenue total was found by multiplying the known, not estimated, display lineage of the newspapers, by the average rate per agate line covering all daily papers of general circulation in each city. EDITOR & PUBLISHER of Feb. 23 and Sept. 13, 1924, carried the lineage figures. Agate line rates for 1923 appear in EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK for 1924. The rate chosen for calculating the city average is the lowest rate quoted by each newspaper for general contract advertising.

That will stand up. Research by EDITOR & PUBLISHER extending over the past five years has afforded numerous instances of the accuracy of this method for striking the average line rate, and as this average is the only departure from known facts in the calculation for each of the cities, the advertising revenue figure can be considered far more reliable than the retail business total against which it is balanced.

Applied to the newspapers and the business volume of the cities listed, it shows that newspaper advertising revenue is apparently about 5 per cent of the gross retail sales. That is a state to be desired, but it is non-existent. If the bureau's figures were true, then the total 1923 newspaper income from display advertising would be well over $1,000,000,000, applying the 5 per cent ratio universally. Add to that billion the estimated income from classified advertising, calculated in the same proportions, and the total advertising revenue of daily newspapers would mount to $1,126,000,000—which is almost double the most optimistic estimate of 1923 volume.

Then, retailers generally spend from 2 to 3 per cent—seldom more—of their gross sales for advertising space. National advertisers of products in daily use, such as make up the Chamber's budget, rarely spend more than 3 per cent for advertising, and not all of that in newspapers. According to a convention discussion among members of the National Retail Drygoods Association in New York in 1922, their average 1918 expenditure for advertising was 2.35 per cent of gross sales; in 1919, it was 2.23; in 1920, it was 2.6 and in 1921, it was 2.4. No radical change has taken place in the intervening two years.

Again the Chamber's figures must include a great volume of business which is only indirectly dependent upon advertising and it would therefore be expected that its figure would show a smaller ratio to the known newspaper advertising revenue than the standard of large stores. But what is the fact?

Deducting from the 1923 newspaper advertising revenue—$628,000,000—the classified advertising revenue of $44,000,000, and dividing the remainder by the Chamber's $21,947,638,923—the ratio is 2.7.

The conclusion is inescapable that the Chamber has taken far too narrow a base for its calculations and that 12,000 families of workingmen can not be taken as typical average American families without overlooking fields of great importance for the manufacturer and retail merchant.

The inference that newspaper competitors might draw from the pamphlet, apparently bearing the approval of a national business organization, is that the newspapers are levying too heavy a publicity tax on business. It isn't true, but it is an argument that newspaper advertising men will have to answer often so long as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce booklet continues in circulation. Its appeal is not primarily to the advertisers, local and general, who have well-established businesses, with reliable private channels of sales information. It is to the smaller manufacturer and merchant taking his first steps toward contact with the public that this information will seem a heaven-sent boon.

And while the Chamber of Commerce deserves commendation for its enterprise in opening new regions of market information, it also merits rebuke for putting out under its name as authentic information conclusions which are based on palpably inadequate grounds. The idea is excellent, but the scheme is faulty and the document is worse than useless as an addition to the reliable market information already available.

NEWSPAPER FIGURES PROVE ABSURDITY OF THIS SALES ESTIMATE

City	Trading Area Population		Newspaper Circulation	C. of C. Estimated Volume of Retail Business, 1923	Editor & Publisher Estimated Display Newspaper Advtg., 1923	Ratio of Advertising to Estimated Sales
Baltimore	814,395	M	177,894	$142,613,309	$7,808,087	5.4
		E	276,990
		S	283,882
Birmingham, Ala.	290,884	M	30,930	49,978,129	2,507,399	5.0
		E	99,097
		S	132,405
Boston	1,801,320	M	704,381	364,287,332	18,969,677	5.1
		E	710,830
		S	1,314,895
Buffalo	623,865	M	102,236	136,311,964	5,436,350	4.0
		E	251,162
		S	270,269
Chicago	3,201,301	M	922,037	639,965,479	36,590,585	5.7
		E	994,724
		S	1,980,671
Cleveland	951,579	M	212,494	213,007,397	11,407,500	5.3
		E	353,680
		S	433,244
Denver	289,465	M	29,892	53,236,196	2,926,877	5.5
		E	180,284
		S	265,433
Detroit	1,081,057	M	153,798	264,659,526	16,238,600	6.1
		E	470,373
		S	502,254
New Orleans	419,679	M	79,085	60,341,320	3,105,601	5.1
		E	112,839
		S	283,329
New York	8,034,349	M	1,999,031	1,824,584,193	60,216,670	3.3
		E	1,636,000
		S	3,293,000
Philadelphia	2,428,728	M	618,567	523,524,948	23,866,843	4.5
		E	732,742
		S	976,975
Portland, Me.	69,272	M	31,115	15,173,666	1,005,932	6.7
		E	27,792
		S	28,245
Portland, Ore.	329,246	M	93,726	69,309,796	3,950,091	5.7
		E	179,315
		S	244,416
St. Louis	1,014,457	M	217,525	204,381,277	10,728,928	5.2
		E	359,443
		S	635,998
Scranton, Pa.	347,793	M	28,492	61,531,022	1,989,028	3.2
		E	41,060
		S	37,805
Seattle	373,324	M	72,074	91,247,569	4,450,925	4.8
		E	169,380
		S	239,708

Paper Men Due from London

Eric V. Bowater of the Bowater Paper Company, will arrive in New York from London October 3 on the Aquitania. Accompanying Mr. Bowater is Stanley Cousins who is managing director of the Imperial & Empire Paper Mills.

A Unique Drama Feature

On the dramatic page of the New York Evening Post a new feature appeared Wednesday. Under the caption, "Turnabout—Being Fair Play, the Actors Have Here a Weekly Chance to Answer the Critics," brief criticisms are printed from the pens of actors of Broadway successes.

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS
Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in New Jersey's Fastest Growing City
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

W W J

The Detroit News

Radio Broadcasting Station Was the First to Send Regular Programs Daily in America

The News Is Detroit's First Medium in Radio Advertising

In August, 1920, The Detroit News began to broadcast a regular daily concert through its radio station WWJ. This was the first regular program broadcast in America and marked the beginning of a new epoch in radio transmission.

Naturally this pioneer venture of The Detroit News led all radio amateurs and enthusiasts to look upon it as their leader in this great field of communication. Since 1920, The News has sent broadcast daily programs, entertaining as well as educational—crop conditions as well as symphony concerts, menus for the housewife as well as dance music.

The Detroit News has therefore become the accepted radio medium of Michigan. Its leadership in this field is at present being enhanced by a prize radio set building contest in which The News, co-operating with the Radio Dealers of Michigan, offers hundreds of dollars in cash and radio material to amateur builders. The awards will be announced at the great Radio Show to be held under the auspices of The Detroit News, November 12th to 16th.

In view of the leadership of The News in all fields of radio endeavor, it is no wonder that it published during the first 8 months of 1924 the great volume of 166,446 lines of radio advertising, nearly 3 times that of the second paper and 7 times that of the third.

This is the opportune moment for radio advertising in the Detroit field, and The Detroit News is the one medium that will bring you reader interest plus thorough coverage. In Detroit The News alone covers the field.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Weekday or Sunday in Michigan

BRITISH RADIO BROADCAST SCHEME AVOIDS TROUBLES COMMON HERE

Combination Under Government Eye, With Post Office Taxing "B. C. L.'s," Provides Fund for Paying Artists— No Politics or Advertising Allowed

MAKE radio broadcasting pay a direct profit, by charging every receiving set owner from $2.50 to $3.75 for an operating license!

Prohibit advertising by radio broadcast!

Prevent controversial political discussion, insidious propaganda of all sorts, and rule out harmful vulgarities!

Liberally pay for excellent performances!

Government control of radio broadcast service!

Thus, in brief, have the English people solved the radio commercial riddle which is daily becoming more baffling in America.

During the week Herbert N. Casson, writing for the New York Evening Post, contributed an illuminating article on the English broadcast system, which is typical of the relatively slowmoving, but thoroughly analytical British mind. Mr. Casson's description is so immediately relevant to radio questions that have been raised in behalf of newspapers and advertisers by EDITOR & PUBLISHER in recent weeks as to merit reproduction in full, as follows:

"It is generally believed by the English people that England is the first country to solve the problem of how broadcasting is to be paid for and how there may be unified control without monopoly.

"England had a late start in the development of the radio business. There was nothing at all done until 1920. Then the Marconi Company gave a few demonstrations. The first singer was Melba and the first speaker was Alexander Graham Bell.

"More than three years were lost by the interference of the British Post Office, which claims a monopoly of all wire or wireless communication.

"The British Post Office is the most powerful bureaucracy in Great Britain. It is very jealous and obstructive.

"Already, it has bagged the telegraph, the telephone and the express business. It has fought against messenger service. It has made itself the chief savings bank in Britain and one of the chief tax collectors.

"So, when the Marconi Company started the first station in 1920 the Post Office inspectors pounced down upon it as though it were a den of counterfeiters or smugglers.

"There was a wrangle until November 15, 1922, when a compromise was arranged. The Post Office was recognized as the great Overlord of the Air, but it withdrew from the practical development of broadcasting.

"There was a temporary arrangment, which has recently been worked out into a practical plan. This new plan has now been working for several months and will probably become permanent.

At first there were nineteen private firms that demanded licenses from the Post Office. This was too many. The number was cut down to six, of which the two largest were the Marconi Company and the General Electric.

"This English General Electric, by the way, has no connection with the American firm of the same name. It is an English firm founded by Hugo Hirst. It employs 10,000.

"The six companies were allowed to form a combine, on the condition they must never become a monopoly.

"They must admit any other firm to membership, on condition that it can provide a regular service, pay a deposit of $250 and a yearly royalty to the Post Office of $250 a station.

"The name of this new combine is the British Broadcasting Company. It is known as the B. B. C. It has solved the problem of establishing unified control without monopoly.

"It is a monopoly as far as foreigners are concerned, as it is pledged to use none but British materials. But it stands ready to admit any new firm to membership.

Every owner of a listening-in set has now to pay from $2.50 to $3.75 for a license; and 75 per cent of the money goes to the B. B. C. The money is collected by the Post Office in the same way as it collects other fees and taxes. That is the English solution of the problem of putting broadcasting on a paying basis.

"The Post Office is also bound to prevent any competition or interference. During the week it prosecuted a man for illegal transmission. The man was fined $20. He was the first offender.

"The B. B. C. has $500,000 of private capital, upon which it is allowed to make 7½ per cent. It has a board of eight directors, with Lord Gainford as chairman.

"Its charter expires in 1926. But it has already nearly 1,000,000 licenses and there are 1,600 dealers in radio equipment. It has been so efficient that the Post Office will be compelled to grant it a longer lease of life.

"It has built fifteen stations and has four others under contruction. The cost per station has been $40,000. A station has 1500 watts of power and serves crystal sets at thirty miles range, with single valve forty miles and two valves 150 miles. And a new high power station is now being built in London, with fifteen times the power of an ordinary station.

"As to the cost of sets in England, a crystal set is $6.50. A single tube set is $26 and a two-tube set is $48. And the grasping Post Office demands royalty on every set that is sold.

"The B. B. C. gives a program that lasts six hours a day. It gives nothing in the morning except on Easter and Christmas, and it gives nothing after 12 P. M., unless something is being transmitted from the United States.

"It gives 6,000 concerts a year and pays its artists and speakers about $10,000 a week. It prohibits all advertising and most politics. It would like to put a ban on politics altogther, but the after-dinner speakers are too quick for the censor.

"The news is not given until after 7 o'clock to conform to the wishes of the daily press. There is a children's hour every afternoon and stories are told by various 'uncles' and 'aunts.'

"Passages from grand opera are given, but not from dramas. The theatre managers of England are not friendly toward broadcasting and refuse to help it along. They regard it as a dangerous competitor, enabling people to stay at home and be entertained.

"There is a rigid censorship. Nothing is allowed that any one might regard as vulgar or offensive. Not more than 1500 words are allowed in any talk or paper, for fear that the big miscellaneous audience might be bored.

"On special occasions, loud speakers are placed in public squares; and the whole nation, very nearly, may listen to an important speech. The King's speech, for instance, when he opened the Wembley Exhibition, was heard in all parts of Great Britain.

"There are 43,000,000 persons here on this little island, and few of them are more than 700 miles apart. Consequently, there is an ideal opportunity for the development of broadcasting.

"Already, one family out of every nine has a wireless set; and it is quite possible that this number may be doubled in the B. B. C. expires. Then will come the inevitable struggle against nationalization."

UNSOLVED PROBLEM HERE

Radio broadcast in the United States is today a news and advertising medium.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER in recent issues has made these facts clear to the newspaper and advertising world.

What do organized newspaper men propose to do about it, if anything?

You see here what the English Government has done.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER will appreciate communications on the subject of radio as a newspaper "rival" or newspaper "auxiliary."

Convincing Editorial

JACKSON HEIGHTS, L. I.
August 30, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I wish every paper in this country would re-publish your editorial "The Derelict," in this week's EDITOR & PUBLISHER. It's most convincing!

ALBERT S. HARLEY.

A Challenge—

NEWSPAPER TO HAVE HMC TO HOLD CIRCULATION

TO THOSE WHO SAY
"It Can't Be Done"

We have scores of successes to prove that we can and do build newspaper circulations substantially and permanently through the simplest, most dignified, business-like plan ever presented to the newspaper fraternity. We'd like to show this evidence to the skeptical.

In some of the territories we have open there is a second or third newspaper we can put in first place at an insignificant cost—does THAT interest YOU? We serve only one paper in a territory, but we serve that one seriously and successfully.

We do not use contest schemes, and the publisher is not required to make investment in premiums or prizes.

Write or Wire in Detail, which Will Place You Under No Obligation.

HICKEY-MITCHELL CO.
Builds and Holds Circulation
Pierce Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

MORNING PAPERS THE GET ACTION SAME DAY

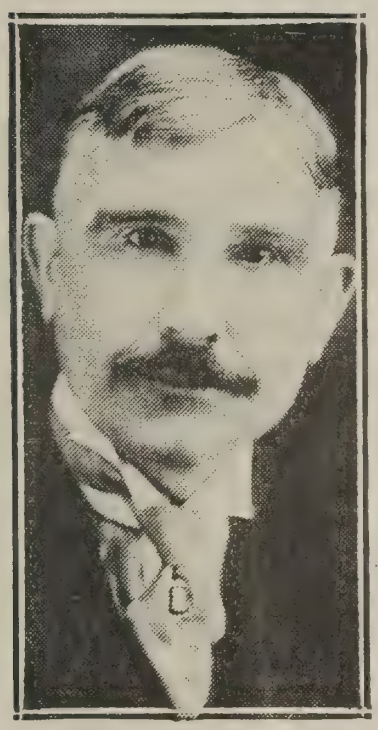
INSURING THE MARKET

Without Paying a Premium

RADIO manufacturers can get absolute coverage in Cincinnati and vicinity with one paper: The Cincinnati Enquirer.

For in this market "The Radio Section" of The Enquirer, published every Sunday, reaches practically every home—and does reach every radio fan.

If space in this section is properly utilized, you can be assured that this market will give you results.



—No increase in rates for space in Radio Magazine Section.

I. A. KLEIN
Chicago
New York

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

E. A. WOELZ

THE essay at the right won first prize in a News' employees contest for the best answer to the question "Why is The Indianapolis News Indiana's leading newspaper?" When Mr. Woelz joined The News circulation department in 1878 the total circulation was 10,278. The latest publisher's statement to the A. B. C. is 131,818 for the three months' period ending March 31, 1924.

The
INDIANAPOLIS
NEWS

The Great Hoosier Daily

Why the Indianapolis News Is Indiana's Leading Newspaper

By E. A. WOELZ
Circulation Department

THE personnel of The News has been a factor in making it Indiana's leading newspaper. The two outstanding personalities, John H. Holliday, its founder, and Delavan Smith, whose newspaper genius and liberal expenditures developed "The Great Hoosier Daily" into Indiana's leading newspaper, left their indelible impression everywhere. They laid the foundation, planned the superstructure and, with a working force unparalleled in talent, fidelity and loyalty, helped create, maintain and perpetuate their traditions. The News has always been clean and wholesome in tone.

It leads because it is unequaled in editorials, touching topics of current events. They serve the reader as a fount of information and are an influence for "Better Thinking and Thinking Better."

The News leads because politically it is independent, not neutral, however. Temperate in expression, determined in its fight for what it conceives to be right, whether on the "winning or losing side," is of no consequence. It is magnanimous in defeat and just as certain to uphold the acts of its opponent in a just cause as that of the one it advocated. This attitude of The News is a contributing factor and has won thousands of its readers to respect, if not wholly in accord with its opinions.

Its editorial page is not "cluttered" with frivolous articles—it is the meat and solid substance, concentrated, valuable, to the discriminating readers. A feature of this page, "Scraps," was started with its first issue. "Case and Comment" and "Questions and Answers" are especially interesting.

The News leads because no newspaper serves its readers with a larger or more diversified selection of educational and entertaining reading matter and illustrations.

The News is first of all a newspaper. It serves no special class, its first mission is to print the news and happenings in the field it serves. It covers the worth-while news of its state, and county with one of the most intensively organized state staffs of local correspondents of any newspaper in America. In fact, it gives authentic news from every important news center of the world.

The News has very little syndicate matter. Its "articles" are largely special and exclusive. The News leads because it devotes more space to religious news than most newspapers. It prints the news of all denominations. "Case and Comment" is widely read and is commented on and even used as a text or reference by pastors in their pulpits. W. J. Bryan's Sunday school lesson is a regular feature of Saturday's News.

The News leads because it is intensely human and full of good humor judiciously used. It is essentially a home paper. It entertains with Abe Martin and "Short Furrows," Wm. Herschell's poems, Kuhn's cartoons, "The Philosopher," "every day stories" and "daily stories of life," by its own staff, and "Uncle Wiggily," "Mutt and Jeff," "You Know Me, Al," Brigg's cartoons, "Ma and Pa," "Andrew and Imogene," of national fame.

The News leads because it appeals to the business man. Its market reports, news of the financial and business world, are many hours ahead of morning papers and invaluable to the readers.

It leads in sport news with intimate gossip of all sports and exclusive daily letters by Grantland Rice, Walter Camp, John B. Foster and W. F. Fox, Jr., "Pigskin" and "Bamboo." They cover them all.

It leads in news of the theater, movies and covers the field in social and suburban news.

The News leads because typographically it is conceded to be a model of perfection.

The News leads because it is the paper with the service. Its circulation department is one of the best in the United States and a model from which other newspapers copy. The News reaches and serves every nook and corner of the city and county and territory contiguous to the city.

It leads in advertising, the best proof that it leads in all other things. It is a great advertising medium because it is a great newspaper. Its advertising is as strictly censored as its news columns. The reader can confidently rely on the truth in advertising, published in The News, and local and national advertisers can testify that subscribers of The News do read and respond to advertising announcements in the great newspaper.

The editorial and advertising departments disclaim responsibility for Mr. Woelz' ideas and his wording of them, but they concur heartily with his sincere appreciation of the principles and policies of the institution of which he is part.

How to Increase Your New

Include in your budget the carefully-chosen new features which are outlined on these pages. Each is suggested for an especial appeal it will make to your readers. All of them will meet the approval of the general public. They are "habit-forming" features, gaining and keeping new readers.

HERE ARE THE FEATURES THAT

Comic Strips

THE POTTERS (daily) by J. P. McEVOY—Inspired by the tremendously successful stage comedy of the same name. This is one of the most humorous of all day-to-day family life cartoons.

SAMSON and DELIA (daily) by H. C. WITWER—All the genuine comedy of boxing—laugh-spreading lampoons by the witty author of many popular stories of sportdom. Rapidly-growing as a circulation success.

DUMB DORA (daily) by "CHIC" YOUNG—Justifying its subtitle "Not so Dumb as She Looks," this is submitted as the wittiest of all modern girl comics with a most lively and likable chief character.

Satire and Humor

THE POTTERS (Sunday half page) by J. P. McEVOY—Written in playlet form, and illustrated, this is established already as the big humorous feature in leading newspapers all over the country.

THE RUBYIAT OF A COLLEGE MAN (weekly) by H. C. WITWER—Readers in all walks of life will enjoy Witwer's up-to-date satire on the romantic and rollicking rah-rah boy. A release timed to the opening of the colleges.

The above features have been picked as big circulation winners by editorial and art directors famous for their many great successes in the field of features syndication.

KING FEATURES

M. KOENIGSBERG, President

241 WEST

paper's Circulation This Fall

The features described here are representative of the long list which can be supplied your paper by King Features Syndicate. They are recommended to you for the driving force they put into your circulation. You can arrange to get them in budget form.

WILL BRING YOU MORE READERS

Inspirational Articles

LISTEN, WORLD! (daily and Sunday) by ELSIE ROBINSON — The latest and most conspicuous hit in the popular editorial world. Elsie blasts stupidity with a common sense force that makes her articles far more interesting than most news. An outstanding feature on the New York Evening Journal's outstanding editorial page—the editorial page with the greatest afternoon circulation in America.

OVER LIFE'S HURDLES (daily) by LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D.—Here is applied psychology in the form of pithy articles helpful to readers in every day life—as inspirational as they are interesting.

Cross-Word Puzzles

Solving these puzzles has become the craze of the nation. This organization offers you a copyrighted series, pronounced by puzzle experts to be the very best brain ticklers of their kind. Every newspaper in the United States should have a cross-word puzzle among its features. Through this syndicate you can secure the very finest of the modern cross-word amusements.

To be interested and puzzled, is, for some reason, pleasing to the human brain. Take advantage of this desire common to all readers. A puzzle every other day, with tips and solutions the other three days of the week.

In adding to, or changing, your budget for 1924-1925 it will pay you to use first of all the features listed above. For proofs and terms write or wire to SYNDICATE, Inc.

8th STREET NEW YORK CITY

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

"Rewrites" his favorite job—ROBERT M. LEE

IN that "golden age" of newspaperdom when newspapers were possessed of the personality and the spirit of their editors—the names like Joseph Medill, Horace Greeley, Henry Watterson, and Charles Dana filled the air, a mother in a small town in Iowa was choosing a career for her son. Those names—as they still are today—were most impressive and thus she decided that her son should also become a newspaper man of eminence.

The son was Robert M. Lee, and the town was Esterville. Today "Bob" Lee is city editor of the Chicago Tribune, and reputed to be one of the most distinguished newspaper writers in the country. Incidentally the town is still Esterville—named for the first white child born after an Indian massacre—and the print shop where Robert M. Lee first acquired his knowledge of the printing and news game is still intact.

When he was only 5 years old Bob Lee handled a printer's stick like the veteran for whom he then worked and who was still in the old print shop when Lee visited Esterville a short time ago.

Young Robert naturally just "grew" into his first newspaper experience on the small weekly his home town boasted, but when ambition hit later he cast his fortunes in bigger fields and became a reporter for the Davenport (Ia.) Times. He changed again to the Des Moines Register, and later wrote for a newspaper in Milwaukee. In 1906, he took the first step that definitely determined his career when he came to the Chicago Tribune as a reporter. Edward S. Beck was his "chief." He still is today, but then it was as city editor, while today it is as managing editor.

Lee stayed with the Tribune for only a year. It seemed he was tired of city restraints and the unnatural inhibitions of civilization and consequently with two other reporters, Robert E. Pinkerton and Walter H. Haight, he went to the Canadian woods. In the northwest forests the three men lived for a year, filling their souls with the spirit of the untrammeled outdoors. Mr. Lee says they managed to provide for their living during that year, though many times supplies were unbelievably low.

The men finally returned to Chicago and never were three souls happier, it seems. Pinkerton, by the way, is now a successful short story writer while Haight, Mr. Lee says, made himself a hero in his home town of Racine, Wis., by going to war, and being injured in several big battles.

In 1915 Mr. Lee returned to the Tribune as a rewrite man, and has been with that paper since. He spent three years on the rewrite desk, 18 months as an editorial writer, and has been city editor since 1919.

Mr. Lee's contributions to journalism includes a number of great stories. Perhaps his most remarkable effort was his eye-witness account last year of the wreck of the Twentieth Century on which he was returning to Chicago. This story was accorded a leading position in the volume called "Best News Stories of 1923."

He covered the Ku Klux Klan stories in Mer Rouge, La., covered both major political conventions this year, and also wrote the high spots in the famous recent Leopold and Loeb trial in Chicago.

His friends will tell you that he has always had an intensive desire to write. He is a hard worker, a calm analytical thinker. He is a student—not only of history, philosophy, and science—but a student of the style and expression of the rewrite man. Originality and individuality—a tendency away from the hackneyed phrase of the rewrite desk is his aim and what Robert M. Lee is constantly teaching and obtaining from his staff. He has an office with "private" marked on the door but it constitutes no barrier between his workers and himself. He is ever in the city room, circulating among "the folks of the Tribune family."

The story goes that Bob Lee takes great pride in developing his men, that he directs their reading and suggests certain lines that would be for their education, and that any number of men and women on the staff of the Tribune have been developed into specialists in certain lines through his direction.

One of the star police reporters of the Tribune was formerly a driver in the circulation department. Through Bob Lee's coaching and directing, his study and reading, the reporter is now a valuable man on the editorial staff.

On the Tribune they will tell you that wherever Bob Lee has been assigned to the duty on the paper he has accepted the job and filled it creditably. They will tell you too, that while in his heart he would rather do rewrite than most any other work, he is especially happy in being city editor, for in that job he can push other folks farther ahead in his beloved newspaper work.

"LIFTING THE BUSHEL—THAT HID THE LIGHT"

Five years ago we started the idea of solving a publishers checking proof problem — and experienced the usual struggles and reverses to keep going — but

We didn't — wouldn't give up — we had absolute faith in our proposition and ability to "make good."

Now for the first time we are ready to advertise our accomplishments in a series of "ads" that will tell you our story.

And every newspaper publisher will, or should be, interested — because we have a definite and absolute solution that is valuable.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

The Ludlow is three times as fast

Says Salem (Mass.) Evening News

"THE Ludlow System displaced all of our foundry type and cases because we had a desire to make our paper an all-slug one. We also wanted to get rid of always having a large amount of space taken up with undistributed foundry type and to eliminate the time wasted in distributing it.

"It was pretty hard at first to see how it is possible to save time setting stuff up the Ludlow way when you take into consideration that you set single matrices in a stick, cast your line and immediately distribute the matrices before you begin another line. But, as an actual fact, it is three times as fast as the old way.

"As soon as the slug line leaves the machine you begin to save time and money by the difference in handling slugs instead of single type. We have never been able to estimate the amount of money saved, but it must be very large. As soon as it is through in the forms it is simply shoved into boxes for remelting. Not having any foundry type to lift from the forms to galleys for distribution, we are always ready for new business.

"Were it not for the Ludlow, we would have had to seek another location long ago and we would have had to employ a much larger force of men. The Ludlow affords a great advantage in always providing new sharp faces. To make a long story short, we do not see how it would be possible to get along without the Ludlow."

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue
CHICAGO

San Francisco Hearst Bldg. — New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

Record Week in Advertising

for

The New York Times

659,192 Lines of High Class Advertising

A greater volume of advertising was printed in The New York Times in the week September 14 to 20 than in any previous seven day period. No exceptional or temporary circumstances served to increase the volume of advertising. It was a record week—under normal conditions.

	Columns	Agate Lines
Sunday, September 14	825	244,200
Monday, September 15	246	72,816
Tuesday, September 16	256	75,776
Wednesday, September 17	268	79,328
Thursday, September 18	257	76,072
Friday, September 19	242	71,632
Saturday, September 20	133	39,368
	2,227	659,192

The New York Times declines all objectionable or misleading advertising.

In eight months of this year, The Times published 16,473,712 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 564,708 lines over the corresponding period of 1923, and an excess of 5,589,240 lines over the second New York newspaper.

The daily circulation of The New York Times exceeds 360,000 copies and the Sunday circulation approximates 600,000 copies—a larger circulation of high quality than any other newspaper in the world.

ABUSING

Newsprint is the cheapest fabric made, and the frailest. It is only three one-thousandths of an inch thick. And it is run through the press at the speed of a motor car.

What chance has newsprint in a press dressed with plates that are crooked, or plates that are so badly cast and shaved that they vary in thickness by many times the thickness of the newsprint itself?

Are not true printing plates, which are so uniformly shaped and accurately made that they put no unnatural strain upon the sheet in the press, an absolute essential of successful newspaper production?

If plates are not true in curvature, they cannot print well.

If they are inaccurate in thickness—or are sprung in the making—they will break sheets in the press, injure press blankets, and print poorly.

WOOD NEWSPAPER MA

501 Fifth Aver

NEWSPRINT

Mis-shapen printing plates are not the fault of those who make them, but of the apparatus in which they are made. The most expert stereotyper cannot turn out true plates with hand apparatus.

Even with the best hand box and plate finisher made, plates will be untrue in curvature, inaccurate in thickness, and out of shape. Such plates are the cause of newsprint waste, press delays, and poorly printed paper.

THE PONY AUTOPLATE MACHINE makes plates which are accurate in curvature and thickness, and it does not spring them. It enables a press to do its work comfortably, without unnecessary delay, or paper waste.

It saves time and money in three departments,—the foundry, the press room, and the delivery room.

HINERY CORPORATION
New York City

EDITORIAL

THE GREAT UNPREPAREDNESS

IN a little community of the middle west the prettiest woman, wife of an honorable working man and mother of four, and the town's meekest and most pretentious man, the village clergyman, plotted and executed a double murder, freeing themselves of marriage bonds so they might wed. The minister procured poison and the woman put it in her husband's soup. The murderous lovers conducted the funeral. The monstrous hypocrite, in the cloth, preached a sermon full of groans and hallelujah, while the depraved widow sniffled behind her handkerchief. Then they murdered the preacher's wife, and planned to take up Christian duties in another community.

Why do newspapers publish such stuff? It is one of the commonest questions asked of newspaper men by more or less sincere and more or less intelligent citizens.

The answer is: To prepare you for life by making you acquainted with its realities and its dangers. It is well for you, particularly if you are a trusting and sheltered soul, to know that such a thing is possible as fiendish murder by one who assumes the highest virtues. This need not make you cynical. All virtuous pretention is not a mere blind for depravity. But you should know of the exceptions and act accordingly. The publication of every-day human experience, whether the news be foul or fair, charts a safe course of conduct for sensible people. The realities are what serve us, not fairy stories, theories or opinions. Publicity is, of course, a crime deterrent. The printed word to many guilty minds is much more to be feared than prison bars. On that ground alone crime news is justified. But the greater fact is that people want to know, have a right to know, are only safe and able to act when they do know the facts of life as they actually exist.

Among squeamish people, or those who have not analized the social psychology of newspapers, a determined effort continues to curb the publication of crime. Many such objections are, in our opinion, insincere. For instance, a type of citizen wants to know all about crime himself, confident of his mental and moral ability to withstand the shocks, but would take it away from women and children. It is the unsophisticated woman and child who most need to read the truth of the world.

Fake crime news, underworld characters dressed up as respectable people, crime made alluring and heroic, images that lure the weak and unsuspecting, are vicious elements of some newspapers and should be wiped out. But the naked truth, whatever it may be, must be told by all honest newspapers if society is to progress and individuals be prepared to walk in safety. Ignorance is the great unpreparedness.

Get the answer to: "Why?"

PROSPEROUS AND HAPPY

"I NOTED general prosperity and happiness among them," said Capt. Donald B. MacMillan of Eskimos tribes he had visited on the north shore of Greenland. He told of their astonishing skill in wresting a living from the wilderness of ice and snow, hard rock and tempestuous sea. Every igloo is a triumph of strong men and women over elements so bitter and relentless that it is difficult to reconcile them with human existence. Every day's food supply means a fight won. The Eskimo provides well for his wives and children. He treats his fellow man with honorable consideration. Northern Greenland's population is increasing.

It is a far cry from the icy mountains of that picture to the cradle of luxury in which we are rocked by Nature, so indulgent that her bounty is beyond exaggeration. Would an explorer from Greenland find us satisfied—happy—with our prosperity? Or would he report back to his people: "I noted considerable discontent among them. Many complained of lack of opportunity. There was an under-tone of distrust and much open whining. Few admitted happiness."

The MacMillan story, brought to us this week through the enterprise of the North American Newspaper Alliance, must have made millions think in abstract terms.

PROVERBS

Chapter XVIII—4

The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and the wellspring of wisdom as a flowing brook.

AUTOMOBILES AND PROGRESS

MORE than fifteen million motor vehicles are in use in this country, 4,086,997 having been produced last year, according to new statistics revealed by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

There is a thrill of national pride in the single fact that of all the motor vehicles in the whole round world 88 per cent are owned and used by the American people. It is almost unbelievable that there are more motor-propelled vehicles in use in this country than telephones. There is one for every seven persons. In California every third person owns a car.

The average price of new cars is $811. The wholesale value of all the new cars and trucks produced last year, with replacement parts and tires, is $2,252,396,257. The motorists' federal, state and local tax bills in 1923 exceeded $470,000,000. Nearly 5,000,000 trucks and cars are owned on farms. Some 3,000,000 persons are employed in the automotive industry. A million motor vehicles are scrapped annually. The traffic has brought into use 430,000 miles of surfaced highways.

In such terms do Americans speak of their wealth. Such figures seem to indicate a state of development approaching maximum possibility, but imaginative men know that even now the mere edge has been touched. This is typical of the American people. It should make optimists of us all. Every man and woman owns or wants a car. Those who have cars want better ones. There isn't any end to the increasing and intensifying demands for the purchasable elements of comfort and economy. The flying machine is the only threat against a doubled or tripled automobile industry.

In this true American psychology lies the secret of not only the incalculable possibilities of higher development of the newspaper business, but of one of its ruling charms. Ceaseless innovation! Endless striving upward! Off with the old and on with the new! To keep abreast the swiftly flowing tide of human requirement, the newspaper profession calls for creative men—men of ideas and superior faith.

September 27, 1924 Volume 57, No. 18

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher,
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: Sam Bell, 26 Jackson Place.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout; Special Commissioner, H. Rea Fitch, Hastings House, 10 Norfolk Street, Strand, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulonge-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.

10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

REACHING THE LIMIT

BOBBED hair styles, of course, played hob with the hair-net business. The girls do not need to tie down clipped tresses. Hence, from the viewpoint of the hair-net man it is important that style be reversed. How does he go about it?

One hair-net manufacturer has employed a leading advertising agency who, in turn, has employed an "experienced newspaper woman," not to write advertisements, but press agent material. One such "hand-out" has just been relayed to EDITOR & PUBLISHER by an indignant newspaper publisher.

Under the letter-head of the agency is a form letter, addressed to the advertising managers of newspapers, asking "co-operation in seeing that the enclosed feature story receives the attention of your managing editor." Hair-dressing styles are changing, the letter says, and naively asserts: "It is news. . . . . This story does not contain a single word of free advertising." Then follows the brazen suggestion that the story be signed as the opinions of "any of your feature writers."

In most newspaper offices such letters are merely lugged in by the postman and out by the janitor, but some business executives and their editors are intimidated by the letter-head and, through mental juggling, justify publishing in free space such specimens of commercial copy.

It is our opinion that such yielding only wins the scorn of the agency whose good will and patronage the newspaper publisher is willing to court at the expense of his readers. When the hair-net manufacturer has a paid schedule written it will include newspapers that stand high in the esteem of local publics. Such newspapers do not fake their readers with opinions of hair-net manufacturers, disguised under the names of regular feature writers.

It seems to EDITOR & PUBLISHER that the press agent activities of some of the largest advertising agencies has gone to the everlasting limit of newspaper publishers' silent endurance.

"Admit nothing; claim everything" is a success standard in the lower regions of business, but it only warns the intelligent man of danger.

A DRASTIC RULE

THE following notice, addressed to the members of the staff of Cincinnati Times-Star, has been posted by Ed. Steinborn, the city editor: "No employe of the News Department of the Times-Star will be permitted to do Press Agent work of any sort."

That means business, and summarily tosses on the scrap heap, so far as one newspaper is concerned, one of the subtly disorganizing and wasteful practices in American journalism. Anything that EDITOR & PUBLISHER would say on the anomaly of a member of a newspaper staff trying to be simultaneously loyal to his newspaper and an outside employer interested in promoting himself or his business through newspapers, would be trite and obvious to the readers of this publication.

Still, it takes courage to definitely act, as the city editor of Times-Star has done. One thinks of the possible economic consequences to individuals, and is not without sympathetic understanding of cases of ambitious men who are earnestly trying to increase their earnings by extra work while, at the same time, attempting loyally to serve their papers. There are many soft and reasonable arguments in favor of the practice, from the viewpoint of the individual. Doubtless some men might be able to show that the work they do for an outside interest does not in any way infringe upon the interest of the newspaper employer. But the experienced man knows that press agentry and loyal newspaper service do not mix, that the principle is wholly wrong, that inevitably harm will be done, and finally it will be concluded that a full-time job that does not support a man, compensating him according to his right to live and prosper, is not worth having.

The right sort of man on the Times-Star will not lose, but ultimately gain by this drastic order.

"Good sportsmanship and sympathy" are, as the Prince of Wales remarked as he departed, admirable characteristics.

PERSONALS

FRANK B. NOYES, publisher of the Washington Evening Star, will return from his summer home in Winter Harbor, Me., about Sept. 29.

Louis T. Golding, publisher of the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press, was a visitor in New York this week on business.

H. L. Rogers of the Chicago Daily News was a visitor in New York this week.

W. J. Conners, publisher of the Buffalo Courier and Enquirer, was a recent caller at the White House. In company with T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, he conferred with the President on matters relating to the American merchant marine.

O. K. Shimansky, president-editor of the Cleveland Times and Commercial, spent the week of Sept. 22, in New York on business.

Herbert Pulitzer, after brief visit in this country, returned to France Sept. 20, on the Homeric.

William F. Metten, publisher of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, has returned from a business tour of the West.

Charles Sturgeon, for years editor and publisher of the Eddyville (Ia.) Tribune, is motoring on the Pacific coast. He and Mrs. Sturgeon will spend the coming winter at San Diego.

Henry R. Helsby and Helen Capron Helsby, former publishers of the Mechanicville (N.Y.) Hudson Valley Daily Times, have arrived home after spending 3 months in Europe.

Major Lew B. Brown, publisher and owner of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, and Mrs. Brown are spending a vacation in the Thousand Islands and New York.

Frank B. Shutts, publisher of the Miami (Fla.) Herald, with Mrs. Shutts, spent several days in New York this week.

C. F. Crandall, president of the British United Press and of the Dominion News Bureau, Montreal, is now in London on business. He expects to return in 3 weeks.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

WALTER M. HARRISON, managing editor of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman and the Oklahoma City Times, has been appointed director of finance for the Democratic National Committee for the state of Oklahoma.

Lawrence Gilman, musical editor of the New York Herald Tribune, returned to New York last week from a trip abroad.

Jack Bethea, city editor of the Birmingham Post, has resigned.

J. F. Schureman, former editor of the Geneseo (Ill.) News and later publisher of the Lacon (Ill.) Journal, who retired two years ago because of failing health, has returned to the newspaper field with the Wyoming (Ill.) Post-Herald.

Rex E. Saffer, city editor of the Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel, has resigned to become secretary of the Haines City, Fla., Chamber of Commerce.

H. M. Hofford, re-write man on the staff of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, has joined the re-write staff of the Providence Journal and Bulletin.

George W. Greene, formerly editor of the New London (Wis.) Press and formerly with the New Bedford Standard and Milwaukee Journal, has purchased the Waupun (Wis.) Leader from W. A. Sanborn, Sr. Victor F. Zierke, graduate of the University of Wisconsin course in journalism, succeeds Greene as editor of the Press.

Norvelle W. Sharpe, II., former sports editor of the Atlantic City (N. J.) Gazette-Review, has succeeded Francis J. Hartnett as city editor. Ellis Evans, former boxing editor, takes over the sports desk.

T. M. Vesey, feature writer and substitute desk man, Cleveland Times and Commercial, returned Sept. 22 from a week's vacation, spent in Newark, N. J., and New York.

Fred Pitts, assistant to the managing editor of the Buffalo Evening News, is passing his vacation with friends in Yonkers.

Edward P. Hartnett, assistant city editor of the Buffalo Evening News, is confined to his home by illness.

Fred Turner, day city editor of the Buffalo Courier, is home after a vacation at Rice Lake, Ont.

H. Allen Smith, formerly city hall reporter of the Huntington (Ind.) Press, and Frank Raeger, formerly police reporter of the Louisville (Ky.) Post, have been added to the staff of the new Jeffersonville (Ind.) Evening Bulletin.

Miss Peggy Wells has resumed work as feature writer of the St. Paul Daily News after a month's leave of absence in New York.

Harry Tucker, city hall reporter for the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, is spending the last week of his vacation in New York.

Joe Brandt, Oklahoma University '20, and Rhodes scholar, has returned from England and is now city editor of the Ponca City (Okla.) Daily News.

William Hense, dramatic editor of the Cleveland Waechter Und Anzeiger, has completed translating Omar Khayyam into the German.

Rosalie Keber has succeeded Ruth Austin as society editor of the Salem (Ore.) Capital Journal.

Rosalind Shelley, editor of the Cleveland Press woman's page, will leave for Europe on Oct. 1, in company with her husband, for a four months' tour. During her absence, Allene Sumner, feature writer, will edit her page.

Douglas Welch, son of Charles B. Welch, editor and general manager of the Tacoma News Tribune has been assigned to the court house beat.

Mrs. Martha Candler, of Westport, Conn., has joined the staff of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Sunday Post as feature writer.

Leslie C. Morehouse, city editor of the South Bend (Ind.) Tribune, is seriously ill in a local hospital.

Thomas J. Coleman, reporter with the Bridgeport (Conn.) Post, has entered the hospital for veterans at New Haven. Coleman was gassed overseas in the war.

Frank E. Nolan, sporting editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Standard, Post and recently the Star, has become city editor of the Star with the advancement of Joseph H. Masterson to managing editor.

John Simpson for a number of years reporter on the Frederick (Md.) Post has resigned to enter Princeton.

Robert I. Snajdr, feature writer for the Cleveland Plain Dealer has left for Pasadena, Cal., on vacation.

Elmer Jackson, sports writer for the Hagerstown, (Md.) Daily Mail has resigned and returned to St. John's College, Annapolis to resume his studies.

Walter S. Ball, editor of the Providence Sunday Journal has returned from vacation.

Walker S. Buell, chief of the Cleveland Plain Dealer Washington bureau, spent a part of last week in Cleveland looking over the political situation.

W. A. "Doc" Huggins, sports editor, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, has resigned to enter the real estate business. Al Burger of the city staff succeeds him.

Miss Sara Ross is now telegraph editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent.

Archie R. Dunlap, associate editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, has returned from a six weeks' trip abroad.

WITH THE SPECIALS

STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY, INC., has been appointed national representative of the Toledo Times.

Blanchard Nichols & Coleman have added the American Legion Weekly to their list.

CLIMBING

JOSEPH L. JONES was this week promoted from assistant foreign editor of the United Press Associations to foreign editor. In this capacity he will work under the direction of J. H. Furay, recently appointed vice-president in charge of U. P. foreign services.

JOSEPH L. JONES

Coincident with his promotion, Jones was married Sept. 24, in Kansas City, Mo., to Miss Helen Sullivan. Mr. and Mrs. Jones will live in New York.

A graduate from the School of Journalism, Columbia University, Class of 1921, Jones has been in the United Press service 4 years. He first served on the United Press staff in the Chicago bureau. Most of the time he has spent in the press association's foreign department.

Last winter he covered the United States fleet maneuvers for U. P., visiting the West Indies, Porto Rico, Cuba and the Panama Canal Zone.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

R. M. Bushfield, from Fort Worth Record to San Antonio Light copy desk.

John A. Hurley, from Westport (Conn.) Standard to telegraph editor, Bridgeport (Conn.) Telegram.

Stanley Day, from reporter, Montreal Star, to staff, Montreal Sun.

F. Rowse, from shipping editor, Montreal Daily Star, to city editor, Montreal Sun.

Harry Seward, from reporter, Buffalo Commercial, to city editor, Dunkirk (N. Y.) Evening Observer.

MARRIED

WILLIAM F. MIXON, publisher of the Woodland (Col.) Mail, to Mrs. Edna Garvin in San Jose, Sept. 12.

Miss Ruth Austin, for 2 years society editor of the Salem (Ore.) Capital Journal, to Jay C. Allen of Seattle, who formerly worked as reporter on the Eugene (Ore.) Register and the Portland Oregonian. Mr. and Mrs. Allen will sail for Paris immediately, where Mr. Allen will continue his studies in fine arts.

Guy Harris, White City, Kan., who recently acquired the Donnelson (Ia.) Review, to Miss Edna Mae Masmar, Donnellson, Sept. 12, in Keoseuqua, Ia.

George H. Siegle, of the Muscatine (Ia.) Tribune reportorial staff, to Miss Margaret Wilson, Sept. 11, in Muscatine.

Miss Doris W. Booth, daughter of George F. Booth, formerly publisher of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette, to Edwin C. Butler, of Worcester.

L. E. Tatom, of the linotype room of the Birmingham News to Mrs. H. E. Huggins, who has charge of the mat room for the same paper, Sept. 1.

Arthur E. Clark, of the editorial staff of the Los Angeles Examiner, to Miss Eleanor Faunce, of LeRoy, N. Y.

Wilfred A. Lawrence, assistant city editor, Montreal Star, to Miss Doreen Carson, Sept. 4.

Harry Stringer, sports writer on the Washington Post to Miss Marguerite Kolhos of Washington in New York.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

MISS K. K. KEPPER, formerly secretary to W. E. Douglas, classified advertising manager of the Baltimore News, has been appointed assistant classified manager, succeeding Herbert W. Klink, who resigned to become classified manager on the Washington Post.

C. G. Abbey has resigned as advertising manager of the Ashtabula (O.) Star-Beacon and purchased a half interest in an electrical store in that city. Mr. Abbey started in the newspaper work on the San Francisco Bulletin about 20 years ago. For 9 years he was advertising manager of the Sandusky Star-Journal, later working on Michigan and Illinois papers.

H. S. Cosden, formerly with the Atlanta Georgian, has joined the Birmingham News, where he is handling the rotogravure advertising.

Sidney Griffin has been given charge of suburban advertising for the Birmingham News.

Roger H. Clark, advertising manager of the Norwich (N. Y.) Daily Sun, and the Chenango Telegraph, semi-weekly, has resigned to join the Titusville (Pa.) Herald.

William A. Walsh, of Providence, formerly on the classified advertising staff of the Providence News, will leave for India on Oct. 1, to take charge of a station of the Standard Oil Company.

Charles E. Crockett, secretary-treasurer of the South Bend (Ind.) Tribune, and G. A. Maurer, manager of the Tribune's office in Mishawaka, Ind., have returned from a fishing trip in northern Michigan.

Miss Ann Davis, of the society section, Tacoma News Tribune, is now in the advertising department.

One of the best things that can be said about the Haskin Information Service is that it is used and praised by school teachers in every state in the Union.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

CHARLES S. HAND, political editor of the New York American, who has just been elected president of the Inner Circle, has been prominent in New York newspaper circles for the past 13 years.

CHARLES S. HAND

The Inner Circle is composed of New York political reporters and correspondents, and Hand's election as its president makes him the recognized leader of this class of writers in Manhattan. The society came into existence after the famous old Amen Corner Association ceased to function.

Hand started newspaper work in Paterson, N. J., where his father, now dead, was editor of a newspaper. Then he himself ran a newspaper in Passaic, N. J., for a time.

Before coming to New York, Hand free-lanced in Washington for a while. He came to New York in 1911, becoming a member of the New York World staff, with the title of chief political writer, succeeding Louis Seibold in that capacity.

For the World, Hand covered all national conventions and important political events, including the country-wide campaign tours of Roosevelt, Taft, Hughes, and Wilson. At Washington he also handled many semi or quasi-political stories, such as tariff exposures, Ku Klux Klan revelations and the like.

His story on Gov. Alfred Smith's nomination at Syracuse 2 years ago was referred to in the World Almanac for 1923 as follows:

"It was so brilliant a narrative it has already become a classic of reporting—a classic even of the World, known as it is for the consistent excellence of its writing and editing."

For a number of years Hand was the World's Albany staff correspondent and there was president of the New York Legislative Correspondents' Association.

In 1914, when the World War broke out, Hand was in England and covered the opening of hostilities for his newspaper. He returned to this country on the first vessel that brought American refugees from Germany.

On the American, which he joined only recently, Hand is now specializing on national politics, writing from New York and Washington.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

COUNT KABAYAMI, one of the directors of the Kokusai News Agency, of Tokyo, is visiting in New York on business.

Arthur S. Thompson, secretary to the general manager of the Associated Press, returned to New York this week from a vacation spent in Washington and at his home in Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Otis Peabody Swift, cable editor of the United News, broadcast from station WEAF, New York, Saturday, telling of adventures in Iceland and off Greenland, during the world flight, which he covered for the United Press and United News.

C. W. Carter, of the Cleveland office, International News Service, will be back Sept. 29, from a week's vacation, spent at his home in Jamestown, N. Y.

L. A. Huston formerly of the London staff of the International News Service, who has been assigned temporarily to the Washington Bureau sails shortly to represent the service in Tokio. Lloyd Lehrbas formerly Peking representative of the I. N. S. will come to Washington to cover the State, War and Navy Departments.

Lt. Frank Mallen of the New York City News Bureau who spent his vacation traveling with the 5th Regiment, U. S. Marines as publicity manager has returned to New York.

ASSOCIATIONS

VIRGINIA PRESS ASSOCIATION'S executive committee recently appointed by President Paul Scarborough consists of the following new members: Col. S. L. Slover, Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch; Col. H. L. Opie, Staunton News-Leader; J. A. Whitman, Wytheville Southwest Enterprise; J. Barrye Wall, Farmville Herald. L. E. Pugh, of the Newport News Daily Press, is a hold-over member. James C. Latimer, secretary, is continuing the fight for the 1925 convention of the National Editorial Association.

Illinois Press Association will hold its annual meeting at Champaign-Urbana, Ill., Oct. 9, 10, 11. It is expected to be the largest meeting in the history of the association. John H. Harrison, of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News, is president.

Richmond (Va.) Advertising Club recently named George W. Rogers representative of the B. W. Wilson Paper Company, president to succeed R. Taylor Coleman, who resigned to enter the Harvard Graduate School of Business. Miss Rosa B. Hexler, advertising writer for Miller & Rhoads, was named vice-president.

Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives will choose the 1925 convention city at a dinner meeting of the officers, directors and committee members to be held at the Union League Club, Chicago, at 6 o'clock Oct. 16. Frank T. Carroll, advertising manager of the Indianapolis News, and president of the association, has announced.

League of Advertising Women, New York, gave a luncheon Sept. 24, in honor of Mrs. Ethel M. Wood, of London, prominent advertising agency executive and vice-president and director of the second oldest agency in England. Minna Hall Simmons is president of the League.

Agricultural Publishers' Association will hold its annual convention in Chicago on Oct. 15 and 16 at the La Salle Hotel. According to Victor F. Hayden, executive secretary of the Association, no definite business has been planned for discussion, but two directors will be elected. The meetings will be presided over by Marco Morrow, general manager of the Topeka Capital, who is head of the organization.

Business Editors of Chicago will open their fall program with a dinner at the Great Northern Hotel, Tuesday evening, Sept. 30.

Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce held a miniature "London convention of advertisers" at the La Salle Hotel, Thursday, Sept. 25.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

WILLIAM B. READ, for five years in charge of the Norwalk (Conn.) Hour pressroom has resigned. He has been succeeded by I. C. Wagner, of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

W. T. COWGILL has sold the Freedom (Okla.) Cimarron Call, to John D. Hinton, formerly of Curtis, Okla.

Stanton (Tex.) Reporter has been purchased by A. C. Robertson of Loraine.

D. A. Jackson, who established the Fredericksburg (Ia.) News, 35 years ago has sold his plant to F. A. Carney, of Dows City, Ia.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 7,249 Daily Average Circulation.

Sworn Government Statement. Six Months Ending March 31, 1923, 166,300 Daily. Six Months Ending March 31, 1924, 173,549 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 7,249.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:

H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

ALBERT B. CARGILL, for the past 2 years general manager of the Milwaukee Sentinel, will become assistant publisher of the Omaha Daily News, Oct. 1.

A. B. CARGILL

Starting as a reporter, Cargill has seen about 20 years service with the Sentinel. He was promoted first to circulation manager, and then served a number of years as advertising manager. In January, 1923, he was made the Sentinel's general manager.

Although always giving his best to his immediate newspaper work, Cargill has also given considerable energy to outside activities. He has served on important committees of the National Association of Newspaper Executives and in 1922 was a member of the joint program committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. At one time he served as secretary of the Milwaukee Health Department.

Cargill was a member of the original reportorial staff of the Milwaukee Free Press, which was absorbed by the Milwaukee Daily News and the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin to become the Milwaukee Wisconsin News, owned by William Randolph Hearst.

FLASHES

The reason why a lot of men are bach elors is because they failed to embrac their opportunities.—Illinois State Jour nal.

Militarists are using their worst argu ment when they point to Jack Dempsey continual training as an argument fo preparedness. He fights for a living.— New York World.

The most successful bathing suit censo is the mosquito.—New York America

If the Prince is really anxious to g away from the mob, he might try Democrat rally in Vermont.—Detro News.

In the path of pleasure you not onl pay as you enter, but pay as you go.— Los Angeles Times.

In difficulty of entrance for a ric man, the kingdom of heaven and the ey of a needle have nothing on the gallow and the electric chair.—Boston Transcrip

In New York a man is accused o starting 100 fires, so perhaps he is janitor crazy with the heat.—Columbi (S. C.) Record.

The champ optimist of the universe i the relative who sent a Sing Sing life a travelling bag for a birthday presen —New York American.

Rhode Island
A Live Radio Market

Providence, the distributing center of Rhode Island, has four broadcasting stations operating regularly each day furnishing programs of instruction and entertainment. One of these stations broadcasts to people of this section all events of national importance; also special New York programs each week.

Eleven wholesale and 157 retail radio dealers serve this productive territory. These dealers know the value of advertising in The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin, and are glad to co-operate with national advertisers who use these newspapers.

The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin publish complete up-to-the-minute programs daily and the Providence Sunday Journal carries a regular radio section. With their complete coverage and responsive reader influence they enable advertisers to cover Rhode Island at a minimum cost.

Providence Journal Company
Providence, Rhode Island

Representatives
C. H. EDDY COMPANY
BOSTON NEW YORK CHICAGO
R. J. BIDWELL COMPANY
San Francisco Los Angeles

GERMANS CONTROL ZR-3 FLIGHT NEWS

Zeppelin Officials Silent Regarding Radio Bulletins to U. S. During Trip—May Sell Exclusive Rights Here

The trans-Atlantic flight of the Zeppelin-built airship ZR-3, awarded to the United States as Germany's only war reparation to this country, threatens to present greater difficulties in reporting than have been encountered in any event of equal news importance in recent years. There are indications that the hour-by-hour news of the trip from Friederichshafen to Lakehurst, N. J., scheduled to begin next week, may be bottled up by the Germans and distributed only to American newspapers and press services that have been fortunate enough to make satisfactory financial arrangements with the Zeppelin company.

The situation has been revealed by the failure of the Navy Department to receive definite assurances that American officers aboard the craft will be able to bulletin the Navy Department twice daily reports of the progress of the flight. Formal request has been made to the Zeppelin Company that Capt. George W. Steel, senior American observer, be granted that privilege, but no reply has been received.

It is known that arrangements already have been made by Dr. Hugo Eckner, the Zeppelin company's officer who will command the ship during the flight to furnish exclusive reports in Germany, but whether he or the German syndicate with whom he is dealing have sold exclusive rights to publication in the United States is not known in Washington.

The Navy Department is more or less helpless. The ship does not become the property of the Navy until it is delivered at Lakehurst. The flight crew is composed entirely of Zeppelin experts and only 3 American officers are certain to be aboard. The Navy had hoped to have a larger number but the Zeppelin company officials insisted that the size of the German crew necessary for the flight would only leave room for 3 observers. With Captain Steel will be Lieut. Commander S. M. Kraus of the Navy air service and Maj. Frank Kennedy of the Army air service. Commander J. H. Klein of the Navy is in Germany on leave and at his own expense in the hope that he can be taken aboard at the last minute.

Because of the limited number of Americans aboard, officers of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics decided that the most feasible plan of distributing the news would be through the Department at Washington on the basis of reports radioed twice daily by Captain Steel. Those reports would be made public in Washington upon receipt. The Navy's plan was designed to give the widest publicity to the flight and the American officers aboard have been issued orders forbidding them to write or sell any exclusive articles on the flight until at least 48 hours after the arrival at Lakehurst, so that no favoritism can be charged or no advantage given to any newspaper or news gathering agency.

In view of the failure to hear from Germany the Navy now plans to give press representatives opportunity to interview the American officers aboard the ZR-3 the instant the ship arrives at Lakehurst. Instructions will be given to those officers to tell the whole story.

TRISTATE EDITORS MEET

Elect Mrs. Marie Weeks President at Sioux City, Ia.

About 450 members of the Tristate Editorial Association of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, attended the fifth annual Convention held at Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 18, 19, and 20. Most of the time was spent at the Iowa Interstate Fair and sight-seeing in the city.

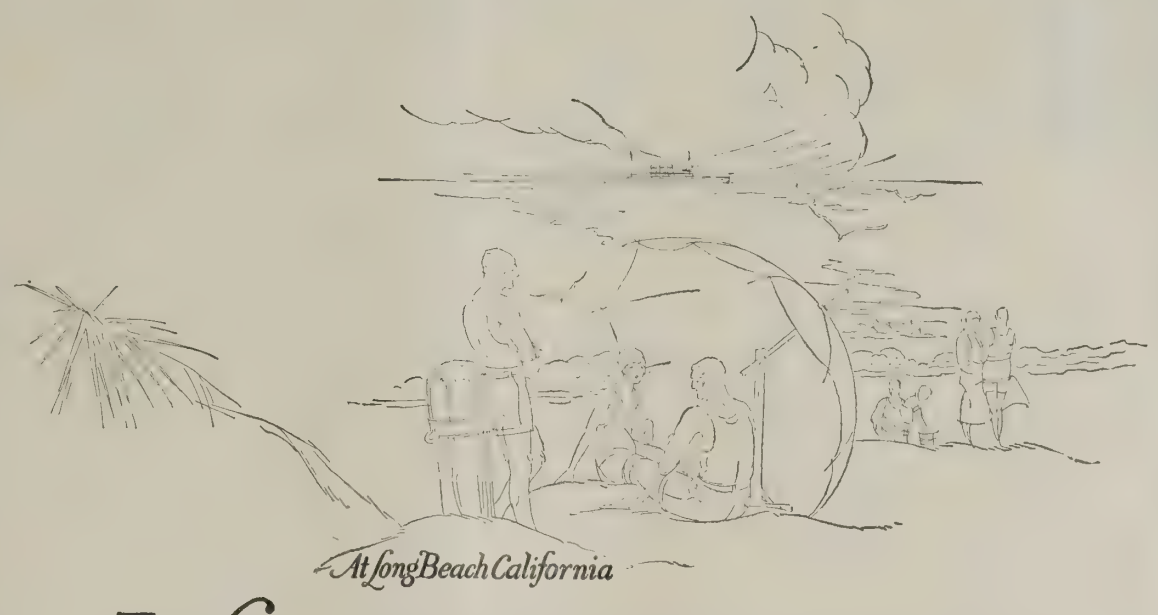
Mrs. Marie Weeks, editor of the Norfolk (Neb.) Press, was elected president for the coming year. C. E. Johnson of Danbury, Ia., was elected vice-president, James Beardsley of Kingsley, Ia., secretary, and Deloss Hall of Tyndall, S. D., treasurer.

The editors were entertained Thursday evening at a dinner-dance at the Hotel Martin as guests of the Sioux City Associated Retailers Association.

The address of welcome was given by Mayor W. S. Gillman in behalf of the city and W. E. F. Lusk, former association president. Elmo Schott Watson, editor of the Publishers' Auxiliary of Chicago spoke on the "Newspaper of Today" at Friday's session.

Saturday was spent in the election of officers and routine business.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR NEWS MEN



Two English Writers Will Be Given Year's Study in U. S.

By Herbert C. Ridout
London Editor, Editor and Publisher

London, Sept. 15.—Great interest has been created by the announcement that the English Speaking Union in London and America has decided to put into operation a scheme recently suggested for granting scholarships to English journalists. Two, which will be known as the "Walter Page Scholarships in Journalism" in memory of the American Ambassador of that name will be offered each year and will comprise a year's visit to America.

A committee has been formed in America as a sub-committee to the English speaking Union, and will be responsible for collecting the necessary funds.

It is thought possible that the first two journalists will be enabled to visit America in January next. The regime for these successful candidates, who will be interviewed and selected by a committee in London, has not yet been decided upon, but it is possible that they will be affiliated with an American newspaper for perhaps 3 months. They will travel for a certain part of the time, and might possibly spend a term at one of the American universities.

At Long Beach California

The Long Beach Press-Telegram
The Pasadena Star-News

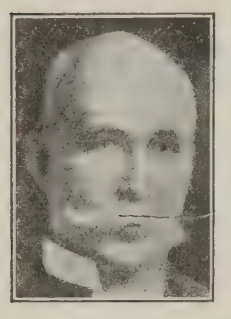
are to be printed by presses of the same type used by the Chicago Tribune and ordered for the Detroit Free Press and Milwaukee Journal as well as other leading newspapers.

A BATTERY of six Goss High Speed Low Construction Press Units and two pairs of folders for The Long Beach Press-Telegram! A duplicate installation for The Pasadena Star-News! The alert and progressive publisher of these two important California papers selected this latest and finest Goss equipment after a careful survey of all the printing press industry has to offer. Comparison will convince you, too, that Goss leads more than ever in the production of modern, high speed presses that are unmatched for daily dependability and yearly economy. Literature gladly mailed.



THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY, CHICAGO
The Goss Printing Press Co. of England, Ltd., London

GOSS
STRAIGHT LINE
GOSS HIGH SPEED

H. L. BRIDGMAN DIES IN 80TH YEAR

Business Manager of Brooklyn Standard Union Stricken at Sea—Had Long Career in Journalism and Exploration

Herbert L. Bridgman, business manager of the Brooklyn Standard Union, died at sea with the training ship Newport, Sept. 24, it was learned Friday morning. He was taking his annual cruise with cadets of the U. S. Marines, reporting the event for his newspaper.

H. L. Bridgman

Mr. Bridgman, who had achieved equal fame in exploration and newspaper work, was born eighty years ago, at Amherst, Mass., and had been a newspaper man since 1864. Many vacations from his Brooklyn newspaper desk were spent in Northern icefields and in other little-visited parts of the world. He was 50 years old when he sailed with the Peary Auxiliary Expedition in 1894. Three years later he was assistant to Prof. Libbey in scaling Mesa Encantada, N. M., and in 1899 and 1901 he was commander of the Peary Auxiliary vessels Diana and Erik. He was a member of practically every important geographical and exploration society in the world and held a number of distinguished foreign decorations.

He served two terms about ten years ago as president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and for many years had been chairman of the Publishers Association of New York City, an office he held at the time of his death.

His newspaper career started on the Springfield Republican, under Samuel Bowles. He was reporter, city editor, and telegraph editor. When he left the Republican to come to New York, he was equipped as few men have been, in training and experience. He was a Washington correspondent for some years before entering the business department, then for ten years he was advertising manager of Leslie's Weekly. His long service with the Standard Union has been as publisher and business manager.

Mr. Bridgman was vice-president of the Press Congress of the World and very active in its affairs.

Obituary

ALBERT O. HESS, 28, assistant to the advertising manager of the Underwood Typewriter Company, died Sept. 22, at Spring Lake, N. J.

JOHN GULLY COLE, 48, member of the advertising firm of Gardner & Co., New York, died in New York, Sept. 21.

FRANK E. WATKINS, editor of the Watkins (N. Y.) Express, died at Watkins, Sept. 21. He was an election commissioner of Steuben county and for 15 years secretary of the Democratic committee of that county.

RUDOLPH KLEM, sports writer on the Brooklyn Eagle, died at Liberty, N. Y., Sept. 20.

EDWARD A. SULLIVAN, literary critic on the Bridgeport (Conn.) Post, and for several years staff reporter of the Providence Journal, died at Bridgeport on Sept. 6.

JAMES Y. MCPEAKE, 56, managing director of the National Magazine Company, Ltd., publishers of Nash's Magazine, and British Good Housekeeping, William Randolph Hearst properties, is dead in London. He was formerly editor of the Dublin Evening Mail and had been in charge of the National Company since 1912.

HOUGHTON W. COLLART, aged 41 years, manager of the advertising and art service departments of the Penton Publishing Company, Cleveland, O., died Sept. 18, after a long illness. He was chairman of the committee which wrote the "Handbook of Business Advertising" for Associated Business Papers, Inc.

CHARLES F. W. ARCHER, widely known New England newspaper man, died recently at Salem, Mass. He worked at various times on the Worcester Gazette, Boston Journal, Boston Herald, and State House News Service.

EDWARD ANTHONY SULLIVAN, 32, editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Sunday Post died recently in Bridgeport from injuries received in the World War. He was one time city editor of the Fall River Times, and later dramatic critic on the New Bedford Standard. He had also been dramatic critic and literary editor of the Providence Journal.

FRANK E. JONES, 63, telegraph editor of the Providence (R. I.) Tribune for the last 18 years and president of the Pen and Pencil Club of Providence, died Sept. 24.

PAPER PRICES TOPIC AT N. J. PRESS MEET

Labor Conditions, Ethics, Agriculture, and A. A. C. W. Convention Also to Be Featured at Newspaper Institute

Newsprint prices will feature discussions before the third annual New Jersey Newspaper Institute to be held Sept. 29 and 30, at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., under the auspices of the New Jersey Press Association. R. E. Lent of the Passaic News, is association president.

Future paper quotations, the 1925 contract, new newsprint mills and imported paper will be taken up for consideration.

Labor conditions on New Jersey newspapers will also be discussed.

Dr. Walter T. Marvin, acting president of Rutgers, will deliver the address of welcome. Other speakers on the program include:

James Wright Brown, publisher of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, on "The London Advertising Convention"; M. V. Atwood, managing editor of the Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch, "The Ethics of Journalism—Is it Bunk?" Prof. H. J. Baker, New Jersey State College of Agriculture, "The Public Press and Agriculture"; Mayor William W. Campbell, of Schenectady, N. Y., "Co-operation of Public Officials and the Press"; Basil Smith, "Classified Advertising"; Prof. C. P. Cooper, School of Journalism, Columbia University, "Recent Criticisms of Professional Journalism"; and Louis Wiley, business manager, New York Times, "The Newspaper as a Public Trust."

Round table discussions on various subjects will be led by W. B. Bryant, Paterson (N. J.) Press Guardian; F. A. Robertson, Washington (N. J.) Star; Fred W. Clift, Summit Herald and Record; and Edmund H. Carpenter, Gloucester County Democrat.

Prizes are offered for the best front page, best editorial page, best department of country correspondence, and the best page or department of agricultural news.

Exhibits will be discussed by Mr. Atwood, and by H. Frank Smith of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

PULP EXPORTS DROP

August Newsprint Movement Also Below 1923 Figures

Canada's exports of newsprint during August amounted to 94,486 tons valued at $7,020,384, as compared with $104,568 tons valued at $7,936,505 in August, 1923. For 8 months ended August exports were 804,904 tons valued at $60,548,801, against 748,292 tons valued at $56,407,776.

There has been decided falling off in exports of pulp. For August exports were 63,554 tons valued at $3,243,414, against 91,557 tons valued at $4,628,130 in August, 1923. Figures for eight months are: 1924, 470,851 tons valued at $25,266,231; 1923, 571,715 tons valued at $31,063,497.

Exports of pulpwood for 8 months totaled 894,072 cords valued at $10,083,428, decline in quantity of 153,295 cords but increase in value of $164,813.

Ahead on its Merits

Circulation and lineage increasing by leaps and bounds—news satisfaction — advertising results. These merit the growth of newspapers. It's the answer for the continued great growth of

The Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Daily Argus
AND
The New Rochelle, N. Y. Standard Star

Write for information, how to cover this rich field.

WESTCHESTER NEWSPAPERS, Inc.
T. Harold Forbes — New Rochelle

The Cathedral Towns of England

LINCOLN

Lincoln is an antique city whose history goes back to early British days. There are considerable ruins of the Castle built by the Norman Conqueror, the oldest Roman Arch in the Country, picturesque gateways of the 14th and 15th Century and many other interesting relics of mediaeval times.

The outstanding feature at Lincoln however is the Cathedral, standing on a prominent ridge and raising its great bulk high above the town. Without and within its admirers claim that no other Cathedral in England excels it. It contains building in every architectural style known in England—Norman, Early English, Decorated, Perpendicular and even Renaissance in Wrens Work on the North Side of its cloisters.

On the London & North Eastern Railway

Apply for free booklet describing
ALL YOU OUGHT TO SEE IN BRITAIN

H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent
LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.), New York

Newspapers Help Their Community

Here and there over the country churches have initiated plans for large space to urge everyone in town to go to some church. Ordinarily, however, the initiation of such an advertising campaign, to be successful, must come from a newspaper. Churches aren't accustomed to the purchasing of large space to urge attendance.

Merchants and other users of space, however, who know the advantages of church attendance can frequently be sold a series of pages as a group.

The Church Advertising Department has proofs of ads for such use. They have been used widely over the country. The price for use is nominal.

For free set of 52 ads for inspection, address Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.
Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. — New York City

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

RAYMOND G. CARROLL is now writing a series of articles on the League of Nations from Geneva under the caption "Peacemakers At Geneva" for the New York Evening Post and the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia. Before going to Geneva, Carroll wrote a daily series from Paris entitled "Paris Day by Day." In this country he formerly wrote a daily New York letter for the same newspaper syndicate.

Miss F. Edith O'Dell, editor-in-chief of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, will return from her summer vacation, Sept. 29.

Edward N. Dolbey, Jr., formerly sales manager for the eastern division of the National Newspaper Service, has joined the staff of the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York. Dolbey has had newspaper experience in both the editorial and business departments. He was for a long time associated with the Philadelphia Inquirer, Camden (N. J.) Daily Courier, Philadelphia L'Opinione, as national advertising representative, and has been for the past year with the National Newspaper Service.

Leo. S. Levy, managing editor of the Oakland Tribune, is writing a daily humorous article under the caption "'S No Use" for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

Joseph Brainin, manager of the Seven Arts Feature Syndicate, New York, is now organizing a new syndicate to be known as the Federal Feature Syndicate, which will be ready for operation about Jan. 1, 1925. His present organization handles features on political and artistic topics.

Richard Selden Harvey, lawyer, is author of "A Day in Court," a new daily service being offered by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York. Each day a recent decision of the Supreme Court is taken up, the case briefly told in narrative form, and the decision explained.

V. V. McNitt, president of the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., has returned to his New York office from his summer home at Palmer, Mass.

George W. H. Britt, formerly in charge of the Chicago office of the N. E. A. has been transferred to the New York office of the syndicate. R. J. Gibbons of the Cleveland branch has been sent to Chicago to replace Mr. Britt.

Walter Vodges, editor of the Newspaper Feature Service Sunday magazines, has returned to New York, after a summer vacation spent in California.

Pat Sullivan, creator of "Felix the Cat," presented members of the British International Polo team with wooden doll figures of his famous cartoon character. "Felix" is the mascot of John Bull's poloists.

"Jimmy" Murphy, who draws "Toots and Casper," and Russ Westover, responsible for "Tillie the Toiler," are en route East to their studios on Broadway from a stay in California.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

FOUR prominent New York advertising men were elected to the board of governors of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, at a meeting of the New York Council, Sept. 18. They are:

William J. Boardman, George Batten Company, Inc.; Robert Tinsman, Federal Advertising Agency, Inc.; M. P. Gould, M. P. Gould Company; and Merrill B. Sands, the Erickson Company, Inc.

They will all serve 2-year terms. The following continue in office as members of the board for the year 1924-1925:

Stewart L. Mims, J. Walter Thompson Company; Wendell P. Colton, Wendell P. Colton Company; and John H. Hawley, Hawley Advertising Company, Inc.

The A. A. A. A. will hold its eighth annual meeting at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, Oct. 16 and 17. The regular quarterly session of the executive board will be held at the same place Oct. 15. On Friday, Oct. 17, A. A. A. A. members will join the Audit Bureau of Circulations in their annual banquet.

JOHN M. HANDLEY, an advertising man in the Chicago offices of Lord & Thomas, was notified last week by Comm. Leopoldo Zunini, consul-general for the Italian government, that he has been awarded the order of the Chevalier of the Crown of Italy.

Several years ago Mr. Handley organized the Italy-America society of Chicago and has been engaged in encouraging cultural relations between the two countries. He was active in inter-allied war work. For 18 years he lived in Italy and is on intimate terms with members of the Italian nobility, government officials and literary men.

Official presentation of the new decoration will be made in behalf of King Emanuel by Consul-General Zunini at a dinner next month in Mr. Handley's honor.

THE COURSE IN ADVERTISING technique, under the direction of Frank Le Roy Blanchard, advertising manager of the Henry L. Doherty Company, opens its twentieth year, Oct. 21, at the Twenty-third street Y. M. C. A., New York.

Among those who will be associated with Mr. Blanchard in this year's course are John Lee Mahin of the Federal Advertising Agency, Paul T. Cherington, director of research, J. Walter Thompson Company; Ben Nash, advertising agent and counsel; John D. MacPherson, sales manager, commercial department, Brooklyn Daily Eagle; P. L. Thomson, advertising manager Western Electric Company; W. H. Beatty, Newell Emmett Company; Ralph R. Mulligan, special newspaper representative; Earle Pearson, educational director, A. A. C. W.; M. C. Robbins, publisher, Gas Age Record; Charles F. Alward, William T. Mullally Company; and Robert Tinsman, president, Federal Advertising Agency. Basil H. Pillard is associate instructor.

HARRY MULVEY has joined the Ruthrauff & Ryan Advertising Agency, New York, as copy writer.

LEE R. DOUBLE, formerly of the Carl Art Advertising Agency, has joined the Syverson-Kelly Advertising Agency, Spokane, Wash., as manager of the department of sales and service.

F. M. ALLEN has joined the staff of the Tuttle Advertising Agency, Greensboro, N. C.

A NEW ADVERTISING business has been incorporated in Chicago under the name of Bailey & Walker.

JOHN H. McMAHON, formerly on the reportorial staff of the Buffalo Express, has opened an advertising agency with Cecil Edward Cutting under the latter's name.

THE MARTIN Advertising Company, New York, is directing a campaign to advertise Coney Island as an all-year resort.

NEWFOUNDLAND POWER & PAPER COMPANY, Ltd.

Newsprint

For the last six months of 1925 we can offer you the finest quality Newsprint with exceptional transportation facilities.

THE BOWATER PAPER COMPANY, Inc.
342 Madison Ave.
New York City

Sole Distributors

Four Celebrated Political Correspondents to Tell

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE CAMPAIGN

CLINTON W. GILBERT at Chicago will cover the Great Headquarters of all parties.

LOUIS SEIBOLD will tour the doubtful states wherein the election will be lost and won—Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana.

ROBERT BARRY will tour the border states between the North and South—Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

COL. GEO. NOX McCAIN will tour the "La Follette States"—Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana.

Each will contribute about 1,000 words, six days a week, SEIBOLD, BARRY and McCAIN supplying mail letters except when reporting sudden developments. GILBERT will file by wire about noon.

For Terms Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

FOR PROMPT SERVICE

TYPE · BORDERS · ORNAMENTS
BRASS RULE

Printers' Supplies · Presses · Paper Cutters

Hamilton Wood & Steel Equipment including our
AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT
Carried in Stock for Prompt Shipment

American Type Founders Company

Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Atlanta, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Winnipeg

NEWSPAPER SPACE BROUGHT RESULTS FOR BOSTON EDISON COMPANY

Ad Campaign Sold Everything From Electric Store Signs to Kitchen Lighting—Courtesy and Good Will Copy Also Used

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith presents the second of a series of nine articles dealing with public utilities and advertising prepared, in response to many requests, by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The purpose is to help public utility companies build business through newspaper advertising. The articles are built upon facts rather than theories.

RECENT newspaper campaigns of the Edison Light Company of Boston, one of the leading power companies in the East, are interesting not only from the standpoint of results accomplished but because of the many and varied purposes for which the advertising was employed.

A few years ago some of the subjects which this company has covered in its advertising, would have been considered somewhat remote in the field of public utility sales and service effort.

For example, the Boston electric advertising series has included copy in the following classification:

Electric Store Signs, Broadcasting Station WTAT, The Edison Shop, Electric Trucks, House Wiring (Real Estate), Old House Wiring (Suburban), Window Lighting, Suburban Store Lighting, Office Lighting, Modern Methods Kitchen, Courtesy and Good Will, Industrial Lighting, Institutional.

Boston Edison officials say the results of all these campaigns have been most satisfactory.

On a six-months' campaign on electric store signs copy of three, four, six and eight inches, the Edison records show 125 new electric signs were erected.

A series of advertisements on electric trucks had as a purpose the stimulation of interest in electric vehicles and the indirect building of the Edison battery charging business. The copy featured the names of local firms using electrically operated trucks in their work, and ran throughout the past winter in a selected list of papers. The results fully covered expectations.

Important campaigns on house wiring were run under a co-operative arrangement with electrical contractors. Copy, "built" into a house-frame border, was addressed to potential customers living in or owning old unwired houses and ran on real estate pages regularly and on other pages during the building season. The suburban wiring series, addressed principally to people owning their own homes, appeared in a list of city and suburban newspapers. The house wiring estimates furnished on request to householders were indicative of the success of this campaign.

Window lighting, a subject which has been touched but lightly by power companies, was the theme of a recent series. The company says that an inquiry from one prominent store in Boston was received the morning the first advertisement in this series appeared. The campaign, which was brief and only ran in a limited number of papers, resulted in the re-lighting of seventy-three windows.

A piece of copy from the "Daylight Kitchen" series, with the appeal to comfort and convenience, which produced splendid results.

Personal calls by salesmen and some direct-mail advertising supplemented the newspaper work on suburban store lighting. In one city in the Edison district, twenty-six stores were equipped with new installations during the campaign; in another, seventeen and in another twenty-two.

A brief campaign on office lighting which was not correctly timed, according to statements by Edison agents, resulted in fourteen offices being equipped with new installations.

The "Daylight Kitchen" series, which has been run in all Boston newspapers, advertises the "kitchen daylight unit" at a cost of $7.50. As a result of the drive 4,500 of these lighting units have been sold at a value of $33,800.

Copy that has appeared for the Edison Shop, the retail appliance department of Boston Edison, has been effective, company executives say. In addition to the regular advertising of standard articles, such as vacuum cleaners and washing machines, copy is run to clean out a remaining lot of merchandise, and is generally successful in doing so. This sort of advertising is said to pay very well with a coupon, whether the coupon calls for a free demonstration in the home, or whether money is to be enclosed with it for the purchase of the advertised article.

Courtesy and good will copy appears frequently in both city and suburban newspapers. It consists of a message of goodwill or an interesting fact about the company. Frequent comments are heard from people who have noticed the almost daily appearance of these short, cheerful messages.

Station WTAT, Edison Light of Boston, whenever the broadcasting program contains some notable feature, uses a small announcement of from three to six inches in the Boston newspapers.

Sherman Joins N. Y. Tribune

Stuart P. Sherman, formerly professor and head of the English department of the University of Illinois, this week commenced his new duties as literary editor of the New York Herald Tribune. He was appointed to the position last May. As associate editor, Sherman is to have Mrs. Carl Van Doren, formerly literary editor of the Nation.

Albertan Issues Classified Broadside

The Calgary Albertan recently issued a single sheet broadside promoting the Albertan's classified advertising department. Pictures and brief biographies of members of the classified staff were included.

Classified Advertising

"A Good Sign to Go By"
—in promoting classified advertising. Nearly one hundred and fifty newspapers think so.

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Otis Building Philadelphia

first IN CENTRAL OHIO
COLUMBUS IN CIRCULATION & ADVERTISING

94,150
Sworn government statement for the 6 mos. ending March 31, 1924.

Advertising Leadership

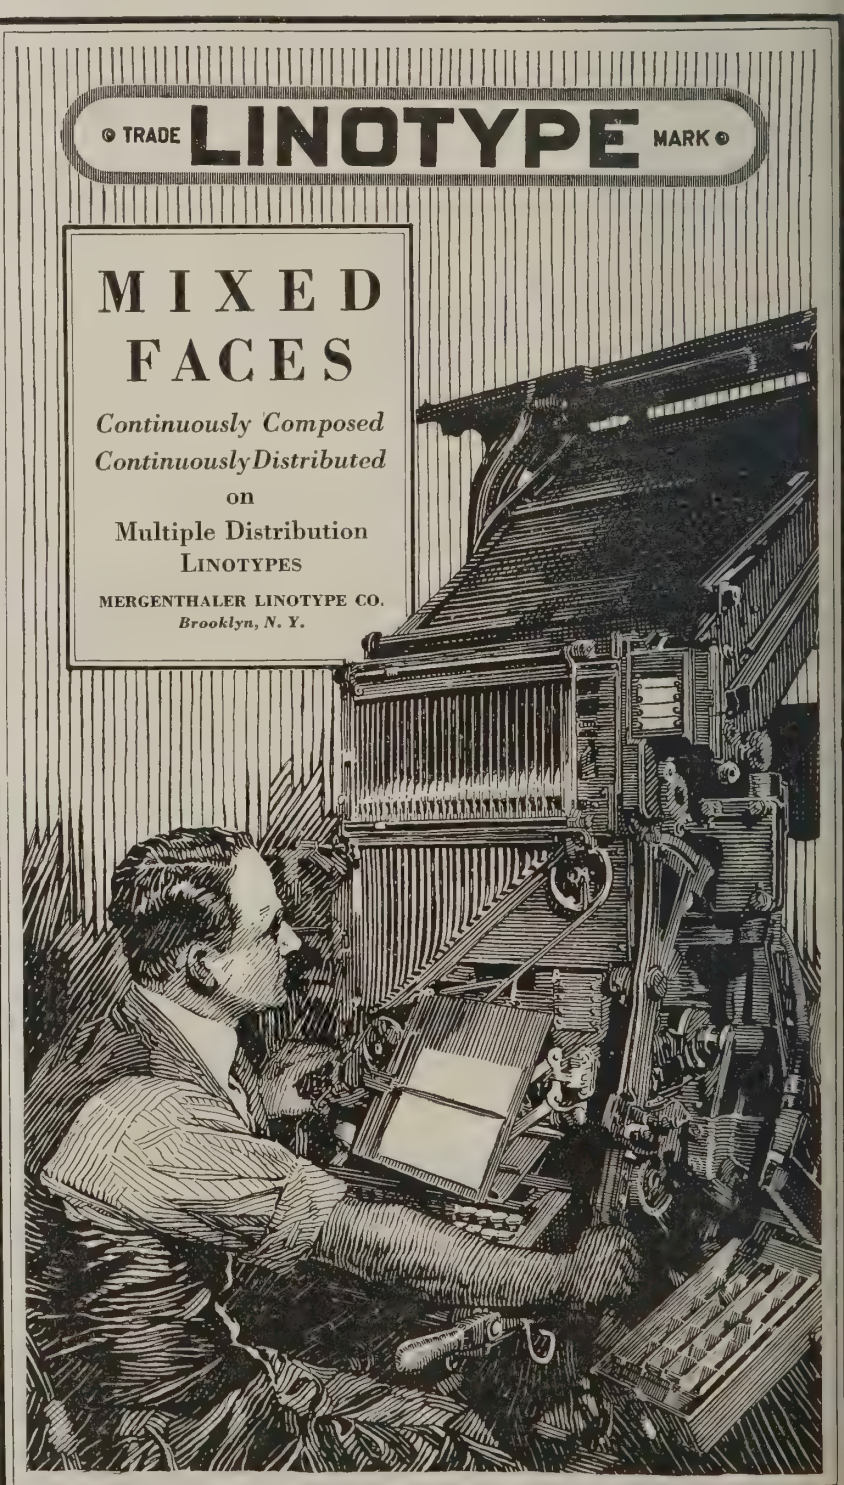
The Dispatch leads all other Ohio newspapers in advertising (first 6 mos. 1924), exceeding the next largest (Cleveland) paper by 1,246,092 lines. For the first 8 months the Dispatch exceeded the other Columbus Newspapers combined by 2,262,232 lines.

DISPATCH . . . 13,659,283 lines
SEC. PAPER . . 6,634,578 lines
THIRD PAPER. 4,762,473 lines

204 exclusive national advertisers first 6 mo. 1924

215 exclusive local display advertisers first 6 mo. 1924

MAKE CENTRAL OHIO YOUR TEST MARKET



The Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

MIXED FACES

Continuously Composed Continuously Distributed on Multiple Distribution
LINOTYPES

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE CO.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

This advertisement composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

U. OF VERMONT RAISING $1,000,000 FUND THROUGH PAID SPACE

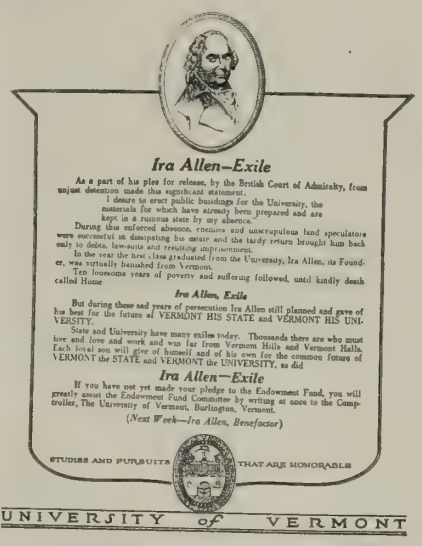
Free Publicity Banned in Drive for College Endowment—$500,000 Raised from Students, Alumni, and Friends

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

"WANTED: One million dollars." That was the amount urgently required by the University of Vermont.

Like many another institution, the university had grown rapidly but its means of support had not grown accordingly. Tuition rates could not be jumped, since most of the 1,100 students have to work their way through in whole or in part. The alumni body was not large nor super-wealthy.

The university "studied its potential market." It worked out a "sales plan." It had an advertising agency issue contracts for paid space in every daily newspaper in its state. Instead of thrusting bales of "free publicity" on unwilling editorial desks, the university used attractive and skilful copy with ample white space "at regular rates." It followed down live "leads" with personal salesmanship. And already its million-dollar Endowment Fund is becoming a fact.



The active alumni body of 5,691, in addition, have been reached through the Vermont Alumni Weekly, edited by John O. Baxendale, alumni secretary and treasurer of the National Association of Alumni Secretaries, together with direct-mail work and four solicitors in the field. About 90 per cent tackled have subscribed.

The university felt it should sell the people of its own state on its work. Its College of Medicine, for instance, is a Class A institution and for some time has been the only medical college in northern New England. Its Department of Agriculture has played an important part in improving farming methods in what is notably a farming state. It was decided that, instead of trying to reach the people of the state through "free publicity," it would be wisdom to buy space in all the daily newspapers of the state to make the Vermont public more fully appreciate the work of the university and to encourage subscriptions.

Ira Allen, founder of the University, had been a romantic and dynamic figure of early American days. He had overcome numerous obstacles. His personality had been many-sided. It was decided to infuse his spirit into the paid advertising campaign. The result was a series of 15 advertisements, each 10 inches on 3 columns

At the top of each advertisement was a picture of Ira Allen. At the bottom appeared the signature of the university, with a seal, and the slogan, "Studies and pursuits that are honorable." The copy was set in a shield border which remained the same for each succeeding piece of copy.

How Ira Allen raised money to support a regiment to oppose Burgoyne when the Council of Safety was without funds, how he helped make possible victory at Yorktown in 1781 by keeping one-third of the British forces idle and many other historic facts were brought out in the copy, which was written by F. W. Kehoe, assistant comptroller and registrar. The copy, in short, showed Ira Allen in such roles as financier, diplomatist, builder, maker of history, strategist, founder, philanthropist, etc., and in each case tied up with the current needs of the university and the opportunity for Vermonters and modern "exiles" from Vermont to assist.

Specimen of College Drive Copy.

Reprints on cardboard were mailed regularly to a special list of 500 names as well as to prominent Allens, whose names are in "Who's Who." Some of the newspapers furnished a total of 8,000 names of out-of-state subscribers who logically might be interested.

"The response to this work has been very pleasing," Guy W. Bailey, president of the University of Vermont, stated. "We have had many fine letters from present and former Vermonters. Apparently our advertising touched a responsive chord of loyalty and state pride. We not only succeeded in placing our institution favorably before the people of our own state, but through our newspaper campaign have been able to reach many now far away, but who continue to read the home-town papers.

"We maintain a student loan fund, now about $65,000, from which we advance cash to needy students at 4 per cent while the student is in school and 6 per cent after he has finished until he can pay the amount back. The interest from the loan fund counts toward the endowment. Friends, incidentally, have contributed from a $1 to a $1,000 to this fund."

The General Education Foundation contributed $250,000 contingent upon $750,000 additional being raised by the university. At the time this is written, considerably more than $500,000 of the balance had been pledged and the officials were confident that in a short time the full million dollar fund would be a reality—thanks to the aid of Ira Allen, Exile, and first-class paid newspaper advertising.

WALKER WINS PRESBREY CUP

Turns in Low Net Score at Advertising Golf Tourney

The Presbrey Golf Cup, offered by Frank Presbrey, vice-president of the Advertising Club of New York, was won September 16 by H. L. Walker of the Walker Engraving Company, playing over the Englewood, N. J. Country Club course in the Advertising Club Golf Associations' final tournament of the season. Walkers score was 68 net, deducting a handicap of 18 from his afternoon card of 86. Sixty-five New York advertising men participated.

The best score of the day was turned in by Gilbert C. Tompkins, of Stanford-Briggs, Inc., with 84.

M. C. Robbins, publisher of Advertising and Selling Fortnightly, and G. H. Gunst, of the E. Katz Agency, were second and third low net in the afternoon, with 71 and 75 respectively. The morning qualifying round at 9 holes was led by F. C. Gephart, with a net 35.

At a dinner in the club house following the tourney the present officers of the Advertising Club Golf Association were re-elected for the coming year. They are President, John I. Wheaton, Advertising Novelties; vice-president, Wesley Ferrin, American Business Builders, Inc.; and secretary, Montague Lee, Montague Lee Company, Inc.

Huntoon Joins Morrison Agency

John W. Huntoon, for several years financial advertising solicitor for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Finance & Industry and the Cleveland Times, has joined the staff of Francis R. Morison & Co., advertising agency of Cleveland.

Store Takes 14-Page Ad

Newspaper advertising was used liberally in Worcester, Mass., during the recent observance of New England Week. The C. T. Sherer Company department store used an entire 14-page section in the Worcester Telegram to advertise its New England-made goods. It was said to have been the largest single department store advertisement ever placed in a New England newspaper.

New Model Linotype Demonstration

From Sept. 29 to Oct. 4, a new model Linotype will be demonstrated at the United States Hotel, Room 30, Boston, which to quote from the invitation, "embodies certain new features of construction which make it of unusual interest to the trade at large." Boston printers have been invited to inspect the new model.

Textile Prices Current

a daily feature giving your readers and merchants a complete table of current textile prices.

This feature is corrected daily by night press toll wire and can be easily handled in your composing room.

Textile Prices Current

will make an instantaneous hit with your readers and more so if your paper circulates where there are textile mills. Ready at 6 p. m. daily, f. o. b. night press toll wire, New York. Wire or write for rates and samples for your city.

INTERSTATE COMMERCIAL NEWS SERVICE
38 Park Row, New York

"C.O.D."—"F.O.B." —"N.Y."

Many a newspaper pads its "advertising records" with all sorts of trade space. They never wou'd get a line of such advertising if they sold for cash only.

It seems fair—but how about the cash advertiser who comes into competition with the trade advertiser? What does he get?

Well, he gets a piece of the neck.

When we say that "business is good" with the BROOKLYN STANDARD UNION we are talking about money, not about cigar coupons.

Poor Bob's Almanak

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Leader in Rotogravure Advertising

The New York Times in eight months of this year published 581,232 agate lines of rotogravure advertising, a gain of 93,634 lines over the corresponding period of last year and 232,594 lines more than the next New York newspaper featuring this class of advertising.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL FIRST - by Merit

Unexcelled as a Food Medium.

4 to 6 food pages every Thursday.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

WILL BANISH "PUFFS" FROM HIS PAGE, SAYS ACTOR TURNED DRAMA CRITIC

Irving Pichel With a Record as Player and Producer, Says it Isn't Reviewer's Business to Be Kind, But to Make Readers Talk

By TRUMAN HANDY

"THE average newspaper's drama page is a necessary evil tolerated because of the money it brings in, yet lacking sufficient independence to stand on its own merits as printed news."

IRVING PICHEL

It was Irving Pichel, critic of the San Francisco Daily News, who voiced this opinion. In another breath he remarked that his interest is hardly impersonal inasmuch as he has been on both sides of the fence—both that of the theatrical producer and the newspaper writer.

He is in a peculiar position,—the only drama editor in the country, if records are accurate, who is at the same time a real actor and director-in-chief of an active theatre and who went to his critic's chair as such.

Of late, on the other hand, it has become rather common for theatre reviewers to forsake their journalistic prides, haunts and prejudices and turn either to acting—such as it may be—or to stage producing.

To wit: A late critic of the New York Times now confronts the public with: "Mr. Adolph Klauber Presents,"—a producer; Kenneth MacGowan, late of the Globe of Gotham, has become director of the w. k Provincetown Players; Starke Young, recently made dramatic critic of the New York Times, produced "The Failures" with considerable success for the Theatre Guild; John Corbin, also of the Times, has tried his ingenuity at producing various Shakespearian revivals, and Robert C. Benchley, of Life, Alexander Woolcott, of the New York Sun and Heywood Broun, of the New York World, each of whom has been tempted to don grease paint and mingle with the rest of the actors in New York revues during the past year or so.

But, although the stage has coaxed these worthy denizens away from their inkpots and clipsheets, and more or less metamorphosed them into momentary mimes, there is only one instance where a thoroughbred actor has bloomed into a professional editor.

And that example is Irving Pichel.

At 33 years of age he not only conducts and acts in the Community Playhouse, at Berkeley, Cal., but can number among his other accomplishments the fact that he is not only a former stage director for the Shuberts but also an erstwhile co-worker of Margaret Anglin and Richard Ordynski.

His little theatre in Berkeley, which is the site of the University of California, is reputed the highest-brow dramatic institution in the West.

Alternating with the productions there, Pichel has made a notable success with the production of classic drama in the enormous, open-air Greek Theatre sponsored by the University of California. "Henry IV," "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Twelfth Night," "Romeo and Juliet," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Richard II," are notable among his Shakespeare, and he has played also to thousands in the giant amphitheater in both Sophocles "Oedipus Rex" and Sem Benelli's "The Jest."

As an actor, Pichel's name is as well known about San Francisco as is Sidney Blackmer's in New York. And so, when he succeeded a former critic on the News a few months hence, there was an audible ripple of apprehension as to just what he would do with his daily column—as to how an actor would write.

"I had certain convictions about the theatre-going public," he said. "I felt that I wanted to present a reasonable, accurate guide to amusements—a bulletin which would tell my readers where they could most profitably spend their money for amusements.

"Gradually, after I have offered this information, I insinuate standards of judgment, because I want readers to know the basis on which I form my conclusions.

"The theatre press-agent of today thinks he has the undisputed right to dominate the critic. He maintains a sort of competition with his fellows in trying to sell you ideas. There was a time when it was believed that in order to draw crowds to an entertainment they had to be made to believe that nothing else existed in the world quite like this particular spectacle. This applied particularly to circuses. Each one was 'the greatest show on earth,' and unless you saw it you missed something that would never come your way again."

When Pichel was a student at Harvard some years ago, he wrote reviews now and then for the Boston Transcript. The work piqued his interest. He became associated with a stock company at the old Castle Square Theatre in Boston and acted and directed. All the while he kept wanting to write more, for the stage and the newspaper.

After finishing at Harvard, he continued with the Castle Square Company and finally left to join an aggregation of English actors headed by Gertrude Kingston. Forsaking this, he became director of the dramatic department of the St. Paul, Minn., Institute, and from there went into an association with James K. Hackett during production of "Macbeth" and "Hamlet," where he met Richard Ordynski.

With Ordynski he produced "Caliban" at the New York Stadium, later becoming assistant to Joseph Urban and, finally, when Ordynski went to Los Angeles to establish a definite Little Theatre, Pichel accompanied him as co-director.

In 1917 he returned to Harvard to reproduce "Caliban" and was obtained as director of the Artists' Guild Theatre, of St. Louis. It was from this post that he went to the Shuberts' organization in New York as stage director and, after a lengthy season, found himself in San Francisco establishing a theatre of his own.

His own productions are marked by a peculiar knowledge of journalistic news value. He does not produce a summery play during the winter season, nor a murky Russian tragedy when he expects to play to an audience of "the younger set" as is generally the case of a matinee in a college town.

And, from his observation of diverse audiences as an actor he has had ample opportunity to study the public psychology.

"A reviewer musn't take himself too seriously," he remarked. "So many of them do. It is his function to put words into his readers' mouths, to let his own wider judgment of a play give them some basis of discussion of the work when they talk about it to their friends.

"It isn't the business of a reviewer to be kind. He should be fair. He can't be fair if he plays to the box-office, and, with the average run of plays below par in quality, his job is frequently a tough one."

And what he said next makes him almost an iconoclast in the reviewing fraternity today:

"I am going to gradually cut all theatre publicity off my page. Oftentimes now I give the most sensational advertiser the smallest stick if his copy hasn't value as dramatic news. Eventually my own page will be only a fact report, a bulletin, with a certain set standard.

"There can be no absolutely-rigid tenet to adhere to at once throughout the country as a whole, as the drama editor's work depends largely upon the condition of his city theatrically.

"What new thing can you write about a three-year-old New York show that is played by a road company?"

The answer explains the cut-and-driedness of many drama pages,—a dullness that is necessarily due in no way to a lack of sparkle in the reviewer himself but that lies in a dearth of material to write about.

And, to illustrate this point Pichel will tell you the story of how he tried to get a berth writing reviews when he first arrived in the West.

"I went to Mr. Fremont Older of the San Francisco Call," he said, "and told him I knew the theatre and could write prolifically about it.

"But Mr. Older, when he had heard me, only looked at me and shook his head.

"'And is there anyone who wants to read it?' he asked.

"Perhaps he was right when he said that the 'ads' would tell them the story. And that is why the drama page is like a five-and-ten-cent store; because you find a bigger bargain at each successive counter.

"And, because the newspaper is often more interested in getting revenue from its amusement advertising than in presenting readable facts, editors have got used to accepting any sort of copy from press-agents, which is like winking at a necessary evil.

"Is there anything I won't do?" he echoed to my question. "Rather. I'll never press-agent any of my own productions nor use my paper's space to exploit myself as an actor."

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

PUBLIC STANDARDS IN KEEPING OF PRESS

Frederick Peaker, Relected President of British Institute of Journalists, Discusses Professional Status of Newspaper Men

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Frederick Peaker was elected president of the Institute of Journalists for the 3rd year at the 40th annual conference opened at Margate Thanet.

In his presidential address he congratulated the members on the progress of the institute, and on the growing membership. The institute did not put in the forefront of its program the material welfare of the journalist, but it was concerned about its status, he said. Once that was secured, his material welfare would follow. But they were determined not to have their organized life degraded to the level of industrial trade unionism of a very crude kind.

The standard of public life was really in their keeping, he said. The real journalist cared more for the public welfare than for his own, and no man ought to be in journalism if it were nothing but a trade to him. In the long run a high standard of professionalism in the best sense among journalists would secure better pay than all the trade unionism in the world. Sir Henry Slesser, Solicitor-General in the Labor Government, had expressed the view that journalism ought to be a profession. The Institute of Journalists was in thorough accord with that sentiment.

If journalism were a real profession with professional standards, there would be no need for legislation. Journalism demanded a high standard of education of specialized knowledge and of professional technique. No occupation could be more satisfying to the man who felt he had a mission in life beyond earning a living.

Mr. Peaker said he did not like the modern tendency for newspapers to get into few hands. The number of newspaper readers was increasing; the number of journalists was decreasing. But its mere effect on the welfare of any one class was not the really important thing. The public interest was best served by the clash of many opinions rather than by the imposition of one opinion through many channels. He was all against dictatorship, whether it was the dictatorship of the proletariat or of the multiple newspaper owner. That tendency to dictatorship was increasing. The commercialization of press production was, perhaps, inevitable, but let them see to it that opinion was not commercialized.

Some of the best literary work of our time, Mr. Peaker added, was being put into newspapers. He did not agree that the best journalists were all dead.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Daily Features

RADIO, MOTOR, NEWS-MAPS, PORTRAITS, Fashions, Tricks, Puzzles, Smiles, Noozie.
The International Syndicate, BALTIMORE.

Daily Serial

MURDER ON THE LIMITED
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
Unexcelled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y.

General Features

A SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
Decker's Caricatures — Home Features — Daily Column—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties
Tri Feature, 110 West 40th Street, New York
Write for Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman
Washington Radio News Service,
Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Weekly Pages

CAMERA NEWS, FASHION, FEATURE, CHILDREN'S Pages—also House Plans, Handicraft in the Home, Radio and Motor features.
The International Syndicate, BALTIMORE.

A WEEKLY COLUMN OF QUIPS AND JESTS
Timely and real live matter. Write for sample.
Rosen Associates, 7131 Manse St.,
Forest Hills, New York.

PUBLISHERS URGED TO RENEW FIGHT ON POSTAL PAY INCREASE

Bound to Be Followed by Further Rise in Second Class Rates if Re-enacted, Pearson Declares—Asks Editorial Disapproval

By SAM BELL

(Washington Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Newspaper and trade publication interests affiliated with the American Publishers' Conference have warning from A. C. Pearson, national chairman of the organization, that congressional re-enactment of the postal pay increase bill is bound to be followed by a further increase in second class rates. The pay advance, authorized by Congress in the closing hours of the last session of Congress, failed to become a law as the result of President Coolidge's veto of the measure.

Mr. Pearson's warning sent out to the membership of the Publishers' Conference this week comes after he had spent several days in Washington investigating the situation. He is convinced that the agitation for the omnibus pay increase again is under way and will result in the re-introduction of the bill at the December session, with an excellent chance of enactment.

Once the proposed increase is granted, Mr. Pearson contends, the publishers' fight for reductions in the war-time rates on second class matter, still in operation, will have failed and the industry will face another advance which will tax the publishing business annually an additional $5,0 0,000 at least. His advice to the publishers, backed by figures on salaries in the postal service compared with corresponding jobs in private business, is as follows:

"Decline to give any editorial approval to an omnibus raise in postal salaries, as this method is entirely illogical and a considerable part of the increase will be assigned to you.

"Make known to your Congressmen and Senators and to the Postmaster General your feeling that the publications are entitled to a reduction in the big war-time increase for second class postage, and that they will certainly fight any attempt under any form to raise the second-class rate."

Unless the publishers themselves do something, Mr. Pearson warns in conclusion, they will be without cause for complaint if they find themselves "burdened with a very much increased postage price."

In his statement of the situation, Mr. Pearson informs the publishers that the legislative agents of postal employees' organizations have announced their intentions to win the editorial support of representative newspapers. Their appeal, he says, will be based upon sentiment and not upon fact as comparative salary figures show.

"It is possible," argues Mr. Pearson, "to adjust inequities in postal pay to meet increased living costs in a few of the large industrial centers without imposing heavy assessments on newspapers and other patrons of the Post Office Department. Those in charge of the postal workers' campaign demand blanket increases ranging from $200 to $400 for more than 350,000 employes.

"A study made of salaries paid employees in newspaper offices throughout the country, which brings the subject directly to the door of the newspaper manager and editor, is worthy of consideration here. A comparison of these salaries with those now paid to postal employees shows quite clearly that the government salaries are considerably higher than those paid by the average newspaper. For comparative purposes it was necessary to confine the research to the business office. For instance, the maximum salary paid a stenographer in a Cleveland newspaper office is $1,303 per year, as against $1,400 paid by the Post Office Department to an untrained boy, fresh from school and engaged as a postal clerk. The minimum salary paid filing clerks in Philadelphia newspaper offices is $938, with a maximum salary of $1,303.

"The average salary paid to those employed in clerical positions on newspapers in ten representative cities is lower than similar jobs in the postal service by $500 a year. Another significant fact that should not be overlooked is that the postal employees have received 3 increases in salary in the past 4 years. They are the highest paid workers in the government service, receiving at the present time salaries greater than those paid to employees doing similar work in other departments of the government."

SPECIALTY AD MEN MEET

Henry J. Allen, Former Kansas Governor, Honor Guest at Chicago

"Chicago is the greatest advertising city in the world" were the words of greeting that William R. Dawes, president of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce gave to the assembled members of the Advertising Specialty Association at the opening session of their convention at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, Sept. 22. Mr. Dawes was introduced by U. Rae Colson of Paris, Ill., president of the advertising association.

Three hundred members were in attendance during the 4 days of the meeting, which was the twenty-first annual gathering, and according to the officers of the organization, the largest and most successful in their experience.

Henry J. Allen, former governor of Kansas, was the guest of honor at the annual banquet on the Wednesday evening. K. K. Bell, general manager of the Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago, delivered an address on "Made to Measure Advertising," and Darby A. Day, manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, New York, spoke on "Today Versus Inspiration of Tomorrow Applied to Sales Organizations."

Montreal Editor Accused

John H. Roberts, editor of the Montreal Sun and of the Axe, with Leslie M. Roberts and Alphonse Moisan, also associated with the Sun, appeared in Arraignment Court Sept. 24, on a charge of conspiring to obtain by fraud and deceit the sum of $325. A second complaint was entered to the effect that the 3 accused had obtained that sum, through fraud and deceit, from the Mount Royal Hotel Company, Ltd. Personal bail for each was fixed at $500 and preliminary enquiry was set for Oct. 1.

Typothetae Plans Complete

Four thousand men and women workers in graphic arts are expected to attend the thirty-eighth annual convention of the United Typothetæ of America, to be held in Chicago beginning Oct. 13, and to continue for a week. Delegates are expected to be in attendance from every state, Great Britain, Germany, France, Sweden, Denmark, Italy, Mexico, other Latin-American republics, and Hawaii. Sessions will be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel twice daily.

Edward Insley Dead

Edward Insley, 58, assistant managing editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, and at one time part owner of the Sacramento Union, died at Covina, Cal., Sept. 20. Insley began his newspaper career at 19 on the Chicago Tribune. Later he became correspondent for New York papers. He had lived in California for the last 20 years.

RADIO CONCERT FOR EDITORS

Memphis Commercial Appeal Dedicates Program to Newspaper Men

A radio program dedicated to the editors and publishers of America was broadcast Sept. 24, by the Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal, station WMC. The program, which consisted of an organ recital from the Scottish Rite Cathedral, was arranged by Sam L. Kahn, city editor, and put on the air at 11 o'clock at night.

The recital opened with the "Poet and Peasant" overture, which was followed by selections from "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Grand American Fantasia," a medley of southern airs, was dedicated to the Atlanta Journal.

A trio of popular numbers was followed by Chopin's Funeral March, which in turn was succeeded by "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," and "I've Lived All My Life For You," the last named written by a Memphis composer. Dixie concluded the evening.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?

Because

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

AND

The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.

Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

First eight months of 1924

Carried more Food advertising than any other paper in the City.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Every month, every year, The Cleveland PLAIN DEALER carries MORE National Advertising than both Cleveland evening newspapers COMBINED.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

WOODWARD & KELLY
350 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Bldg., Detroit

J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St., New York

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

Total Lineage 4,285,568 Agate Lines

Display 2,552,900 Agate Lines
National 779,002 Agate Lines
Classified 953,666 Agate Lines
Audited Circulation A. B. C. 32,643

Frank S. Baker, President
Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City
Ford, Parsons Co., 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois

R. J. Bidwell & Co.
San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

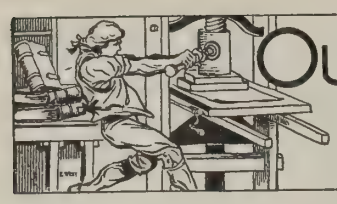
The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation 118,000
Sunday Circulation 175,000

Member A. B. C.

New Haven Register



is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 40,000 Average

Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

ERNEST GRUENING has always practiced what he preached in the matter of newspaper ethics. He has stood solidly for his principles even when such action meant resignation from the staff. Consequently, his article "Can Journalism be a Profession?" in the Century Magazine for September deserves that thoughtful reading which EDITOR & PUBLISHER requested in a recent editorial.

While Mr. Gruening was preparing this article I had lunch with him at the Newspaper Club of New York City. At other times we have talked over newspaper tendencies in his own editorial office. Our relations have always been friendly in spite of a wide difference of opinion on various phases of journalism. Now for the article.

I have always resented the implication that the standard of ethics for business is necessarily lower than that for a profession. Modern interpretation makes business the oldest of the arts and the youngest of the sciences. The Man of Galilee insisted that he must be about, not his Father's profession, but his Father's business. Even those who split hairs in differentiating business from profession have never shown that the editorial column needs a higher standard of ethics than the display space for the advertiser.

But to come to more specific matters Mr. Gruening says:

> Clearly, where a maximum of advertising can be obtained with a minimum of circulation, and even that maintained by methods utterly unrelated to journalistic excellence, what incentive is there to the business management to attempt to improve its news and editorial columns?

But the matter is not so clear. Advertising today is being placed for good business reasons. It may at times justly be given to the newspaper with the minimum circulation because that medium may have the largest number of responsive subscribers. When I was on Leslie's Weekly it then had a circulation of 400,000. I asked an automobile advertiser why he used Harper's Weekly with 40,000 circulation in preference to Leslie's. His reply was illuminating, "Because we have found that regardless of inquiries we make more sales from an advertisement in Harper's than from one in Leslie's." Advertising used to be checked on inquiries received, but today it is measured by sales made.

The "methods utterly unrelated to journalistic excellence" mentioned by Mr. Gruening refer to the use of premiums—hot water bottles, fountain pens, silver services and what not—to maintain circulation. A few years ago, in preparation of an address at the University of Kansas, I sent a questionnaire to a large number of advertisers in which I asked "What do you want to know about a newspaper before you use its columns?" I was surprised at the frequency of this reply, "Methods used to obtain circulation." Advertisers are not only asking "How much have you got?" but also "How did you get it?" Responsive circulation comes from journalistic excellence in spite of what Mr. Gruening says.

No answer to the question asked by Mr. Gruening is complete which does not see the situation from the viewpoint of all the principles involved in the transaction. Especially important is the viewpoint of the purchaser. I wish I had preserved a letter that Harrison Gray Otis of the Los Angeles Times once wrote me. In it he insisted that I impress upon students that a man gets up on a cold winter morning, goes downstairs in his pajamas, opens his front door, and snatches in his morning paper—not to find what the editor has to say, but to learn what has happened the day before.

The newspaper subscriber takes the medicine prescribed by the doctor, bitter as it may be; follows the instruction of his lawyer when he personally would prefer to follow some other course; but he does not ask the editor to do all his thinking about men and matters of moment. Years ago readers may have bought the New York Tribune to find out what Horace Greeley had to say, but no such condition obtains today. Newspapers have changed from organs of views to organs of news. This fact must be squarely faced in any discussion such as that given by Mr. Gruening in the Century.

The owner of a general store can do something more than merely market goods in his community. He may realize that he is responsible for the appearance and attractiveness of the homes in his community. In the matter of house furnishings he may seek to keep in stock those things which have artistic beauty as well as utility value. On store time he may give his employes instruction in interior decoration so that shoppers may purchase furnishings that have a harmony of design and a color scheme that will be restful to the eye. I am painting no fanciful picture, for a merchant in his store can have just as high a view of his calling as any editor in his chair. The sales talk of the merchant and the editorial comment of the newspaper may be on the same plane of service to the community.

Again the editorial writer who has a message for the people can still find an outlet for his wares even though the newspaper columns may seem closed to him. E. W. Howe wrote some great editorials for the Atchison Globe, but he wields a still greater influence today when, taking his editorials from the Globe, he put them in that little periodical which he publishes once a month. What E. W. Howe has done others can do. Mr. Gruening seems to have little difficulty in finding a medium for expression even though he is no longer connected with a newspaper. His case illustrates the very point that I am trying to make in this comment.

Freedom of religious worship is one thing in theory and quite another in practice. Most of us will fare better if, instead of starting a new religious denomination, we select that church whose articles of creed contain the greatest number of things with which we are in sympathy. Minor articles to which we are opposed may be overlooked because of the larger principles of the creed. In the same way, the editorial writer will usually accomplish more if, instead of trying to start some organ of his own, he will affiliate himself with a newspaper which stands for the big things he wants to advocate. For most people life is a matter of some sort of adjustment along the line indicated.

Much truth exists in what Mr. Gruening says about the hardships experienced by the newspaper man who is thrown out of a job through a change in management. But such things happen elsewhere. From my own newspaper experience I could point to similar cases in the clergy where a new bishop presided at a conference in the church, and in education where the university had a new president, and in medicine where a hospital had a new board of trustees.

In the comments made I have had no intention of entering into any debate with Mr. Gruening. I have, however, tried to call attention to some things which ought to be considered. If space permitted I should like to take up several other points, especially the assertion that "any intelligent person can learn the technical elements of reporting, copyreading, headwriting, and 'make-up' in a fortnight."

If that assertion be true the experienced newspaper man need not worry about his job. If he is thrown out of employment he can start a correspondence course in journalism and enroll any number of students through his guarantee to teach "all the technical elements of reporting copy reading, head-writing, and 'make-up' in two weeks." On this point, as on many others, Mr. Gruening and I disagree.

IF I had a standing head "Books Re ceived" I should list this week "Prin ciples of Merchandising" by Melvi Thomas Copeland, Ph.D., Professor o Marketing, Director of Bureau of Bus ness Research, Harvard Graduate c School of Business (A. W. Shaw Com pany).

* * *

THE advertising of the Rogers Pe Company, not only in the theatrica programs but also in the daily press, ha attracted much attention. The advertis ing department of that concern has gon through the old store scrap books an collected some representative ads to sho the early development of its advertisin into its present form. These ads, wit chats about the same, have been publishe in a pamphlet so attractive in appearanc that it escapes the wastebasket.

Daily Starts New Home

Ground has been broken for the ne 4-story home of the Pasadena (Cal Star-News on the building site at Ea Colorado street and Oakland avenue.

ONE out of every THREE Homes in Milwaukee receive

THE MILWAUKEE LEADER

"Unawed by Influence and Unbribed by Gain."

Advertising Representatives

FRALICK & BATES

Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles

A Thought for National Advertisers

The Sun is read and relied upon by the more intelligent and prosperous of all classes in the world's richest community.

The advertising censorship of The Sun is such that meritorious announcements find congenial contact in its columns.

The Sun

New York City

Average net paid circulation exceeding 250,000

On and after September 6th, 1924

The New Orleans States

Will be represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent, live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

HE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles San Francisco

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by

THE

Salt Lake Tribune

No other section of the country offers the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using one newspaper.

FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Louis—Kansas City—Atlanta.

PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE
M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

first!

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

Over—

200,000

CIRCULATION

in less than 3 years.
—because Detroiters want it.

DETROIT TIMES

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

"REMEMBER this newspaper advertising rightly done, will increase your volume and that means less expense. Newspaper advertising will increase your turn-over, and that means profit. Newspaper advertising, backed by intelligent merchandising will frequently turn dull seasons into good ones."—Thomas H. Moore, Associate Director, Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A.

* * * * *

ENGLISH HOSPITALITY

"BEFORE the war we used to hear a great deal about French courtesy, but the English people now challenge other countries in this domain of national comity. * * * The English could not possibly be more affable, hospitable or uniformly polite. * * * From the practical view of the advertising and publishing business, one easily notes that the British papers and magazines are copying American methods and are improving in brightness and in artistry as a consequence. * * * No country on earth needs prohibition as much as Great Britain. The public house is worse than the old American saloon."—Homer J. Buckley, President of the Advertising Council, Chicago.

* * * * *

LOWER POSTAL RATES NEEDED

"IT is surely obvious that nothing is more desirable than that the people of each country should read the newspapers of the other, and thus be placed in a position enabling them to understand the movements in the respective nations, and to appreciate their sentiments. Nothing, indeed, could conceivably lead to better and more intimate relations than such an interchange of newspaper reading, and it is surprising that up to the present the Governments of both countries have apparently failed to recognize this fact. It is, I think high time that an agreement were come to between the two countries, for a reduction in the postage rates on newspapers, which are now really prohibitive so far as the average reader is concerned. It is almost incredible when one reflects on the negligible number of Britons and Americans who are in the existing circumstances able to read each other's newspapers."—Louis Wiley.

* * * * *

BANK ADVERTISING

"IN some respects the United States is far in advance of its English friends in the advertising field. In others, there is much we can learn to our advantage. Perhaps in no branch of business is there so great a contrast in methods as in the financial field. The English banks have traditionally opposed advertising, choosing to regard their business more as a profession and applying to it the ethical standards of other professions in regard to publicity. American bankers generally, particularly in recent years, have, on the contrary, chosen to regard banking as a business, to be properly promoted by publicity and sales methods applied successfully to other businesses. As a result, we have gone far in the development of both good-will and selling advertising for financial institutions on our side of the water whereas there has been little change in English methods since banks first became established business factors."—Francis H. Sisson, Chairman, Publicity Committee, American Bankers Association.

* * * * *

PUBLICITY DOESN'T INCREASE CRIME

"DOUBTLESS newspapers do print too much crime news. So does the Bible, in the opinion of some, and that man Bill Shakespeare, who wrote those fearful tragedies called Hamlet and Macbeth—well, he is dead, so we will not criticize him too severely. Then there was another well known Englishman, Charles Dickens, who wrote such terrible things as Oliver Twist, telling fearful stories of vile criminals. Maybe we could have his works burned or expurgated. Then that fellow called Sir Walter Scott told many bloody tales that some people say are classics, and our own Edgar Allan Poe had regular nightmares of crime reporting, and he was worse than the newspapers, because he based very little of his stuff on actual happenings. That's one thing about the newspapers—they do tell just what is going on throughout the world, whether good or bad. It is unfortunate that bad things do happen, but publicity doesn't increase them."—Marcellus E. Foster in Houston Chronicle.

* * * * *

NEWSPAPER FAIRNESS

"ONE ideal which we always wish to keep in mind upstairs is that of trying to be fair. We have, of course, to stand by the policies of the paper. We have to oppose public men from time to time and express ourselves as strongly as we can against measures which we disapprove, and we do not hesitate to use the ordinary weapons of debate, employing sarcasm and ridicule if the occasion warrants. But we desire to be fair to the other side, and do not want, as Lincoln said, to 'put a thorn in the bosom' of any man. One of the features of the editorial page which I prize very highly is letters sent in from the outside. We have not as much space for these as we should like. But we do like to get the views and opinions of our readers, although they may be quite contradictory to those of the paper. * * * The old idea was to shut out everything that did not agree with the policy of the paper. The reading public likes to feel that a newspaper is not confined to expressing the judgments of its editors, but wishes to open a forum for all kinds of opinion and political views."—Rollo Ogden, Editor New York Times.

* * * * *

RESPECT FOR REPORTERS

"THE old fond theory, still surviving in many a newspaper office, that it is somehow discreditable for a reporter to show any sign of education and culture, that he is most competent and laudable when his intellectual baggage most closely approaches that of a police lieutenant or a district leader—this theory will fall before the competition of novices who have been adequately trained, and have more in their heads than their mere training. Journalism, compared to the other trades of educated men, is surely not unattractive, even today. It is more amusing than the army or the cloth, and it offers a better living at the start than either medicine or the law. There is a career in it for the young man of original mind and forceful personality—a career leading to great power and even to a sort of wealth. In point of fact, it has always attracted such young men, else it would be in an even lower state than it is now. It would attract a great many more of them if public opinion within the craft were more favorable to them—if they were less harassed by the commands of superiors of no dignity, and the dislike of fellows of no sense. Every time two of them are drawn in they draw another. The problem is to keep them. That is the central problem of journalism in the United States today."—Editorial in The American Mercury.

An Unexcelled Agricultural State and Among the First in Manufactures

Illinois

outranks all other states in combined value of manufactured products and value of all farm property.

Illinois is a state where farm and factory seem to struggle constantly to outdo each other in the production of wealth.

Prosperous, industrious and progressive, Illinois is one of the richest markets for nationally advertised goods.

Everything from mowing machines to motor cars and furs, to fireless cookers is sought by the people of this great wealth producing territory.

Many manufacturers are using these daily newspapers advantageously in popularizing their products in this territory.

These dailies reach the homes of the people who buy. They cooperate with merchants in their cities. They produce for the local merchant and will do the same for national manufacturers if given the opportunity.

Every Successful Advertising Campaign in Illinois depends upon these Newspapers

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	16,982	.06	.06
†††Chicago Herald & Examiner	(M)	335,747	.55	.55
†††Chicago Herald & Examiner	(S)	1,050,949	1.10	1.10
†††Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	120,449	.26	.24
La Salle Tribune	(E)	3,162	.025	.025
Moline Dispatch	(E)	10,569	.045	.045
Peoria Star—(E) 29,102	(S)	21,733	.075	.06
Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,513	.045	.045
Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,921	.04	.04

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

SEASONABLE weather!

That helps some.

The cloak and suit business in New York is reported good, buyers from all parts scrambling for goods. A cold winter is predicted. Business is reported as benig infinitely better than general expectations.

Hustle! Write letters and make calls! Advertise your wares and spread the word. Fall of 1924 is a first rate business Fall, all cyclone cellar hounds to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE best boosters for automobiles in the world are the dealers that handle "Four-wheel Brake" cars. Have your advertising man draw up a full page ad setting out the following facts, which are true, "That over 52 per cent of American built cars are equipped with 4-wheel brakes or about to announce them. That 43 of the present 80 cars have the 4-wheel brakes. That they are the one feature of safety," and at the bottom of the page run the names of the dealers with 4-wheel brake cars and the make they handle. I have worked this on 3 papers and added a full page to dull weeks of business at the top rate. It can be done easily. As this goes out I have added another page with the "Balloon Tires" as the lead.—HIL F. BEST, San Luis Obispo (Cal.) Herald-Telegram.

In almost any section of your city there are three or four milk wagons covering every street. These wagons are, of course, operated by different companies, and are, therefore, in competition with each other. It should be possible, then, to divide the city up into different sections according to their geographical locations or according to the ways in which they are designated by folks and you could then run a page one week devoted to one section and on which would appear the ads of all the milk companies going to that section and another page another week devoted to the milk companies serving it and so on. As a general thing milk companies do not like to advertise, but this plan would make them.—FRANK H. WILLIAMS, Santa Ana, Cal.

More advertising from the bakers in this cool weather! Hot baked foods sell great. People are glad to buy rolls, biscuits and warm them up for dinner. Go after the bakers in your town for extra advertising at this time. Show them a layout with an illustration. They'll gladly tell you to run several ads.—R. JOHN GIBLER, 2100 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

"What I saw and heard about town" is the caption a local paper uses in establishing a full page ad. The make-up consisting of a little bit of gossip about a little bit of everything. These little stories in the form of advertisements may contain the very news your local people are looking for.—W. J. ARNDT.

Look alive! Football season is an ideal time to link up many clever pages of advertising. One progressive paper ran a page before every game under the caption, "Beat (name of visiting team), (name of local team)." Everybody stands ready to boost their home athletic teams, and are disappointed when they lose. It ought to be easy to induce merchants to encourage their home teams by backing them up in this manner.—GEORGE C. MARCLEY, Ogdensburg (N. Y.) Republican-Journal.

A large furniture store has been publishing a series of advertisements featuring furniture it has sold to well-known people and illustrating the copy by actual photographs of the suites in the customers' homes. Occasionally a sketch of the interior of the home is used as a backgroun dfor the illustration. Advertisements of this character establish prestige for the merchandise and create a desire in others to possess equally fine home furnishings.—H. H. HUDSON, Cleveland Press.

An article which could be followed up with some advertising copy from jewelers would be one relating what effect temperature has upon watches. Temperatures above 90 and below 30 thins or thickens the fish oil used to lubricate the time pieces, causing a corresponding loss or gain in time. A cleaning of the watch occasionally is necessary to keep the time changes to a minimum, with the coming of colder weather, it would be well for jewelers to inform watch owners of the need for overhauling their tickers.—A. C. REGLI, Eau Claire, Wis.

At this time of the year it would be appropriate and timely to get up a page of ads of concerns handling heaters for automobiles. People who are content with open cars in the warm months of the year always feel the need of having heat in the car in the late fall and winter months, so such advertisements would have a wide appeal and get good responses.—FRANK H. WILLAMS, Santa Ana, Cal.

The writer has a hunch that it would be a paying proposition for newspaper advertising solicitors to play up the "Dress Well and Succeed" idea in soliciting ads from the local retail men's clothiers. With the advent of fall the "Dress Well and Succeed" campaign endorsed by the National Association of Retail Clothiers last spring, is being run more and more in newspaper advertising. Hat stores and men's clothing stores are using it, and, yes, even the laundries. There is a big idea behind the slogan, and now is the time for ad men to secure copy from it.—A. W. ROE, New Orleans, La.

A mid-western newspaper believes it has solved its "return" problem by setting a maximum for each dealer and sub-station on which returns are taken. Any number over that amount are ordered at the dealers own risk. The plan has worked out very nicely, the dealers operating on a more conservative basis, yet watching sales so as to be able to handle all of the regular customers.—B. A. T.

Scenario School Cited for Fraud

The United States Post Office Department has recommended the issuance of a fraud order against the Bristol Photoplay Studios, of New York City, charging them with using the mails to defraud. The advertisement of this organization carried in photoplay and moving picture magazines, and other journals, have for many years held out amazing offers both for ideas and complete scenarios. It was claimed by the organization that some who were writing for them were receiving as high as $200,000 a year. Applicants desiring to submit manuscripts were required to send along a service fee, which was to be returned if the scenario was not accepted.

Spokane Ad Man Honored

Frank Zeorlin, manager of Spokane Ad Club, has been presented with a medal of the republic of France in appreciation of the service he rendered in arranging a trip to Paris of a number of newspaper men and advertising men attending the London advertising convention this summer.

News Writers at Legion Meet

Correspondents who covered the recent convention of the American Legion in St. Paul included Morrow Krum, Chicago Tribune; H. L. Polland, Chicago Herald and Examiner; Eugene E. Morgan, Chicago Daily News; Robert D. Mark, Memphis (Tenn.) News Scimitar; George Noble, Boston Globe; E. A. Moreno, Houston (Tex.) Post Dispatch; L. C. Francis, Oakland (Cal.) Advance; G. E. Purl, Dallas (Tex.) News; C. O. Powers, Ames (Iowa) Tribune.

N. Y. Men On Up-State Assignment

New York City newspaper men covering the Democratic and Republican state conventions at Syracuse and Rochester respectively this week included: (Rochester) Alfred Pierce, Sun; George D. Morris, Telegram and Mail; B. Berman, Evening Graphic; A. Leonard Smith, Evening Post; (Syracuse) George Van Slyke, Sun; James L. Durkin, Telegram and Mail; J. Cohn, Evening Graphic; Hans Adamson, Evening Post.

FEATURE FILLER PAGES

"Edited and Illustrated to Perfection"

—MAKE-UP—
7 or 8 Columns—20" or 21"
THE WORLD COLOR PTG. CO.
R. S. Grable, Pres.
Est. 1900 St. Louis, Mo.

Our Features:
Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
Ed Hughes
O. O. McIntyre
Penrod and Sam
Nellie Revelle
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

again
ON THE
San Francisco Chronicle
Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.
HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COML EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

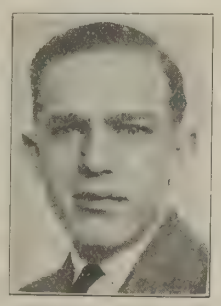
WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

let your readers laugh with
WEBER and FIELDS
These internationally famous comedians are now delighting the reading public with their weekly feature—"Humorous Comments on Timely Topics." Brand new topics treated in the good old style which no one else has been able to duplicate. A tremendous drawing card for your paper.
Write or wire for copy
Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

THERE is only one newspaper that is representative of the entire Dallas territory, and that is The News
The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager
The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write
CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK



Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By CARL MEYER

A Cartoonist's Life Is a Nervous Existence

CARL MEYER, cartoonist for the New York Evening Journal began newspaper work rushing copy in the art department of the New York Herald. During the year he spent in his work. he studied drawing on the side.

CARL MEYER

The outcome of his study was a job on the old New York Press as illustrator.

"The pay jumped with the jump," Meyer says, "and so did the editor when he saw the first picture and I jumped out.

"Spent the next year studying art and drew 'Sidewalks of New York'—then went with the American Press Association as an illustrator.

"From there, I drifted into the animated cartoon game and worked up to the managership of the Gaumont Film company cartoon department when the war broke out.

"Joined the navy and received orders to take charge of art work of the Newport Recruit, which I did until mustered out in 1919.

"Spent the next six months leaning against 'Help Wanted' columns—then went to Bray studios where Max Fleischer after a quick glance at the holes in my elbows and knees offered me $20.00 per week.

"I grabbed this in desperation but at the first opportunity jumped to the International to animate 'Tad's' Indoor Sports for the screen."

In 1922, Meyer joined the New York Evening Journal, doing sport cartoons. He is now drawing political cartoons for the Brooklyn section of the Journal.

$100,000 LIBEL SUIT FILED

Washington Herald's Bergdoll Stories Basis for Hotel Man's Action

Owen D. Sherley, proprietor of the Vivian Hotel, Hagerstown, Md., has filed suit for $100,000 in the Washington courts against the Washington Herald, alleging libel.

The suit is the outcome of a series of stories carried by the Herald during the alleged discovery of "Bergdoll gold" in the mountains near Brownsville, Washington county, Maryland, at which time, Sherley claims, the Herald used statements attributed to him which he declares he never gave and which, he claims, damaged him. Sherley is the proprietor of the hotel at which Grover Cleveland Bergdoll stayed in Hagerstown under an assumed name while officers were searching for him.

Cairo Bulletin Resumes Publication

The Cairo (Ill.) Bulletin, for more than 56 years one of the leading dailies in southern Illinois, which suspended recently resumed publication Sunday, September 21, with Thomas W. Williams as editor and Clyde Sullivan business manager.

Texas Publisher Dies

Charles W. Kent, 52, president and business manager of the Enterprise Publishing Company, publishers of the Waxahachie (Tex.) Daily Light and Weekly Enterprise, died at his home in Waxahachie recently. He had been in the newspaper business at Waxahachie for 30 years.

Radio Writers' Banquet

About 150 Eastern radio writers and editors, comprising Radio Writers League, held their first banquet here this week. There were no speeches.

Among the 2785 Industrial Establishments in

West Virginia

Are Found the Largest stogie factory in the world;

Largest axe factory in the world;
Largest sheet glass factory in the world;
Largest sanitary pottery in the U. S.

For its size, West Virginia is the richest area of natural resources in the world. It has power from the mines and waterways and transportation by river and rail.

This state is utilizing its own resources and sending its mineral and forest products to other states and furnishing them with power at the same time.

West Virginia workers are paid good wages and, for the most part, have steady work.

West Virginia has the largest number of home owners per capita of any state in the Union.

Here is an ideal field for advertisers. For a little money spent, you will be a BIG advertiser in this state.

Familiarity with the local papers listed below will bring conviction that they are the media to use, to advertise successfully in West Virginia.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
Telegraph	(M)	11,073	.05
Telegraph	(S)	14,259	.06
Charleston
Gazette	(M)	20,057	.06
Gazette	(S)	24,932	.07
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
Herald-Dispatch	(M)	13,750	.04
Herald-Dispatch	(S)	13,637	.04
Martinsburg
Journal	(E)	4,542	.03
Morgantown
Post	(E)	5,085	.025
Parkersburg
News	(M)	7,185	.025
News	(S)	8,759	.025
Sentinel	(E)	7,641	.03

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

PUBLISHERS TO REPEAT "BOOST IOWA" DRIVE

Vote Second Year Appropriation of $20,000 to Advertise State at Des Moines Meet—23 Dailies Represented

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 22.—The first year of Iowa publishers' "Boost Iowa" campaign has been so successful and so full of promise of even greater results that the group of newspapers which launched the movement last week at a meeting in Des Moines, voted unanimously to continue the campaign as in the past year, raising another $20,000 fund for the purpose. Robert R. O'Brien of the Council Bluffs Nonpareil, who headed the committee, is again chairman and the same members will serve. Thirty-two papers supported the plan, and twenty-three publishers at the meeting voiced their approval so heartily that it is certain that the entire group will be enrolled in the new lineup.

Exploitation of Iowa as a market for national advertised merchandise and as an asset in promoting prosperity of the state was purpose of the campaign and has proved out excellently. The general committee includes Lafayette Young, Jr., Des Moines Capital; Harry T. Watts, Des Moines Register and Tribune; J. F. D. Aue, Burlington Hawk-Eye; Eugene Kelly, Sioux City Tribune; Frank D. Throop, Davenport Democrat; and George Thayer, Marshalltown Times-Republican.

Present at the session were: J. F. D. Aue, Burlington Hawk-Eye, president of the Daily Publishers Association; Frank D. Throop, Davenport Democrat; John E. Stewart, Des Moines Capital; Lafayette Young, Jr., Des Moines Capital; B. Ridley, Des Moines Capital; Anton Jepperson Mason City Globe-Gazette; W. T. Armbuster, Oelwein Daily Register; J. V. Stonebraker, Webster City Daily Freeman-Journal; J. L. Powers, Jr., Ames Tribune; Gardner Cowles, Des Moines Register and Tribune; G. W. Whitehead, Newton News; Harry T. Watts, Des Moines Register and Tribune; W. S. Merryman, Fort Dodge Messenger; T. W. LeQuatte, W. P. Round and W. C. Taylor, Potts-Turnbull Company; E. G. Carey, Waterloo Evening Courier;; F. J. McLaughlin, Dubuque Telegraph-Herald; J. M. Beck, Centerville Iowegian and Citizen; Orville Elder, Washington Journal; W. J. Schaefle, Dubuque Times-Journal; Phil Hoffman, Oskaloosa Herald; R. R. O'Brien, Council Bluffs Nonpareil; J. Rhodes, Newton News; E. A. Chappell, Iowa City Press-Citizen; Will Muse, Mason City Globe-Gazette; L. R. Fairall, Fairall & Battenfield Agency, Des Moines; George F. Thayer, Marshalltown Times-Republican and Sam Carroll, Keokuk Gate City.

AD-TIPS

Alexander Advertising Agency, 327 S. La Salle street, Chicago. Distributing copy to a general list of newspapers on the Mantle Lamp Company.

N. W. Ayer, 308 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Schedules are being issued to a general list of newspapers on Kellogg Food Company (All Bran).

George Batten Company, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account of the McCallum Hosiery Company, Northampton, Mass., manufacturers of silk hosiery.

Bauerlein, Inc., Hibernia Bank Building, New Orleans. Placing copy in selected cities for account of Norman Mayer & Company of New Orleans and Gallup, Incorporated, of New Orleans, Louisiana and Houston, Texas.

Blackette Sample-McFarland, Inc., 58 E. Washington street, Chicago. Contracts on the Kleero (Van Ess Laboratories.) are going out to a general list of newspapers.

California Olive Association, Higgins Building, Los Angeles. Will undertake an advertising campaign in behalf of California ripe olives in the spring of 1925.

Cramer Krasselt Company, 354 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee. A number of the smaller eastern cities are receiving contracts on the A. B. Stove Company, Battle Creek, Michigan.

George L. Dyer Company, 76 W. Monroe street, Chicago. New England and Ohio papers are to receive special copy on Pettijohn's.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. Special copy on Quaker Macaroni is being issued to Iowa papers.

Paul A. Florian, Jr., Peoples Gas Building, Chicago. Now handling account of Albert Pick & Company, Chicago, manufacturers of hotel, restaurant and institutional supplies.

Green, Fulton, Cunningham Company, 28 E. Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Preparing a general list on Nash Motors.

Albert P. Hill Company, Inc., 233 Oliver street, Pittsburgh. Placing account of the Republic Metalware Company, Buffalo, manufacturers of "Savory" kitchen specialists.

Martin V. Kelley Company, Inc., 19 West 44th street, New York. Will place account of the Fisk Tire Company, Inc., Chicopee Falls, Mass.

LaPorte & Austin, Inc., 21 East 40th St., New York. Placing account of J. & J. Cash, Inc., South Norwalk, Conn., manufacturers "Woven Name Tapes."

Lord & Thomas, 400 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. A list has been prepared on the Brunswick, Balke Company, Chicago, on combination copy of radio, phonograph, and records, to start the latter part of September. Several cities have been selected for the advertising of S. Karpen (furniture) to run on Sunday, October 5. Extensive advertising is expected later on Studebaker.

Fred A. Robbins, Inc., 360 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Orders are being issued to a limited list of papers on Burgess Battery.

Sidener-Van Riper Advertising Company, Merchants Bank Building, Indianapolis. Placing account of the Royal Easy Chair Corporation, Sturgis, Mich., manufacturers of "Royal Easy" chairs and "Royal Easy Bed-Davenports with the Boxspring Guest Bed."

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. A general list is being prepared on Libby, McNeil & Libby, Chicago.

Resort Launches $60,000 Campaign

An advertising fund of $60,000 has been placed with the Conway-Manning Advertising Company of Kansas City by the Crazy Wells Water Company of Mineral Wells, Tex., to exploit the wells of this company, and the town of Mineral Wells as a health resort. The campaign will be national in scope. An intensive campaign in 10 Texas dailies has already been launched.

Amsterdam Recorder Improves Plant

Amsterdam (N. Y.) Recorder has completed remodelling and improving its plant. Editorial and advertising offices have been rearranged and refurnished. A complete pneumatic tube system connecting the departments and a new Duplex tubular press have been installed.

N. Y. Sun Issues Auto Booklet

The research department of the New York Sun, of which George Benneyan is manager, has prepared a booklet entitled, "Selling Automobiles in New York City." Sales opportunities New York offers to manufacturers and distributors of automotive products are emphasized.

MAILING LISTS

National Newspaper Reading Service
compiles mailing lists of births, deaths, engagements or marriages from original press clippings. Four Terrace, Buffalo, N. Y.

For Sale.
Model E Duplex flatbed. New; eight pages; motor and all extra equipment, including sixteen narrow margin chases, and double truck chase. Best and fastest Duplex flatbed ever made. Ideal for big weekly or small town daily. Delivery in ninety days. Price right. The Sun, Spartanburg, S. C.

For Sale.
24-page Goss straight-line web press, three deck, length of paper page 21½ inches, 8 columns 12 ems wide, with complete stereotype equipment, all with motors, 3 phase alternating current. In shape for high grade newspaper work. Immediate shipment. Our No. 527. Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth Ave., New York.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

World Series Games on Your Front Window.
Practical directions for making simple equipment from handy materials, $5; with necessary printed forms $15. Tells everything crowd wants to know at sight. J. H. McKeever, Aberdeen, S. D.

For Sale
One Double Steam Table and steam generator, Duplex. First-class condition. Bargain. Address Box B-789, Editor & Publisher.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

Used Newspaper Presses

Scott 24-page press,
prints 4 to 12 pages 24000 and 16, 20 or 24 pages, collected 12000 per hour, length page 23 9/16, 8 columns to page.

Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press
with two tapeless folders, now printing Chattanooga Times, length page 22¾ inches, 8 columns to page.

Available for Early Delivery

Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO — 1457 Broadway, NEW YORK

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE
NEW YORK TIMES
New York, N. Y.
We refer you to them for their opinion
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO — QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE
MAIN OFFICE, Fisher Building, 343 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE, Marbridge Building, Broadway at 34th St., NEW YORK

Stereotype Chases
Our Electric-Welded Steel Stereotype Chases are guaranteed for strength and accuracy.
Plain chases converted for Autoplate Casting or made larger or smaller.
All kinds of chase alterations and repairs.
Write for prices.
American Steel Chase Co.
122 Centre St.
New York

The Quickest and Best Casting Unit
Hoe Stereotype Furnace with Hoe Equipoise Curved Casting Moulds and Pumps.
If It's a Hoe, It's the Best

R. HOE & CO.
504-520 GRAND STREET, NEW YORK CITY
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising or Business Manager or both desires good connection. 16 years' experience, best references, good habits, married. Address T. R. Van Durmur, 236 Blaine Ave., Marion, Ohio.

Advertising Manager—$3120.
Young, married, employed, invites correspondence from dailies in cities of 15,000 or over. Recommendations based on successful experience with metropolitan and medium size dailies available. Hard or undeveloped fields a specialty. Can also handle business end. Box B-853, Editor & Publisher.

Adveritsing Man—
(Not a space peddler) newspaper, trade paper and agency experience, as outside solicitor and office executive. An advertising salesman that can sell, develop and intelligently handle new and running accounts, both local and national. Now open for newspaper or trade paper connection. Box B-850, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Not merely a high-class successful display manager, but also one of the best known in classified. Will take full responsibility of both. A grand investment for a paper that can afford a good manager. Try a change of pace on your advertisers. Now employed. Write Box B-858, Editor & Publisher.

Business Executive.
Comptroller, executive accountant, credit manager. Highly rated ability in costs and analysis. Ten years one metropolitan publication. Now manager large transportation company. Age 38. Accustomed to salary of $5,000.00 or better. B-833, Editor & Publisher.

Capable Advertising Man with vision, ideas, sales ability. Large city daily training; valuable small city daily executive experience. West preferred; not essential. First-class copywriter, layout and service man. Married, 37, now employed. Box B-855, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist Plus.
Also experienced in retouching, advertising art layouts, desires change where there's a future if he works for it. B-840, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
A man, thoroughly developed in this most vital form of advertising, seeks a change. He has the touch of life to give some big paper's classified department—the ideas and ability to carry them through to that paper's readers and advertisers. Builds business by contracts, not stunts; service, not promises. Strong papers write Box B-859, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager
experienced in department reorganization, management, promotion and solicitation. Five years' classified experience. A man with an unusual record of results. A business-getter and a business-builder, capable of taking full charge. Have university training and have had experience with an organization of Publisher's Counsellor on Classified Advertising. Am a student of business and merchandising. Have a system of collections that has been tried and proven good. Am open for a permanent connection with a Publisher who realizes the real value of want-ads, and who will appreciate my ability to accomplish results. Very best of references. Address B-856, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
15 years' experience morning, evening and Sunday papers, at liberty now. Box B-842, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Man.
Young man, 36, with 2 years' experience in circulation work desires to connect with some live newspaper or magazine. At present employed as branch manager of the fastest growing daily in the New England States. A-1 references, and full details of qualifications and past record furnished by addressing. B-854, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Desire connection in city of 100,000. Class expert in all departments of circulation; promotion specialist. Not an experiment, not a flash. One paper 9,000 to 176,000 in one year; re-organized as expert country circulation of two papers over 100,000. Age 26, married, bachelor of laws. Seeking right opportunity, not high salary. Carson Hollingsworth, General Delivery, Lansing, Michigan.

Publicity Writer
with captain of industry last four years; 25; editorial work, make-up, etc. Successful record, highest references. Desire New York connection. Box B-864, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager.
Mr. Publisher, one of the outstanding circulation managers of this country will be at leisure January 1st. Maybe you need this man. He is an executive with a record, quick to diagnose your circulation illness, knows the remedy and how to apply it. His practical experience covers many years with morning, evening and Sunday newspapers in large and medium size cities. He is neither old or young, but too big a man for his present position. He put on over 6000 new subscribers during the past four months for the paper he is now with. You are taking no chance with this man and you can get him on contract for a fair salary and bonus for cash paid increases. Write him for references, appointment and details. Address "Executive Circulation Manager," Box B-851, care Editor & Publisher. P. S.—Your inquiries will be treated with the strictest confidence.

City Editor.
Will come on trial to any part of United States in capacity of city or managing editor. Guarantee results from minimum number of reporters. Now city editor on newspaper with 25,000 circulation in city of 100,000. Know news, can write news and direct gathering of news. Prefer southern city. Will consider others. Salary can be arranged. Am now single, 29, and of good address. Can give references of present and past employers if desired. Invite negotiations. Box B-863, Editor & Publisher.

Copy Editor.
Dependable, adaptable; writes interesting articles; reporter (stenographic); read proof. Box B-852, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man.
What desk have you open? Thoroughly trained editorial department man; experienced on news, telegraph and city desk and as head of universal desk; rapid and accurate; considered A1 "make up" editor. Thirty-four, married and temperate. Employed, but available on reasonable notice. B-849, Editor & Publisher.

Dramatic Editor
and reviewer. Experienced New York City daily. Understand all branches of theatricals, including motion pictures. Capable of handling both desks. Best of references. Want to leave New York. Available on short notice. Address B-812, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Daily newspaper editor wants situation as editor of western newspaper; strong editorial writer and news editor. Republican. Western experience. Box B-866, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, Managing Editor, Feature Writer.
Years of experience in the editorial departments of several newspapers, including two of best known in country, have equipped me eminently for any of above places. No advancement here probable in near future. Have contributed to several magazines and seek permanent place only. Age 33, college education, married. South preferred, but will go anywhere. B-857, Editor & Publisher.

Farm Paper Editor.
Many farm papers in the United States have large circulations but there is not only room but a crying need for a better farmer's journal that will be a real help. I have planned one along new lines that will appeal to every farmer anxious to make his farm a success and one that should attract substantial advertising support. I want to edit such a paper. I can convince a responsible publisher that I have the right combination of experience and training—agricultural, business, and journalistic—to make it a success. I want a responsible publisher to examine my idea, and if approved put his presses and business facilities behind it. Box B-839, Editor & Publisher.

Illustrator.
An all-round metropolitan trained Newspaper illustrator, 14 years' experience. Versed in creative work and mechanics of engraving. Good man for either or both advertising or editorial. Always employed. Reasonable notice. Box B-865, care Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Linotype Machinist-Operator,
15 years' experience, news, ads or job. East preferred. Married. H. B. Palmer, 315 Reily St., Harrisburg, Pa

News Executive.
Copy desk dealer, news and makeup editor, news bureau manager, now employed, wants something better; plenty of experience; enough ability to get by on any assignment; member Rotary and Association of Army; single going thirty; worthy of responsible position and willing to work for it; small town product with city training; write or wire offer. M. Marshall, 418 Lissner Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

Reporter.
Thoroughly experienced, wants position with future in town from 20,000 up. Experience both in small town and big city. Can take any kind of assignment and desk job. Steady man. B-846, Editor & Publisher.

Sports Editor,
12 years same New York City newspaper. Familiar all branches of sport. Good desk man. 32, married, temperate. Highest references. Reasnoable salary. Will go anywhere. Address Box B-811, Editor & Publisher.

Sports Editor
on Eastern paper would like to locate Mid-West state. Can handle sports, write daily column, read copy, make up own page. Experienced man. Please mention terms. Box B-861. Editor & Publisher.

Stereotype Foreman.
20 years' experience, desires charge of any size plant, experienced on Dry Mats. Thoroughly competent, reliable, married, union, best of references. Box B-838, Editor & Publisher.

Subscription Solicitor.
Now employed on evening daily near Chicago. Have own car and able to get business either city or rural route. Salary $40.00 per week, available at once. Prefer Southern or South Central States. Wire or write L. C. Danley, Pingree Grove, Ill.

HELP WANTED

Advertising.
Wanted experienced newspaper display advertising solicitor; opportunity to connect with one of the fastest-growing newspapers in metropolitan zone; salary basis; state record in detail. B-848, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer.
Experienced man for morning daily middle west city half million population. Should have wide knowledge, familiarity and experience concerning territory in the western watershed of the Mississippi and nose for national politics. Full confidential letter requested; to be followed by interview in Chicago October fourth and fifth. Address Editor, Room 1800, 28 East Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.

Experienced Circulation Manager.
Several desirable openings as managers of local branch offices have recently been created through a further expansion of our large national circulation organization offering excellent opportunities to experienced, ambitious newspaper circulation managers seeking to go forward. We can place several men who have had experience in hiring and training canvassers. Must be over 30 years of age and have had at least five years' experience either as circulation manager or assistant circulation manager in charge of a daily newspaper canvassing organization. A large number of former newspaper circulation managers who found themselves in a rut with no future have been placed in the past five years and made good. Earning possibilities range from $2,600 to $5,000 and over per year. In answering please give full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Director. Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Bldg., New York City.

Sales Appraisals

NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER 350 Madison Ave., New York.

Pacific Coast Representative
M. C. MOORE 515 Canon Drive
Beverly Hills, Calif.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

CAN YOU SELL display advertising space and create retail copy and lay-outs? If you have newspaper experience in this line and are ready for new connection at around $40-50 we have openings that will interest you. Tell us your story. Ask for our free registration terms. You make money—or we make nothing.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Help Wanted

Wanted.
An experienced young or middle aged man in the editorial department of a 25,000 population city daily in western New York. Reference required. Address "Western", Box B-862, care Editor & Publisher.

Wanted—
A good solicitor on daily newspapers. Must be well acquainted among agencies and advertisers. Must be a good producer and help out in correspondence. A member of Masonic order; reliable, honest and trustworthy. Send letter to Box B-860. Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Best Newspaper Buy in Florida
is offered in one of the most talked of towns in State. No competition. Official paper for both city and county. Net cash profits last year 34%. This year over one-third greater with no extra effort. Opportunity of lifetime for experienced, aggressive newspaper man. Price, twenty thousand, cash. No terms. Need of money only reason for selling. For full particulars send bank references to Box B-847, Editor & Publisher.

Have You $75.000?
If you have, I can offer you a big bargain; evening paper, exclusive field, modern plant, good circulation, earning big dividends. Don't answer this "ad" unless you have the money. Particulars will not be furnished unless I am satisfied that you are in a position to buy. J. B. Shale, Times Building, New York.

BOOKS, ETC.

Editors.
Editors interested in government ownership are requested to send for free leaflets giving story of navy yard wages' claims. A record of inefficiency and indifference to wages found due by United States Court of Claims. As attorney acting without charge for old men and women, I appeal to editors with good red Amreican blood, please send for the leaflets. George Hiram Mann, 80 Wall St., New York.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

WITH the school term just opened, city editors in the smaller cities might find the Alliance (O.) Review's plan for a school page valuable. Once a week we run a school page carrying news written by a school pupil correspondent in each building. To stir interest, we print the name of the "editor" in each building and pay a dollar a week to the writer of the newsiest and best-written letter. It works and helps to make a newsy school page with little financial outlay.—P. C. Reed, Alliance (O.) Review.

With the hunting season on in full swing interviews with game wardens and sportsmen on the observance of the law, both from the standpoint of the warden and sportsman would go good. Certain spots where good hunting is to be had and open seasons will be appreciated by nimrods. In Dubuque county there are 2,000 hunters. Stories on hunting are greatly appreciated.—L. J. Jellison, Dubuque (Ia.) Times Journal.

Next to the weather, "How much coal do you use?" is about the best and most discussed question during the colder months. Take the hint therefore and obtain suggestions from fuel experts as to the proper methods of firing a furnace; results from various kinds and grades of fuel, etc.—B. A. T.

In a column entitled "Other People's Money" the Montreal Daily Star runs a host of interesting paragraphs whose subjects all pertain to large estates left, and the wills of millionaires and near-millionaires probated, with a biographical word or two anent the testator, or heirs. —C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

Where is the worst automobile road in your county? Ask your readers to send in short letters giving their opinions about the matter and telling why the road is so bad. Ask them to do this so as to get a line of where the bad roads are so that they can be fixed up as quickly as possibly.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, California.

With the opening of the public schools everywhere, there are many new teachers in every town. To hundreds of new pupils, the older teachers are new as well. Naturally, all parents of school children are interested in those who are in charge of those children during school hours. For this reason, a "Who's Who" of the public school faculty will prove an interesting feature for many newspapers. Paul C. Rankin, Lawrence (Kan.) Journal-World.

Bob-haired girls here are rushing to the hairdressers for puffs and false curls. Tiring of the bob style, they are trying to conceal it. Hairdressers, because they have less waving and shampooing, etc., to do when hair is bobbed, are seeking to discard the style. But barbers, who benefit by haircuts, are boosting it. What is the situation in your community?—John H. A. Kelly, Norristown, Pa.

"Boy Scout Notes, by A. Tenderfoot," is the head we use above a column of items written by a 12-year old Boy Scout. Jimmie, who is paid regular correspondent's rates, writes up all the news about the Scouts picnics, regular meetings, swimming parties, ball games, hikes, names of new members, advances in rank, and personals about the Boy Scouts and Scoutmasters. A diary of a ten-day camping trip was one of the best features of the column last summer. In order to keep the news fresh, and to preserve the originality of the youthful writer, we do very little editing of the copy. The column has proved popular with the younger readers of the paper, as well as with the grown-ups.—Jo Hemphill, Manhattan, Kan.

Get your telegraph editor into the habit of notifying the advertising department in case of serious storms, fire and other catastrophes, or any other news that might be used as a leader in drawing spot advertising from firms that ordinarily don't advertise. With a little co-operation, you will find considerable extra space being sold.—B. A. T.

"Do you know your fellow townsmen?" This is the caption of a feature appearing weekly in the Trenton (N. J.) Sunday Times-Advertiser. On page two are shown pictures of local residents whose photos have been recently published. These pictures are numbered, and on page four the names and a line or two of information about the persons is published. This feature has attracted considerable interest and is looked for regularly.—Ralph C. Edgar, Trenton, N. J.

Toledo Agency Has Conklin Account

September 22, 1924.

To Editor & Publisher: You printed a notice some time ago stating that this agency was placing advertising for the Parker Pen Manufacturing Company. This notice, of course, was widely read and a great many people are making solicitation of one kind or another predicated upon that information.

We are not placing anything for the well known Parker Pen Company or any other pen company except the Conklin Pen Manufacturing Company.

The Conklin Pen Manufacturing Company has placed quite an extensive schedule in newspapers in 50 selected cities and has scheduled both magazine and newspaper advertising in the remaining period of 1924.

We are not asking for a formal correction of this but it might save your many and loyal readers a little inconvenience if it were known that our pen account is the Conklin Pen in which we take more pride than if it were any other.

Sterling Beeson,
Myers-Beeson-Golden, Inc.

Press Club Men Honored

National Press Club Post of the American Legion captured within a week the highest offices in two World War Veterans' organizations,—the Legion and the Fidac,—the latter an international organization of Veterans. Colonel James A. Drain, of Washington, formerly editor of The Arms and the Man, a military service publication and director of the American Legion Weekly, was chosen National Commander of the Legion at the St. Paul convention, and Colonel Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian, was named head of the Fidac. Captain Paul J. McGahan, of the Washington Bureau of the Philadelphia Inquirer, also a member of the Press Club Post, was re-elected national historian of the "Forty and Eight," a social organization of the Legion membership. Both Colonel Drain and Captain McGahan are past commanders of the District of Columbia Department of the Legion.

News Men Return With Davis

Newspaper men who accompanied John W. Davis, Democratic Presidential candidate on his Western speaking trip, returned with him to New York this week. They are: James A. Hagerty, New York Times; Grafton Wilcox, New York Herald Tribune; Donald Ewing, Chicago Tribune; Ulrich Bell, Louisville Courier-Journal; J. Fred Essary, Baltimore Sun; Joseph Smith, Atlanta Journal; Charles N. Wheeler, Chicago Herald and Examiner; Frank Hopkins, New York World; Charles Ross, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; Theodore Huntley, Pittsburgh Post; Fraser Edwards, United Press Associations; William K. Hutcheson, International News Service; Sears Taylor, Universal Service; and James L. West, Associated Press.

Alabama Editors Get Clubhouse

An option has been obtained by the Alabama Press Association on the property belonging to the Larson Hotel at Fairhope, Ala., with a view to making the hotel the permanent outing club of the association. The building is on a bluff facing Mobile Bay, has 16 sleeping rooms with baths and additional space is available for sleeping quarters for 100 people.

Libel Suit Follows Investigation

Jacob Reichle of the Lincoln Dairy Company has instituted damage suit for $20,000 against the Lincoln (Ill.) Evening Courier alleging libel in statements made connecting the Lincoln Dairy with a recent milk investigation. A similar suit was filed recently against the Lincoln Evening Star.

WHAT DO YOU DO FOR THE BUSINESS MEN OF YOUR TOWN?

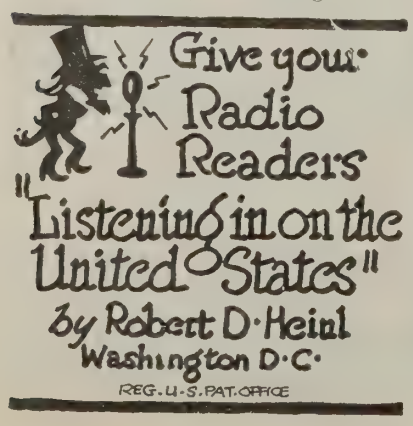
A Financial Page which consists solely of stock and bond tables and Wall Street gossip is not enough. John T. Flynn's Daily Business Reviews deal with fundamental business conditions of vital interest to every merchant and every other business man in your community. They are backed by the greatest business news collecting organization in America, The United Publishers Corporation, publishers of Iron Age, Dry Goods Economist and a score of other nationally known business publications.

Write for Particulars to
Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Director
U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC.
243 West 39th Street, N. Y. C.

More Evidence Regarding Metropolitan Weekly Short Fiction

Angus Perkerson, Sunday Editor Atlanta Journal, writes: "Ideal for Newspaper use."

Why don't you get the benefit of this fiction too?



METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Manager,
150 Nassau Street, New York City

"A Day In Court"
is the title of
A NEW FEATURE
by
RICHARD SELDEN HARVEY

Recent decisions of Supreme Courts That Bear on Everyday Life Told in Brief Narrative Form and Non-Technical Language

An Informative, Authentic, Popular Daily Service

Ask for Samples
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

NFA NFA

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

Write for samples and rates

NFA NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO NFA

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreets

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping — Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Limitless Development Increases Demand in Southern States

THE development of the South has reached a point which insures stability to the national manufacturer and advertiser, yet the known natural resources of the section are so abundant that a much greater development is in prospect.

The Southern States possess 23 per cent of the country's total standing timber. Last year approximately one-half of the lumber produced in the country came from the South.

About 55 per cent of the nation's oil resources is in Southern States. Last year the South produced 362,000,000 barrels of petroleum, nearly half of the production of the entire country.

Industrial development is steadily going on throughout the South, not only the expansion of old established lines but the creation of new enterprises which in turn beget the establishment of still further manufacturing interests.

The South's mining industry is of vast importance. Of 82 mineral products of the United States listed by the government in 1921, the South produced 61, and for 34 of these products the leading or next to the leading producing State is in the South.

The South, with its raw materials, climatic, and fuel advantages, coupled with its growing population of skilled labor, is in a position to continue a steady industrial growth covering a wide range of production.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	30,930	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	49,177	.10	.10
Birmingham News (E)	75,304	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	83,228	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,217	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,227	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	31,962	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	3,165	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville..(M&S)	39,226	.09(.108)	.09(.108)
Miami Herald (M)	19,492	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	23,404	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	5,965	.035	.035
†††St. Petersburg Independent (E)	7,236	.03	.03
Tampa Times (E)	14,770	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	25,651	.07(.088)	.06(.078)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	16,024	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	16,562	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	23,878	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	25,135	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M) 19,882..(S)	21,880	.06(.078)	.06(.078)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	18,432	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	18,538	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,759	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville Times (E)	7,096	.04	.04
Asheville Citizen (M)	10,277	.055	.055
Asheville Citizen (S)	11,009	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	22,424	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News (S)	29,807	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	27,984	.06	.06
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	32,372	.06	.06
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	14,218	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	15,695	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,366	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	22,028	.06	.06
Columbia State (S)	23,079	.06	.06
Greenville News (M)	18,214	.065	.06
†††Greenwood Index Journal (E&S)	4,378	.025	.025
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,799 }	.04	.04
Spartanburg Herald ....(M) 6,014....(S)	8,023 }
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,122	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,355	.08	.08
†††Nashville Banner (E)	58,892	.10	.10
†††Nashville Banner (S)	64,389	.11	.11
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,225	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,890	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,660 }	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,725 }
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	25,048	.07	.06
Roanoke Times (S)	17,596	.07	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader...(E)	6,588	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

THE DOMINANT NEWSPAPER in Milwaukee

THE policy behind The Milwaukee Journal is and always has been to print a newspaper that may be depended upon in every case to place the best interests of its readers ahead of all other considerations. In following faithfully that policy The Journal has come to have the full confidence of the people of Milwaukee and of Wisconsin. As an inevitable result no other paper in Wisconsin approaches The Journal in circulation or in advertising.

Harry J. Grant, publisher of The Journal, writes:

"The Journal has used the Consolidated Press leased wire service to good effect since that service was organized. We find in it excellent material for supplementing our other news services and rounding out a newspaper that has gained a wide reputation for reliability, distinctiveness and alertness. Especially do we find the market reports, the special sport service and the Sunday cable dispatches of value in bringing this newspaper up to the high standard of newspaper-making which The Journal has set."

Throughout the United States, it will be noted that the Consolidated Press is usually in the dominant newspaper. Write today for our prospectus.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Bldg.	19 Rue d'Antin

THIS ISSUE:—CYRUS H. K. CURTIS DISCUSSES HIS NEW YORK VENTURE

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 19 | NEW YORK, OCTOBER 4, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

How Business Advances Its Lines —and "Lineage"—in Chicago

Business is best in Chicago for those who go after it in the best way.

The famous "loop" department stores have proved this—first, by increasing the total volume of their newspaper advertising from 9,035,700 lines in the first eight months of 1923 to 9,214,973 lines in the first eight months of 1924; second, by placing the greater proportion of that increase in the newspaper that already carried the preponderance of this advertising—The Chicago Daily News.

Here are the figures, in agate lines, from January 1, to August 31, 1924, and 1923 for the loop department stores:

	1924	1923	Gain and Losses
The Chicago Daily News	3,125,504	2,973,163	152,341 gain
The American	1,438,730	1,339,460	99,270 gain
The Daily Tribune	1,142,872	1,046,885	95,987 gain
The Journal	1,032,658	959,577	73,081 gain
The Daily Herald-Examiner	467,900	430,959	36,941 gain
The Post	412,119	421,077	8,958 loss
The Sunday Tribune	1,019,746	1,158,178	138,432 loss
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	575,444	706,401	130,957 loss

From which it appears that the loop stores increased their total advertising in 1924 by 179,273 agate lines. Of this total net gain The Chicago Daily News gained 152,341 lines—over 85 per cent —and 53,071 more lines than were gained by its nearest competitor in this classification.

The same condition—in a degree even more emphatic—is indicated in the advertising of the "outside the loop" department stores. In this classification The Chicago Daily News carried 1,074,127 lines of the total volume of 1,974,899 lines—173,355 lines more than all other papers combined.

Here are the figures, in agate lines, from January 1, to August 31, 1924, and 1923 for the outlying department stores:

	1924	1923	Gain and Losses
The Chicago Daily News	1,074,127	917,688	156,439 gain
The American	374,311	375,695	1,384 loss
The Journal	82,960	75,600	7,360 gain
The Daily Tribune	6,302	10,241	3,939 loss
The Daily Herald-Examiner	2,828	4,513	1,685 loss
The Sunday Tribune	231,573	206,480	25,093 gain
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	202,798	170,883	31,915 gain

From which it appears that in this classification The Daily News gained 156,439 lines—while all the other Chicago newspapers, daily and Sunday combined, gained but 64,368 lines. The Chicago Daily News' nearest competitor in this field lost 1,384 agate lines.

This distribution of advertising in Chicago by the world's foremost merchandising and advertising experts claims the thoughtful consideration of all who do business, or expect to do business, in the great and prosperous Chicago market. It indicates the substantial "reasons why" that make

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

NOTE—Figures supplied by the Advertising Record Company.

USE

Pennsylvania

Daily Newspapers

TO CARRY YOUR MESSAGE

JUST put your advertising message into the daily newspapers and encourage your salesmen to stir up the distributors.

These daily papers will act as an additional salesman and a topnotch salesman at that. Every manufacturer knows the value of a topnotch salesman—every newspaper in this list is a topnotcher.

The list as a whole practically covers the state.

Density of population and diversity of needs make Pennsylvania an ideal market for the alert advertiser.

Here, in this productive market, business thrives, introductory advertising campaigns succeed, and established trade connections grow big.

Pennsylvania daily newspapers permit cooperation with local dealers—a vitally important adjunct to any selling campaign and something unobtainable through other media.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	30,627	.09	.09
Allentown Call .....(S)	19,595	.09	.09
†††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,702	.025	.025
†††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,130	.029	.029
†††Carbondale Leader .....(E)	5,682	.025	.025
Chester Times .....(E)	15,547	.055	.055
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,097	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,302	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	20,815	.07	.07
††Easton Free Press .....(E)	12,711	.05	.05
Erie Times .....(E)	26,820	.08	.08
Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	38,546	.095	.095
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,765	.035	.035
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	15,354	.08	.07
†††Scranton Republican .....(M)	28,492	.12	.10
†††Scranton Times .....(E)	41,544	.12	.11
Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,287	.0285	.0285
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,416	.025	.021
Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	9,090	.036	.036
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,042	.06	.06
†††West Chester Local News ....(E)	11,090	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader.....(E)	23,690	.08	.05
Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,561	.07	.07
†††York Dispatch .....(E)	18,317	.05	.05
†††York Gazette and Daily .....(M)	17,435	.05	.05

††Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

The Eleventh Convention of the A·B·C·

(AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS)

will be held at the Hotel La Salle Chicago

October 16th & 17th

NINETEEN · TWENTY · FOUR

The DINNER

NIGHT OF OCTOBER 17th

WILL BE HELD AT The DRAKE

MAKE RESERVATIONS EARLY

Selling Securities

IN

Philadelphia

Philadelphia as a market for reliable bonds, stocks and other securities is one of the best in America.

Its manufacturers and its workers are looking for sound investments that will bring them safe and constant returns.

Corporations having securities to market will do well to have their advertising agent plan to tell Philadelphians about them.

Good municipals, railroad, and industrials are constantly in demand and find ready sale in the Philadelphia market.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid circulation for the six months ending March 31, 1924—

512,445 copies a day

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in the United States.

NEW YORK—814 Park-Lexington Bldg. (46th St. & Park Ave.)
CHICAGO—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
DETROIT—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 117 Lafayette Blvd.
SAN FRANCISCO—Harry J. Wittschen, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1924—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, OCTOBER 4, 1924 No. 19

Curtis, Seeking a Financial Writer, Bought The Evening Post To Get One

Famous Publisher in Exclusive Interview, Tells Editor & Publisher He Has Spent a Million Dollars Since January to Give His Five-Cent Paper the Distinction Its Public Demands—Sees Success Near

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS, publisher of magazines, the Philadelphia Morning and Evening Ledger, and the New York Evening Post, this week explained for me steps in the Steinach operation which he is performing on the last-named newspaper.

I spent nearly an hour in his private office—his operating room—in conversation with him.

From there, every Wednesday, he directs his assistant surgeons, David Smiley, editor, Merritt Bond, managing editor, C. C. Lane, business manager, and J. M. Annenberg, circulation chief.

Mr. Curtis reminds one, both in appearance and manner, as more of a doctor than an aggressive business man or publisher. He strokes his gray full beard with profound seriousness, all the time scarcely hiding a kindly twinkle in his eye. He is pleasantly modest; quietly forceful.

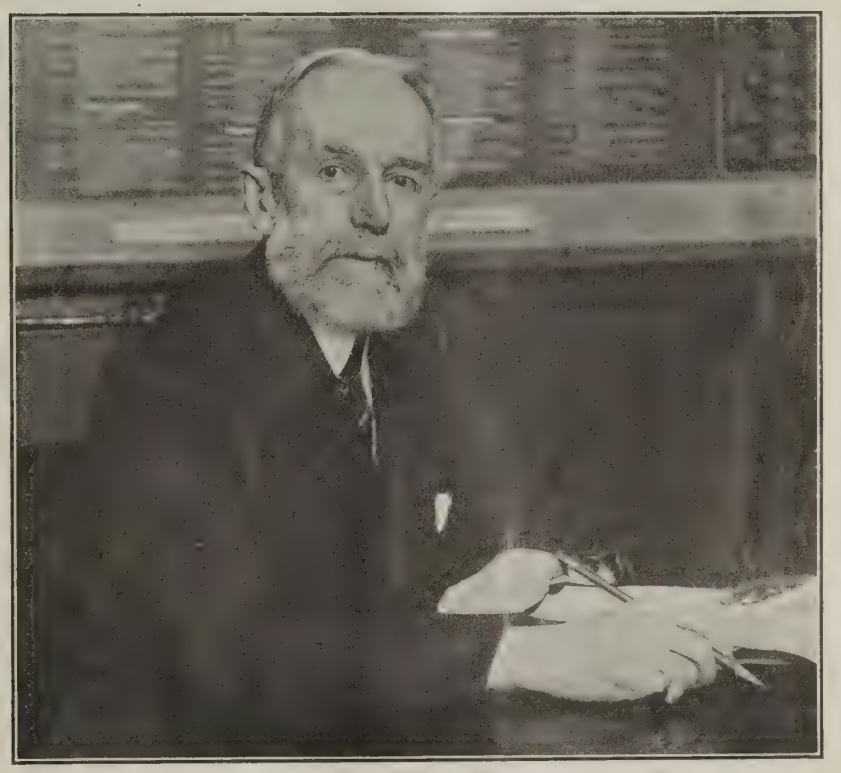
Newspapers, magazines, and the public for which they are printed are his patients. He watches them, diagnoses them, treats them with the medicines he thinks they need and believes they'll like.

Nothing in several years, it seems, has pleased him more than the case of the so recently senile bloodless Evening Post. He is trying radical doses to bring it back to youth.

He has already spent, he told me, more than a million dollars doctoring this newspaper, which he purchased considerably less than a year ago. The "Man from Maine," who from newsboy in Portland on the Atlantic Coast has risen to astound the world by his phenomenal success as magazine publisher, while not neglecting his other properties, appears to be making a special pet of his New York evening patient. He told me the why of its original purchase, its present situation, and his plans for its future, during our conversation. He sparkles, when he speaks his ambitions.

"I am not an editor," he will tell you. "I edit the editors. Perhaps my success in publishing has come because I may be just a little better guesser at what the public wants.

"And it is my present guess, that here in New York at least, there is a public 50,000 people, to set an extremely large figure, who want what only a five-cent newspaper can give them.



"I don't want to own a string of newspapers," he said to me, "but I do want to give New Yorkers the best possible newspaper, something different, something distinctive.

"The Post is a different sort of newspaper than any other in the New York evening field. It costs more to make it than any other. And I believe it is worth the price."

'Are you satisfied with the progress the Post has already made?" I inquired.

"Satisfied!" he ejaculated. "I'll never be satisfied."

But then he marshalled figures to prove that the Post had lost ever so slightly at first in circulation, and now was ahead of the subscription list of the old newspaper, which sold at 3 cents.

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS at New York Evening Post Office

Dr. Curtis had figuratively put on his white uniform to hold an instructive clinic over his New York daily.

"I have already spent more than a million dollars to improve the Post's service to readers," he reiterated in the beginning. "Naturally I have to charge five cents. But I am firmly convinced that the people don't give a rap about the price; it's what's in the paper that interests them.

"Of course there were kicks at first. The people have no idea of the cost of publishing a paper like ours. Does the average person realize that it costs more than $100 to get a six-inch dispatch from Tokyo and print it in New York? Certainly not.

"The five cent price pays for our paper and printing and leaves us only a slight margin.

"I believed and still believe a certain public in New York wants a complete interpretative foreign service and a talented staff to handle the news of their city.

"Consequently, I spent money to engage the cream of correspondents in London, Paris, Berlin and Rome. We have also built up a Far Eastern service, which I think tops all others. We engaged expensive topnotchers to cover this field—men who speak the language of the Orientals and understand them.

"For New York, we have put on such high-grade men as Louis Siebold, political writer. When we heard that Ernest Newman was declared the best music critic in the world, we brought him to New York to take charge of this comparatively minor department.

"We have spent a considerable sum improving the equipment in our mechanical department. We wanted it to provide us with the quickest possible service. We wanted our typography to be clean and distinctive.

"In our foreign news service, we have made no attempt to duplicate the Associated Press. We tell our reporters abroad to go out and get their own news. We tell them to get in personal touch with the great men in foreign countries, with all the worthwhile people. They may obtain lots of information, which it will not be possible to print, but they should obtain inside knowledge, which will clarify their judgment, and enable them to write better and more intelligent stuff when the time comes."

Mr. Curtis admitted at first he had considerable trouble with New York advertisers, when he offered them his five-cent pill.

"But they are being won over to my point of view now," he said.

"Last spring I took all the important New York advertisers out in my yacht on short trips in groups of five and six. At first the majority of them predicted I would fail if I insisted in adding that bitter two cents to the price of my daily.

"'You advertising men,' I told them, 'are far too interested in circulation figures. You care far more about how many newspapers are sold than, where they are sold. We are going to publish a newspaper for the intelligent, the prosperous New Yorker.'

"But they laughed at me."

At first very few New York advertisers swallowed the Curtis pill. Those, who did, however, got results that surprised them, according to the Evening Post publisher.

"One specialty shop took a 28-line ad," he recalled. "The next day this shop sold a $1500 fur coat. Two days later, it sold an $800 fur piece.

"Now the owner of this store is joining with quite a few others who are telling me 'I hope you never change the price of your newspaper; its the five cent trade we want.'

"And the way we have done it is by making the best possible newspaper we could. We have not been interested in schemes, contests or premiums to force circulation.

"Every reader buys the Post for what's in it. Therefore they are really going to read it, and the advertisers are now realizing that this is a fact."

Mr. Curtis tipped back his swivel chair and smoked a long cigar contentedly. His patient is progressing. The Steinach operation is proving successful.

How was it, I wondered, that he took on this case in the first place, this case which now interests him so hugely? I was surprised at the answer to my query. His purchase of the Post was so amazingly accidental.

With his Philadelphia Public Ledger, which he took over after his remarkable success in the magazine field, Mr. Curtis soon became widely known as a successful newspaper publisher. He was pestered by people in different cities, who asked him to make them a newspaper like the Public Ledger.

Business men of Detroit, not so very long ago, invited him to a luncheon, and when they had him there surprised him by pleading with him to enter their field with a daily. They would furnish him with all the money he needed, they said, either to buy one of the Detroit papers or start another one. He declined. He has refused many other similar offers.

His entire interest in the newspaper field was centered then on his Philadelphia properties. He did not want to get far away from Sixth and Chestnut street.

But he did want a good financial writer for the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"I began to think that good financial writers were not being born any more," he said.

"I see Thomas W. Lamont frequently and I used to ask him if he knew of any good financial writers to please recommend them to me.

"'I know the very best,' he told me once. 'But you can't have him. He is Franz Schneider, Jr., and he is the backbone of the New York Evening Post.'

"Maybe I'll have to buy your old newspaper to get him," Mr. Curtis jokingly rejoined.

Then he began to make inquiries about Schneider. He studied his writings. He decided that what Lamont had told him was true—that Schneider had built up a financial section which was worthy of ranking with the product of the famous Alexander Noyes.

He made many attempts to get him from the Post with no avail. Then, when that newspaper was offered for sale, he jumped at the chance, and bought it, primarily to give his Philadelphia paper the benefit of the Post's financial department.

Now Curtis had become really reminiscent. The cigar helped, possibly.

"That was a good guess," he remarked. "Perhaps behind my success my guessing ability counts for more than anything else.

"Bok in his book about me mentions an incident when I was a newsboy in Portland, Me. I didn't think it was so much at the time, but, considering it since, I have decided it was my first good guess.

"You know I was a little fellow, and the husky micks wouldn't give me much of a show in selling my newspapers on Portland streets. Well, I guessed if I ordered the largest number of newspapers one day and thereby got the first bundle, I could skip out the back way, and take them out to Fort Preble and sell them there.

"It was only a guess, but it worked so successfully that I was able to sell all my papers and at five cents a copy instead of the usual three.

"A guess often turns to be a bright scheme, which no one has ever thought of before.

"Thus it was in 1868, when I was 18, I read a story written by a New York lawyer. It dealt intimately with business and yet it was written in fiction form with a love appeal.

"There, I said to myself, that story is made of the stuff from which a very successful men's magazine might be built. It told of all the tricks played by one competitor against another. To me it seemed far more interesting than a detective story.

"No one agreed with me, however.

"'No,' they said, 'a magazine of stories with business interest would fail miserably.'

"Still I kept the thought in mind, and when I purchased the Saturday Evening Post in 1897, I used that business story as the model of the sort of stuff I wanted printed in it.

"I had a big majority of women readers in my other magazines. I wanted men to read the Saturday Evening Post. Well, everyone knows now how successful that magazine became.

"That, perhaps, was my biggest and best guess."

R. Hoe & Co. to Offer Stock

New York bankers expect soon to offer a block of participating preferred stock of R. Hoe & Co., Inc.

Editor Wins $44,865 Suit

Under a decision of the United States Court in China, Herbert Webb, for 13 years editor of the Shanghai China Press, until he was discharged last March, got a judgment of $44,865. Webb sued his employers, charging that they broke a 5-year contract he held with them.

Leavitt Heads N. Y. Advertisers

Association of National Advertisers, New York Chapter, has elected R. K. Leavitt, advertising manager of "Onyx," Hosiery, Inc., chairman. O. B. Carson, advertising manager of American Hard Rubber Company, was chosen secretary.

PUBLISHED KLAN LIST PLAGUES BUFFALO

Two Newspapers Sued by Men Called Knights—One Paper Avoids Names —Alleged Informer Killed—No Press Names on Roster

As Editor & Publisher went to press word was received that in special term of Supreme court the $100,000 libel action of Albert H. Zink against the Buffalo Commercial was dismissed. The court upheld the contention of the newspaper that it did not mention Mr. Zink in an article relative to the Ku Klux Klan, neither did it charge him with any improper conduct in any way.

For the past month Buffalo daily newspapers have been playing with dynamite, through the seizure by the police of what is purported to be membership lists, correspondence and records of the Ku Klux Klan in Buffalo and vicinity. The editors have been beset on the one hand by a public demand for full publicity regarding the Klan and the investigations into its activities, and on the other by the knowledge that the entire proceedings have been more or less irregular and perhaps illegal.

Already two Buffalo newspapers have been sued for libel because of news items which they printed relative to Klan matters and it is reported many other persons whose names have been mentioned are planning similar suits.

Albert H. Zink, member of the Erie county board of supervisors, president of the Buffalo Kiwanis Club and holder of numerous high Masonic offices, has sued the Buffalo Commercial for $100,000. He based his suit on the fact that the Commercial carried a news item to the effect that "a supervisor and prominent business man's" name appeared in the Klan list. Mr. Zink brings suit on the grounds that he is the only "prominent business man" on the board and that he has been named by inference in the Commercial.

Franklin R. Brown, attorney for the Commercial, appeared in Supreme court on Sept. 25, and asked that the suit be dismissed on the ground that neither by inference or directly had the complainant been named by the Commercial. Justice Pooley took the matter under consideration, declining request for immediate dismissal of the suit as requested. His decision had not been given up to edition time of Editor & Publisher.

The Rev. Littleton E. H. Smith, a Methodist minister of Buffalo, who has been active in vice and liquor crusades, is seeking $25,000 from the Buffalo Times for alleged libel in one of its reports of the City court hearing in a case through which an attorney sought to compel the police to make public the list of names which they had obtained.

Action of the Rev. Mr. Smith is based on a paragraph in the report which said, "The Rev. Mr. Smith at first denied that he had been a member of the Klan and later admitted that one of the signed membership cards bore his signature."

The minister contends the Times attacked his veracity and intimated that he had perjured himself on the witness stand, thereby bringing reflection upon his name and upon his standing as a minister. He charges no such conclusion as that of the Times can be drawn from his testimony in the proceedings.

It is understood at least a dozen other suits are being considered by prominent citizens who have been named in stories of the court proceedings and in other connections.

The Buffalo Evening News declined to print stories relative to names of persons included in the Klan membership lists. It also declined to print denials of affiliation.

One man suspected of providing the police with Klan information, Edward C. Obertean, was killed and two others were wounded when a man said to be an official of the Klan in Buffalo stopped Mr. Obertean and sought to question him relative to reports that he, after obtaining membership in the hooded order, supplied Mayor Schwab of Buffalo with information relative to it.

One of the men wounded was Carl Sturm, brother of John C. Sturm, general manager of the Buffalo Commercial. Sturm was shot in the thigh when he ran from the place where Obertean and a third man, said to be a former kleagle, were shooting at each other. Police said Sturm was an innocent victim.

A study of the 4,025 names in the list showed that no person now connected with the editorial staff of any Buffalo newspaper appeared therein. The name of the staff photographer of an afternoon paper was included in the list but he explained that he was forced to sign a card in order to obtain pictures of one of the Klan meetings.

A Buffalo printing concern copied the entire list and sold pamphlets containing the names for 25 cents a copy. It is reported to have made a profit of $3,000 in the first three weeks of sale. No Buffalo paper has published any portion of the list although many extracts from the correspondence and records have been reproduced.

GUESTS OF NEW YORK'S CHIEF COP

John H. Perry, President American Press Association; Col. Rhinelander Waldo, C. F. Ellen, Arthur Brisbane, William Griffin, vice-president of A. P. A., and Richard E. Enright, New York Police Commissioner, at the latter's mountain camp in New York State.

MAY EXTEND R.R. AD DRIVE

Hill Railroads Plan 5 Year Budget If Northwest States Aid

The three-year advertising campaign, now in its second year, of the Hill railroads—Northern Pacific, Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and Great Northern—will be extended to five years if the northwestern states will co-ordinate their sectional advertising with the railway's program, P. F. Eustis, traffic manager of the Burlington, announced recently in Spokane, Wash.

Mr. Eustis said that more has been spent by the three roads in its campaign, which includes magazine and newspaper advertising, than at first contemplated. Original plans were for an expenditure of $1,000,000 at the rate of $333,000 a year. The first year's expenditures were $420,000 and at the end of the second year—next March—$825,000 will probably have been spent instead of the $667,000 contemplated.

The money being spent by the three roads jointly is exclusive of individual advertising campaigns.

The joint campaign's plans for November, December and January include an item of $70,000 to be used for advertising the state of Washington in weeklies and dailies in mid-western states. This is 36 per cent of the total to be spent during those months, Mr. Eustis said.

Chamber of Commerce representatives of a number of northwestern cities have assured the Hill lines of co-operation in the proposed co-ordination of advertising.

ATLANTA GETS CLASSIFIED MEET

Southeastern Group, A.N.C.A.M. Will Convene There Oct. 20-21

The Southeastern division of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers will hold its annual meeting in Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 20 and 21, A. T. Miller, of the Nashville Banner, secretary of the association and chairman of the Southeastern division has announced.

A number of prominent classified men will attend the meeting, including John L. Irwin, classified manager of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register-Tribune, and president of the A. N. C. A. M. Invitations to classified managers throughout the South are now being sent out, and a program is being prepared.

W. H. Bearden, classified manager of the Atlanta Georgian, chairman of the convention committee, and is making arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting classified men.

Michigan A. P. Group Elects

The Michigan Associated Press Goodfellowship Club at its annual meeting in Detroit Sept. 28, elected H. C. Dennis of Saginaw, president, E. F. Messe, Lansing, vice-president, and U. H. Rose, Battle Creek, secretary. Milton Garges, of New York, chief of traffic for the Associated Press, and E. T. Wilford, Chicago divisional traffic chief addressed the meeting. The club is made up of Michigan employes of the Associated Press, and meeting was attended by members from all parts of the state.

Hearst to Build Warehouse

The Star Company, publisher of the Hearst newspapers, plans to erect a large building for the storage of paper in New York at Fifty-fourth and Fifty-fifth streets, Eleventh and Twelfth avenues, the property having been purchased last week. The site has railroad and wharf facilities.

RADIO WILL FLASH BIG FALL NEWS EVENTS

World's Series, Ten Major Eastern Football Games, and Presidential Election Returns Will Be Placed on the Air by New York Stations—Will Not Decrease Newspaper Sales, Radio Officials Say.

By WARREN BASSETT

COMPETITION for the big news of the day is getting keener.

Press associations and newspapers must now compete with radio for the "cream."

This fact has never been so convincingly demonstrated as at the present time when a review of the fall broadcasting programs shows that the World's Series, ten major eastern football games, and the Presidential election returns will be broadcast to millions of "listeners in" before the newspapers can get accounts of these events upon the streets.

Not only will these outstanding news events be broadcast to the radio public in the east from the two principal New York stations—WEAF operated by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and WJZ, Radio Corporation of America—but through a series of hook-ups with other stations the reports will be made available to virtually all sections of the United States.

The Presidential election returns—"cream" news awaited with supreme interest from coast to coast—will be broadcast by both WEAF and WJZ, officials of both companies have assured EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Neither company is ready to announce the source from which it will obtain these returns.

Neither company will set up its own collecting agency to gather election results, nor will either company be served by the Western Union, which works under an agreement with the Associated Press. This agreement does not permit release of returns, gathered cooperatively, to radio stations.

W. E. Harkness, assistant vice-president of the A. T. & T., declared this week that WEAF will merely furnish the use of its broadcasting facilities to whatever person or group is interested in placing election results on the air. He was not ready to announce what interest would collect and broadcast the news.

Officials of station WJZ are certain their station will announce election results. Application was made to the Western Union for election service, officials said, but the request was refused because of the existing agreement with the Associated Press.

WJZ will not countenance the "lifting" of reports from bulletin boards or public places where announcements are being made, it was stated.

"It is not fair to the agencies which go to a large expense to collect and disseminate returns to get them by this method and we will not employ it," an official said.

Indications are that the Western Union is growing restive under its cooperative agreement with the Associated Press whereby sale of election returns to non-Associated Press papers and radio stations is prohibited.

J. C. Willever, Western Union vice-president in charge of the commercial department, told EDITOR & PUBLISHER that "adherence to this policy by the Associated Press will probably drive us to collect all of our election returns in the future instead of only a part."

"We feel that we must be free to supply our returns to any paper or group which wants them," he stated.

Modification of the agreement with the Associated Press will not be asked this year, however, Mr. Willever said.

Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, told EDITOR & PUBLISHER no request has been received from the Western Union for a modification of the existing agreement. Any such negotiations must necessarily take place in the future, he said, since the cooperative collection of election returns obtains almost exclusively during presidential years.

Vice-President Willever declared emphatically that the Western Union will not expand its new business. It would be very unwise to do so, he added. He pointed out that for years Western Union has been largely interested in but four kinds of news, baseball scores, football results, stock market quotations, and election returns. The company is interested in strengthening these services, he stated.

Graham McNamee, WEAF announcer, at the microphone covering 1923 World's Series game at the Polo Grounds.

However, the outcome of the Western Union-Associated Press relationship is a future development. Of imminent interest to newspaper publishers and editors is the present dissemination of big news events by radio.

In the immediate foreground is the World's Series between the Washington Senators and the New York Giants. Not only will the play-by-play account be broadcast, but color material—the serried rows of spectators cramming the gigantic stretch of grandstand and bleachers at the Polo Grounds, the weather, the description of the field, even the fleeting facial expressions of the players as they step to bat in a crucial moment will be placed on the air. Radio reporting is graphic. It embraces a full picture. It rivals any newspaper account that can be written.

In order to broadcast the World's Series WEAF and WJZ have obtained permission from both the Western Union and from Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, arbiter of baseball. No difficulty was experienced in obtaining permits this year. Last year, however, permission to broadcast the games was refused by the owners of the New York Giants and the Yankees on the ground that gate receipts would dwindle when full accounts of the games could be heard via the loud speaker on virtually every street corner. Judge Landis overruled the refusal and the games were reported by radio. Attendance figures mounted to unheard of totals. At one game 25,000 persons were turned away. Club owners are convinced that radio swells attendances rather than diminishes them.

Western Union permission was also necessary since this company holds now, and has held for years, exclusive wire rights in all major league ball parks. It is a contract arrangement with the individual clubs, through which the Western Union obtains the daily baseball scores which its sells yearly to a large number of subscribers. The telegraph company will furnish the wires over which the play-by-play accounts of the World's Series will be carried from the Polo Grounds to the broadcasting stations in New York. In Washington the Western Union wires within the park will be used by the radio companies, but Postal lines will be connected outside the park to carry the report of the game to the New York broadcasting studios.

J. Andrew White, WJZ's star "radio reporter" will cover the games for that station, while Graham McNamee, WEAF announcer, will report the contests for his station.

By hook-up arrangements with WJZ, stations WRC, Washington, operated by the Radio Corporation of America, and WGY, Schenectady, operated by the General Electric Company, will broadcast the World's Series games simultaneously.

WEAF will broadcast each World's Series game except the Sunday contest, which will be placed on the air by WNYC, New York's municipal station. Seven other stations will be hooked up with WEAF. They are: WCAE, Pittsburgh; WGY, Schnectady; WJAR, Providence; WMAF, South Dartmouth, Mass.; WCAP, Washington; WDBH, Worcester, Mass.; WEEI, Boston. Other stations are expected to be added, WEAF officials said.

By these hook-ups the entire east and large portions of the middle west will hear the crack of the bat and the cheers of the ball park crowds as cleverly as though they were listening on a New York street corner.

Following the close of the World's Series radio will compete with the newspapers in distributing news of the important football games in the east.

Football fans who can take the time to tune in on the eastern stations this fall, or stand before a loud speaker on some public square, will not have to depend on the newspapers for accounts of the games.

With the permission of the various college athletic managers, WEAF and WJZ will broadcast ten major contests from the field. Play-by-play accounts of the following games will be plaed on the air by WEAF:

Oct. 11—Columbia vs. Wesleyan at Baker Field, New York.

Oct. 18—Notre Dame vs. Army at the Polo Grounds.

Oct. 25—Notre Dame vs. Princeton at Princeton.

Nov. 1—Army vs. Yale at New Haven.

Nov. 8—Yale vs. U. of Maryland at New Haven. Harvard vs. Princeton at Cambridge.

Nov. 15—Yale vs. Princeton at Princeton.

Nov. 22—Harvard vs. Yale at New Haven.

Nov. 27—Cornell vs. Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

Nov. 29—Army vs. Navy at Baltimore.

WJZ's schedule parallels the above list with the exception of the Oct. 11 and Nov. 8 date. No game is scheduled for Oct. 11. On Nov. 8, while WEAF is broadcasting Harvard vs. Princeton, WJZ will place the Yale-University of Maryland game on the air.

The schedule gives WEAF two exclusive contests and WJZ one. As far back as last January WJZ was preparing an exclusive football schedule but athletic directors of the Big Three—Harvard, Princeton, Yale—decided to preserve impartiality by allowing both WEAF and WJZ to broadcast from the playing field.

WJZ has not yet named its football reporter-announcer, although J. Andrew White will assist in reporting color material. Graham McNamee will report football for WEAF with the assistance of D. B. McKey, a former football coach, now with the A. T. & T.

Just as in past years, Western Union will report major football games in all sections of the country for its clients. A telegraph operator seated in the stadium press stand reports contests for the wire company.

The Western Union attitude toward radio is one of cooperation.

Although radio, in a sense, competes with the Western Union in the dissemination of baseball news, it is not considered as a rival, and from the first has cooperated with broadcasting stations.

When broadcasting began to assume proportions in 1922, station WJZ, Radio Corporation, then located in Newark, N. J., asked permission to buy the Western Union baseball reports for broadcasting purposes. After a conference in which it was decided that radio dissemination of scores would not be injurious to the growth of the telegraph company's business in that line, permission was granted. The only reservation was that the reports should be credited to Western Union.

With the approach of the World's Series in 1922, radio companies asked permission to broadcast a play-by-play report from the grounds. Western Union again gave permission, waving for the time its exclusive wire rights to the parks in favor of the radio companies. The only restriction was that the club owners must give their consent. This was obtained and the 1922 series was the first world championship contest ever placed on the air.

In 1923, Ban Johnson of the American League protested the broadcasting of the series, declaring that it would injure gate receipts. He was overruled, however, by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, and the series was reported by radio. As related above, attendance records were smashed.

"The Western Union has always waived its exclusive ball park wire rights and cooperated with radio," Mr. Willever declared. "We recognize the great public interest in broadcasting and do all we can to be of service.

Prince Writes New York Press Men

The New York Newspaper Printing Pressmen's & Assistants' Union this week received a letter from the Prince of Wales, acknowledging the honorary membership voted him by the local chapel of the New York Herald Tribune.

NATIONAL ADVERTISING A LARGE PART OF LEADING PAPERS' LINEAGE

Listing of Newspapers Which Carried a Million or More Agate Lines of National During First Six Months of 1924 Shows Proportion Above Average

THE first of a new series of analysis of newspaper advertising is presented on this page by EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Total lineage figures which appeared in these columns Sept. 13, with their subdivisions into national and local display lineage and also classified advertising, have furnished the material for the accompanying table.

Newspapers are classified as "morning and Sunday," "evening and Sunday" and evening six-day, and those which carried a million or more lines of national advertising during the six months ending June 30 are included. Only two newspapers of the first rank as national advertising media are omitted from the tabulation—the Boston Post, which furnished no figures, and the Philadelphia Inquirer, which did not separate its national from local display advertising.

Leading the morning papers and also ahead of the leaders in the two other classes in volume of national business is the New York Times, with 3,134,526 agate lines. Leading the morning papers in national volume carried in weekday issues, Sunday omitted, is the Chicago Tribune, with 1,790,763 agate lines. This paper is also second among all those listed in total national business, its seven-day figure being 2,706,030 agate lines.

First among the evening and Sunday papers is the Detroit News with 2,210,740 agate lines of national. Also over the two-million mark in national in the evening and Sunday field is the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, with 2,104,760 agate lines.

At the top of the evening six-day list is the Philadelphia Bulletin, with 2,136,282 agate lines of national. Second in this list is the Newark News, with 2,069,304 agate lines.

Twenty-nine morning newspapers in 24 cities are listed as carrying more than a million agate lines of national advertising during the first six months, and with the addition of the two missing newspaper mentioned above, it may be accepted as fact that 31 morning and Sunday newspapers were over the mark for the period. Every city of the first in population ten is represented in this table by at least one newspaper, but below that level the listing covers a wide range of territory and population ranking. The smallest city to break into the column is Miami, Fla., where the Herald ran up a total of 1,011,199 agate lines of national advertising.

Twenty-one evening and Sunday newspapers in 20 cities qualified for the tabulation. These are well scattered both geographically and in population rank, only six of the first ten cities appearing in the list. The obvious reason is that few of the evening papers in the ten largest cities publish Sunday editions.

(Continued on page 36)

MORNING NEWSPAPERS WHICH CARRIED A MILLION OR MORE LINES OF NATIONAL ADVERTISING JAN. 1—JUNE 30, 1924

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	National Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of National to Total Lineage
New York Times .....(m)	8,002,410	1,611,396	20.1
Sunday ed .....(s)	5,290,722	1,523,130	28.7
Total .....(ms)	13,293,132	3,134,526	23.5
Chicago Tribune .....(m)	8,771,193	1,790,763	20.5
Sunday ed .....(s)	5,856,888	915,267	15.6
Total .....(ms)	14,628,081	2,706,030	18.6
Cleveland Plain Dealer.....(m)	5,884,564	1,296,064	22.0
Sunday .....(s)	3,646,986	1,034,614	28.3
Total .....(ms)	9,531,550	2,330,678	24.4
New York American .....(m)	2,971,756	647,358	21.7
Sunday ed .....(s)	4,836,342	1,668,864	34.5
Total .....(ms)	7,808,098	2,316,222	29.6
Los Angeles Times .....(m)	14,904,470	1,936,452	12.9
St. Louis Globe-Democrat..(m)	4,349,736	1,333,662	30.4
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,518,932	582,429	23.1
Total .....(ms)	6,868,668	1,916,091	27.8
Detroit Free Press .....(m)	4,362,638	1,170,442	26.8
Sunday ed .....(s)	3,181,934	669,158	21.0
Total .....(ms)	7,544,572	1,839,600	24.3
San Francisco Examiner ...(m)	4,936,522	1,096,122	22.2
Sunday ed .....(s)	4,226,801	696,813	16.4
Total .....(ms)	9,163,323	1,792,935	19.5
Baltimore Sun .....(m)	4,223,514	1,187,817	28.1
Sunday ed .....(s)	3,149 397	412,343	13.0
Total .....(ms)	7,372,911	1,600,160	21.7
Los Angeles Examiner ....(ms)	12,225,783	1,575,588	12.8
New York World .....(m)	4,772,826	711,858	14.9
Sunday ed .....(s)	3,827,288	835,920	21.8
Total .....(ms)	8,600,114	1,547,778	17.9
New York Herald-Tribune.(ms)	6,206,288	1,536,576	24.7
Portland Oregonian .....(m)	4,728,262	1,019,984	21.5
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,464,672	512,512	20.8
Total .....(ms)	7,192,934	1,532,496	21.3
Boston Globe .....(m)	4,007,454	1,023,722	25.5
Sunday ed .....(s)	3,301,428	491,653	14.9
Total .....(ms)	7,308,882	1,515,375	20.7
Memphis Commercial Appeal (m)	4,953,116	1,094,338	22.0
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,501,506	407,302	16.2
Total .....(ms)	7,454,622	1,501,640	20.1
Minneapolis Tribune .....(m)	5,115,904	920,850	18.0
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,026,759	566 933	27.9
Total .....(ms)	7,142,663	1,487,783	20.8
Seattle Post-Intelligencer...(m)	2,927,680	675,094	23.0
Sunday ed .....(s)	1,877,190	742 490	39.5
Total .....(ms)	4,805,870	1,417,584	29.5
St. Paul Pioneer Press.....(m)	3,405,836	1,026,564	30.1
Sunday ed .....(s)	1,510 796	378,938	25.0
Total .....(ms)	4,916,632	1,405,502	28.6
Dallas News .....(m)	3,536,395	901,060	28.3
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,630 860	484 775	18.4
Total .....(ms)	6,167,255	1,385,835	22.4
New Orleans Times-Picayune .....(m)	5,255,645	917,951	17.4
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,748,000	459,640	16.7
Total .....(ms)	8,003,645	1,377,591	17.2
Pittsburgh Gazette-Times...(m)	3,107,482	818,902	26.3
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,344,888	538,566	22.9
Total .....(ms)	5,452,370	1,357,468	25.0
Indianapolis Star .....(m)	3,678,777	708,729	19.2
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,922,153	620,883	21.2
Total .....(ms)	6,600,930	1,329,612	20.1
Louisville Courier-Journal...(m)	2,840,550	886,900	30.8
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,884,411	421,419	14.6
Total .....(ms)	5,724,961	1,308,319	22.8
Bridgeport Telegram .....(m)	3,941,189	1,224,017	31.0
Kansas City Star .....(m)	4,626,487	910,148	19.6
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,682,524	250,849	9.3
Total .....(ms)	7,309,011	1,160,997	15.8
Omaha World-Herald .....(ms)	5,928,657	1,155,477	19.5
Hartford Courant .....(m)	3,437,823	542,577	15.8
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,166,943	504,790	23.3
Total .....(ms)	5,604,766	1,047,367	18.6
San Francisco Chronicle ...(m)	3,224,774	660,464	20.4
Sunday ed .....(s)	2,015,360	373,982	18.5
Total .....(ms)	5,240,134	1,034,446	19.7
Miami Herald .....(m)	6,315,960	754,789	11.9
Sunday .....(s)	2,389,247	256,410	10.7
Total .....(ms)	8,705,207	1,011,199	11.6

EVENING AND SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS WHICH CARRIED MILLION OR MORE LINES OF NATIONAL ADVERTISING, JAN. 1-JUNE 30, 1924

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	National Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of National to Total Lineage
Detroit News .....(es)	15,568,672	2,210,740	14.2
St. Louis Post-Dispatch ...(es)	11,733,400	2,104,760	17.9
Brooklyn Eagle .....(es)	8,804,036	1,799,226	20.4
Bridgeport Post .....(es)	5,191,379	1,780,553	34.3
Milwaukee Journal .....(es)	9,082,859	1,754,783	19.3
Pittsburgh Press .....(es)	12,341,056	1,528,646	12.3
Houston Chronicle .....(es)	6,669,222	1,528,478	22.9
Columbus Dispatch .....(es)	10,776,342	1,520,879	14.1
Denver Post .....(es)	6,944,112	1,472,708	21.2
Birmingham News .....(es)	8,005,340	1,433,376	17.9
Atlanta Journal .....(es)	7,139,482	1,401,694	19.6
Minneapolis Journal .....(es)	7,286,266	1,401,391	19.2
Washington Star .....(es)	12,630,291	1,376,242	10.9
Detroit Times .....(es)	5,340,371	1,339,419	25.0
Fort Worth Star-Telegram..(es)	4,245,850	1,334,774	31.4.
Cleveland News and Leader.(es)	6,842,286	1,275,522	18.6
Dayton News .....(es)	8,230,576	1,259,986	15.3
Trenton Times .....(es)	6,595,343	1,076,712	16.3
Portland Express .....(es)	4,927,777	1,048,660	21.2
Dallas Times-Herald .....(es)	7,451,876	1,020,138	13.7
Seattle Times .....(es)	7,065,926	1,011,670	14.3

EVENING (SIX-DAY) NEWSPAPERS WHICH CARRIED MILLION OR MORE LINES OF NATIONAL ADVERTISING, JAN. 1-JUNE 30, 1924

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	National Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of National to Total Lineage
Philadelphia Bulletin .....(e)	9,935,787	2,136,282	21.5
Newark News .....(e)	9,366,489	2,069,304	22.0
Bridgeport Post .....(e)	4,409,100	1,672,129	35.6
Indianapolis News .....(e)	9,038,574	1,670,502	18.4
Boston Traveler .....(e)	4,588,802	1,668,257	36.3
Philadelphia Evg. Public Ledger .....(e)	6,046,032	1,640,741	27.1
New York Sun .....(e)	6,815,856	1,599,194	23.4
Buffalo News .....(e)	7,390,139	1,475,002	19.9
Chicago Daily News .....(e)	10,274,341	1,438,442	14.0
Detroit News .....(e)	11,548,642	1,433,936	12.4
Cincinnati Times-Star.....(e)	7,143,479	1,348,494	18.8
St. Louis Post-Dispatch.....(e)	7,327,040	1,271,760	17.3
Toledo Blade .....(e)	7,632,953	1,234,628	16.4
Milwaukee Journal .....(e)	6,529,105	1,229,938	18.8
Reading Eagle .....(e)	5,963,524	1,215,788	20.4
New York Journal .....(e)	7,394,870	1,207,150	16.3
Baltimore Evg. Sun.....(e)	9,281,108	1,184,599	12.7
Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph .....(e)	6,277,138	1,180,340	18.8
Boston Transcript .....(e)	3,851,926	1,165,856	30.2
Columbus Dispatch .....(e)	7,765,988	1,143,471	14.7
Albany Times-Union.....(e)	5,102,130	1,132,170	22.1
Richmond News-Leader.....(e)	6,105.904	1,120,238	18.3
Pittsburgh Press .....(e)	8,562.792	1,109,402	14.1
Grand Rapids Press.....(e)	7,372,176	1,108,604	15 0
Brooklyn Eagle .....(e)	5,848,196	1,104,676	18.8
Minneapolis Journal .....(e)	5,609,875	1,100 314	19.4
Providence Bulletin .....(e)	6,666,547	1,091,393	16.3
Scranton Times .....(e)	7,547,904	1,078,051	14.4
Chicago American .....(e)	5 742,528	1,072,569	18.6
Los Angeles Herald .....(e)	9,312,898	1,062,068	11.4
Hartford Times .....(e)	6,771,048	1,058,039	15.6
Dayton News .....(e)	6,268,626	1,048 054	16.7
Washington Star .....(e)	9,396,831	1,047,320	11.1
Cleveland Press .....(e)	7,384,160	1,044,876	14.1
Rochester Times-Union.....(e)	6,072,248	1,031,632	16.9
Washington Times .....(e)	4,511,709	1,028,694	22.8
Boston Globe .....(e)	4,007,454	1,023 722	25.5
St. Paul Dispatch .....(e)	4,696,342	1,018,038	21.9

SAYS EUROPE'S DARK SHADOWS ARE FADING

Editorial Writer Investigates Foreign Affairs and Advises Fellow Craftsmen—Believes Geneva Deserves More Attention—America's Position Proud

By H. V. KALTENBORN

(Written Especially for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Kaltenborn, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, this week returned to this country from his fifth European survey trip, undertaken for his newspaper. At the request of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, he herewith submits his impressions of the significant aspects of the European situation from the point of view of the American newspaper man who will be called upon frequently to write editorials on foreign affairs. No restrictions were placed upon Mr. Kaltenborn in the expression of his opinions, which are set forth without any reference to EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S attitude on the questions discussed.

TO discuss European problems today is difficult, since one is immediately accused of partisan bias. Yet, at the request of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, I rush in where angels should fear to tread.

In the first place travel abroad and contact with the leaders in European countries, demonstrates that reconstruction in Europe is at last underway. During the past six months, Europe has made more real progress towards order, sound government, towards the psychology of peace, than in all the years since the war.

This is of special interest to America, because it is on the basis of American suggestions and through the co-operation of American citizens that this advance has come.

The Premiers of Great Britain, France and Germany, with all of whom I talked, are firmly convinced that America is in Europe with both feet and is there to stay. American influence is very definite at every European conference. As far as Europe is concerned, it is official. If the State Department chooses to pretend for purposes of its own that it is "unofficial" that may fool the provincial "irreconcilables" in the Senate, but it cannot change the facts.

Chancellor Marx of Germany was informed "unofficially" that the American government would view with displeasure Germany's immediate entry into the League of Nations. His whole plan for Germany's entrance into the League was influenced by what he believed was a favorable American viewpoint. He believes in the League of Nations himself; but Washington's viewpoint places him in an awkward position. Naturally he does not want to do anything which would be objectionable to America, because Germany wants to borrow $100,000,000 from us next month. His embarrassment is none the less real because a suggestion from Washington is unofficial.

At Geneva, one is further impressed by America's participation in European affairs. In the press section of the League of Nations, American correspondents predominate. The press gallery is jammed with them even though this country is not represented officially. At the hotels one bumps into American ex-cabinet officials and other prominent Americans at every turn. Walking two block on the Quai Wilson one afternoon, I met Henry Taft, former Attorney General Wickersham, General Bliss and William G. McAdoo.

Discussion of the so-called "American plan" to obtain security and disarmament has been at the forefront throughout the League sessions. The influence America is exercising in the League of Nations is just as potent as that of member powers.

"Your people are always butting in," a European statesman remarked to me. "Generally to good purpose. But we do wish you would take some of the responsibility and help pay some of the bills."

When I first attended the League of Nations meetings, I was opposed to it. Successive visits have convinced me that the League is not a super-state; that it is not dangerous to any member's independence: that its aims do not conflict with the Monroe Doctrine, American immigration policies, or any other American tenet. My only criticism now is that it is too weak. It needs the strength our membership would bring.

I cannot dismiss the League without strongly advising every editorial writer, whether he is Republican or Democrat, to make a point of following League proceedings. Insufficient editorial attention is given to Geneva, and events there are treated with too much partisan bias.

We are apt to forget that the League's labors are continuous. Committees are at work all the time. The remarkably efficient Secretariat works 12 months a year. I suggest to editorial writers that they ask the Secretariat to put them on the mailing list for the monthly summary of League activities. They will find a dozen good editorial topics in each issue.

The complete change of atmosphere between the Europe of 1923 and 1924 is most striking. This change is primarily due to the emergence of liberal-minded men in the Governments of England and France. The conciliatory policies of Premier MacDonald and Premier Herriot have made it possible for England and France to get together on a policy towards Germany.

The London conference dramatized this complete change. MacDonald, Herriot and Marx discussed one another's problems with a keen desire to help each other deal with public opinion and reconcile it to their decisions.

"I am willing to make this concession," Marx would say. "But, if I do, I can't get the Dawes plan through the Reichstag. You must help me present the reparations plan in such a manner that it will win Nationalist votes."

"My party is in the minority in tha French Chamber," Herriot would declare. "I will need the co-operation of the other parties. Personally I am willing to get out of the Ruhr immediately. But if I agree to get out at once the Poincarists will howl their heads off and I'll probably be voted out of office. Give me a year on paper and I'll get out a great deal sooner than that."

The Germans consented but Premier McDonald balked.

"The labor Government cannot agree to let the French stay in the Ruhr," he stated, "since we consider the Ruhr occupation illegal. But if you, Marx, and you, Herriot, can agree on a year, I'll cover myself by writing a letter to Herriot reiterating my Government's point of view on the illegality of the occupation."

And so it was done.

American influence is definite at every European conference. As far as Europe is concerned it is official.

* * * *

Chancellor Marx was informed "unofficially" that the American government would view with displeasure Germany's immediate entry into the League of Nations.

* * * *

American editorial writers should get and study the League's monthly summary of activities.

* * * *

American correspondents abroad suffer for home office contacts.

H. V. KALTENBORN

Thus is Europe co-operating. Problems are being discussed in the friendliest sort of way. Every Premier has a sympathetic appreciation for the difficulties of the other fellow.

At a private press luncheon at Geneva there was an example of this friendly relationship. At this luncheon, Premier Theunis of Belgium, and MacDonald and Herriot, humorously agreed to establish a newspaper, when they should all be "exes." Theunis, who has money, was to hold the bag. MacDonald and Herriot, who are both capable writers, but have little money, were to do the writing. The suggestion came from Herriot, who declared that on the day which he took office, an enterprising American Syndicate asked him to write a series of articles to begin immediately after he was voted out of office.

"Thus at my very debut in office," Herriot laughingly remarked, "I was reminded of my prospective exit."

Of course this was all mere joking. But I believe it was significant in that the time has come at last when a European prime minister can afford to be humorous.

Even at the beginning of the London conference the atmosphere was still too tense for a joke. When MacDonald suggested that the conference hurry its work in order that he might have time to play a little golf in Scotland, German and French representatives insisted that such levity would create a bad impression in their respective countries and the British Premier agreed to have the allusion to golf removed from the record.

Airplanes are being put to much more general use abroad than in America, home of the Wright Brothers. Our country is far behind all European countries in the employment of airplanes for commercial purposes.

The only way for a busy editor to travel in Europe is by the air route. I was able to keep important appointments at different capitals on the same day by using the air transportation that puts all European capitals within a few hours of each other.

I don't understand why there are no commercial air services in the United States. Surely there is a fortune awaiting somebody in this field. Newspapers abroad are making considerable use of airplanes. Among the chief articles of freight between London and Paris are the London and Paris newspapers, which are put aboard hot from the presses in the morning and sold in Paris or London by noon of the same day.

American correspondents abroad are deploring the lack of close touch between them and their home offices.

"What is interesting the people at home?" they all ask.

They rarely hear from the "boss," unless by way of a specific reprimand concerning a 'beat," and their stories may be played up or cut to a stick. The story is three weeks old when they see it, too late to make a fuss. They may think that an editor objects to a certain kind of material, because it wasn't printed. If they had been in the composing room at make-up time they might have heard the make-up editor say:

"Here, John, cut this Paris story down to two sticks. Make it fit in the second column under the Bigwig divorce."

I believe there should be more contact between home editors and their correspondents abroad. Frequent letters and cables should inform the correspondents how his stuff is sizing up from the home office point of view.

I came back from Europe this year more light hearted than from any journey since the war. The Old World is once more looking up. Hope is once more real and peace seems more secure. When you hear a French Premier joking with German correspondents as I did at Geneva, you feel that a new day has dawned.

As an American, I feel proud that my country has helped to bring about the new order through the work of such men as General Dawes and Owen D. Young. I hope that work such as theirs will will be continued by other competent Americans and that they will receive the official backing of their Government.

Ours is a proud place in the world. Our editors must help us to justify and maintain it by intelligent, discriminatory comment on foreign affairs.

On this survey trip, Mr. Kaltenborn attended the London conference, first, where he obtained a "world beat" on Owen D. Young's appointment as reparations Czar. Then he followed the London proposals through the German Reichstag, and gained the first exclusive interview ever granted an American journalist by Chancellor Marx.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

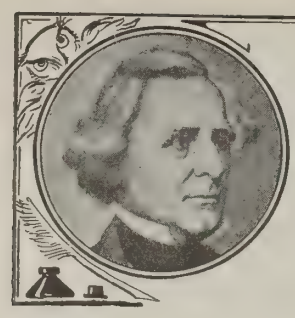
Oct. 7-9—National Publishers' Assn., fifth annual meeting. Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.

Oct. 9-10-11—Illinois Press Assn., annual meeting, Champaign-Urbana, Ill.

Oct. 13-14—International Trade Composition Assn., meeting, Chicago.

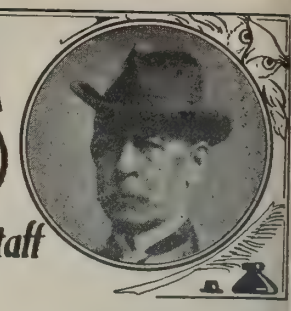
Oct. 13-4—National Industrial Advertisers' Assn., Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago.

Oct. 13-6—Audit Bureau of Circulations, meeting, Drake Hotel, Chicago.



Oct. 13-16—Financial Advertisers Association, annual meeting, Richmond, Va.

Oct. 14-15—Inland Daily Press Assn., convention, Chicago.



Oct. 14-15—New York State Circulation Managers Assn., annual convention, Hudson, N. Y.

Oct. 15-18—United Typothetæ of America, annual convention, Chicago.

Oct. 16-17—American Association of Advertising Agencies, annual convention, Chicago.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

(Continued from last issue)

Records of the Herald's War "Beats"

Early in 1864, the Herald in a remarkably interesting editorial, triumphantly reviewed its series of great "beats" over all its contemporaries. The Tribune, indirectly, had been forced to admit the Herald's superior enterprise and Mr. Bennett lashed it unmercifully.

Mr. Bennett enumerated some of the Herald's greatest "beats" as follows: News of the battle of Shiloh; of the battle at Yorktown (when Mr. Gay, the editor of the Tribune wrote: "The Herald is constantly ahead. We are obliged to copy from it"); news of the battles of Williamsburg, Mine Run, Stone River, Pea Ridge, Corinth, and all of the Fremont fights in Missouri the Herald published first; it also had much the fullest and earliest accounts of the decisive battle at Gettysburg. Likewise as to the operations at Vicksburg, New Orleans and Farragut's battle in Mobile Bay, it had the first stories.

"We have beaten them," said he, "regularly in Southern news, and printed Jeff Davis' Message ahead of them, while we secured the entire Army and Navy List of the rebels, much to President Davis' astonishment. He declared that it must have been the work of traitors in office.

"Nearly every important event was originally chronicled in these columns, including the sinking of the 'Alabama' by the 'Kearsarge'. * * * The public knows, and the editors of other journals know that the Herald is and will be constantly ahead, and its contemporaries are obliged to copy from it."

Among the most eminent of the Herald's war correspondents were J. A. Brady, G. W. Clark, William H. Stiner, Oscar G. Sawyer, Gen. F. F. Millen, and Charles Henry Farrell, who reported for the Herald the memorable battle between the "Monitor" and the "Merrimac." He also represented his paper at the fighting around Vicksburg; at the battle of Antietam, and wrote a wonderful story of the surrender of General R. E. Lee.

The price of the Herald was raised on Dec. 8, 1862, to 3 cents a copy, and again on August 13, 1864, was increased to 4 cents a copy, so heavy had become the cost of publishing the great newspaper in war times. The Herald as early as 1859, had been frequently issued as a triple sheet (of 12 pages), and during the war continued thus, while the pages were 22 by 32 inches in size. Typographically, it was an attractive, neat and well printed sheet. An excellent quality of white paper was always used (except for a short time during the war), while constantly replenished fonts of new type kept the printed page legible and readable.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The French Diplomatic Mission Offered to Mr. Bennett—Herald Building Described—Inception of Atlantic Cable Service

PRESIDENT LINCOLN was a keen analyst, and exercised the soundest judgment in the selection of Cabinet members and diplomatic representatives.

It thus came to pass in the spring of 1865, when he was looking about for a suitable man for the French Mission, that he finally concluded to offer this most important post to James Gordon Bennett, as an editor of market ability, ripe experience, and as an honest supporter of the Union cause throughout the later years of the war.

The President's offer of the Mission to Mr. Bennett was severely criticized by influential men and prominent newspapers, but to Mr. Greeley's credit, the Tribune very handsomely endorsed the selection, considering the unrelenting warfare that had steadily continued between the two, great representative newspapers.

Said Mr. Greeley:

"Some surprise has been expressed that this important mission was not filled previously to the Senate's adjournment. We understand it was offered to James Gordon Bennett, Esq., of this city, but was declined by him, mainly on the ground that he could be of more service in extricating our country from her present difficulties at home than abroad.

"Since Ben Franklin—in every sense our first Ambassador to France—we do not remember that an editor till now has been designated for that post, which demands in its incumbent a full and intimate knowledge of our own and of European politics, a ripe general experience, and a special familiarity with the character and career respectively of the leading statesmen of Europe. These qualifications, we presume, dictated the selection of the veteran editor of the Herald.

"We may here mention, as an interesting incident, that Mr. Bennett met the present Emperor of France at a private dinner party in London just before the fall of Louis Philippe; when, the conversation turning on the condition of affairs in France, Mr. Bennett remarked that he had observed that almost the entire French press was then opposing the Government. The remark made such an impression on Louis Napoleon, that he subsequently recalled the subject and asked Mr. Bennett what inference he drew from the fact above noted. Mr. Bennett replied, that in the United States, such an attitude of the press would forecast an approaching transfer of political power. The events which soon followed proved this inference equally sound with regard to France."

The New Herald Building

The historic corner of Broadway and Ann street, the most strategic and central point for a newspaper office in the entire city at that time, and the permanent home of the Herald for 26 years, was in the early 'sixties the site of Barnum's Museum, which was burned on July 13, 1865. The fire was of the most spectacular character and destroyed not only the Museum but 18 other buildings on the block bounded by Broadway, Ann, Nassau and Fulton streets, and for a time, the Herald Office, corner of Fulton and Nassau streets, was in imminent danger. Its fire department, composed of 40 printers and pressmen did great service under command of William F. Smythe, the superintendent of the office. Lines of hose, 350 feet long were dragged up to the roof, and soon five streams of water, pumped by the Herald's powerful engine, were directed against the flames. Two Herald compositors, William Bennett and William Cowles held the nozzles in face of the blistering heat and distinguished themselves greatly.

All the papers gave page accounts of the conflagration, and the Herald's column of head lines informed its readers that there had been "a gratuitous distribution of curiosities;" that the boa constrictor got loose; the figure of Jeff Davis lost its head; George Washington's billiard table was burned and the most wonderful aquaria in the world, stocked with rare fish, were destroyed. Barnum, who was then attending to his duties as a member of the Connecticut Legislature, representing Bridgeport, returned to New York by special train, and after calmly surveying the smoking ruins from a window in the Astor House, said:

"I will now erect such a building as will astonish the world. On the roof I will have my menagerie of wild beasts, and the place will be three times the size of my late establishment, and as for curiosities, there will be no such collection on this continent or any other."

He opened another museum on Broadway, between Spring and Prince streets, where one of his principal curiosities was "a mammoth fat infant, two years old, and weighing 196 pounds!" In 1868 that building was also destroyed by fire.

To Mr. Bennett the fire at Broadway and Ann street seemed to be an act of Divine Providence, specially performed in his favor, for he had long ineffectually sought a suitable site for the Herald on the great thoroughfare.

Mr. Bennett began negotiations for the purchase of the property almost right away after the fire, with the owner, one Henry W. Sargent, who drove a pretty hard bargain with the rich editor, eager to get this commanding site on Broadway, for he was forced to pay $500,000 for it—all cash, except the amount of three mortgages for $84,000 assumed by Mr. Bennett. The deed was dated Aug. 1, 1865, and was signed by Henry W. Sargent and his wife, Caroline, of Fishkill, N. Y.*

The building was one of the most substantial and beautiful edifices on Broadway, taking nearly 18 months to construct. It had three magnificent white marble fronts: one facing Vesey street and Broadway; the centre front commanding a full view up Broadway, and the third looking on Ann street and the beautiful City Hall Park, the old Post Office not having then been erected. The centre front was a copy of one of the artistic facades of the Louvre in Paris, being of the Corinthian order of architecture, ornamented with Corinthian composite columns and pilasters with very rich carvings.

The main entrance was through a lofty portico of six, round, fluted columns. In the pediment was a shield, having Mr. Bennett's monogram of "J. G. B." inscribed thereon; while his initials were also carved in the solid marble lintels of the windows. The entrance was 8 feet wide with black walnut doors in which were large plate glass panes. There was no lock nor key to this door. It was Mr. Bennett's proud boast, and that of his son afterward, that the door of the Herald office had never been closed at any hour, day or night, and as a literal fact it was only barred twice—for two hours during the senior Mr. Bennett's funeral in June, 1872, and on the day following the death of Mrs. Bennett in 1873.

*Due to the courtesy of Mr. Lippitt of the Register's office, the writer was enabled to see the deed as recorded.

(To be continued next week)

An Ancient Mariner Passeth

Remarkable Career of Herbert L. Bridgman, Twice A. N. P. A. President, 35 Years on Brooklyn Standard Union, Polar Explorer, Champion of Peary, Exposer of Cook—Had Astonishing World-Wide News Contacts

An Appreciation Ey O e of Dr. Bridgman's Associates.

THAT one normal-sized head could carry all Herbert L. Bridgman knew was the daily wonder through the 35 years of this association with the staff of the Brooklyn Standard Union.

To his fellow-workers in this particular vineyard Mr. Brigman was a prodigy. Globe-trotter, lecturer, author, explorer, educator—he was all of these to the world, but to the members of the staff that claimed his efforts he was more than these—he was a good newspaper man, with a most marvelous equipment, that never "ran down" despite its constant use to the age of 80. He had a great head, crammed with facts of world-wide lore—but it was never a big head. Despite his intellectual eminence, that in some others might have been a terrifying condition, his make-up had in it nothing of aloofness. He was one of us, especially when we were hard at work.

The daily press has duly noted the death of Mr. Bridgman at latitude so-and-so north and longitude so-and-so west. It has catalogued the learned societies to which he belonged, approximately two stickfuls of type; the decorations that had been pinned on him, two sticks more; and the travels that he had left behind, perhaps four or five sticks. The men of the Standard Union were duly impressed by these aspects of world greatness, but they are in excellent position to submit that the most important count in favor of this big man who has just passed away was—that he was, to and past his 80th birthday, a mighty good newspaper man.

Mr. Bridgman, in his post as business manager of this newspaper, never forgot to be a reporter. He was a specialist on finding the elusive item in the least likely place. His tremendous mail, pouring in from every quarter of the globe, yielded him one "lead" after another day after day.

One of the busiest of mortals, forever bustling about, he was never too pressed for time to report to the city desk. He laid his finger on the good stuff, frequently important stuff, lurking in the most unsuspected quarters.

History records that Mr. Bridgman climbed the Mesa Encantada with Dr. Libbey. The members of his own staff were properly pleased at the exploit, but may be pardoned for feeling that it is more important to record, in the hour of the present bereavement, that he climbed up to the desk day after day with matter for publication that nobody else could ever have found. Mr. Bridgman was a living object lesson in how to read the papers.

In the midst of his astonishing contacts with the world outside he always thought of his paper in Brooklyn. Descriptive matter poured off his pen during leisure moments that he managed somehow to find on his journeys to the Sudan, to Bulgaria, to Hawaii, to everywhere else under the sun. The moment of his death found two lengthy travel articles, with the initials H. L. B. modestly displayed, in type waiting to be used.

His office in the Standard Union building basked in the full glare of publicity during the never-to-be-forgotten days of the Peary-Cook squabble. Mr. Bridgman was devoted to Peary with an unflinching loyalty. He knew more about Dr. Cook than anybody else in town, for that arch faker had accompanied Mr. Bridgman to the Arctic some years before. So when the whole world was flinging flowers into Cook's lap, Mr. Bridgman was overcome with chagrin. In the midst of extravagant tributes to his fellow-Brooklynite, he cried out in the editorial columns of his paper for caution. He wrote:

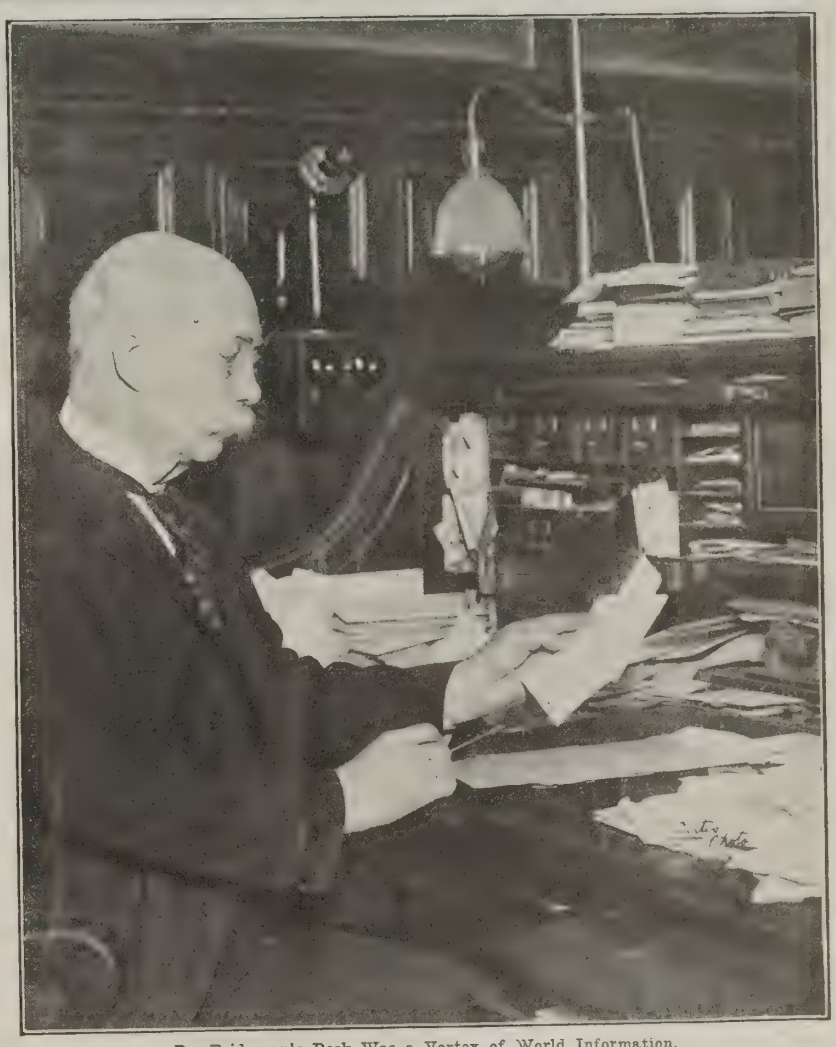
"After the first flush of surprise the most careful scrutiny will follow. The dramatic and picturesque 'special' gives way to records, diaries, observations, track charts, courses, locations and all the other indicia by which science establishes facts. Nobody knows this better than Dr. Cook, and though his expedition has no official relation to any government or scientific society, he will, of course, recognize the moral and honorable obligation and insist that his claims to the highest geographical distinction be irrefutably established."

This, it must be remembered, was written on a day when subscriptions for the ornamental civic arch that was to greet the returning Doctor were being collected. Shining through Mr. Bridgman's scientific distrust of Dr. Cook's claims was his enthusiastic faith in Lieut. Peary, from whom he was daily awaiting the glad tidings that were destined to be not much longer delayed.

The word of caution was written on Sept. 2, 1909. Mr. Bridgman went away over the Labor Day holiday that followed. So did many persons of importance in the big press associations. That will perhaps explain the guarded fashion in which the actual bulletin of Peary's discovery was received. Because of the furore over Cook it seemed to be regarded as a confusing complication.

For some reason not at all connected with the wishes of the staff, the Standard Union went to press on the 6th just as though it had not been Labor Day. The main editions were off the presses when a cablegram from Newfoundland was discovered on the desk of the absent Mr. Bridgman. It read, cryptically:

"Bridgman, Standard Union, Brooklyn.



"Sun. Roosevelt Safe.

"PEARY."

Seemingly meaningless, it meant everything in the world. Had it read "moon," it would have been a confession that Peary had failed. But "sun"—that meant victory. The office decoded the dispatch, put the story on the street and notified the associations. They required to be informed just what "sun" meant. They were told that it meant Peary "had nailed the Stars and Stripes to the Pole." Accordingly the news went out that Peary, in a very un-Peary-like way, had written that bombastic wire.

How Mr. Bridgman hurried back to Brooklyn, established connection with Lieut. Peary and obtained from him the native's assurance that Dr. Cook "had never gone out of sight of land" in the Arctic belongs to history. It was surely not H. L. B.'s fault that Dr. Cook received the freedom of the City of New

(Continued on page 28)

Dr. Bridgman's Desk Was a Vortex of World Information.

Cadets of the Merchant Marine Were Honor Guard as S.S. Newport Bore Their Fellow Sailor Home

OLD RUTGERS CAMPUS SCENE OF NEW JERSEY PRESS INSTITUTE

100 EDITORS ATTEND THIRD ANNUAL NEW JERSEY PRESS INSTITUTE

Group Backs Plan for Journalism Chair at Rutgers—A. Woollcott, Louis Wiley, John C. Oswald Among Speakers—Contest Prizes Awarded

A CHAIR or department of journalism is likely to be established at Rutgers University, and the New Jersey College for Women at New Brunswick, N. J., in the near future as the result of action taken at the third annual institute of the New Jersey Press Association held in that city last Monday and Tuesday.

President R. E. Lent of the Passaic Daily News, following the address of welcome at the opening session by Dr. Walter T. Marvin, acting president of Rutgers who declared the university is becoming more and more a training school of journalism, appointed a committee consisting of John W. Clift of the Summit Herald, a member of the legislature; W. B. R. Mason of the Bound Brook Chronicle and William H. Van Wart of the Caldwell Progress, to confer with Dr. Marvin for the purpose of getting the attitude of the administration. This committee reported on Tuesday that Dr. Marvin welcomed the idea and suggested the establishment of such a department in the two local colleges upon a part-time basis at an expense of $2.000 a year.

The two-day session was attended by nearly 100 representatives of the New Jersey newspapers. On the opening day M. V. Atwood of the Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch discussed the editorial page of the country weekly holding that an editorial page in such newspapers is desirable and that continuity and make-up of a distinctive character is important.

Allen Sinclair Will, associate professor of journalism in Columbia University, in his address on "Recent Criticisms of Professional Journalism," said these criticisms of late chiefly had to do with the consolidation of newspapers in New York City and elsewhere. In reply he declared there never were so many good opportunities in newspaper life as now; the pay of newspaper workers had advanced more rapidly in the last ten years than ever before and is still advancing. One way to improve the standard of pay he said is to raise the average grade of the men who work in editorial rooms.

John C. Oswald, editor of the American Printer, in presenting the matter of "How Can We Improve the Quality of Published News" told the newspapermen to print the news—all of it—but be absolutely independent in presentation.

At the Monday afternoon session Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the New York Sun discussed "The Stage and the Newspaper."

Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times declared newspapers could best serve as champions of freedom by holding fast to the truth in discussing "The Newspaper as a Public Trust." No newspaper, so far as he knew, had editorially defended the Klan and the record of the American press in this issue was a noble one.

At this session the announcement was made of the winners of ribbons among the exhibit of 261 newspapers. H. Frank Smith of EDITOR & PUBLISHER and M. V. Atwood of the Utica (N. Y.) Observer made the awards as follows:

Best front page, weeklies, first, Caldwell Progress; second, South Orange Record; third, Woodbridge Independent. Honorable mention, Metuchen Record.

Best editorial page, weeklies, first, Freehold Transcript; second, Hunterdon County Democrat; third, Interboro News of Teaneck.

Best department of country correspondence, weeklies, first, Cape May Times; second, Bergen Record; third, High Bridge Gazette.

Best conservative front page dailies, first, Atlantic City Press; second, Newark Evening News; third, Passaic Daily News.

Best heavily displayed front page, dailies, first, Newark Ledger. Second and third ribbons were not awarded owing to the fact there were only four entries in the class and the judges held that they were not representative of the best work that is being done in heavily displayed front pages.

Best editorial page, dailies, first, Trenton Sunday Times-Advertiser; second, Newark Evening News; third, Newark Star-Eagle.

Best page or department of agricultural news, dailies and weeklies, first, Woodstown Monitor Register; second, Trenton Evening Times; third, Lakewood Times and Journal.

At the banquet Monday evening, Mayor William W. Campbell of Schenectady, N. Y., the youngest mayor in that state, and a former editor, said the newspaper "can best co-operate with public officials by acting as their guide, philosopher and friend."

Merle Thorpe of the Nation's Business, spoke of the increase of from 25 to 300 per cent in the publication of financial and business news in the newspapers and of the aid thus being given in solving the problems of this economic age. Prof. Bristow Adams of Cornell University compared the French newspapers with those of this country.

Basil L. Smith of Philadelphia gave an analytical discussion of the opportunities of classified advertising at the Tuesday morning session. On "The Fundamentals of Advertising" George French of Montclair, one of the founders of the New York Advertising Club said in advertising the personal touch is of paramount importance and that it is the personal touch as well which makes newspapers go.

The Tuesday afternoon session was devoted to round table discussions. The first had to do with the editorial page, its make up and contents. Miss Mable Brown of the Matawan Journal thought it should be attractive and the editorials deal with community matters. Frederick Crane of the Elizabeth Journal advocated the use of features and that some advertisements be carried on this page. John Borg of Hackensack held two divisions might be made on the editorial page, the views of the owners under a heading, "This is our column," and of the readers under "This is yours."

"Personnel Organization" was discussed by William R. Jones of the Bergenfield Saturday Review who maintained that personnel depends almost entirely on personality. "Circulation Building" gave the opportunity for Eugene Farrel of the Newark Evening News to declare that he opposed circulation contests. Edmund H. Carpenter of the Gloucester County Democrat said newspapers can best aid advertisers by writing their advertisements and the consensus of opinion as expressed was that advertising contracts for local advertisers were unnecessary.

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent, live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

HE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles San Francisco

BELGO 1925 PRICE $70

Quebec Mill Cut $2 Per Ton from Newsprint Rate

New impetus to the gradual decline in newsprint prices, which has been underway now since July, seems probable with the announcement this week that the Belgo Paper Company has reduced its quotation $3 a ton for 1925, making the new $70 per ton f. o. b. mill.

Belgo is one of the largest newsprint mills in the Province of Quebec. It was one of the Canadian concerns that lopped off $2 a ton from a $75 figure in early July.

This latest cut announced by the Quebec mill, places its price on a par with that quoted by the Great Northern Paper Company.

The International Paper Company continues to sell newsprint at $73 a ton, representing a $2 cut from the first of the year figure.

T. C. Wignall Returns to London

Trevor C. Wignall, boxing expert of the London Daily Mail, who arrived in the U. S. at the same time as the Prince of Wales, covering the latter's trip to this country, returned home this week. He also covered the Wills-Firpo fight.

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 40,000 Average
Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Tribune Used Fifteen Million Pounds of Paper in August, 1924

A million dollar log pile of pulp wood at The Chicago Tribune's paper mill.

THE swift growth of The Chicago Tribune during the past three years is vividly reflected in its consumption of newsprint.

Paper Used by The Chicago Tribune During August of Each Year

	Pounds
1922 - - -	11,571,661
1923 - - -	12,648,875
1924 - - -	15,165,859

The shrewd advertiser contracts for space in the medium that is steadily advancing — gathering in new buyers for his merchandise — strengthening its prestige with readers.

Because Tribune rates are so low in proportion to circulation — and because Tribune readers are so well able to buy and so responsive — The Chicago Tribune prints far more millines* of advertising than any other publication on earth.

*One milline represents one agate line circulated one million times or one thousand agate lines circulated one thousand times or one hundred thousand agate lines circulated ten times, etc.

If lineage is multiplied by the circulation and six places are pointed off, we have the volume of advertising in millines—a unit of measurement invented by Benjamin Jefferson to serve a purpose in the advertising field similar to tons, gallons, calories, in others.

Rate per milline is determined by dividing the circulation into the rate per agate line and multiplying by one-million. It is preferable to the old familiar rate per line per thousand because it is easier to say and the milline rate is in dollars and cents instead of in small fractions of a cent.

The Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

Written exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By Henry Edward Warner

TO MY OWN

I like the New York Times;
It is a daisy sheet.
For downright forthright principle
It's mighty hard to beat.
I like the Herald, too,
And I can stand the gaff
Of those who think me fast because I like the Telegraph.

I love the Baltimore Sun!
It's my ambition's home—
A place my heart can anchor to
And never care to roam.
And there's the Picayune,
Down where the Creoles sing—
And where Frank Stanton swings his pen
Songs of the Southland ring.

I like the Boston Globe,
The Chattanooga Times.
The Times-Dispatch of Richmond, where
They used to print my rimes.
The Buffalo Express
I read with pleasure; yes,
I like the News and Courier
And San Antonio Express.

I like that Detroit News,
I like the Denver Post
But of all papers printed, folks,
The one I like the most
You'd never find on file
On any highbrowed shelf—
The finest paper ever pressed
Was one I owned myself!

It was a little thing—
And I was just a kid;
But everybody read it through—
At least I know I did!
There on my wall it hangs,
My young ambition's prize—
And there in honor it shall hang
Until affection dies.

I wrote its leads; I wrote
Its news; I set the type;
I worked the hand-press earnestly
When printing-day was ripe.
And I shall never know
The pride that I have known—
Nor ever read a paper like
That midget of my own.

DAILY WINS FIGHT ON PENAL COLONIES

Petit Parisien's Campaign Successful in Closing French Guiana Stations —Albert Londres Vivid Stories Forced Action

By G. LANGLAAN,
(Paris Correspondent EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

PARIS, Sept. 19.—The simple announcement that "for reasons of economy" the French government has decided to suppress the penal stations of French Guiana marks the triumph of the Petit Parisien's special correspondent, Albert Londres, who by a series of remarkable articles on the penal stations rapidly brought about what politicians had not been able in decades to achieve.

Albert Londres was sent by his paper to report on these stations of France overseas. He wrote a series of articles depicting a terrible system which, far from central control, had degenerated into an inferno where minor jailers had lost all feeling and convicts had ceased to be human beings. Every word of the articles bore the stamp of truth, and not one statement was challenged. All France was horrified at the revelations, and one of M. Herriot's first acts on taking power was to order the suppression of the penal stations.

Agitation had been active against the system for many years, but it was the articles of Albert Londres that brought about the long-desired result.

His style is vivid and incisive. He described the half-naked wrecks of humanity, toiling without hope beneath a pitiless sun, so many numbers without identity as human beings, as to make them alive and suffering before the eyes of the reader. He reported the terrible tales of convicts taken to French Guiana in ships provided with cages and hot water pipes as a menace to the unruly, of hideous leprosy, of terrible solitary confinement, and of attempts to cross shark-infested seas in order to escape from this living hell.

Albert Londres, by the power of his pen, has broken down the shameful system, has done by the use of a few thousand words more than all the petitioning and protesting of the last 50 years. Newspaper men everywhere will feel proud of the member of their profession who in the course of his duty has been able with such success to serve humanity.

The Average Daily Circulation—

net paid—of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening) for the month of August, 1924, was:

241,570

For the Four Sundays in August the average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN was 176,873.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

"Snappy Stories" Too Snappy

"Snappy Stories," a magazine published in New York, has been found too snappy for Cambridge, Mass. Three newsdealers were fined $100 each, Sept. 24, for selling the September issue. The judge declared that in his opinion it was the intention of the wording of certain stories in the magazine to give a bad impression, and that the meaning intended to be conveyed was improper. Passages from the stories were read in court. Arrests were made at the instigation of the Watch and Ward Society, which has been campaigning against this magazine.

Miners to Advertise Coal

Operators and mine workers of Appanoose County, Iowa, will open a seven months' advertising campaign, Oct. 7. Twenty-two mining companies and nearly 3,500 miners in this division of district No. 13, United Mine Workers of America, are co-operating in the marketing plan. The operators are matching the mine workers' contribution dollar for dollar and it is expected that $49,000 will be raised. Harry E. Keister, Waterloo, is in charge of the campaign.

CHARLES F. MOSHER WEDS

For 18 Years Treasurer Scripps-McRae and Scripps-Howard Properties

Charles F. Mosher and Miss Alma Schwarberg, of Cincinnati, were married on Sept. 25, and on Saturday last sailed on the steamship Majestic for a prolonged tour through Euprope and North Africa. The trip may be continued around the world.

CHARLES F. MOSHER

For 18 years Mr. Mosher has been treasurer of the Scripps-McRae and later Scripps-Howard properties, only retiring a short time ago for a real rest. Before entering the general offices, he was editor of the Cincinnati Post.

Ship Papers Combined

Arrangements have been made to combine the Oceanic edition of the Chicago Tribune and the Ocean Times, the new publication to be known as the Chicago Tribune-Ocean Times. The paper will be published on the passenger ships of the International Merchant Marine and the Royal Mail Steamship Line, as well as on boats of the United States Shipping Board, where the present Oceanic edition of the Tribune circulates.

Cincinnati, The Ideal "Test City"

By common consent publishers of national magazines have accepted Cincinnati as the ideal city for the "check-up" on circulations. This is because Cincinnati is large enough to be representative of the country as a whole, yet not too large for detailed analysis. The population closely parallels that of the United States in rate of increase and is above the average in quality, intelligence, stability and economic well-being. The native born whites constitute 81% of the population, 98% of which is literate.

In addition to the above considerations, advertisers are more and more recognizing the purely merchandising advantages that make Cincinnati the most economical as well as the most profitable city in which to "test out" their advertising and merchandising campaigns.

Economical, because of the 141,000 families within the "local circulation area" of the Cincinnati newspapers, eighty per cent, or practically the entire native, white, literate population, are reached at minimum cost by one daily paper—The Times-Star.

Profitable, because the Times-Star is virtually the buyers' guide for this entire market. A test campaign in the Times-Star not only is the quickest and the most effective means of securing distribution in the twelve Ohio and Kentucky cities that comprise the metropolitan area of Cincinnati, but it furnishes an absolute test of the responsiveness of the consuming public to your advertising appeal.

After the test campaign, with dealers lined up and consumer acceptance established, a modest advertising appropriation in the Times-Star quickly liquidates the introductory investment and converts consumer acceptance into a buying habit.

Practically every national advertiser who is using newspapers in Cincinnati has the Times-Star on his schedule. More than 160 national advertisers use the Times-Star exclusively in this field.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

The NEW YORK TRIBUNE, Inc., announces with regret the resignation of Mr. William H. Johnson as manager of The New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.

¶ Mr. Johnson has been with the New York Tribune for six years and through his efforts the syndicate has achieved the commanding position it now occupies.

¶ On and after January 1st, 1925, Mr. Johnson will be the head of a new syndicate which will be known as Features, Inc., in which he will have a substantial interest.

¶ We extend to Mr. Johnson our sincere wishes for the greatest possible success in his new undertaking.

¶ Mr. Harry Staton, who has been connected with the Tribune Syndicate for five years, has been appointed to the position of manager of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

EDWARD R. MAHONEY—"An exceptional man"

WHEN a man persistently sticks to the telephone and the desk of a city editor when he might otherwise be enjoying the much more lucrative returns of a law practice, the probability is that he is an exceptional man. And that is the word which describes Edward R. Mahoney, city editor of the Chicago Evening American.

Edward R. Mahoney has been "chief" of the Chicago Evening American city room for only the past four years, but in that comparatively short time his colleagues have come to regard him as perhaps the ablest city editor in the city. The managing editor of another Chicago daily recently made the statement that "Mahoney is the best city editor in Chicago."

All of his newspaper experience is confined to the cities of Milwaukee and Chicago. His first newspaper work as a reporter was done in Milwaukee, as a member of the Milwaukee Sentinel staff. From the Sentinel, Mahoney turned to the Milwaukee Journal and later he attached himself to the Milwaukee News.

After some time on the news, "Ed" came to Chicago and established his first connection with the Hearst newspapers. His first position in Chicago was that of night city editor for the Chicago Examiner.

The young editor continued to climb, then, and in a short time he left the Examiner and became assistant city editor of the since departed Chicago Inter-Ocean. Finally, Mahoney made the grade, and his services were soon lost to the Inter-Ocean while the Chicago Daily Journal gained him as its city editor.

"Ed" got out of the newspaper game after that—but only for a short while. When he left the Journal he branched off into a different field of public service, becoming chief of the efficiency bureau of the Cook County Civil Service Commission. Following that, Mahoney was comptroller of the Sanitary District of Chicago. But he soon found himself back in the newspaper game as city editor of the Chicago Evening American, where he has been since.

His numerous years of experience on Chicago streets and his years as a public official have given him a vast acquaintance with people and a seeming unbounded knowledge of information sources. He is a veritable storehouse of facts, they say. He has the reputation in Chicago newspaper circles for "getting" the story into his paper—with consequent distress to the equanimity of rival city editors.

When asked to explain this, recently, Mahoney said he believed in the maxim of the old southern Civil War general, who said he won battles by "gettin' theah fustest with the greatest fo'ce of men." Perhaps a little more light may be directed upon the situation when it is explained that "Ed" Mahoney is the city editor who originated the phrase "Can the T in Can't" and has the city room of the American placarded with that line.

Mahoney has two principally outstanding qualities—his intense enthusiasm and his fairness and squareness to all with whom he comes in contact. Especially in regard to his staff does he display his just treatment, and as a consequence, his men work hard for him. They have the consciousness that he is "for" them regardless of what might occur and they realize he will stick by them.

Mahoney is a comparatively recent graduate of a local law school—and in keeping with his exceptional characteristic of doing things a little better than the next man, he was an honor student. He is now a member of the Illinois Bar and a member of the Chicago Lawyers' Association. Every so often, he says, he makes up his mind definitely to quit the newspaper game and go into law. But the call of a good story is too great for him to forego his editorial desk, and he stays on.

"Will you marry me, my pretty maid?"

"How many cylinders has your automobile, sir?" she said.—Memphis News Scimitar.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia
and GROWING!

BRISBANE AND THE PRINCE OF WALES

"HE is a very nice boy, not much interested in world politics," said Arthur Brisbane about the Prince of Wales, speaking last week at a Rotary luncheon in New York.

Brisbane declared he had met Edward P. during his recent visit to Syosset, L. I., and that he had chatted with him for 20 minutes.

Discussing the development of the newspaper, Mr. Brisbane said:

"There are two men with the Hearst organization who today get a salary equal to the salary of the President of the United States with the combined salaries of the Cabinet members added and $100,000 more a year thrown in."

Philadelphia Veteran Dies

Harry P. Wilson, 67, night city editor of the Philadelphia Record, died suddenly in Philadelphia, Sept. 26. He had been a member of the Record's editorial staff for the last 31 years. Born in Baltimore, he became a newspaper man at an early age, for many years being associated with Baltimore newspapers. Later he joined the staff of the Associated Press, covering the wedding of President Cleveland and the President's honeymoon at Deer Park. He came to Philadelphia in 1899 and joined the Philadelphia Times, representing that newspaper at the scene of the Johnstown flood. He went to the Record in 1893.

San Antonio Raising Ad Fund

Planning to make this year's publicity campaign international instead of only national in scope, the publicity committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce has launched a campaign to raise $60,000 to advertise San Antonio as a winter resort. The committee is headed by Gerald Melliff, chairman. Last year San Antonio carried out a $50,000 advertising campaign, exploiting the city in representative newspapers and periodicals throughout the country. This season it is expected to extend the advertising to publications in several foreign countries.

Ads Lure Home-Seekers Westward

As a result of advertising campaigns by western railways the outlook for land settlement in the northwest is the best in seven years, according to A. B. Smith, passenger traffic manager of the Northern Pacific railway. As proof Mr. Smith pointed out that on his arrival recently in Spokane from the east a canvass of the train on which he travelled showed there were 22 homeseekers on it who were answering the call of the advertisements of western railways.

Pennsylvania Papers Merge

Announcement has been made that the Sharon (Pa.) Telegraph has purchased the Farrell (Pa.) News and the two papers have been merged. B. F. Parry and others of the staff of the News will be assigned with the new organization. The News-Telegraph will maintain offices in Farrell at the former quarters of the Farrell News.

Who's Who in the CONSOLIDATED PRESS

ROBERT B. McCLEAN

ROBERT B. McCLEAN, General Manager of the Consolidated Press Association, typifies the idea behind the building of the C. P. A. personnel. Through actual work in every department of the hard school of newspaper making, he is qualified eminently to direct a "know how" organization producing service for discriminating publishers.

Starting on a country weekly and later trained in a daily newspaper shop, Mr. McClean devoted his first years to the editorial side and became managing editor of the Harrisburg Telegraph. Then he turned his attention to business, advertising and circulation, serving as circulation manager in Harrisburg and Pittsburgh. As circulation manager, mechanical superintendent and, finally, as business manager of the New York Evening Post, he rounded out a remarkable record of experience and achievement.

With such a background, Robert B. McClean knows first hand the problems and requirements of the modern newspaper.

The Consolidated Press Association
Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

383,005

Net paid circulation of The New York Times, average daily and Sunday, as reported to the Post Office department for the six months ending September 30, 1924.

October 1, 1924 . .	383,005
October 1, 1923 . .	362,361
Gain	20,644

The growing circulation of The New York Times represents a greater volume of high quality than any other newspaper in the world.

Average Daily and Sunday Circulation for 29 Years
October	1896	21,516
"	1897	22,456
"	1898	25,726
"	1899	76,260
"	1900	82,106
"	1901	102,472
"	1902	105,416
"	1903	106,386
"	1904	118,786
"	1905	120,710
"	1906	131,140
"	1907	143,460
"	1908	172,880
"	1909	184,317
"	1910	191,981
"	1911	197,375
"	1912	*209,751
"	1913	*230,360
"	1914	*259,673
"	1915	*318,274
"	1916	*340,904
"	1917	*357,225
"	1918	*368,492
"	1919	*362,971
"	1920	*342,553
"	1921	*352,528
"	1922	*356,671
"	1923	*362,361
"	1924	*383,005

Average net paid daily and Sunday circulation reported to the Post Office Department for six months immediately preceding October 1, in accordance with Act of Congress, August 24, 1912.*

TWO A. P. PAPERS FINED FOR RADIOING NEWS

Board of Directors Takes Action at New York Meeting but Withholds Names—Entire Board Attends

That Associated Press intends to adhere strictly to its policy of prohibiting radio broadcasting of A. P. news, was demonstrated at the meeting of the board of directors held at A. P. headquarters in New York this week, when two member newspapers were fined for violation of this rule.

Frederick Roy Martin, general manager, when questioned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, declined to divulge the names of the newspapers.

An important executive session was in progress. For the first time in several years all board members were present.

It had been rumored that radio was to be one of the chief topics of discussion. As published elsewhere in this paper, several broadcasting stations will put election returns on the air this year. Mr. Martin denied this subject was mentioned. He said, however, he had heard a rumor that several A. P. member newspapers who own broadcasting stations, had corresponded with a view to making a joint request to be allowed to broadcast A. P. election returns. This request, however, had not been made, he stated.

Those attending included: Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star, president; E. H. Butler, Buffalo News, vice-president; C. P. J. Mooney, Memphis Commercial Appeal, second vice-president; Victor F. Lawson, Chicago Daily News; W. H. Cowles, Spokane Spokesman-Review; Frank P. MacLennan, Topeka State Journal; E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; Frederick I. Thompson, Birmingham Age-Herald; J. R. Knowland, Oakland (Cal.) Tribune; Major Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Adolph S. Ochs, New York Times; Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution; Charles Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; E. H. Baker, Cleveland Plain Dealer; H. V. Jones, Minneapolis Journal; Benjamin H. Anthony, New Bedford Standard; Stuart H. Perry, Adrian Telegram.

PENN. PRESS MEETING

Three Associations Holding Sessions at Stroudsburg

Members of three Pennsylvania press groups, the State Editorial Association, the State Dailies Association and the State Weekly Association, are holding meetings this week at Stroudsburg. The convention opened Friday, Oct. 3, and will adjourn Sunday, Oct. 5.

Friday afternoon sessions were to be devoted to Daily and Weekly meetings, followed by an evening dance and buffet lunch.

Saturday morning an address by Melville E. Stone, counsellor for the Associated Press, was scheduled to speak. Other speakers listed were George J. Campbell, Leonard Ormerod and George S. Dougherty. In the afternoon joint legislative sessions are scheduled.

Sunday will be given over to rest, church and amusements.

Mrs. Sophie McCormick Dies

Mrs. Sophie McCormick, 80, one of the proprietors of the Alexandria (La.) Daily Town Talk, is dead. She was the widow of the late E. H. McCormick, first editor and founder of that newspaper.

Publisher's Will Upheld

The will of Delavan Smith, late publisher of the Indianapolis News, was ordered upheld by Judge C. C. Edwards at jury trial in Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 1. Sixteen cousins had contested the document.

Obituary

WINFIELD SCOTT PARR, 74, for 26 years market editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, died at his home in a suburb of Cleveland, Sept. 25.

A. T. FREED, 89, former managing editor of Hamilton (Ont.) Spectator, died on Sept. 27.

WILLIAM S. GALVIN, 78, founder and for 54 years editor of the Wilmington (O.) Greene County Journal is dead at his home in Wilmington, O. He was the father of L. S. Galvin, publisher of the Lima (O.) News and W. J. Galvin, publisher of the Wilmington News Journal, and other papers.

W. C. HENDERSON, 57, for 33 years connected with the circulation department of the Pittsburgh Dispatch and for several years manager of that department died at his home in Crafton, Pa., Sept. 23.

LUTHER C. BATEMAN, for 25 years agricultural editor of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, died recently at his home in that city.

EDWARD E. MCDONALD, 56, a photo-engraver in the art department of the Boston Globe, died recently.

ALLAN DAWSON, 45, for many years a writer on the New York Times, and previous to that a Washington newspaper man, died Sept. 26, at his home in Saugus, Mass.

LEWELLYN L. KEINE, 56, former city editor of the Topeka (Kan.) Capital and the Topeka State Journal, died recently.

ROBERT R. HALDEMAN, 67, for many years connected with the circulation department of the Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph, died suddenly in Carlisle, Pa.

WILLIAM G. BLAIR, 50, president and manager of the Blair Paper Company, Peoria, Ill., died Sept. 21.

ALVA MILTON KERR, former editor of the Chicago Weekly Ledger, died Sept. 24 in Hollywood, Cal.

H. C. FREEMAN, editor and owner, Bridgeport (Wash.) Republican, was killed in an automobile accident near his home, Aug. 29.

FLASHES

As we understand it, Candidate William Allen White doesn't want it to be Klansas.—F. P. A. in the Conning Tower, New York World.

The greatest need of the age is a motor car that each member of the family can use at one and the same time without interfering with the others.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Carrying a live goat on a flivver in order to insure a supply of fresh milk is an innovation of the touring motorist. The one grave risk is that during the night the goat might eat the flivver.—New York Herald Tribune.

The modern girl is one who has a shotgun in her hope chest.—New York American.

A German scientist predicts that man may yet live to be 1,000 years old. Let us hope that in such event life will be worth the living.—Boston Transcript.

If you can't dance, dance anyway. You can say what you're doing is the latest step.—Harrisburg Patriot.

Coal is plentiful this year. The reason for the increased cost is that the dealers have to handle so much of it.—J. J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

The old grouch two doors from us came home lit up last night and parked himself at the front door two hours, waiting for the red hall light to turn green.—Dallas News.

What, if anything, ever became of William J. Burns?—Detroit News.

Any Russian citizen may change his name as often as he likes by merely notifying a registrar. But we can't see any relief for the proofreaders in that privilege.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

The average family budget is nothing more or less than a scrapbook.—New York American.

The report that England is building 500 new battleships was erroneous. It should have read bottleships.—James J. Montague in New York Herald-Tribune.

The reason bachelors stay at home so much is because there is nobody to say they must.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

The sun never sets on British soil and apparently it never rises on British athletics.—H. I. Phillips in New York Sun.

There is always suspicion that there is considerable chaff in a straw vote.—Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this, and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921.

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

Give Your Advertisers
Striking Effects with the Ludlow

INNUMERABLE unique and striking effects are possible with the Ludlow System of all-slug composition that would be impossible if you had to depend solely upon single types or keyboard machines.

For example: An advertiser plans a 79-cent sale and asks you to set a half or full-page ad requiring much big display type and a large number of bold "79-cent" figures. You can do it only with the Ludlow. Or an advertiser may want to get a message over to the public in a strong, unique way and asks to have it all set in 42 or 48 point Roman or italic display. You can do it in excellent fashion, but only with the Ludlow. Another advertiser, seeking out-of-the-ordinary display effects, may ask you to set a complete border in large letters, figures or dollar signs. Again, it can be done, but only with the Ludlow.

The best and most profitable uses of the Ludlow, however, are in producing the regular day to day run-of-the-hook display composition in always new, clean-cut faces in whatever size is needed from 6 to 60 point, including bold and extended.

Read what the Palo Alto (California) Times says:

"The Ludlow for display, and the keyboard machines for text gives us a very satisfactory all-slug, non-distribution system. Much of our advertising runs to large price figures, creating a situation difficult to meet under the system of single type composition, even apart from repeated sorts purchases and the storage of such sorts. The range and character of advertising that we now can accept, without objectionable 'extra charge,' has greatly increased."

Ask us, on your business letterhead, for your copy of "The Ludlow of To-day." It's worth sending for, and this places you under no obligations.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue
San Francisco Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

America's Greatest Single Market

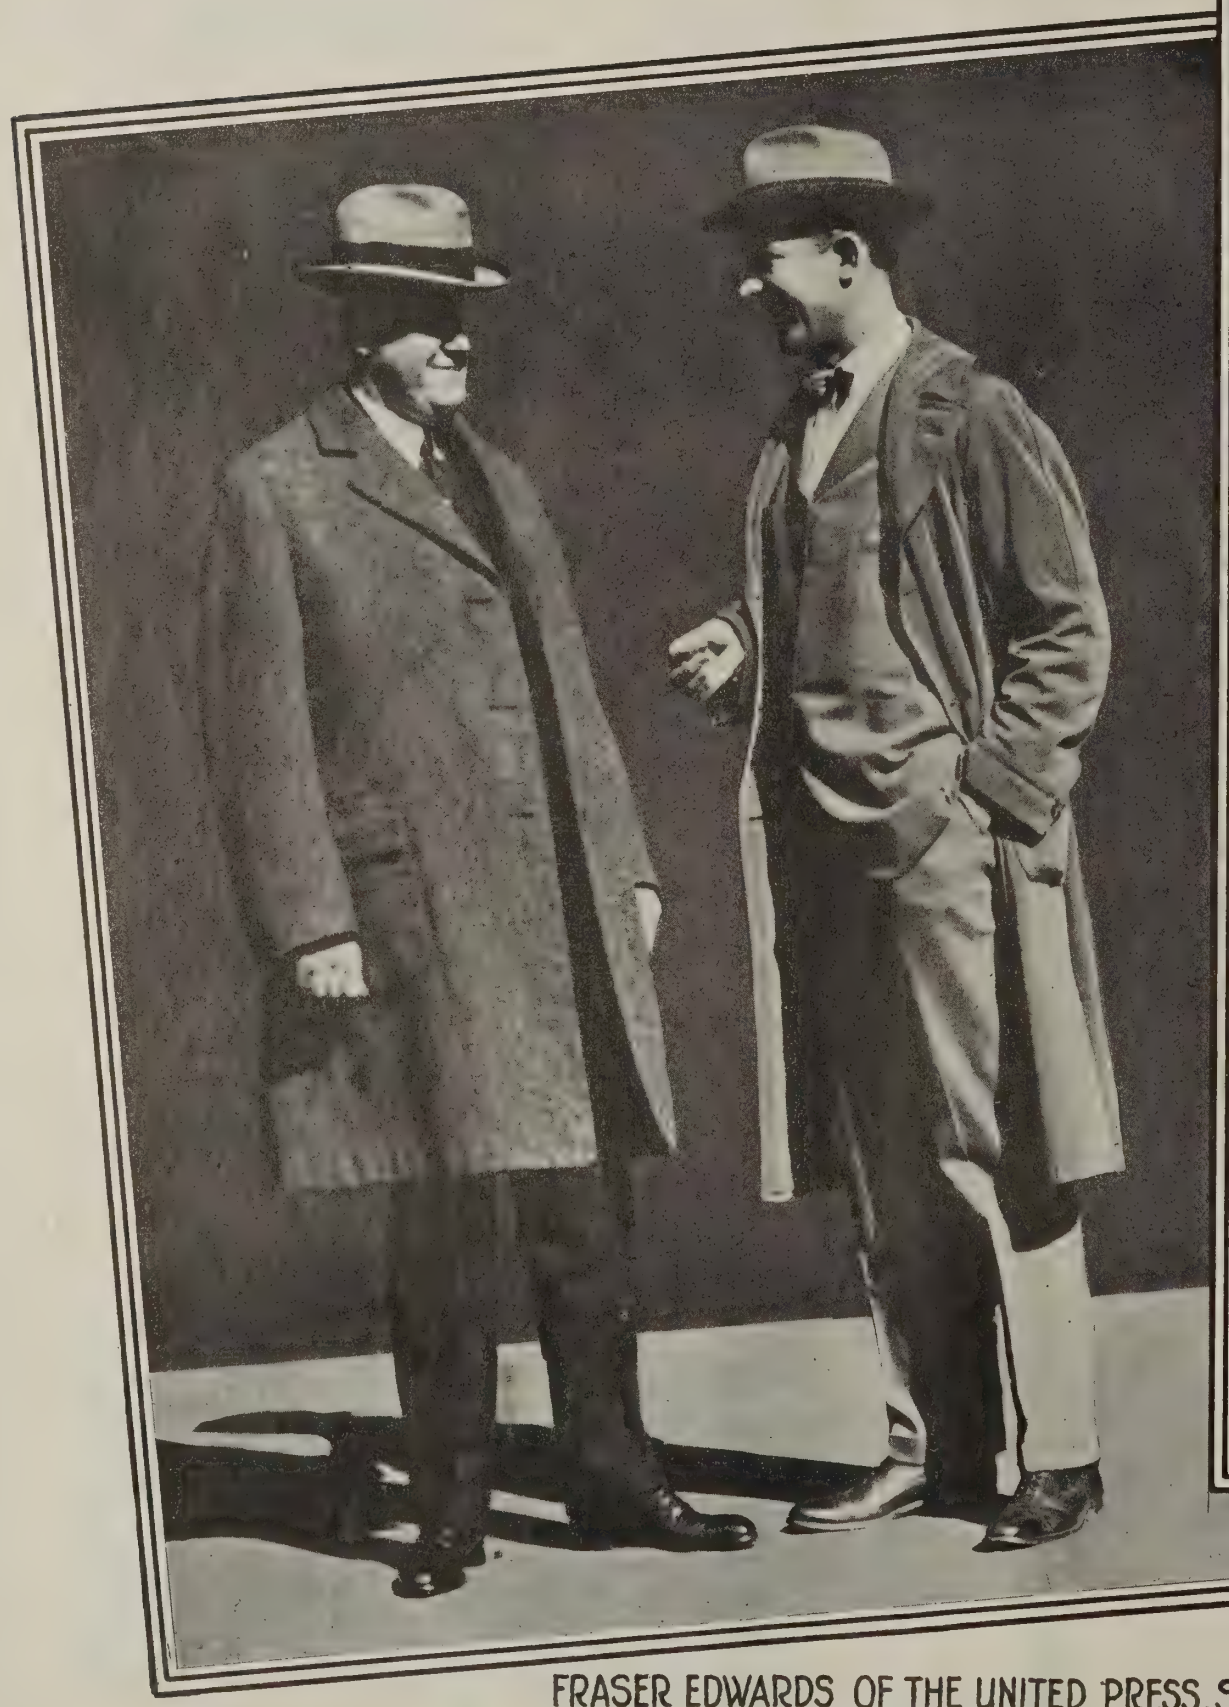
The Empire State

Supreme, Not Alone in Business and Commerce, But As a Producer From the Soil

New York State ranks fifth agriculturally with a total value of nearly a half billion dollars of which $270,000,000 stands for crops and nearly $200,000,000 for livestock.

In crops alone New York State stands fourth and in livestock it ranks seventh.

It is estimated that there are approximately a million and a half dairy cows in the state which are valued at over $123,000,000 with the dairy revenue around $200,000,000 yearly.



A territory that produces, can consume equally well.

Use this list of daily newspapers to cover this territory for you. They can sell your merchandise. Results count. These papers get results for their advertisers.

		Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News	(E)	18,746	.08	.08
Albany Knickerbocker Press	(M)	30,537	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press	(S)	52,354	.13	.13
†††Auburn Citizen	(E)	6,429	.04	.035
Batavia Daily News	(E)	8,728	.04	.04
Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(E)	66,079	.22	.22
Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(S)	76,284	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier and Enquirer	(M&E)	73,058	.18	.18
Buffalo Courier	(S)	118,603	.25	.22
Buffalo Evening News	(E)	123,852	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times	(E)	100,236	.18	.18
Buffalo Sunday Times	(S)	100,005	.18	.18
Buffalo Express	(M)	48,019	.14	.12
Buffalo Express	(S)	55,407	.18	.14
†††Corning Evening Leader	(E)	8,307	.04	.04
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser	(E&M)	32,915	.11	.11
Geneva Daily Times	(E)	5,537	.04	.04
Glens Falls Post-Star	(M)	9,065	.035	.035
Gloversville Leader Republican	(E)	6,877	.035	.035
Gloversville Morning Herald	(M)	5,927	.03	.03
Ithaca Journal-News	(E)	7,308	.04	.04
Jamestown Morning Post	(M)	10,515	.04	.035
Middletown Times-Press	(E)	6,434	.03	.03
Mount Vernon Daily Argus	(E)	9,490	.05	.05
†††Newburgh Daily News	(E)	11,564	.05	.05
New Rochelle Standard-Star	(E)	7,000	.04	.04
†††The Sun, New York	(E)	260,026	.60	.54
††New York Times	(M)	352,100	.70	.686
††New York Times	(S)	569,623	.90	.832
New York Herald-Tribune	(M)	276,340	.594	.576
New York Herald-Tribune	(S)	332,921	.6435	.624
†††New York World	(M)	360,908	.595	.58
†††New York World	(S)	575,672	.595	.58
†††New York Evening World	(E)	271,114	.595	.58
†††Niagara Falls Gazette	(E)	17,582	.055	.055
Port Chester Item	(E)	4,426	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise	(E)	12,098	.05	.05
Rochester Times-Union	(E)	66,574	.20	.18
†††Syracuse Journal	(E)	42,103	.14	.14
Troy Record	(M&E)	23,568	.05	.05

A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

THE CANDIDAT

FRASER EDWARDS OF THE UNITED PRESS, STICKS CLOSE TO JOHN W. DAVIS, DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE.

WILLIAM J. LOSH, WASHI
IN THE WHITE HOUSE GAR

UNI
WORL

S DAY BY DAY

by United Press

MANAGER OF THE UNITED PRESS, WITH PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE.

DALE VAN EVERY OF THE UNITED PRESS INTERVIEWS SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE AT HIS DESK IN WASHINGTON.

ED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS

BLDG. NEW YORK CITY

EDITORIAL

RADIO ADVERTISING

NEXT week at Washington there will occur a conference to discuss radio problems, under the auspices of the Department of Commerce.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER urges the conferees to consider "publicity" radio advertising as not only destructive of established advertising principles, but as a menace to the radio industry.

Through long years of conscientious effort publishing interests have erected standards of honor in advertising. Today paid space merits the confidence of the American public. All legitimate media compels the advertiser to label his announcements for what they are—advertising. There is no deception. Artful designs to trap the public into accepting paid publicity of men, institutions or products as "editorial matter" are no longer valid.

The indirect promotion of the present radio advertising, whereby the listener on the air gets the name of an advertised product into his mind by such devious methods as a song title, or the stunt of a vaudeville entertainer acting under the auspices of a biscuit manufacturer, or an orchestra named for the night in honor of a brand of chewing gum, is essentially deceptive. Advertising is flashed into your ear without warning. The selective privileges of the printed page are missing.

The ordinary advertising program is of poor quality. If our own impressions are general to the public, radio entertainment is losing prestige through advertising. We hear our neighbors complaining that the amusement they now get from the ordinary night's use of a radio is in trying to tune in distant stations. Obviously, first-class program material is being turned aside to make way for any old advertising scheme which pays. Apart from the occasional unusual program featured by big news events, the best programs are now being prepared for broadcast sets which do not carry advertising.

There is unlimited nonsense in the notion that broadcasting has not paid the radio industry and that advertising is therefore necessary to its life. Radio, in the broad sense, was practically a useless art until a bright youth employed by one of the big companies forced slower minds to see that if free radio programs were put on the air hundreds of thousands of people would buy receiving sets, costing from $10 to $500 each, with constant investment for maintenance and betterment. From that bright thought radio has come from obscurity to general use. The value of the radio industry in 1923 was estimated at $175,000,000. The present estimate is $350,000,000. It is said that the listening audience is ten or fifteen million people.

Hence, it is to be seen that broadcasting has paid. It has made sudden fortunes for many. But those who benefit from it now seem unwilling to go through with the implied agreement with the purchasing public, that sets would have value because of interesting radio broadcasting. It is proposed to put on to the radio public the cost of broadcasting, through the indirect means of advertising thinly disguised as legitimate program material.

Radio advertising is also regarded by EDITOR & PUBLISHER as destructive because advertising experience teaches that such furtive methods are invariably unprofitable. You may jimmy a brand name into the consciousness of some, but the effort will be transparent and objectionable to many. Such primitive methods have long since passed.

We hope the Washington conference will denounce deceptive radio advertising and that means shall be found to compensate broadcasting concerns, if indeed they are not sufficiently compensated by the stupendous traffic in radio equipment. The English system of license fees, is one method. Another might be to bring dealers into a co-operative movement to contribute a percentage of gross sales to a fund for the support of broadcasting.

There is a legitimate place in the scheme of life for the home radio. Plainly its function is not as an advertising medium.

Like cool water on a fevered brow, like calm after storm, like a placid evening after a torrid day, is the act of turning your mind into the broad and satisfying fields of impersonality.

ROMANS

Chapter VIII—24-25

For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen, is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

MAN OF THE FUTURE

SCHOOLS of journalism opened in many states this week.

Several thousand aspiring youths and maidens are thus seeking passports to the realms of journalism. Each will learn many tricks of the trade, and gain sound and valuable knowledge of the technique of writing, editing, publishing and advertising.

The men and women who are carrying the burdens of journalism today received their training in the school of hard knocks. Many have faith only in that difficult, sometimes brutal, preliminary school. This is mere loyalty to alma mater. Journalism's principles may be established in the mind of the beginner in school, or in the newspaper office. Fortunate is the lad who can make a cross-cut to efficiency meriting profitable employment in journalism by a college course rather than cub grubbing. The right sort of man or woman will come to practical work well grounded in theories and practices which are only hazy phantoms to the average cub.

One sound reason for encouragement of the school of journalism is that it is leading the writing and publishing fraternity toward true professionalism. That status promises to iron out many vexatious problems which now harass newspaper men. It will establish standards of practice and make working conditions more equitable and more secure.

Whatever else schools of journalism may seek to inculcate in the minds of students the important lessons must be taken from the lives of great men. In our present-day impersonal journalism individual character counts for as much as it did in the days of the great masters of the daily pages. Character means ability to discriminate among the elements of life and hold firmly to those which serve good purposes. Great editors and great business men know how to say "no" and take the consequences, including loss. Their passion is to serve. Liberal rewards are in store for characterful men and women in newspaper work.

October 4, 1924 Volume 57, No. 19

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher,
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: Sam Bell, 26 Jackson Place.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout; Special Commissioner, H. Rea Fitch, Hastings House, 10 Norfolk Street, Strand, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulonge-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.

10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

"HIDDEN DEMONSTRATORS"

YOU read an advertisement in your newspaper. It interests you and creates a desire to possess the advertised object.

Visiting a retail store, you ask a clerk to show you the article. The clerk evades your request and brings to your attention a rival product, argues its merit and if possible unloads upon you the clerk's preference, not your own.

Investigation by the American Fair Trade League has revealed that this clerk who has duped you, and also the manufacturer who brought a worthy object to your attention through legitimate advertising, has been subsidized by the manufacturer of the non-advertised substitute. These bribed salespeople are called "hidden demonstrators." It is a commentary upon modern business practice that such bribed clerks abound in large cities, bribes being paid through, and therefore with the knowledge of, the employer. The clerk does not profit. The subsidy is deducted from his pay. The whole imfamous transaction is at your expense.

Edmond A. Whittier, of the League; advises EDITOR & PUBLISHER that a canvass of members of his organization, representing a great variety of industries in almost every state of the Union, shows unanimous condemnation of the practice. Manufacturers who pay such bribes to gain substitute patronage and retailers who yield to such impudent deception, are denounced in terms which befit them. They are of the price-cutting gentry, the breed of merchant who is satisfied to make a life-time enemy for his store if he can make one cheat-sale. To prostitute his clerks, to impose on trusting customers, to play a wild-cat game of business is nothing to him. When his disrepute makes his business unprofitable he merely moves on.

Mr. Whittier points out that the legitimate manufacturer, one who would scorn to bribe his way to the favor of the trade, is subject to a double injury at the hands of the "hidden demonstrator." Not only is his merchandise discriminated against and misrepresented by clerks in the pay of an unscrupulous rival, but often used in unfair price-cutting. Articles pushed by bribed clerks are cheap and inferior. The first-class advertised article is used merely as bait, to create an illusion of a "bargain." "Some times," says Mr. Whittier, "the price-cutting bandits get higher prices for articles pushed by bribed clerks. The genuine article is held up as inferior because its price is lower than the artificial price set for the inferior article for which the hidden demonstrator is pleading. It punctures the pretense that price-cutting renders a service to the public. The consuming public has scarcely an inkling of the wide prevalence of this bribery. The cause of honest advertising should be freed from injury by this parasitic practice."

Every newspaper needs the delicate, comprehending, artful touch of a sensible, home-loving, maternal, sympathetic and sunny woman.

RE-INVESTIGATION

THE following unique editorial appeared in New York World, on Wednesday: "Secretary Mellon having challenged the accuracy of statements made in the World's news columns in regard to the aluminum tariff and aluminum companies in which he is interested, the World has instituted a separate and impartial investigation of the matter. Pending the results of this investigation, Secretary Mellon may rest assured that if his contentions are sustained the World will make an adequate retraction."

We do not recall a similar instance of a newspaper announcing that it would make a separate and impartial investigation of statements which it had published, out of fairness to the person written about, and in response to a challenge.

If the World has "the goods" and is using this editorial merely as a wind-up for a news punch, it is not very poor politics, and if the World sincerely questions its own published statements and has published this notice in blind justice, it is nevertheless playing good journalism.

PERSONAL

OTTO MEYER of the Utica (N. Y.) Daily Press returned to New York from a trip abroad on the George Washington, Sept. 28.

Bernard H. Ritter, publisher of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung arrived in New York, Sept. 28, on the Albert Ballin from a visit in Germany.

Harry Bouck, editor of the Girard (Kan.) Messenger, has been named postmaster of Girard.

Merritt Bond, managing editor of the New York Evening Post, left this week for two weeks' vacation in Bermuda.

S. E. Thomason, business manager Chicago Tribune and president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, is reported ill with appendicitis in a Chicago hospital.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

CLINTON S. BURR, formerly with Rudolph Guenther, Inc., has joined the advertising sales force of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, connected with the New York office as an assistant to F. St. J. Richards.

Edward H. Roemle, formerly advertising manager of the Louisville Post, is now manager of the automobile department of the Denver Post. Don E. Stewart, formerly national advertising manager of the Milwaukee Wisconsin News and Telegram is now with the Denver Post as national advertising manager.'

William E. Buckingham, advertising manager of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, has been transferred to the advertising department of the New York Evening Bulletin. Oscar Nelson has succeeded Mr. Buckingham on the Telegram-News.

G. V. Allen, circulation manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News, has resigned to join the staff of the Oklahoma Publishing Company, Oklahoma City, as promotion manager.

Ted Tedrick, advertising manager of the Joplin (Mo.) Globe, has purchased an interest in the Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune and will become advertising manager of the Tribune.

E. C. Rogers of the advertising department, Cleveland Times and Commercial, is recovering from a recent illness.

Stewart McDonald, advertising manager of the Junction City (Kan.) Daily Union has been made circulation manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News and Herald.

F. H. Vandegraft has joined the staff of the Pittsburg (Kan.) Sun as business manager.

Fred A. Hamlin, former advertising manager of the Toledo News Bee and advertising and business manager of the South Bend (Ind.) News-Times, has been made advertising manager of the Pittsburg (Kan.) Headlight.

A. H. Noelke, Omaha, has arrived in Galesburg, Ill., to take charge of the Community Newspapers, as general manager. The organization publishes a string of weeklies through Illinois until recently known as the Haggenjos papers.

R. F. E. Colley has left the advertising staff of the Fargo (N. D.) Forum and Tribune to become assistant director of club organization and education of the A. A. C. W. in New York.

L. H. Whiteside, formerly advertising manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) Gazette is now advertising manager of the Springfield (Mo.) Leader.

Matthew C. Young, for 16 years manager of The Household Guest and Better Farming, the F. L. Chapman Publications of Chicago, has resigned to join the Mutual Life Organization of Chicago.

J. V. Hollett, circulation manager of the Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram has resigned to become circulation manager of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune.

George F. Sisson, has been named general manager of the Durham (N. C.) Sun, succeeding Oscar G. Barker, resigned.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

WILLIAM PRESTON BEAZELL, assistant managing editor of the New York World, this week returned from a month's vacation spent at Bar Harbor, Me.

Olin W. Kennedy, managing editor and assistant to the publisher of the Miami (Fla.) Morning Herald, spent the first of the week in New York completing his staff for the winter.

I. J. Kern, for 25 years a member of the editorial staff of the Astoria (Ore.) Budget, has resigned to enter the automobile business.

Richard Coon, formerly publisher of the Peckskill (N. Y.) Evening Star, has been appointed managing editor of the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Evening Star.

Jack Young has resigned as city editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, and is succeeded by M. R. Dunnagan, who returns to the paper after an absence of about three years.

John R. Hess, Jr., formerly re-write man, is now sporting editor of the Providence Evening Bulletin.

W. J. Hayner of the Sutherlin (Ore.) Sun is recovering from an operation.

L. L. Perrin, city editor of the St. Paul Dispatch, is on vacation.

Herbert E. Slayton is now head of the copy desk, Providence (R. I.) Bulletin.

John L. Levine, reporter on the Pawtucket staff of the Providence Journal, has resigned to study optometry in Boston.

David Patten, political writer, has been made city editor of the Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin.

George B. Huff, for more than 40 years in the newspaper business in Steubenville, O., has resigned as city and telegraph editor of the Steubenville Herald-Star to enter the insurance business.

O. M. Thomason, editor of the Benson (Minn.) Swift County News has been appointed manager of the national Non-partisan League.

J. E. Clark is now managing editor of the Durham (N. C.) Morning Herald.

Elaine Dean Pinnis has joined the reportorial staff of the Cleveland Press.

Mabel Wombough, part owner of the Hornell (N. Y.) Evening Tribune-Times has been appointed managing editor to succeed C. W. Newman, who has resigned.

Dudley Nichols, special writer, has resigned from the staff of the New York Evening Post to enter New York University.

Franklin C. Ellis, son of Dr. William T. Ellis, has joined the staff of the New York Evening Post as reporter. He was formerly on the staff of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

Paul Bowen, telegraph editor, and Joe Berdell, assistant city editor of the Buffalo Times, have resigned.

Dave Peogeot has joined the city staff of the Buffalo Evening News.

George Cooke, recently with the Saginaw Evening Star, now suspended, has joined the city staff of the Jackson Citizen Patriot.

John G. Dickson, managing editor of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily Record, has resigned. T. J. Revelle succeeds him.

W. F. Nee, reporter, formerly of the Lynchburg (Va.) Daily Advance, is now with the Westfield (N. J.) Leader.

Jeff D. Dickerson, reporter and desk man on the Wichita (Kans.) Beacon for the past 8 years, has resigned to make the race for Probate judge of Sedgwick county, Kan.

Ernest B. Hunter, head of the copy desk, Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News has resigned to become news editor of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel. James F. Reynolds succeeds Hunter on the News.

J. H. Monty, formerly sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News, is now with the Asheville Citizen, handling telegraph copy.

Edward F. Smith, formerly of the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot editorial staff has resigned to go to California.

George W. Scotford, managing editor of the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

A. G. Brauer has rejoined the staff of the Toledo Blade.

Oliver Holden has resigned from the Cleveland Plain Dealer staff.

Ferman A. Wilson, former Minnesota newspaper man, has been appointed news editor of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News. Truman H. Felt of Indianapolis has been named city editor. Arthur G. Keene has resigned as managing editor to engage in the real estate business.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

W. H. JOHNSON, general manager of the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, this week announced his resignation effective Jan. 1, by which date he plans to have organized a syndicate of his own to be known as Features, Inc., and to be operated from New York.

W. H. Johnson

The new syndicate will handle general features, stressing attention on fiction and Sunday section material.

Johnson is a well equipped newspaper man, having spent 27 years in the business. He started his newspaper career on the Flushing (N. Y.) Journal when he was 18 years old. Then he went to the middle west, where he was connected with the Columbus Citizen and the Detroit Journal.

For a while he was secretary of the Sherin Advertising Agency in New York. Next he went to the far west, where he became general manager of the Perkins chain of newspapers, with headquarters at Tacoma, Wash.

Johnson's next connection was with the Beckwith Special Agency. For the following 10 years he was associated with the Hearst organization, serving in various capacities, including general manager of the International Feature Syndicate, and advertising manager of the American Weekly. From Hearst, Johnson went to the Herald Tribune.

Wilbur Peterson has joined the staff of the Marshall (Minn.) News-Messenger.

William B. Bromage, formerly on the financial staff of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, is now a salesman for the Bradstreet Company, mercantile agents, Providence.

Alfred S. O'Brien, managing editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Sunday Herald, has resigned to go to Newark, N. J. J. Lester Cargill has succeeded him.

Lenoir Chambers, city editor of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News, is now associate editor succeeding Gerald Johnson, who resigned to become head of the newly instituted department of journalism at the University of North Carolina. E. A. Houser is now city editor.

David Resnick, formerly of the St. Louis Star and the St. Louis Times, is attending the University of Missouri.

George A. Hough, Jr., news editor of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard, and Mrs. Hough have just returned from a vacation trip to Havana. Mrs. Hough "filled in" for three months this summer on the Standard staff while Miss Minna Littmann, feature writer, was in Europe.

George L. Bird, a June graduate of the University of Wisconsin School of Journalism, has joined the staff of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.

S. W. Mitchell, managing editor of the Newton (Ia.) Daily News, has been named editor of the Fort Madison (Ia.) Evening Democrat.

John E. Ryckman has joined the staff of the Chicago Daily News as a re-write man.

Perry J. Giffen, formerly editor of the Halifax (Can.) Sunday Leader, has been appointed advertising manager on the Hamilton (Ont.) Herald, and will also do special work for the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star.

Miss Peggy Derrough, reporter for the Chicago Evening Post, has returned to Chicago, after a three months' leave of absence spent on the Pacific Coast.

Kenneth Kingman has joined the reportorial staff, Wenatchee (Wash.) Daily World.

Walter A. Washburne, city editor of the Chicago Evening Post, is recuperating from an attack of appendicitis.

Harry N. Beall has been made editor and part-owner, Raymond (Wash.) Herald, succeeding John E. Davies. Mr. Beall's father, C. S. Beall, continues as business manager under the new management.

Paschal Covici is compiling a collection of the short stories of Charles Collins, dramatic critic of the Chicago Evening Post.

Nearly one million pieces of educational literature are now being made for free distribution through the newspapers represented by

Frederic J. Haskin

MARRIED

ARTHUR SMYTH, editorial writer, Buffalo Evening News, to Miss Margaret Cullen of Buffalo.

Robert Rankin, city editor of the Halifax Herald, to Miss Constance Buckler of Annapolis, Sept. 10.

Paul Feldhake, secretary of the Effingham (Ill.) Republican, to Miss Hilda Engbring, Sept. 23.

Miss Marie Graf, city editor, Akron Catholic Record, to Robley H. Morris, at Akron, Sept. 18.

David Burns, advertising staff, Cleveland Catholic Press Union, to Miss Agnes McGrory, at Erie, Pa., Sept. 18.

Harold J. Wymer, of the Chicago Associated Press staff, to Miss Rhea M. Wyman of Muskegon, Mich., in Chicago, Sept. 22.

Peter J. Higgins, reporter on the Marshall (Mich.) Chronicle, to Sarah B. Smith, of Jackson, recently.

George Astel, editor, Snoqualmie (Wash.) Valley Record, to Miss Frances Harrison, a correspondent for the Miller Freeman Trade Publications, Seattle, Sept. 6.

Richard Chase, until recently assistant Sunday editor, Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer, now with the Scripps papers in California, to Miss Julia Shay, Sept. 22, in Seattle.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE has established a news printer circuit out of its Harrisburg (Pa.) bureau, which is already serving 10 newspapers in that territory.

E. P. Halline, manager of the Detroit bureau of the United Press Associations, has been transferred to the Madison bureau, relieving C. Byers, who has resigned to enter politics in Indiana. Max Buckingham, formerly of the Kansas City Star, more recently in the New York office of United Press, has been sent to Detroit.

Luther A. Houston, of the International News Service, Washington bureau, has been appointed to succeed Duke N. Parry as chief of the I. N. S. Far East bureau, with headquarters in Tokyo. Houston will leave within a few days for his new post. During the past 5 years, besides his Washington assignment, Houston was connected with news bureaus of I. N. S. at Chicago, New York, and London. For a time he was editor of the same organization's advance news and fast mail products.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

PAUL CLINE has sold the Mathews (Va.) Journal to John J. Burke and Paul Titlow.

Oliver B. Davis, editor and publisher of the Mansfield (Mo.) Mirror has purchased the Hartville Wright County Republican and will continue publication of both papers.

Stanton (Tex.) Reporter has been purchased by A. C. Robertson, formerly of Loraine, Tex., who is now editor and manager.

L. R. Gillette, former editor Juneau (Alaska) Record-Miner, the first paper in Alaska to get telegraphic service, has bought the Methow Valley News at Twisp, Wash., from H. E. Marble, who has published it continuously for the past 21 years.

Skagway (Alaska) Daily Alaskan, the oldest continuously published paper in Alaska, has been sold by the L. S. Keller estate to W. L. Paul, editor, Alaska Fisherman, published in Ketchikan.

Washtucna (Wash.) Enterprise has been sold by H. W. Beaton to C. A. Sprague, editor, Ritzville (Wash.) Journal-Times, who will move the plant to Ritzville, leaving Washtucna without a newspaper.

Snoqualmie (Wash.) Post has been sold by H. W. Rodman to George Astel, editor, Snoqualmie (Wash.) Valley Record, who will combine the two papers.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

DON B. REED, from telegraph editor, Hamilton (Q.) Journal, to assistant city editor, Buffalo Commercial.

William Agnew, from assistant city editor, Buffalo Commercial, to copy desk, Buffalo Courier.

Thomas K. Earl, from telegraph editor, Buffalo Express, to news editor, Buffalo Times.

Nelson Riley, from staff, Peoria (Ill.) Transcript, to Columbia (Mo.) Tribune.

Robert Akers, from San Antonio News, to Chicago City News Bureau.

Van Wiggins, from makeup editor, San Antonio Light, to Fort Worth Star Telegram.

Frank T. White, from reporter, Lansing Capital News, to Lansing Industrial News staff.

J. M. Sprecher, from staff, Seattle Times, to advertising manager, Halifax Herald and the Evening Mail.

SCHOOLS

CHARLES C. CLAYTON, formerly with the Lincoln (Neb.) Star and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is acting as assistant librarian for the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri.

Georgia editors will address journalism students of Mercer University, Augusta, on newspaper problems during the present semester. The plan was inaugurated by T. J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, who is also a trustee of the University.

University of Illinois School of Journalism reports a registration of 350 for this semester, an increase of one-third over last year's registration.

Dean Walter Williams, Miss Sara Lockwood, J. S. Hubbard and John H. Casey, all of the faculty of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, were speakers at the fall meeting of the Missouri Press Association held recently in Kansas City.

Professor J. O. Simmons of the faculty of the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University has been appointed publicity director for the New York State Fair at Syracuse.

Director Harry F. Harrington, head of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University, has returned to Chicago from a trip abroad.

Frank H. O'Hara, short story writer and dramatic critic, has been appointed to the staff of Ernest H. Wilkins, dean of colleges of the University of Chicago. Undergraduate dramatic activities and campus publications, including the Daily Maroon, will be under O'Hara's supervision.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

SALT LAKE CITY TRIBUNE has completely remodeled its business offices, and installed new furnishings. The editorial department is to undergo a similar change in the near future.

Boone (Ia.) News-Republican has installed a new Duplex tubular press.

Bedford (Mass.) Mercury has installed a new Goss press.

Metamora (Ill.) Herald has added an Intertype to its equipment.

Texas Daily Now Eight Columns

The Brownsville (Tex.,) Herald, now a 7 column, 13-em paper, will on Oct. 15 change to 8 column size with a column width 12 ems.

Sir William Price Killed

Sir William Price, head of Price Brothers, Ltd., lumber operators and paper manufacturers, was killed Thursday in a landslide near his mills at Kenogami, Que.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

1893 SERVICE 1924
as visualized by
BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

KNOWING HOW IS one thing, and knowing WHO is quite another matter. We, in this organization, after thirty years, know both how and who.

This means that we can cover a lot of ground, cover it effectively and cover it quickly.

It is merely another link in the SERVICE chain which links this office to results.

Always willing to talk representation with the right kind of newspapers.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.
Advertising Representatives of Newspapers
2 W. 45th St. New York
900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago
401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

UTAHI VINCENT, writer for Readers Syndicate, Inc., New York, possibly sometimes was awarded the degree of "Bachelor of Matrimony." At least his latest contributions, headed "Male and Female", is a short story feature on the very strange customs and laws in other countries, concerning the courtship and marriage of their people.

UTAHI VINCENT

Vincent, student, lecturer and journalist is a writer of long standing. Besides being author of several books, he is a contributor to Collier's Weekly, Current History, Success, Dearborn Independent, Ladies Home Journal, Independent, Nation's Business, Physical Culture and other publications. He has traveled and lectured in nearly every state in the union and province of Canada, as well as in Europe.

M. Koenigsberg, president and general manager of King Features Syndicate, International News Service, and Universal Service, was a visitor at the White House this week.

George Beaty has prepared a series of Daily two-column panels of amusing drawings, accompanied by humorous text, under the caption "How to be or do —."

Marceline D'Alroy, fashion expert and wit, who writes "You Said it, Marceline," for the Premier Syndicate, New York, is now playing on the Keith vaudeville circuit.

Howard R. McEwen, western representative of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, who makes his headquarters in Cincinnati spent several days at the home office this week.

N. E. A. Service, Inc., Cleveland, O., launched a national non-partisan campaign Oct. 1 to get all voters to the poles. This syndicate claims a circulation of 20,000,000.

Written endorsement of the campaign has been given by President Coolidge, Senator La Follette, Hon. John W. Davis, Daniel Willard, Samuel Gompers, General Atterbury, Cardinal O'Connell, A. C. Bedford, William G. Lee, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, and other well known figures in America.

The campaign will continue until Nov. 4.

George Storm cartoonist, at one time with the N E A Service, Inc., has prepared a series of half page drawings for the Putnam Syndicate, New York, to run under the caption "Feuds of the Cities."

Carter Lucas, of the copy desk of the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, is taking a fall vacation, visiting his mother in Kentucky.

Rube Goldberg, cartoonist, and H. J. Tuthill, creator of "Home Sweet Home" and the "Bungle Family," have both signed new long term contracts with the McNaught Syndicate, New York.

Robert D. Heinl, formerly of the New York Sun and the National Geographic Magazine, is now writing a new column length Sunday feature for his syndicate entitled "With the Notables," being anecdotes of famous men at the national capitol, written in a lighter vein but closely allied with the news. Heinl also writes "Listening in on the United States," a radio feature.

The Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, has added a Cross Word Puzle feature, for daily or weekly use, to its list of features.

A. C. Ring of the Readers' Syndicate, New York, returned to this country on the Aquitania, Oct. 3 after several weeks spent abroad gathering feature material for the syndicate.

Among its fall serials the Metropolitan Newspaper Service is releasing "The Double Cross," novel by A. E. Thomas, playwright. "The Master Criminal," by J. Jefferson Farjeon, grandson of Joseph Jefferson, is also offered by this syndicate.

Frank W. Mulock, writer for the San Diego Union, has been on a leave of absence for the past four months, touring eastern and southern states, gathering data for a series of feature articles on the proposed Child Labor amendment to the Federal Constitution for a Chicago feature syndicate.

ALASKA OUR PULP RESERVE

Timber Tracts Have Fine Water Power Sites, U. S. Report States

It is only a question of time when the shortage of newsprint paper stock in the United States and Canada will compel manufacturers to go to southeastern Alaska for their pulp timber, declares J. C. Dort, Hydroelectrical Engineer of the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in his recent report on water power in Alaska. This report has just been published as a public document by the Federal Power Commission, Washington, D. C.

The two National Forests in Alaska, declares Mr. Dort, can produce about 2,000,000 cords of pulp wood every year for all time under scientific forestry practices. Translated into paper this means an output of 5,000 tons of paper every day. Excellent water power sites are abundant in southeastern Alaska, the report states.

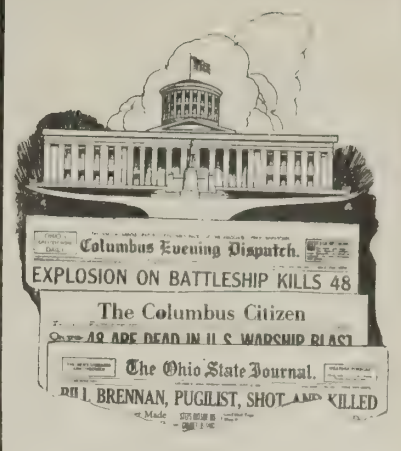
ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

New York Editorial Conference opened its fall luncheon meetings Friday, Oct. 3, at the Hotel Astor, New York. "Putting Pep Into Business Papers" was the subject under discussion.

New York State Circulation Managers' Association will hold its annual convention at Hudson, N. Y., Oct. 14 and 15.

St. Paul Town Criers' Club has elected Jack Rideout president to fill the unexpired term of A. J. McFaul, now assistant publisher of the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

Oklahoma Press Association, Group 2, met in Enid, Sept. 24 and 25. Governor M. E. Trapp of Oklahoma was principal speaker at the banquet the evening of the 24th.



American Photo-Engravers' Association's executive committee will meet in Canton, O., Monday, Oct. 6, for a 2 day session.

Pen and Pencil Club of Rhode Island has limited its membership to 300 to prevent crowded conditions at the club's social functions. Advertising solicitors on the daily and weekly newspapers in the State will now be admitted as active members instead of only associate members.

Hartford (Conn.) Advertising Club has elected Clark Belden of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company vice-president succeeding A. W. Spaulding, resigned.

Missouri Press Association held their annual state meeting in Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 18, 19, and 20. George W. Marble of Fort Scott, Kan., addressed the meeting.

Kansas Editorial Golf Association elected Jess L. Napier, publisher of the Newton (Kan.) Daily Journal president following the annual tournament at Emporia recently. Wilfred Caveness, editor of the Chanute Tribune was named secretary.

Ohio's Capital selects
Imperial

Thousands of University students and hundreds of Buckeye Law Makers help swell an audience of a quarter million who depend upon The Columbus Dispatch, The Columbus Citizen and The Ohio State Journal for daily news.

These Columbus publishers realize the wisdom of depending upon the Imperial Plus Metal Plan for taking care of their type metal. They discovered its reliability in keeping type metal up to the highest efficiency and adding years of service.

The Imperial Plan is impartial. It serves with equal efficiency the newspapers issuing thousands of copies daily and its little brother the village weekly with a few thousand copies weekly.

Give Your Metal Some Thought

Consider its present efficiency and length of life. Then send for the Imperial Plus Metal Plan and see how much more economical and dependable your type metal can be made.

Imperial METAL
LINOTYPE–MONOTYPE–INTERTYPE–STEREOTYPE

Imperial Type Metal Co.
New York—Philadelphia — Cleveland — Detroit

BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 7,249 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending March 31, 1923, 166,300 Daily. Six Months Ending March 31, 1924, 173,549 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 7,249.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

OCTOBER 4th

A Simple Practical Solution

Mr. A. H. Marchant, Advertising Manager of the Boston, Mass., POST, wrote us as follows:

"It gives me pleasure to state that the Advertising Checking Bureau service has proved a time and money saver in our office and gives a superior service to the Agency and Advertiser, which I am told they greatly appreciate. It is a good thing all around, so you can count the 'Boston Post' as one of your best boosters."

We can serve every publisher with the same satisfaction.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE

94,150
Sworn government statement for the 6 mos. ending March 31, 1924.

Advertising Leadership

The Dispatch leads all other Ohio newspapers in advertising (first 6 mos. 1924), exceeding the next largest (Cleveland) paper by 1,246,092 lines. For the first 8 months the Dispatch exceeded the other Columbus Newspapers combined by 2,262,232 lines.

DISPATCH . . . 13,659,283 lines
SEC. PAPER . . 6,634,578 lines
THIRD PAPER. 4,762,473 lines

204 exclusive national advertisers first 6 mo. 1924

215 exclusive local display advertisers first 6 mo. 1924

MAKE CENTRAL OHIO YOUR TEST MARKET

The Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

SEVERAL changes on the staff of the Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, were announced this week.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors, Douglas Wakefield Coutlee was elected a director of the corporation. Coutlee was previously associated with Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., as a member of the copy and plan department. He resigned last December to join the Charles C. Green agency as manager of the mail-order department.

W. H. Kern has been appointed space buyer and manager of the media department, succeeding Miss E. Deery. Kern was previously associated with the J. Walter Thompson Company for 25 years, and for the past 8 years was with Philip Kobbe, Inc.

Miss Deery succeeds Miss D. K. Colledge as secretary to the president, Charles C. Green. Miss Colledge, who was recently married, had been associated with Mr. Green for more than 7 years. She resigned Sept. 20 and was given a farewell dinner at the Advertising Club of New York.

H. B. Fenn of the H. K. McCann Company was elected president of the Metropolitan Advertisers' Golf Association, following the final tournament of that organization held recently. Ray Clayberger is vice-president; Walter Jenkins, secretary; and Rodney Stuart, treasurer.

Edgar H. Felix, for two years publicity man for broadcasting station WEAF, operated by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, has joined the staff of N. W. Ayer & Sons to do special work in connection with the National Carbon account.

W. G. Hildebrant, president of the Gotham Advertising Agency, New York, specialitsts in export advertising, visited Copenhagen, Denmark recently, and reports advertising men of that city expect shortly to form an advertising club and become affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Mrs. Anita Simpson, formerly in the advertising department of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau, has joined the copy staff of the Chicago office of Albert Frank & Co.

A. L. Bryan, of the Kentucky Print Shop, Louisville, Ky., is organizing a general advertising agency.

William G. Colgate has joined the plan and production department of the head office of the R. Sykes Muller Company, Ltd., at Montreal, where he will also act as account executive.

Winthrop C. Hoyt, for the past 2 years with the American Agriculturist, is now with the British advertising egency, W. S. Crawford, Ltd., of London. Mr. Hoyt is a son of Charles W. Hoyt of Charles W. Hoyt Company, Inc., of New York.

G. Herb Palin, Los Angeles, reputed to be the highest paid advertising copy writer in the world, sailed for England, Oct. 1, on the Mauretania, to write slogans for British merchants and manufacturers. Palin is author of such phrases as "Ask the Man Who Owns One," "Safety First," "See America First," and the like. The latest he has written was for Solomon's Fur Company, Montreal. It is, "Solomon Serves 10,000 wives."

F. M. Allen has joined the staff of Tuttle, advertising agency, Greensboro, N. C.

H. A. Tarantous, formerly managing editor of Motor, has joined the staff of J. H. Newmark, Inc., advertising agency, New York.

WITH THE SPECIALS

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR COMPANY has been appointed to represent the Bristol (Va.-Tenn.) Herald Courier.

Charles H. Eddy Company will represent the Decatur Herald in the national field, effective Oct. 1.

P. B. Imgraham, advertising manager of Printer's Ink, has resigned to establish his own business as newspaper publishers' representative. Prior to 7 years with Printers' Ink, he was associated with Dan A. Carroll and Paul Block, Inc.

S. J. Perry, for the past five years with Robert E. Ward, Inc., New York, has resigned to organize his own representative's business at 61 Seventh avenue, New York.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

SALEM (MASS.) NEWS, 16-page Topsfield fair edition, Sept. 19.

Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, 36-page Dollar Day edition, Sept. 19.

Duluth (Minn.) News-Tribune, an 8-page illustrated section Sept. 24, on the opening of a new concrete paved highway connecting Cloquet, Carlton and Scanlon with Duluth.

Jamaica (N. Y.) Queens County News, 64-page, Automobile Show edition, Sept. 12.

Bluffton (Ind.) Banner, 20-page Bluffton Fair edition, Sept. 19.

Jamaica (N. Y.) Queens County News, a 64-page automobile show number, Sept. 12.

Pawtucket (R. I.) Times, 40-page New England Week edition, Sept. 13.

Galesburg (Ill.) Evening Mail, 16-page Kiwanis edition, Sept. 9, the opening day of a two-day meeting of the Illinois and eastern Iowa Kiwanis clubs convention.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

KEEPING CRIME NEWS OUT

"IF the press were precluded from taking part in the exposure of crime, the state of affairs would be far worse that it is—and the criminal classes would be delighted."—Editorial, New York Times.

CULTIVATE HOME MARKETS

"A GREAT many concerns are reaching out after business when they don't cover the ground right around them. Cultivate the home market where you have it under your control. We have found that it pays."—C L. Forgey, general sales and advertising manager of Berry Brothers, manufacturers of well-known wood and metal protections, Detroit.

DON'T BREAK THE MIRROR

"THE newspaper is to the human race what speech is to the individual. Without speech we would be as helpless as the animals. The newspaper exaggerates, tells lies and makes mistakes. So does public speech. When you criticize the newspapers it is like walking up to a mirror, seeing your reflection, and breaking it. I say don't break the mirror but change your face. Truth and courage are the only things that survive. Look at a newspaper as the representative of the people who buy it and read it."—Arthur Brisbane.

ART IN ADVERTISING

"THE art used in modern advertising reaches the masses. Its distribution is tremendous. And American advertising art is far ahead of that of the rest of the world. It is most encouraging to see the work of the celebrated English artist, Arthur Rackham, who has never before done any such commercial work, being used by a house like Colgate & Co. This is an instance of the new function of advertising as an aid to art, and a significant one. Newspapers and magazines more and more universally have the work of artists of noted skill, which is fine for the public, and good for the artists and the advertising. It is a new factor in the artistic world which must be recognized. On the whole, I believe art is as much indebted to industry as industry is indebted to art."—E. C. Babcock Galleries, New York.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Columns

"BROADCASTING BROADWAY."
A theatrical column that is REALLY different. Write for sample. Strathmore P. C., 134 West 43rd Street, New York City.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

CIRCULATION BRINGER.
Famous fiction of all lengths.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y.

General Features

A SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
Decker's Caricatures — Home Features — Daily Column—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties
Tri Feature, 110 West 40th Street, New York
Write for Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman
Washington Radio News Service,
Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Norwegian Paper Mills Agency

(INCORPORATED)

33 West 42nd Street
NEW YORK CITY

Telephone: PENNsylvania 7443

SELLING AGENT IN THE U. S. FOR

NEWS PRINT PAPER

Representing Seven Largest Norwegian News Print Mills with an Annual Capacity of 200,000 Tons.

SOLE SELLING AGENT IN U. S. FOR

Ankers Traesliperi & Papirfabrik A/S
Bohnsdalen Mills, Ltd.
A/S Randsfjord Traemasse & Papirfabrik
A/S Holmen-Hellefos
Hunsfos Fabrikker
Union Paper Co., Ltd.

Agent for FOLLUM TRAESLIPERI

Prompt Shipments . . Inquiries Solicited

SPENDING THE ADVERTISING DOLLAR WISELY IN NEWSPAPERS

Copy Should Reflect the Character, Standards and Ideals of the Store—Should Build Confidence and Prestige As Well As Make Sales

By T. M. DARLINGTON

National Advertising Manager, San Antonio Express

STATED briefly, it is my intention in part to show how the advertising in ewspapers reflects the image of the store. 'hat the advertising done by a store in ie newspapers of a city is a visible pre-entation of the merchandising policy of iat store and its general attitude toward ie consuming public. That if the adver-ising does not measure up to the ideals 'f the store or if the store policy and ervice in contact with the public does ot measure up to the standards presented irough the advertising in the newspa-ers, discord will follow and the value f the advertising dollar will be depre-iated.

Every dollar spent for advertising pace in newspapers or elsewhere adds to ie necessity for exactness of statement nd integrity of the store.

The standards fixed by the merchant in ublic statement through the agency of ie daily newspaper become the standards f the store and the loss of public confi-ence and good will spell bankruptcy, ioral as well as financial.

Good will is the joint product of good oods, good service and good advertising. 'rotected it is an invaluable asset, vio-.ted it is a fatal liability.

I quote from a statement made by eorge R. Schaeffer, advertising manager or Marshall Field & Co., which gives an iteresting insight into the "ad" policies f a store that buys a total of three news-aper pages each day.

"Our advertising is simply the printed presentation of our business," he said. We endeavor to make it represent us ist as faithfully and efficiently as our est salesman would. We use our poli-es, our purposes and ideals. By it we iblish the news of merchandising events. y it we try to convey a correct impres-on and understanding of our institution. "By its word and by its appearance we y to attract the public to our store and make the public understand just what expect when they come to us to do isiness.

"In its various phases it will build con-lence and good will. Surely, it is more iportant for us to 'sell' our business as whole rather that a few specific items merchandise. We feel that by winning e confidence and good will of the peo-e on the basis of a real understanding our policies and ideals, business will turally flow to our store in great vol-ne. That is why we devote so much of ar advertising space to so-called 'insti-tional copy.'

"We realize that a great many people dge our business very largely by its vertising, often consciously, more often nconsciously. Every advertisement seen, nether read or not, produces some sort an impression. Therefore, the appear-ce of our advertisements is important, st as are the appearance of our store d the personal appearance of our sales-ople."

Our Texas merchants will say that nditions are very different here than ey are with the Marshall Field stores, wever, the same underlying principles that made the Field, the Wanamaker and the Filene stores will make a great store in any city in any state. Right here in Texas we have department stores in towns of less than 10,000 doing a half million dollars a year. Such success does not merely happen. It is founded on Truth in advertising and the store's integrity. So, I say, in outlining your store policy and in preparing your newspaper advertising every merchant should hitch his wagon to a star—he should adopt a high ideal to work toward and in doing so he will spend the newspaper advertising dollar wisely.

My next thought is, "How far ahead is the average merchant looking? Is he working and planning and advertising today merely for the business he desires to do tomorrow or next week? Or is he planning and thinking about what his business will be five or ten years hence?"

The merchant who is looking out for the place his store will occupy in the minds of the people in his community five years from today will see to it that every newspaper ad represents his store policy and that his store service throughout reflects the spirit of his advertising. The merchant who is building for the future will ask himself, "What effect will the advertising I am doing this year have on my business next year?" He will be glad to sacrifice quick sales of a questionable nature for permanent, solid growth.

Thinking to do him a favor a friend once said to Mr. Wanamaker, "I noticed your page ad in ——— newspaper and I happen to know that whereas they claim 5,000 circulation it has less than half that figure."

Mr. Wanamaker said, "Oh, that's all right. Now suppose I get one new customer from that advertisement and his family trades with me for ten years." Wanamaker built for the future.

It behooves all merchants to bring in a large volume of daily sales but, after all, the thing that counts most for success is the general character of your store, its service and the truthfulness of your newspaper advertising.

Advertising alone cannot possibly build a great business success in retail merchandising. In 1922 a department store in a city of 250,000 used more than 2,000,000 lines of newspaper advertising yet failed to make a profit. The general manager of this store was a most resourceful sales promoter and a man of much ability and magnetism. He had at his command a startling array of special sales events, drives for new customers and store decorations. No sooner was one sales event closed than a larger and more daring event was announced and carried out. His newspaper ads were large and convincing, and masterfully designed, yet this great department store, with all its resources, could not be made to pay a dividend.

What was wrong?

If the truth were known several things were wrong, but this we do know, this great store seemingly forgot to build for the future and concentrated all its resources on immediate sales.

When advertisers tell us their advertising in newspapers is not paying we have ceased to be discouraged.

It has been well said that, if all advertising paid at once the paper mills could not supply the demand.

Advertising is based on business and business is often a failure. If you'll but note the failures in any given line over a period of seven years, you will understand that business often fails with and without the assistance of advertising.

How then can advertising be a sure success when based on something that is mostly a failure?

The best advertising in all the world can't make a successful business man out of a boob—and the weakest kind of advertising never denied a good business man progress.

Confidence in the advertising business should be just as vital as it is in the banking business. Summed up it is simply faith in others and when that faith is shaken, disaster follows.

WAR CORRESPONDENT DIES

Served As Writer and Artist on the French Front

Julius Mendes Price, famous war correspondent, artist, and writer, died in London, England, Sept. 29. He had served chiefly on the staff of the Illustrated London News.

He was with the Greek Army during the Graeco-Turkish War in 1897, with the Russian Army in Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese War in 1904-05, acting in a dual capacity as special artist of the News and war correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

He served as correspondent-artist in the recent war on the French front in the early months and later with the Italian Army.

CALIFORNIA EDITORS MEET

Southern Group Elects Gabbert of Riverside Enterprise President

Nearly 100 members attended the annual meeting of the Southern California Editorial Association, which was held Sept. 22, at the Clark Hotel, Los Angeles. J. R. Gabbert of the Riverside Enterprise was elected president.

The principal speaker of the day was Don Francisco, past president of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs and co-manager of the Los Angeles office of Lord & Thomas. At the association banquet in the evening, Governor Friend Richardson and Congressman John D. Fredericks spoke.

Other officers of the association are: F. M. Keffer, Van Nuys Record, first vice-president; F. S. Thosfelt, Colton Courier, second vice-president; Timothy Brownhill, Pucnte Journal, secretary, and A. V. Douglass, La Habra Star, treasurer.

Market at a Glance

offered to you is an opportunity to serve your readers with an excellent feature in the form of a daily box, entitled:

Market at a Glance

This is a financial digest averaging 250 words nightly for publication in morning newspapers.

This feature will give your readers a quick resume of the preceding days' markets' transactions.

Sent f. o. b. night press toll wire, New York,—wire or write for rates and samples of our complete business and financial news service.

INTERSTATE COMMERCIAL NEWS SERVICE
38 Park Row, New York

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

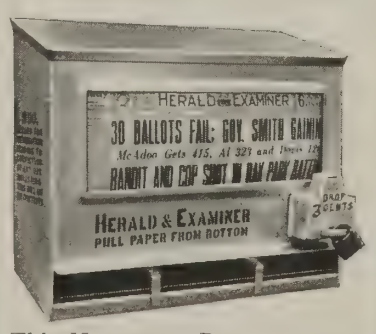
Total Lineage 4,285,568 Agate Lines

Display 2,552,900 Agate Lines
National 779,002 Agate Lines
Classified 953,666 Agate Lines
Audited Circulation A. B. C. 32,643

Frank S. Baker, President — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City — Ford, Parsons Co., 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois



R. J. Bidwell & Co.
San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

Peoria
The Try-Out City
THE PEORIA JOURNAL Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

First eight months of 1924

Carried more Shoe advertising than any other newspaper in the City.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

This Newspaper Box represents the modern way of selling newspapers.
Try them and watch your circulation grow.

THE NEWSPAPER VENDING BOX CO.
2454 Fullerton Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

Over—
200,000
CIRCULATION
in less than 3 years.
—because Detroiters want it.
DETROIT TIMES

SPORTS WRITERS THRONG WASHINGTON FOR NOBBY WORLD'S SERIES

Presence of President and Cabinet at Baseball Classic Lends Unusual Interest—400 Seats in Press Stand

By SAM BELL

(Washington Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SPORTS writers from every part of the country covered the opening games of the 1924 world series in Washington from a press section of 400 seats. Nearly 100 telegraph wires set up in the stands carried the news of games out of Washington.

Arrangements for the allocation of seats in the press section were carried out by Denham Thompson of the Washington Star, local chairman of the Baseball Writers' Association, assisted by James D. Preston, Superintendent of the Senate press galley, an old head at political conventions and similar news events, who this year had his first experience in satisfying sports writers. "Jim" came to the conclusion that sports writers differed very little from political writers, as virtually the same percentage of kicks was brought to his door.

The press section was equipped with counters, not unlike those used at the Democratic National Convention in New York, and the attendance in the section broke all previous records. Members of the Baseball Writers' Association said that more sport writers from comparatively small papers and from cities outside the major league circuits covered the Washington games. The fact that the first games were played in Washington was believed to be responsible for the influx of writers who covered the series for the first time. The national aspect given the affair by the presence of President Coolidge, members of his Cabinet and other high Government officials at the first game accounted in a measure for the wide interest from newspapers of the country.

Colonel George Harvey, who has not written about baseball for 41 years, has been called back to Washington from Deal, N. J., to report the opening game Saturday of the world's series for the Washington Post, of which he is editorial director.

Writers representing press associations and newspapers at the opening game were:

Associated Press: Allen J. Gould, Carl S. Brandenbury, W. H. Thomre, Frank Wallace; Newspaper Enterprise Association, Joe Williams, Hal Corchran, Billy Evans; Christy Walsh Syndicate, Christy Walsh, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, J. A. Behler; Chicago Tribune News Service, Arthur W. Crawford, Charles A. Lovett; Consolidated Press, J. B. Foster, Robert T. Small; United Press, Henry L. Farrell; United News, Westbrook Pegler, William Slavens McNutt; Associated Newspapers, Herbert Corey, H. I. Phillips, Robert Ripley; Chicago Herald-Examiner, Warren W. Brown, Jack Knox; Chicago American, Harry Neely, Leo Fischer; Chicago Tribune, Irving Vaughan; Chicago Daily News, William H. Becker; New York Times, James R. Harrison, J. R. Vidiner, M. W. Corum; New York Evening World, Bozeman Bulger, Robert Boyd, Neal O'Hara; New York American, W. S. Farnsworth, Arthur Brisbane, Daymon Runyon, Bugs Baer; New York Evening Journal, W. H. Hicks, Sam Crane, Ford C. Frick, T. A. Dorgan; New York Herald-Tribune, Grantland Rice, William McGeehan, W. Hanna, John Kieran; New York World, George Daley; New York Evening Post, Harry Cross; Brooklyn Times, T. F. Wooster; Brooklyn Eagle, Thomas S. Rice, Harris M. Crist; Syracuse Telegram, B. P. Lynch; Post-Standard, Frank F. O'Neill; Journal, Bob Kenefick; Cleveland Press, Rodney C. Sutton; Cincinnati Enquirer, Jack Ryder; Boston Globe, James C. O'Leary, M. E. Webb, Jr., Ford Sawyer; Christian Science Monitor, Fred Harvey; Boston American, Nick Flattery, Jack Conway, Fred Lane, I. B. Gillooly; Boston Post, Paul H. Shannon, Jack Mulanny; Newark Star-Eagle, Burt Dodge; Newark News, John H. Shields; Milwaukee Journal, Manning Vaughan; Toledo Blade, H. S. Talmage; St. Louis Star, James M. Gould; St. Louis Post-Dispatch, J. Roy Stockton; Baltimore American, Harry Keck; Robert Maloney; Baltimore Post, Tom Doerer; Baltimore News, Roger H. Pippin; Montreal Star, Clifford Barker; Ottawa Citizen, D. H. Reynolds; Toronto Telegram, J. P. Fitzgerald; Havana El Mundo, Joe Massagner; Detroit News, H. G. Salsinger; Detroit Free-Press, Lloyd Northard, J. D. McPherson, Harry Bullion; Detroit Times, H. C. Walker, J. H. Mulcahy, K. W. Hall; Kansas City Star, C. E. McBride; Pittsburgh Press, Ralph S. Davis, L. H. Woolen; Pittsburgh Post, William Peet, Edger F. Ballinger; Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph, Harvey Boyle; Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, Charles J. Doyle, Chester L. Smith; Philadelphia Public Ledger, Bill Brandt, Ed Pollock, James Gantz; Evening Public Ledger, Stoney McLinn; Joe Tumulty, J. S. McGlynn; Philadelpia Bulletin, R. E. Sensenderfer, John J. Nolan; Philadelphia North American, James C. Isaminger, Ross E. Kauffman, John Kolhman; Philadelphia Inquirer, Gordon Mackay, Harry C. Turner, Charles Bell; Philadelphia Record, George W. Mason, Thomas Shriver.

BANKERS BUY CUSACK COMPANY

Anonymous Syndicate Behind Purchase of Pioneer Billboard Company

A syndicate of New York bankers this week purchased control of the Thomas Cusack Company, Chicago, nationally known advertising concern and a pioneer in billboard advertising.

Thomas Cusack, founder and president of the company, who started in 1875 with only a paint pot and brush signed over the ownership. Mr. Cusack, it was explained, felt that after 50 years he was entitled to step out of active work. He founded the company when he was in his teens.

Identity of the banking group which took over the controlling interest was not revealed. Walker & Roberts, Inc., investment bankers of 120 Broadway, acted as agents for the group. They said it would be "improper" to name the interests they represented. The firm also declined to make known the purchase price. The Cusack Company's last balance sheet showed assets in excess of $26,000,000 and an average annual gross business in excess of $23,000,000.

Control was obtained by the banking group through acquisition of more than 50 per cent of the capital stock of the company, which has a capitalization of $2,500,000 preferred and $7,491,410 common.

A Circulation Maker

THE YEAR'S BEST COMEDY

"The Dark Chapter"

by the author of

"The Nervous Wreck"

E. J. RATH

SERVICE FOR AUTHORS, INC.
Dept. S. 33 West 42nd Street
New York City

Miami Herald Leads South

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 25, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: My attention has been called by Mr. Frank B. Shutts, owner and publisher, and G. V. Harper, business manager of the Miami Herald, to an injustice done that publication in a full-page advertisement of the Birmingham News in your issue of Sept. 20. I wish thus publicly to apologize to Messrs. Shutts and Harper and to the Miami Herald for this injustice and will appreciate your publication of this letter, acknowledging our error.

When the compilation of the lineage of the leading American newspapers was published in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, I did not see the figures. A comparison of the lineage of the several Southern newspapers that have been rivals the past few years in the matter of total lineage revealed apparently that the Birmingham News had led in the field. Unfortunately and unintentionally, the Miami Herald, which had not heretofore been a contender for leading honors in the South, was overlooked; otherwise, of course, the advertisement would not have been prepared by our promotion department and offered for publication.

The Miami Herald has made a truly remarkable showing in leading the entire South, and the Birmingham News desires to congratulate the publication and its management upon having achieved so large a volume of advertising during the first half of 1924.

Expressing in advance my appreciation of your kindness in publishing this correction and apology, I am

V. H. HANSON, Publisher,
Birmingham News.

Council Restricts Billboards

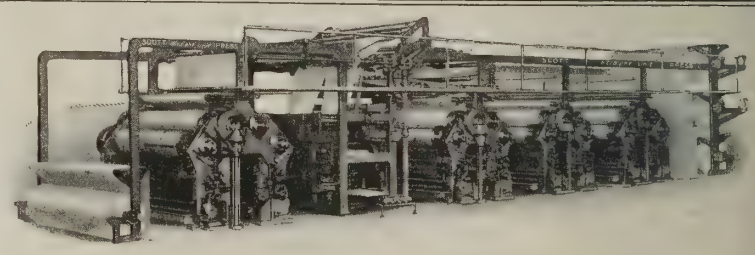
Wholesale erection of billboards in Newport, R. I., is prohibited under the terms of a new ordinance passed Sept. 22, by the Representative Council. One of the provisions states no billboard may be erected within 300 feet of any public park, and that a permit must be issued by the building inspector before construction of any billboard can be started.

EXPECT BANNER MEETING

Illinois Press Association Preparing for 400 at Urbane Meet

The Illinois State Press Association expects 400 members at the annual meeting at the University of Illinois, Oct. 9-11. John H. Harrison, Danville, president; H. L. Williamson, Springfield, secretary and Dr. Frank W. Scott, head of the university journalism courses, are on the committee on arrangements. Sectional meetings are scheduled for daily and weekly groups, editorial writers and advertising and publishing men and at the conclusion the Associated Press state meeting will be in session.

Prominent among the speakers scheduled for the general sessions are William L. White, Peoria Gazette; Casper Yost, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; Roy W. Martin, general manager, Associated Press; Lee A. White, Detroit News, and E. M. Johnson, University of Wisconsin.



Election Cartoon Jury Named

William Allen White, David Lawrence, William Hard, Bruce Bliven, Miss Elizabeth Frazer, Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson and Miss Katherine Ludington will compose the jury that will render the verdict in the cartoon contest of the National League of Women Voters. The organization has offered a prize of $250 for the cartoon published between Sept. 2 and Nov. 4, "best calculated to arouse general interest in voting and increase attendance at the polls." Entry into the contest is made by sending seven clippings which show the name and date of the publication in which the cartoon appeared. Partisan cartoons are barred.

Sale of Marion Star Completed

Terms of the sale of the Marion (O.) Star, once property of the late Warren G. Harding, to Louis L. Brush and Roy D. Moore, have been complied with, C. D. Schaffner, Harding's trustee, stated in a report filed with Probate Judge L. B. McNeil at Marion, Oct. 1. He reported that a second payment of $110,717 had been made to the estate under terms of an agreement made with President Harding, shortly before his death.

Unfortunately, the world fliers had to land in Maine. It had been hoped to keep the flight nonpartisan.—Detroit News.

THE SCOTT

"MULTI-UNIT" OCTUPLE and "STRAIGHT-UNIT" OCTUPLE PRESS

are the latest and best in newspaper press construction. The heavy side frames, solid forged steel cylinders, very large diameter journals, gears of steel, bronze micarta or fabroil makes this type of press the ideal one for speed and for long service.

SCOTT HEAVY DUTY FOLDERS enable you to produce papers in as many sections as you desire up to 64 or even 80 pages.

SEND FOR DESCRIPTIVE CIRCULAR

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.
CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block
NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42d Street

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

PROSPERITY on the farms generally throughout the country means that well planned and executed campaign or single-mail business will bring good results now. In recent years big city papers especially have found it difficult to maintain rural route circulation and the getting of more business amongst farmers has for some papers been almost impossible.

* * *

Now with returning prosperity farmers are more likely to subscribe for the nearest metropolitan dailies in addition to their county papers which they must have.

* * *

There is room in every farm house for the county paper and the big daily. The latter will get rural circulation if some attention is paid to the needs and desires of the farmers. Every paper with a large rural circulation and the papers that aspire to circulate widely in rural districts must have market and farm sections run in the interests of the farmers and by men who understand them and their needs.

* * *

Most papers we know have their young men get the market quotations and then map them into the papers without leads or careful checking. Editors who assume that all the farmers want is the mere listing of prices are, we believe, wrong. Farmers want to know why wheat jumped just as much as stock brokers want to know why Steel Common dropped. Farmers also want the trend in prices, crop conditions, probably summer demand, etc. When publishers can get through the heads of their editors that the farmers' business is essential and that the holding of it depends to a large extent on the character of the market pages and farm news, circulators will better be able to hold the rural route business they get.

* * *

It has been our experience that rural route circulation is the easiest to get and the hardest to hold. It is comparatively easy to get if papers will be satisfied the first year to get enough revenue to pay for the promotion. Then the editorial department can hold the business.

* * *

Rural business can be built by mail. Canvassers can get the business, but they are not necessary and are too costly when they cannot pay their way. Direct-by-mail work can be supplemented with subscription agents who can be obtained by mail also. Good prospects for agents are postmasters, ticket and baggage agents, car route carriers, general store keepers, fruit tree salesmen, teachers, blacksmith. Organizations such as granges, women's clubs, farm bureaus, churches often produce much business at comparatively little cost.

* * *

Almost all papers club with magazines and farm journals. Subscribers appreciate this service and make almost general use of it. Another service rural residents appreciate is the opportunity to get popular fiction with their subscriptions.

* * *

Popular copyrights that usually sell at from 75 cents to a dollar can be obtained at from 50 to 60 cents. Offered at cost they help to bring in new orders and renewals especially in districts where book stores are rare.

* * *

We spent a few days at a health resort recently and we saw more intelligent looking persons working on cross word puzzles than we imagineed would be interested in this latest indoor sport. The puzzle craze had even pedro backed off the boards. We were thankful for that because it is often difficult to get out of a pedro game but when a sweet young thing asks you for a synonym for horse you can say cow and let her worry.

* * *

On our return home we started making inquiries regarding this cross-word puzzle and we found all types of persons of both sexes and all ages intensely interested; a music critic, an actor, college professor, waitress, columnist, and editorial writer.

* * *

The cross word puzzle books are selling big in all the book stores. Here is a bang-up winter feature for any paper.

* * *

We suggest that the puzzle be kept out of the office papers in order that the force may not be distracted from work.

* * *

A football makes a good offer to carrier boys at this time of the year. Our experience with footballs has been that the better grade balls, not necessarily the regulation kind are much better to use than the cheap imitation leather things with which the country seems to be flooded. A football must be able to stand a lot of kicking and punishment; when it cannot do that it had better not be used at all.

* * *

Another good article to offer right now is a radio set. Good one-tube sets can be obtained now that will bring in stations within a radius of 300 miles regularly and their price is such that the orders would not have to cost more than a dollar.

* * *

A page of school news run on Fridays or Saturdays can be made to get circulation if it is well advertised. Such a page is most successful when the youngsters themselves do the work with a staff man doing the heads, leads, and layout.

* * *

This department does not aim to be exhaustive on any subject. Neither will it be scholastic, omnipotent, or too specific. The country is too vast for anything like that and circulation problems are often so local that what pulls well in Ohio may fall flat in Oklahoma. But papers and readers are all pretty much the same basically and if by dealing with problems in a general way we can make circulators think and plan ahead these weekly articles of which this is the first will be very much worth while.

5,000 NAT'L ACCOUNTS WITH FOUR-A MEN

Association's Year Book Just Issued Shows Imposing List—Clients Spending $300,000,000 This Year O'Shaughnessy Says

Accounts of more than 5,000 national advertisers are handled by members of the A. A. A. A. according to the second issue just published of the association's annual "Clients of Members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies."

These national advertisers are investing about $300,000,000 for advertising in 1924, James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary, said.

The year-book gives information on the following subjects: Agency service standards; history of the association; national organization of the association; Association operations; association's scope and limitations; clients of members of the association; national committees; excerpts from constitution; executive board members; membership by councils; objects of the association; officers; qualifications for membership, and sectional council officers.

Cost of publication was assumed by A. W. Erickson, president of the Erickson Company, and former A. A. A. A. president.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation 118,000
Sunday Circulation 175,000

Member A. B. C.

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

PROFITABLE READING

will be found in the "Business Opportunities" section. These chances are too good to be passed up. Act now. Get in on these opportunities; they're just what you've been waiting for.

QUICK STICK PASTE POWDER

Has Many Uses

Quick Stick is the stickiest paste powder on earth and has a hundred uses. It is used in many instances in place of hot glue—it's that strong. In a newspaper organization Quick Stick is indispensible.

In the Mailing Room

For bundle and single wrapping Quick Stick has no equal. Mixed in a minute—enough for the day's batch—won't sour or mould—and it certainly makes the wrappers stick. Won't smudge—can't pull loose—the paper tears before the paste would give. It speeds up the bundling room gang—and they like it.

As a Matrix Paste

Quick Stick Paste Powder makes the finest matrix paste. Fine for either backs or facing and it certainly makes a halftone stand out clear, sharp and distinct. We'll guarantee it to be better and more economical than the "mat" paste you now use. Quick Stick in 200 and 150 lb. barrels costs you only 10c a lb. and each pound goes a long way.

For Splicing Webs

Many a pressman splices his webs with "Quick Stick" without stopping the press. Do you know of any other paste that will stick quick enough and tight enough for that? Truly a barrel of "Quick Stick" Paste Powder will serve every department satisfactorily. It will pay you to place an order.

"Quick Stick" Sticks Quick

Quick Stick will mix quick, stick quick and stick tight. The best powder paste on earth. 10c a lb. in barrel lots or a 35 lb. trial carton for $4.20.

An Adhesive for Every Purpose

Our "705" Mailing Machine paste works perfectly in any standard make mailing machine. Will not clog or gum, nor does it ever harden in the fountain. Absolutely free from lumps and flows freely for rapid labeling. The labels stick. Send for a trial order. 57 gallon barrel @ 35c per gallon. 2 gallon wooden pail for trial $1.40.

COPASCO

The Perfect Semi-Liquid Desk Paste

Copasco Liquid Paste never needs water, sticks quickly, dries fast, spreads smoothly and never dries out in the bottle. 1 dozen self-closing 5 oz. desk jars only $3.00 or $1.40 a gallon in 12 gallon lots.

Write Today for Complete Catalog

The Commercial Paste Co.

Makers of the Largest Line of Adhesives
Dept. 51 COLUMBUS, OHIO

AN ANCIENT MARINER PASSETH

(Continued from page 9)

a member of the staff whether any particular note was being taken of the occasion. "Haven't you observed," he asked, "that the troops have been called out to parade today?"

Nobody would ever have taken him for an octogenarian. He had a splendid frame, with the chest and shoulders of an athlete. With the exception of a slight attack about two years ago, which he shook off almost immediately, his office never knew him to report sick. In his enthusiasm and his zest for life he was one of the youngest members of this newspaper family.

Mr. Bridgman loved to ride hobbies, which the office could always recognize by his anxiety to see that every one of them received due notice in our columns. Some of these were major avocations and some minor, but without any effort at classification or comparative appraisal they may be listed as follows:

Amherst College. He was a graduate of the class of '66, and boasted that he had attended every commencement since before he entered. The Meiklejohn flurry of two years ago found him as deeply interested as any undergraduate.

The Psi Upsilon fraternity. He had served as president of its executive council since 1883—an unparalleled record of fraternal service—and he was always ready to trot off to some remote chapter dedication or to investigate the qualifications of some 17-year-old sub-Freshman.

The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

The City College's Brooklyn branch and its classes in journalism.

The city and state park departments, the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, the museums, the national and international geographical societies, etc., etc.

The State Board of Regents. A member since 1917, he had taken this sometimes ornamental post with eager seriousness. He was representing the Board on the schoolship Newport when he breathed his last.

Bulgaria, Hawaii, the Sudan, the Congo. In his journeys to these places he had established contacts that were never severed, and he was constantly in communication with the big figures in those remote and diversified fields.

A continual interest was his Sunday editorial in the Standard Union. The space was reserved for him every week, and although the articles were never signed they were unmistakably his. They covered an enormous range. These, for instance, were his contributions in a specimen month, which happens to be last February:

"Celebrations by Wholesale"—a cutting exposure of the project to spend a few more millions of public money on meaningless civic ceremonials.

"Lincoln: 'Fifty-nine Years After'—appropriate to the birthday.

"Reforming the Law and Lawyers"—an examination of a bench and bar report on legalistic defects.

"Has the Port Authority Cold Feet?"—spurring a famous super-governmental body.

In addition to these were casual articles every now and then on the projects, personalties and causes dearest to his heart. His handwriting was atrocious. It was probably worse than Greeley's. He had, further, a curious habit of submitting his stuff on odd sizes and varieties of copy-paper. Further marks of the genius, of course.

Mr. Bridgman was the constant theme of discussion in his office. "And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew." One day a reporter would rub elbows with him at luncheon time at a side-arm chair place where the pie and coffee were a nickel apiece. The next day the same reporter was likely as not to be assigned to cover a luncheon given by Mr. Bridgman at the Hamilton Club to some ambassador or potentate. You could only surmise which style of refection he preferred. He walked to work, almost invariably.

When he decided to take the trip across his beloved sea on the Newport he gave out the news to the other papers, adding this characteristic paragraph of self-appraisal:

"This 'ancient mariner' has made three Peary Arctic auxiliary cruises: in the Falcon in 1894; Diana, in 1899, and Erik, in 1901, in command of the last two, and holds an honorable discharge, 'character, ability and seamanship good,' by the U. S. Shipping Commission, from his position as freight clerk at 25 cents per month in the Hawaiian Inter-Island's new Heleakala on her maiden voyage last year from Philadelphia to Honolulu."

There was an impressive muster aboard the Newport as it neared Bermuda. It may be described in Mr. Bridgman's own words, written a month before, describing a duplicate of the scene:

"Officers in spick and span new uniforms, buttons and braid bright, trousers razor-creased, the State insignia flashing, saunter on the quarter deck, the barefooted lads in spotless whites gather in groups in the waist, the familiar checked shirts of the bosn's and his mate are covered by blue brass-buttoned reefers, deck work is knocked off and a general air of watchful waiting prevails as the ship rolls steadily along on her course. At 10:45 the bugler comes to the mast, blows the warning call for inspection and muster, and soon the formations are rapidly going on. Commissioned officers on the quarter deck, abaft the mizzen mast; the warrant officers facing and just forward of them; petty officers, some wearing stripes of honorable war service, and crew in blue uniforms, or clean working clothes, on the port side, and the cadets, white-capped and barefooted, in two platoons, engineers on the port deck, department on the starboard."

But at this point Mr. Bridgman's description is dropped, and Capt. Felix Riesenberg of the Newport takes it up:

"The muster completed," said his wireless dispatch, "the ship was stopped for ten minutes, ensign and pennant half-masted and a prayer was read. Then proceeded full speed to Hamilton, Bermuda."

So, fittingly ended the last cruise of this "ancient mariner." It was the death of a good newspaper man, who had sent to his office an advance story that covered it.

BODY OF DR. BRIDGMAN LAID TO REST

"An Adventurer in Service of Mankind," is Eulogy at Impressive Funeral Service Attended by 1,000—Publishers Pay Tribute

With impressive ceremonies, the body of H. L. Bridgman, late business manager of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, was laid to rest Oct. 1 in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn. More than 1,000 people gathered to pay last tribute to the explorer-newspaper man.

A bugler from the training ship Newport, aboard which he died at sea, sounded taps as the body was lowered into the grave. Cadets from the same ship acted as guard of honor.

"An adventurer in the service of mankind" was the description of Dr. Bridgman given by Rev. Dr. Howard Dean French, who conducted the funeral services.

At a special memorial meeting of the Publishers' Association of New York held this week, the following resolution was passed:

The Publishers' Association of New York appreciates keenly its loss and the loss of the whole community in the death of Herbert Lawrence Bridgman, its Chairman since 1910. Publisher and publicist, explorer, traveler, educator, lecturer; every facet of his career had lustre. His loyalty, his tact and his clearness of vision served admirably and worthily for thirty-eight years the movement to establish and perpetuate the co-operation of newspaper publishing interests in the United States for the common good.

Mr. Bridgman was one of those present and active in the preliminary meeting at Detroit, Nov. 17, 1886, that led to the organization of the American Publishers' Association in Rochester, Feb. 16, 1887. It was in 1911 that Mr. Bridgman was elected Vice President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. In 1914 he became President, and served for two years.

Mr. Bridgman's first newspaper experience was on the Springfield Republican. He was publisher of the New York Press in the first year of its existence. For almost thirty-five years he had been the successful business manager of the Brooklyn Standard-Union.

A native of the college town of Amherst a graduate of Amherst College, Mr. Bridgma was through life devoted to his college and hi fraternity, the Psi Upsilon; a Phi Beta Kapp man, and urgent for the higher culture o youth. Amherst made him an LL. D. I 1917 he was chosen a member of the New Yor Board of Regents.

Mr. Bridgman's faith in Commodore Pear had its base in his experience of 1894 as hi torian of the Peary auxiliary expedition, an was confirmed by his service on the Diana i 1899 and the Erik in 1901. He predicted Pear would discover the North Pole. It is no ex aggeration to say that as Secretary of th Peary Arctic Club he did more than any othe one man to help as well as to encourage Peary

A delegate to the International Polar Con vention in Brussels in 1906, and the one i Rome in 1908, President of the Department o Geography of the Brooklyn Museum of Arts an Sciences, Honorary Fellow of the Museum o Natural History and an active member of sev eral social clubs, Mr. Bridgman was a force ful public speaker and always frank in hi treatment of any subject he discussed. He ha a delightful personality, always kindly, alway sympathetic, always worthwhile. The spirit o youth remained with him, and his passing a the age of 80 years leaves a real void in thos fields of human activity where his achievement had been so diverse and so substantial. Mr Bridgman rounded out this useful life of his i a remarkable manner. Death called him in th midst of a labor of love when he was puttin his unique experience and broad training at th disposal of a group of young men while the were on a training voyage.

Resolved, That we extend to his widow an relatives the deep sympathy of this associatio and that an engrossed copy of this minute b sent to Mrs. Bridgman.

New Times Typography Booklet

The New York Times has issued a sec ond and enlarged edition of "Typographi cal Standards." The original edition o this booklet, which was published las year, aroused considerable interest amon advertisers and agencies, and was muc in demand. One of the most notabl changes in the edition is an insert, con sisting of four pages dealing with "Th Use of Blacks in Advertising Illustra tions in the New York Times."

World Starts Real Estate Section

The New York Evening World, Oct. 1 started a new daily department devote exclusively to real estate news. Roge Batchelder is real estate editor.

INTERTYPE

Standardized and interchangeable typesetting machines for all composition, from 5-point text up to full width 36-point bold, and 60-point bold condensed, on slugs up to 42 ems wide. See our full page next week.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

General Offices: 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Shop-o-scope TRADE MARR

for 1924

Ready now!

A complete new campaign—our greatest—for the promotion of Christmas classified business.

Thirty pieces of strikingly illustrated publicity in complete mat form — the most elaborate and effective classified solicitor's portfolio ever printed —a new development in mail solicitation booklets —five hundred ready-written ads for all lines of businesses—and complete plans and daily service bulletins for handling the successful campaign.

Last year The Shop-o-scope created $500,000 worth of Christmas business for the 225 newspapers that used it—and caught on with advertisers and readers as no other holiday advertising campaign ever had.

This year it will double its 1923 record. And you can get the benefit of it—write today for the complete Shop-o-scope lay-out for your inspection!

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.

International Classified Advertising Counsellors

Otis Building Philadelphia

CLEVELAND GROCERS PLAN AD DRIVE

Urging Unusual Co-operative Campaign With Manufacturers and Wholesalers Using Dailies—Plan Suited to National Use

A co-operative advertising scheme is being advocated by the Cleveland (O.) Retail Grocers' Association which is designed to mean a full page advertisement once a week for every paper in the city eventually, and if the move is successful the association is going to carry the idea to the national association, and suggest that the plan be put in effect all over the country.

Briefly, the idea is to have the manufacturer, the wholesaler and the retailer join hands in an advertising program mapped out as follows:

To begin with, one full page will be contracted for a year's period, thus assuring the lowest advertising rate available. The four corners of the space will be alloted to the wholesalers and the side columns to the manufaturers. All the center space will be pro rated among the retailers, who will use it to urge buyers to patronize stores of the association, and to display the organization's emblem in order to get the public familiar with it.

Once the full page is started, the idea is then to branch out and include another paper, so that eventually the four dailies in the city will be carrying the co-operative ads.

The wholesalers, it must be confessed, are frowning on the plan, but the retailers are becoming more insistent, and it is probable that within another month the association will win the wholesalers and manufacturers over to its way of thinking. In this connection, the retailers have at their call the simple expedient of transferring their trade to those wholesalers who are willing, and according to members of the association who told details of the plan to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, it is not unlikely that this will be done if it becomes necessary.

PAN-AMERICAN COMMITTEE MEET

Plans for 1926 Press Congress Discussed in Washington

Members of the committee appointed to arrange for a Pan-American Press Conference to be held in Washington in May, 1926, in compliance with a resolution of the last Pan-American Congress met this week with Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union to take the preliminary steps toward the formulation of a program.

It was decided to appoint a general committee, representative to the newspapers, press associations and the organizations of the newspaper industry, and a finance committee to begin work on the conference arrangements. Dr. Rowe was authorized to send out letters to newspaper publishers and editors throughout the country asking for suggestions on the topics to be considered at the conference. Those suggestions will be given study by a committee of the governing board of the Pan-American Union which in turn will submit its views to the members of the full board.

Members of the executive committee attending the meeting in person or by proxy were Dean Walter Williams, president of the Press Congress of the World; Casper S. Yost, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; Wallace Odell, past president of the National Editorial Association; M. Koenigsberg, president of the International News Service; J. H. Furay, vice-president of United Press Associations, for Karl Bickel, president; John S. Bryan, vice-president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association for S. E. Thomason, president of the A. N. P. A.

Frank Noyes, president of the Associated Press was unable to attend.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Will place account of the Belber Trunk and Bag Company, Philadelphia, manufacturers "Belber Safe Lock" Wardrobe trunks.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., 383 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured the account of Lewis & Conger, New York, manufacturers of household furnishings. Will handle special campaign for The American Radiator Company in the Buffalo territory only.

Behel & Harvey Advertising Agency, 608 Hearst Building, Chicago. Placing account of Gage Brothers & Company, Chicago.

Brooke, Smith & French, S. E. corner John R. and Eliot Streets, Detroit. Reported to be placing account of the Kelvinator Company, refrigerating, Detroit.

Burnett-Kuhn Company, 605 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Copy on the Chicago Tribune being sent out to newspapers generally.

Nelson, Chesman & Company, 500 N. Dearborn street, Chicago. Additional advertising on Frank Harris & Sons Company, Chicago, is being distributed to newspapers.

S. A. Conover Company, 99 Chauncey street, Boston. Now handling the United Fruit S. S. Company, New York, account.

Conover-Mooney Company, 111 W. Monroe street, Chicago. Contracts are going out to a number of newspapers on the Summers Medicine Company, South Bend, Ind. Also placing advertising for the Chicago Herald and Examiner with a general list of newspapers.

Erickson Company, 381 Fourth avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Congoleum Company, "Gold Seal" rugs, Philadelphia.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. Issuing contracts generally to newspapers on Forhan's Tooth Paste, New York.

Fuller & Smith, Bulkley Building, Cleveland. Placing account of The Printz, Biederman Company, Cleveland, manufacturer of Coats, Suits, Dresses.

Gardner Advertising Company, 171 Locust street, St. Louis. Now handling account of the National Enameling & Stamping Company, Milwaukee.

Gardner Advertising Company, 360 N. Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Placing the account of the Electrical Research Laboratories (Erla-Radio) Chicago.

Finley H. Greene Advertising Agency, Parsons Building, Buffalo. Reported to be placing account of the Jacob Dold Packing Company, meats, Buffalo. Also reported to be making plans for a newspaper campaign throughout the United States for the Fisher Knitting Company, neckwear, Buffalo.

Guenther-Bradford Company, 7 S. Dearborn street, Chicago. Copy on the Eureka Manufacturing Company being distributed to a general list of newspapers.

G. Howard Harmon, Inc., 171 Madison avenue, New York. Reported will use newspapers in selected sections for White, Warner & Company, Taunton, "Household" and "Quaker" ranges.

Hertz-Hadley Company, 646 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Page copy on the U. S. Bedding Company, Memphis, Tenn., is being sent out to southern Metropolitan newspapers.

Charles W. Hoyt & Company, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Making contracts and placing schedules with some Pennsylvania newspapers for the Penn Tobacco Company, "O. K." Cigarettes, Wilkes Barre.

Humphreys Homeo. Medicine Company, 156 William street, New York. Again making contracts with newspapers generally.

Johnson Read Company, 202 S. State street, Chicago. Orders are being issued to a general list of papers on the Premier Electric Company (Radio) Chicago.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, 14 E. Jackson boulevard, Chicago. The Midland Electric Manufacturing Company (Curling Irons) trying out a few towns on their advertising.

Lord & Thomas, 400 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Orders are going out to a general list of newspapers on the Pepsodent Company, Chicago. The new winter schedules on the Studebaker Company, South Bend, Ind., started Sunday, Sept. 21, and will run 60 inches in some papers and 75 in others. The Cellucotton Products Company, Chicago, Ill., are manufacturing a cold cream remover made of tissue paper which they expect to advertise in newspapers generally. Have secured the account of the Auto Point Pencil Company, Chicago.

Harry M. Lynch, Inc., Citizens Bank Building, Kokomo, Ind. Will place account of the John J. Hildebrant Company, Logansport, manufacturers of fishing tackle.

McJunckin Advertising Company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Placing account of the Fryac Manufacturing Company, Rockford, Ill., manufacturers of "Fryac" Night Guide.

Miller, Black & Lewis, Inc., 36 West 44th street, New York. Simplex Fuel Oil Engineering Company, Schulse Simplex Oil Burner, New York, has placed their account with this agency.

Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, 7 S. Dearborn street, Chicago. Disrtibuting copy to a general list of newspapers on the Friedman Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

Byron G. Moon Company, Inc., Proctor Building, Troy, N. Y. Has secured the account of Hall, Hartwell & Company, Troy, manufacturers of men's shirts, collars and athletic underwear.

P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, 45 Bromfield street, Boston. Again placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for the Davol Rubber Company, "Davol" ice bags, Providence.

Porter-Eastman-Byrne Company, 22 W. Monroe street, Chicago. Advertising schedules for 1925 on the Standard Sanitary Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., are being issued with a number of additions made to the old list. Now handling account of the Marietta Stanley Company, "Sempre Jove-nay Cosmetics," Grand Rapids, Mich.

Harry Porter Company, 15 West 44th street, New York. Placing copy on contracts with newspapers for Thos. Leeming & Company, "Ben Gay," New York.

Scheck Advertising Agency, 9 Clinton street, Newark, N. J. Placing account of McDonough Lydon Manufacturing Company, "Lydon" pads, Hoboken.

Frank Seaman, Inc., 470 Fourth avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in a few selected sections for the Stewart Hartshorn Company, Hartshorn Shade Rollers, New York.

Calvin Stanford Advertising Agency, Atlanta, Ga. Has secured the account of the Charleston Lead Works, Charleston, S. C.

Staples & Staples, Inc., Mutual Building, Richmond, Va. Handling account of the Benthall Machines Company, Inc., Suffolk, Va.

J. L. Sugden Advertisnig Company, 32 West Washington street, Chicago. Has secured account of the Spengler-Loomis Manufacturing Co., Spenlo Shaving Brush, Chicago.

Thomas Advertising Service, Citizens American Bank Building, Tampa. Placing a special campaign with Florida newspapers for the Florida Citrus Exchange, Tampa.

Tuttle, Greensboro, N. C. Has secured the account of the High Point Overall Company, High Point, N. C.

first /

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
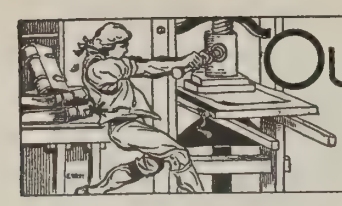
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle



WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

AUTO PAGES
A regular feature of the Wednesday and Sunday issues.
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

Results from the New York Times Magazine Section
A 228-line advertisement of Marathon Blades for Gillette model razors in the August 24 issue of The New York Times Magazine Section, yielded 2,057 orders. About 100 men called, with the advertisement, at the Best Cutlery Company, distributing office for blades. The product was almost unknown and August is not considered the most productive month.

Every month, every year, The Cleveland PLAIN DEALER carries MORE National Advertising than both Cleveland evening newspapers COMBINED.
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium — ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it
WOODWARD & KELLY
350 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Bldg., Detroit
J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St., New York

THERE is only one newspaper that is representative of the entire Dallas territory, and that is The News
The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

A NEWSPAPER curiosity is a miniature facsimile of the London Times especially printed for the Queen's Dolls' House which has had so much publicity in the press. This miniature facsimile is said to be the smallest newspaper ever printed. A copy can doubtless be obtained by any one connected with an American newspaper if a request is typed on the regular letterhead and sent to the business manager of the London Times.

* * *

G. P. Putnam & Sons announce for fall publications "The Fugger News Letters." The Fuggers were the Rothschilds of the Middle Ages. They had men of intelligence—as journalists were called at that time—stationed at all capitals and great ports of Europe to report what was going on. The book will be reviewed more in detail in a later issue.

The publication of this volume, however, shows that authentic news has always had a cash value the same as any other economic commodity. Banks still deal in news. Financial writers on newspapers testify to the excellence of the news letters about economic conditions sent out regularly by George E. Roberts, vice-president of the National City Bank, New York.

* * *

NO other phrase can better describe "Politics: The Citizen's Business" by William Allen White (The Macmillan Company) than to call it a newspaper book. In the first place its author is the famous editor of the Emporia Gazette and a great political reporter for a newspaper syndicate. Like the newspaper it has been hastily compiled—much of it during the stress and strain of political conventions—to meet an immediate need. Its language is that of the newspaper vernacular. The high spots are given in the first 128 pages and the speeches and the party platforms are put in an appendix almost twice as large as the book proper. In letter press it reminds one of a newspaper story with pivotal points on the first page and with a note that speeches in full will be found in another part of the paper.

Mr White himself has this to say about the contents:

> Naturally this book is ephemeral, scarcely more permanent than the radio itself, which brought the voices of the convention into millions of homes before the echoes of the applause had died. Surely times that take everything else so lightly may not mind a glimpsing book.

Like the newspaper story the more important things are put in what might be called the book lead—the two chapters which open the volume. These chapters are entitled "Our Unwritten Constitution" and "The Super-Citizen's Duties." If I were to give a tip to the copydesk for a headline I should mark those paragraphs in these chapters which deal with invisible government.

Mr. White pays his respects to press-agents and propaganda makers as follows:

> The half scared, meachingly militant representatives of the interests who slip into the hotel corridors of Washington, and a few of the State capitals, are the dying sons of a race of giants compared with the head of the American Federation of Labor, or the National Chamber of Commerce, or the Farm Bureau, or the League of Women Voters, or the Anti-Saloon League. The attorneys and lobbyists of the great interests are a bandy-legged tribe.

The remaining chapters of the book deal with the Republican Convention and the Democratic Convention, but at the same time they call attention to those new political forces which "organize, direct, and institutionalize public sentiment." The appendix, as I have pointed out, contains the party platforms, the nominating speeches, the keynote speeches, and the debates of the Democratic Convention. The book ends with the official statement of Robert M. La Follette, the Independent Progressive candidate for President of The United States.

Mr. White has produced a book that will be of great value as a reference text for those members of the working press who cover political matters until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

* * *

IF a vote were taken among newspaper men for the periodical that was most thumbed in the office I am sure that the little monthly published by E. W. Howe of Potato Hill Farm, Atchison, Kan., would stand well toward the top, even among those who work on metropolitan dailies. I am basing this assertion upon what I have heard myself at the Newspaper Club, New York City. But this note is inserted, not to call attention to Ed Howe's Monthly, but rather as a "personal" that Farmer Howe is among the distinguished group of authors who contribute articles to Hearst's Magazine for October, where he prints an interesting bit of his philosophy of life in an attempt to show that success is easier than failure for the average man. Next month in Hearst's Howe is going to describe the "petting parties" of his high collar days.

* * *

SPACE—no editorial fib—shuts out some of the bouquets I have received from authors whose books I have reviewed in this department. Simple justice, however, does demand that I mark "Must" these paragraphs in a letter from Clarence W. Wagner of the Baltimore Sun:

> May I express my appreciation of the notice you gave my book, "What the Small Town Needs," in a recent issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER?
>
> That you were surprised that I did not put down a good community weekly as the greatest small-town needs, comes as a surprise to me. Most assuredly, it was not an oversight on my part, as a very large part of my small-town experience came via the weekly newspaper.
>
> I cannot agree with you. The average small-town already has a better weekly than it deserves. Witness the very meager support accorded an enterprising newspaper; how the citizens fight against paying a decent subscription rate and how the merchants look upon a great deal of their advertising expense as a donation to the local editor.
>
> Furthermore, it would be detrimental to small-town development to excuse the average citizen of active participation in community advancement work, on the score that a good community weekly is the most important need of all. It is precisely such an argument the small-town "booster" will agree to—and in consequence, do little or nothing on his own accord.
>
> Here, indeed, is a matter for debate. I am glad you expressed yourself so frankly, and always welcome an opportunity to make my stand more clear.

A difference of opinion makes a horse race interesting.

* * *

EDITORIAL writers, especially those who cover politics, should borrow from the newspaper library the October issue of Harper's Magazine and read the opening article, "Politics—A Two-Handed Game," by Elmer Davis. He is not a relative of the Democratic candidate, but is the creator of Godfrey Gloom, an unterrified Democrat at Amityville, Ind., who appears periodically at the political conventions and publishes his reflections in the newspaper press.

Edward S. Martin, who sits in the "Editor's Easy Chair" of Harper's contributes "The Voter and The President"—a sort of "add" to the political story by Davis.

* * *

ANY newspaper man in the Middle West who wants to get a six months' leave of absence from his managing editor to travel in Europe should read the advice that William McFee gives to just such an individual in the Bookman for October.

Llewellyn Jones, the literary editor of the Chicago Evening Post, answers the question, "Is There Such a Thing as Aesthetics?"—or attempts to answer it in the same issue.

* * *

FROM time to time I have called attention to some interesting articles published in the Atlantic Monthly from the pen of Ernest Elmo Calkins, the well-known advertising expert of New York City. These chapters from his life have been rounded out with additional matter and published in book form under the title "Louder Please!" (The Atlantic Monthly Press). The title is especially appropriate because, as most of us know, Mr. Calkins is deaf.

The volume is dedicated to that very intimate group of mother, teacher, partner, wife, etc., who have made life a little easier for one who has lost his hearing.

The chapters about the boyhood days of the author remind me of a bit of verse I once read:

> When memory with slow, uncertain fingers
> Awakes anew the echoes of the past,
> There are some keys on which their touch long lingers,
> Some chords that vibrate to the last.

Coming to New York the author answers the following advertisement in the New York Herald

> MALE HELP WANTED—Printer, all-round, to set type and run press. Must have references. Give full particulars and state salary. Herald 33—and becomes a printer and later an editor. He meets Ralph Holden, his future partner, and embarks upon the great adventure on the uncharted sea of advertising.

But why should I tell the life story so much better told with whimsical humor and charm in the volume itself?

The illustrations actually illustrate the text—as would be expected in a copy of an advertising man. There is, for example, an illustration that shows the book that made Mr. Calkins a printer, a facsimile of Vol. I, No. 1 of the Illinois Globe of Galesburg, Illinois, a book plate that shows the author's home, and a miniature that portrays the author at play.

This volume by Mr. Calkins, like the copy from his shop, sells itself to the reader who becomes a pleased customer.

* * *

THE employees' magazine of the Chicago Tribune—The Tribune is publishing a series of tales of Tribune typestickers by Phil Barker. The tale in the August issue tells how "a printer touched the Big Chief for $50"—but that was years ago.

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in New Jersey's Fastest Growing City
TRADING POPULATION
167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

Montreal Daily Star Takes Series No. 6

The paper which is proud to call itself Canada's Greatest Newspaper has just ordered Series No. 6 of the church advertisements issued by the Church Advertising Department. The Montreal Star has used church advertising copy for the last three years, as have dozens of other newspapers.

This material is offered to help newspapers build up a constituency of church-goers. Newspaper promotion men know that such a group constitute the most stable buyers of any community—the sort that commercial advertisers want to talk to.

It is worth while urging people to go to church.

The cost of this copy—52 ads—is only 3 cents per thousand circulation per week.

For proofs address Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.
Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

THE SERVICE STATION

QUESTIONS CONCERNING THE NEWSPAPER AND ALLIED LINES WILL BE ANSWERED HERE

AN article on classified advertising appearing in a recent issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER aroused interest in the mind of the manager of advertising of a daily newspaper in New York state, causing him to make a thorough analysis of his classified page, with startling results.

He found that indifferent salesmanship in his own office was not only costing the newspaper a heavy toll of lost lineage, but that the classified department was not as effective for advertisers as it should be, as individual ads were kept so short they did not tell a convincing or selling story.

He addressed a letter to the members of his selling staff which EDITOR & PUBLISHER is privileged to reproduce for the benefit of the advertising fraternity:

"I made a check up of one day's classified business, a total of 119 separate ads. I found that 87 of them were for three lines. The average ad for the month, I found, was only 3¾ lines.

"Just think what that means when you take it on a year's business. We all know that the more complete the description published, the better results the advertiser can secure. This is not theory; we have made it a certainty in our own columns in real estate and automobile advertising.

"Are we all working to get the greatest possible lineage within reason? Of course, your ready answer is 'Yes.' But, are you really? Do you suggest to the woman at the counter or on the 'phone that she can get better results if she tells more about her want? Or do you handle it by telling her that 'the rate is three lines for 36c for one day, 99c for three days, or $1.80 for six days, and two cents a line less if she pays cash or within eight days?" Is her mind on the advertisement or want she has, or have you turned her mind at once to the fact that the rate is based on three lines and over that will cost her more? An efficient advertisiment should be your first thought—a complete ad. Then the rate will be a secondary matter, to be discussed after the advertisement is secured.

"Take the month of August as an example: We ran 5481 insertions, the average ad being 3¾ lines in size. If we had 'sold' the customer on full description we might have added one line to each ad. What would have been the result? The customer would have secured BETTER RESULTS, the prestige of Classified Advertising would have been increased. And—note this—the revenue of our newspaper would have been increased at least $407.87 in one month. If we worked on this plan for a year, the increased revenue would amount to at least $4,000, or equal to nearly two months' business.

"Now, wait a minute! You are going too fast in your opinions. Of course, primarily the object is to increase volume, BUT we can do it and at the same time render a service to our customers. Just as an example, take this advertisement that was handed in over the counter. Read it over. Does it make you want to own this house?

> CARPENTER ST.—11-room brick house; Brown St., 12 rooms; others for rent, $30 up. Geo. W. Burns & Co., 1781-J.

"Goes in three lines, all right, but how does this one read:

> CARPENTER ST., 802—Three-story 11-room brick house on corner lot; all light, airy rooms; hardwood floors on first floor, Georgia pine floors above; all newly decorated; modern plumbing; large laundry in basement; two baths; Spencer hot water heating system; kitchen wired for electric range; lot 60 x 113 to alley; two-car garage; price $15,600, $5,000 down, balance on easy terms; possession in 30 days. Geo. W. Burns & Co., 16 East Ave.; phone 1781-J.

"How does that appeal to you, supposing you wanted to buy a house? Which one would you look at first? Space? Oh, yes, there are twelve lines in this advertisement, and the cost would be $7.20 for one week. If you care to pay for the ad now or within eight days, the costs will be only $5.76. Should the house be sold before the end of the six days, we would be pleased to refund the difference in price between the daily rate and this amount. You know, a real estate man would charge $780.00—or five per cent. to sell this property, and his method is to bring out those nice little points about the house that appeal to the prospective purchaser, and you can adopt his tactics in Classified Advertising at about 100th of the costs.

"While this is covering only real estate, the same would apply to anything for sale: What is it? What kind? What size? Why would I want it? How much is it? What is there about it that makes it specially desirable?

"You say all this takes time. Certainly. But which is best: To handle the first ad in five minutes and get $1.80 for it, or work fifteen or twenty minutes longer and get $5.76? The difference between $1.80 and $5.76 is exactly the difference between a 'copy-taker' and a 'salesman.'"

This staff letter concludes with a tabulation of the work of every member of the staff, showing conclusively who were the three-line copy takers and who were the copy sellers.

How about your classified staff, Mr. Advertising Manager, reader of this column? How will its work look in a tabulation, such as is herewith suggested by our New York state friend?

CLASSIFIED STAFF DINNER

New York World Group to Entertain Executives Oct. 15

The classified advertising department of the New York World will hold a dinner and entertainment at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Wednesday, Oct. 15.

About 500 persons prominent in newspaper, political and theatrical circles are expected to attend and among them will be Governor Alfred E. Smith; Lt. Governor Lunn; Ralph Pulitzer, president of the Press Publishing Company; Florence D. White, general manager of the World; J. F. Bresnahan, business manager, N. H. Botsford, financial manager, Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor, Frank McCabe, classified advertising manager; ex-Senator William Calder; Ex-Sheriff Max S. Griffenhagen; former Secretary of State John Lyons; Frank S. Bowers, Collector of Internal Revenue and Foster Gilroy, advertising director of the World.

Some of the entertainers scheduled for the evening are Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, Marga Waldron, Ann Pennington, "The Kid Boots Company"; "I'll Say She Is Company."

The

Hoosier Market

IS A REAL MARKET

Served by

9161 Grocery and Delicatessen Stores
1369 Hardware Stores
132 Department Stores
870 Dry Goods Stores
1803 Drug Stores

This market has everything for business success; people, money, stores, transportation. Advertising campaigns are particularly successful for trade-marked package goods, confections, medicines, toilet requisites, hardware and hundreds of other necessary articles as well as luxuries.

If you have national distribution you cannot cover this great territory effectively with a scattering of outside national media. You must use Indiana Daily Newspapers, for they go into the homes, are read and believed by all loyal Hoosiers.

Indiana, with three million population—with the highest native born population of all States —over 92%—with prosperous cities and wide awake, well edited daily newspapers, has become a state worthy of the consideration of any and all National Advertisers.

Start in the "Hoosier" State

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†††Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,276	.025
Evansville Courier and Journal	(M) 27,040 (E) 10,868	37,908	.08
Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,502	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,274	.07
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,657	.07
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,412	.09
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	11,410	.05
Hammond Times	(E)	15,436	.05
Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,563	.025
Indianapolis News	(E)	131,818	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,372 (E) 12,875	20,247	.06
†††La Porte Herald	(E)	4,091	.025
Newcastle Courier	(E)	4,603	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,155 (E) 12,884	23,039	.06
South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,440	.06
South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,718 (E)	20,588	.06
Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,608	.06

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

THERE is nothing to despise in the ancient and honorable proverb: "The Things You Most Desire Lie Close About Your Feet."

A man in your own organization may be harboring the secret to a five or ten per cent lineage increase, through mere manipulation of running accounts.

The idea may be surging through his mind, but is not articulated because of daily distractions incident to routine effort.

Mr. Advertising Manager, call your assistants into your office, one by one, and let them pour out their inner-consciousness ideas which apply to your special problem. There is great waste in that spirit of isolation which creeps into the members of a staff whose noses are kept too close to divisional grindstones.

Get the boys and girls into sympathetic and articulate discussion of your paper and its advertising. Results may surprise you.

DO you have trouble in collecting in some of our accounts? One paper succeeded in collecting in approximately 30 per cent of accounts previously classified as "D. B." through this form of brief letter:

"When you apply for credit at any mercantile house, they always investigate your credit reputation.

"We like to tell such inquirers that we have always found the applicant fair and square. But we can't do that when repeated calls for payment of accounts, not only fails to bring payment, but any reply as well.

"If there is any reason why you can't pay your account of $—— with us right now, tell us the reason frankly, and we will be glad to further extend the time without endangering your reputation on our credit register.

"We know you want to maintain your credit elsewhere, and payment of our account which has now been standing for ———— will serve to keep you off the 'Red.'"—B. A. Teeters, Springfield, O.

The La Crosse (Wis.) Tribune does not rely upon the wrapper label to tell subscribers when subscriptions expire. In each paper for four days prior to expiration, there is a red slip. It contains information regarding expiration date. Many subscriptions otherwise lost are renewed, because in many business houses when a paper is dropped it is not missed. —L. J. Jellison, Dubuque (Ia.) Times Journal.

Potted plants and ferns for use indoors are splendid things at this time of the year in making homes more attractive for the winter days and nights. Consequently at this time of the year you should be able to get considerable advertising of this sort from the florists and greenhouses of your territory.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

Cards used in indexing photos filed in the morgue should carry the date when each picture was taken. This plan permits checks of the cards at intervals, making it easy to determine when new photographs of various prominent persons should be obtained.—B. A. Teeters, Springfield, O.

These are cold Monday mornings for hanging out the wash. And a good wash lady is a hard person to find. But the laundries are running! They are good prospects for some advertising at this time of the year. A series of ads on their service, the various articles they can wash well, and on the advantages of using the laundry instead of the troublesome home washing each week would make a fair sized campaign running for several weeks. Arm yourself with a few layouts. Go out after this advertising.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

Football season offers good contest opportunity. Last year a Nebraska paper gave free tickets to the Nebraska-Notre Dame football game for a solution of its football contest. A double page spread was equally divided into 24 spaces with an ad in each space accompanied by half a picture of the face of a Nebraska player and half his name, 12 men in all. The object was to match up the half faces, write the proper names under each picture and also give the names of the firms in whose ad the half picture were found.—George C. Marcley.

Papers running radio programs may get advertising by use of a special stunt. The program layout may be given position alongside of a radio ad. The ad has arrows pointed to the program. The question, "Will you hear this Radio program?" is added. Then radios are featured.—L. J. Jellison, Dubuque, Iowa.

A somewhat novel circulation stunt is used by an Illinois newspaper. Occasionally copies of the paper are distributed gratis for one week to non-subscribers with a circular letter which informs the non-subscriber that the newspaper will pay $10, $5 and $3 respectively for the best answers from non-subscribers at the end of the week to two questions: "What I liked best in The Journal." "What I didn't like about the Journal." The answers are then used in making the permanent sale.—B. A. T.

Feeling that advertising from dealers in bicycles had decreased too much, the advertising manager of an eastern Canada daily arranged a bicycle race of 50 miles over the highway. A cup and two medals were offered as prizes, the competition being limited to amateurs. In conjunction with the race, the advertising manager arranged two pages of special advertising and allotted wholly to dealers in bicycles, bicycle repair shops, etc. There was little difficulty in selling the two pages.—W. McNulty, St. John, Can.

If your city has a barber college send a reporter around to get a feature. Find out if it takes longer to complete their barber course, now that barbers must be adept at bobbing women's hair, too, something unheard of several years ago. —John Piper, Des Moines Register.

An interesting article can be written about the effect or lack of influence the radio has upon church attendance. Some ministers fear continued broadcasting of church services will decrease church attendance. Some ministers have another idea—they feel the radio gets more persons to become interested in things religious because of the broadcasting of the services. Find out the local situation by having a writer interview a number of ministers as well as other persons.—A. C. Regli, Eau Claire, Wis.

What would happen to your city if all the proposed plans of reform were adopted and put into practice. This would make a remarkable story and could be used to either boost the reforms or to ridicule them.—I. S., Washington, D. C.

An interview with monument dealers and a visit to one or more cemeteries will provide material for an interesting feature on the changing fashion in tombstone inscriptions. Elaborate carvings and verses in fancy lettering were greatly in vogue not so many years ago, but now there is usually nothing but the name and the dates of the birth and death.—Bruce Cole.

Houston Fetes New Ambassador

Herbert Houston, publisher of Our World, and prominent in the activities of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and the National Publishers' Association, gave a luncheon Sept. 30, in New York in honor of Edgar A. Bancroft, Chicago, new American Ambassador to Japan. Among the guests were Count Kabayama, one of the directors of the Kokusai News Agency, Japan; Melville E. Stone, counsellor of the Associated Press; Don Seitz, of the New York World, and S. S. McClure, editor of McClure's Magazine.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
Ed Hughes
O. O. McIntyre
Penrod and Sam
Nellie Revelle
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

strange happenings you can't explain

One of the most fascinating series we have ever offered. Little stories of curious, true events. Just the novelty for your feature page.

WHO SAID ANYTHING ABOUT LUCK?

By Vincent Wilcox

To run six times a week.

Send for sample articles.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

On and after September 6th, 1924

The New Orleans States

Will be represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

again
ON THE
San Francisco Chronicle

Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By ETHEL HAYS

She Became a Metropolitan Cartoonist Overnight

FROM the wind-swept plains of Montana to Cleveland is a far cry, and rom an art student grinding away at humdrum tasks to a feature cartoonist smeared on Page 1 of a metropolitan daily is farther.

MISS ETHEL HAYES

Ethel Hays made both journeys almost overnight.

It took three days to reach Cleveland from Billings, Mont.

It took her just three hours to complete a drawing that took up four column spread on Page 1 of the Cleveland Press the day after she drew it.

Now, some of the largest papers in the ountry are carrying her cartoons—pa-ers like the Pittsburgh Press, Los An-eles Record, San Francisco News, San Diego Tribune, and others.

A style all her own won her fame. An iry, fanciful something that stares out it you from her drawings is captivating. t captivated first, H. B. R. Briggs, editor of the Cleveland Press, and it captivated he daily readers of the Press, if the hundreds of letters that poured into the editorial sanctum are criterions.

Miss Hayes is modest about her achievements; talks straight at you, and spreads about her some of the breezy strength of the western plains. She got her idea for wanting to be an artist while n Billings, her native city.

Riding her mustang "Powder River" about the broad prairie-land, she visioned what the wonderful westland vistas would be like if reduced to black and white drawings.

Then she went to New York and enrolled in an art school; then the war came along and fired her with patriotic zerv. She strove to get in the service; eft New York and made the long trek back to Billings to get in with her home own crowd.

No luck. The war ended; then the war department called on her to draw for its disabled vets and she hastened to Washington. For a long time she entertained soldiers in the base hospital at Camp Lewis, Wash. Then, in Colorado, Tennessee and Ohio. They liked her and they liked her work. They wanted her to teach them how to draw cartoons.

"I never had a bent for cartoons, but that gave me an idea, so I studied cartooning and here I am," Miss Hays explains candidly, looking up from her desk in the Press office.

"And here I am," epitomizes what is probably the most rapid rise from obscurity to cartoonist fame so far noted in the newspaper world, for ever since the day Miss Hays joined the Press staff the paper has never gone to press without one of her drawings.

PLAN WINDOW DISPLAYS

Huge Sum to Be Spent in Hook-Up With Newspapers

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 2.—During the next two years $100,000,000 will be spent for window display advertising as a "hook-up" to newspaper advertising, according to Carl H. Percy, president of Carl Percy, Inc., New York, in an address before the closing session of the Window Display Advertising Association annual convention here yesterday.

The newspapers will carry the message of the giant stores of the land to the public, then the window display will clinch the sale, Mr. Percy said. The theory is that a big store's advertising in the daily newspapers creates the desire to purchase, and then actual view of the articles in question, tastefully arranged and invitingly displayed, completes the combination that results in sales.

Some of the largest national advertisers in the country attended the three-day convention. The Welch Grape Juice Company, Regal Shoes, Coca-Cola, Sunmaid Raisins and firms of that caliber had representatives on the scene.

Chisholm, London Editor, Dead

Hugh Chisholm, editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, died in London, Sept. 29.

Explaining the $4274

Per Capita Wealth of

Iowa

GOVERNMENT statistics show that Iowa produces farm crops to the value of over $890,000,000; livestock products to the value of over $130,000,000 and nearly $750,000,000 value of manufactured products.

Add them up. Some money!

And only 2,404,021 people in Iowa to share in the distribution of these large sums. It is obvious why Iowa leads the country in wealth per capita.

Wise National Advertisers will give such a state the utmost consideration in publicity and promotion plans.

It is a territory any advertiser needs.

Cover this wonderful market through the following newspapers

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,535	.04
Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	22,671	.07
Council Bluffs Nonpareil .....(E&S)	16,132	.05
Davenport Democrat & Leader .....(E)	14,485	.06
Davenport Democrat & Leader .....(S)	17,416	.06
Davenport Times .....(E)	24,946	.07
Des Moines Capital .....(E)	61,683	.14
Des Moines Sunday Capital .....(S)	27,895	.14
Iowa City Press-Citizen .....(E)	6,230	.035
Keokuk Gate City .....(E)	5,899	.03
†††Mason City Globe Gazette .....(E)	13,405	.04
Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,980	.035
Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	13,375	.05
Waterloo Evening Courier .....(E)	16,775	.06

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924

EDITORS PLAY IN NEW HAMPSHIRE HILLS

Massachusetts, Vermont and Connecticut Press Associations Hold Fall Outing at Whitefield, Sept. 27-30 —One Hundred Attend

The fall outing of the Massachusetts Press Association, together with the Connecticut Editorial Association and the Vermont Press Association, was held Sept. 27-30 at the Mountain View House, Whitefield, N. H., with about 100 publishers, editors, business managers and their wives in attendance.

The party arrived at the hotel Saturday afternoon. A brief business session was held Saturday evening at which time several new members were elected. Sunday morning an automobile trip was taken to the base station on Mt. Washington where the party boarded the cog railway for a trip into the clouds. In the afternoon a trip was taken to Lancaster, where the members were the guests of Secretary of War John W. Weeks at his summer estate, on Mount Prospect.

Monday was devoted to automobile trips. The party left for home Tuesday morning.

Among those who participated were Gardner E. Campbell, managing editor of the Wakefield (Mass.) Daily Item, and president of the Massachusetts Press Association; Frank T. Parsons, of the Northfield (Vt.) News, president of the Vermont Press Association; O. S. Freeman, publisher Woodbury (Conn.) Reporter and Watertown News, and president of the Connecticut Editorial Association; John C. Brimblecom, Newton (Mass.) Graphic, and past president of the National Editorial Association; Lewis R. Hovey, Haverhill (Mass.) Record, vice-president for Massachusetts of the N. E. A.; Lemuel C. Hall, Wareham (Mass.) Courier, a member of the N. E. A. executive committee; J. D. P. Wingate, Medford (Mass.) Mercury; Joseph Low, Melrose (Mass.) Free-Press; Elmer E. Spear, Everett (Mass.) Gazette; Alfred C. Worley, New Milford (Conn.) Times; George C. Woodruff, Litchfield (Conn.) Enquirer; Harris M. Dolbeare, publisher Wakefield (Mass.) Daily Item; George S. Bennett, Manchester (Vt.) Journal; Franz A. Hunt, Newport (Vt.) Express & Standard; George H. Brewster, Hull (Mass.) Beacon; Walter D. Allen, Brookline (Mass.) Chronicle; Isaac M. Marshall, Manchester (Mass.) Cricket; George J. Desmond, Hyde Park (Mass.) Gazette-Times; Ralph C. Metcalf, Belmont (Mass.) Citizen; Robert S. Osterhout, Hudson (Mass.) News-Enterprise; Wallace Gilpin, Barton (Vt.) Orleans County Monitor; Charles E. Hadley, Lexington (Mass.) Times; J. Alex Lodge, Manchester (Mass.) North Shore Breeze; Harry B. Turner, Nantucket (Mass.) Mirror; William E. Twombly, Reading (Mass.) Chronicle; Edwin H. Leonard, Winthrop (Mass.) Sun; M. W. Hanley, Stoughton (Mass.) News-Sentinel; Charles T. Hall, Everett (Mass.) Herald; Walter F. Ellis, Dedham (Mass.) Transcript.

BANGOR COMMERCIAL CHANGES

William N. Hardy, Formerly N. Y. Bulletin M. E., Now General Manager

Several changes have been made in the Bangor (Me.) Commercial since the paper was bought by Dr. Frank H. Gordon of Bangor, owner of several silver-black fox ranches.

William N. Hardy has become general manager; Oscar E. Nelson of the Lynn Telegram-News, advertising manager; Leone H. Kittell, formerly of the Worcester Post, circulation manager. Oliver E. Hall, who has been with the Commercial for 20 years, remains as managing editor.

Mr. Hardy until recently has been managing editor of the New York Evening Bulletin, and for three years was managing editor of the Boston Telegram. He has also been in the editorial and business ends of the Boston Post, Boston Herald, Detroit Free Press and several New England papers.

The Commercial, under Dr. Gordon's ownership, has met with a very friendly feeling on the part of both local and foreign advertisers and business has been increased quite materially in the past month. The Commercial in the foreign field is covered by the Julius Mathews Special Agency. New equipment for all departments is contemplated. Two new linotypes have already been ordered.

Store Takes Large Ads

The May Company's department store of Cleveland broke all previous records in using space in the Cleveland afternoon newspapers—the Press and the News—Friday, Sept. 25, when the company had 12 solid pages of display matter in each of these papers. The occasion was the annual "May Day Sale" of the store. Double pages were taken in the Cleveland Plain Dealer the morning of the sale.

COMPLETING $400,000 HOME

Tulsa Tribune Will Occupy New Plant Early in January

Keeping pace with the boom growth of the oil city of Tulsa, Okla., which has increased 11,000 per cent in 20 years, the Tulsa Tribune will move into a new plant with new equipment Jan. 1. The Tribune is building a six-story structure valued at $400,000. The first three floors and basement will be used for the paper and the upper floors will be rented out as offices and for a cafeteria. The outside walls of this building are of granite trimmed in white enamel marble.

In most every department new equipment will be purchased.

The interior of the business and editorial rooms will be of mahogany finish and there will be no decorations on the walls. The Associated Press offices will be on the third floor as well as some of the private offices of the newspaper. Editorial rooms and the mechanical department will be on the second floor. The business offices will be on the first floor; press and stereotyping rooms will be in the basement.

The exterior of the building is now being completed.

The Tulsa Tribune was founded as the Democrat. Several years ago Richard Lloyd Jones bought the Democrat, creating the Tribune.

Mansfield (O.) Journal Appears

The first issue of the Mansfield (O.) Daily Journal made its appearance recently, with Henry L. Freking, formerly associated with Louisville newspapers as general manager, and John Leo Coontz formerly associate editor the Nashville Tennessean, as editor. Harry W. Cross of Zanesville, O., is news editor and Paul Vinson, of Mansfield, O., advertising manager.

Peekskill Daily Joins A. P.

The Peekskill (N. Y.) Evening Star has been elected to membership in the Associated Press.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.
Hoe quad halftone and color web newspaper press, printing up to 32 pages in black only, or up to 16 pages with black on one side and four colors on the other. Complete stereotype equipment. Our No. 521. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York.

Press for Sale.
Hoe 32 page press for sale at attractive price. Now in daily use. Being replaced by larger machine. The State, Columbia, S. C.

For Sale.
Goss Junior Straight Line, printing 4-6-8-10-12-14-16 pages, at a speed of 20,000 per hour. With the press is a complete stereotype equipment. Can be seen in operation at any time. Daily Telegraph Printing Co., Bluefield, W. Va.

For Sale.
Goss half-tone color press, prints four colors outside and two colors inside, suitable for newspaper supplements or comics. Send for sample of its work and details. Our No. 427. A very good equipment at a low price. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York. (Many other machines on our list; "used but good." Let us know your needs.)

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE PADUCAH SUN
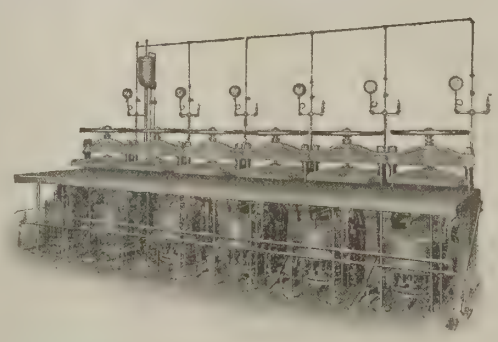
Paducah, Ky.
We refer you to them for their opinion

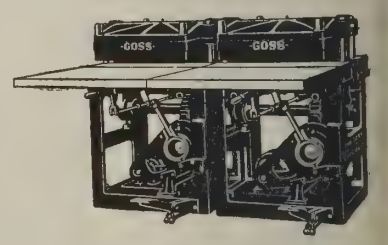
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO — NAME, SERVICE, FAME, QUALITY, CLINE WESTINGHOUSE



MAIN OFFICE Fisher Building 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Building Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

Don't "Pig" Metal It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg., Minneapolis Minn.

BATTERY OF SIX HOE PNEUMATIC MATRIX-DRYING PRESSES



With Independent Gas-fired Steam Generators.

The quickest and the most economical Presses for the moulding and drying of Matrices.

More than 800 in use.

R. HOE & CO., 504-520 Grand Street, New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

Goss Motor-Driven Steam Tables made in units of one platen, permit placing as many units as desired side by side. 30,000 lbs. "follow-up" pressure exerted during drying; automatic releases. Power is used only while platens are being raised or lowered. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery. The Goss Printing Press Co., Chicago.

GOSS

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man.
Young married man, ambitious and hard worker, desires connection with growing daily newspaper. College training, experienced as solicitor, copy writing and layout man and also as reporter. Looking for newspaper can help build up and feel himself a part of. H. K., Box 529, Elizabeth City, N. C.

Advertising Manager.
Eleven years' experience as copywriter, salesman, executive. Successful, clean, conscientious, hard working. Wish to make connection in city preferably under 50,000 by November first or before. Minimum salary $60 a week. Age 31, family. Excellent recommendations. Address Box B-867, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Not merely a high-class successful display manager, but also one of the best known in classified. Will take full responsibility of both. A grand investment for a paper that can afford a good manager. Try a change of pace on your advertisers. Now employed. Write Box B-858, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man.
Experienced, capable, energetic salesman and copy writer now employed desires a permanent position with progressive paper in city of 50,000 or upwards. Have had small city and metropolitan training, can handle all branches, foreign and classified. Married, good appearance and address, A No. 1 record. Salary or salary and commission. I want an opportunity where there are chances for growth and advancement—not just another job. Good record and reasons for desiring a change. New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut preferred. What have you to offer. Nothing under $2600 considered. Box B-880, Editor & Publisher.

Business Executive.
Comptroller, executive accountant, credit manager. Highly rated ability in costs and analysis. Ten years one metropolitan publication. Now manager large transportation company. Age 38. Accustomed to salary of $5,000.00 or better. B-833, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist Plus.
Also experienced in retouching, advertising art layouts, desires change where there's a future if he works for it. B-840, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Now employed. Seeking an opportunity in Middle West where independent carrier system is used. Not content to warm a chair, wants to become part of live organization. Twelve years' experience covering all positions circulation and mail room. First class producer. Best of references. Member I. C. M. A. Address Box B-879, Editor & Publisher.

BRIARCLIFF PROGRAM READY

Recreation Features Dominate at National Publishers' Assn. Convention

Recreation features for the fifth annual meeting of the National Publishers' Association to be held at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., Oct. 7 and 8, were announced this week.

Golf tournaments, tennis matches and moving pictures are on the program. Four cups are to be awarded golf winners—the President's cup, donated by late president H. M. Swetland for lowest net score for 36 holes; Curtis cup, donated by P. S. Collins, Curtis Publishing Company, second prize; Crowell cup, donated by Crowell Publishing Company, first prize for low net, 18 holes; and McGraw-Hill cup, donated by James H. McGraw, Sr., for lowest individual net score 18 holes.

Trophies for winners of tennis matches have been provided by Bernarr Macfadden, Macfadden Publications, and William P. Ahnelt, president, Pictorial Review Company.

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager.
15 years' experience morning, evening and Sunday papers, at liberty now. Box B-842, Editor & Publisher

Circulation Manager.
Mr. Publisher, one of the outstanding circulation managers of this country will be at leisure January 1st. Maybe you need this man. He is an executive with a record, quick to diagnose your circulation illness, knows the remedy and how to apply it. His practical experience covers many years with morning, evening and Sunday newspapers in large and medium size cities. He is neither old or young, but too big a man for his present position. He put on over 6000 new subscribers during the past four months for the paper he is now with. You are taking no chance with this man and you can get him on contract for a fair salary and bonus for cash paid increases. Write him for references, appointment and details. Address "Executive Circulation Manager," Box B-851, care Editor & Publisher. P. S.—Your inquiries will be treated with the strictest confidence.

Classified Manager.
A man, thoroughly developed in this most vital form of advertising, seeks a change. He has the touch of life to give some big paper's classified department—the ideas and ability to carry them through to that paper's readers and advertisers. Builds business by contracts, not stunts; service, not promises. Strong papers write Box B-859, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
2½ years on large daily as assistant. (Smith System.) No objection to second paper or will consider small town paper looking for a good solicitor to build up their classified. Young married man. Prefer New England or Eastern city. References from present employer. Moderate salary to start. Address Box B-874, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman
Open for position. Best references; 34 years old; married; twelve years head of some of the best newspapers in the South. Address Box B-871, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man.
Capable and experienced; young desk man desires place with paper of high standards where hard work, ability, intelligence and ideals count. University graduate; 24; at home with either local or telegraph. Now giving satisfaction in responsible position. Box B-876, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Daily newspaper editor wants situation as editor of western newspaper; strong editorial writer and news editor. Republican. Western experience. Box B-866, Editor & Publisher.

Editor and Editorial Writer.
College man, thoroughly experienced in desk work and feature writing, seeks position in New England or middle Eastern states. Box-872, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, Managing Editor, Feature Writer.
Years of experience in the editorial departments of several newspapers, including two of best known in country, have equipped me eminently for any of above places. No advancement here probable in near future. Have contributed to several magazines and seek permanent place only. Age 33, college education, married. South preferred, but will go anywhere. B-857, Editor & Publisher.

Linotype Operator.
Fast and accurate; care of machine. Desires steady position. Can come at once. Box B-873, Editor & Publisher.

News Editor.
One of the few news executives in America whose training has included Kansas City Star, Hearst, Scripps and tabloid news methods. If you demand individuality, pep and punch, address Box B-869, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
Thoroughly experienced, wants position with future in town from 20,000 up. Experience both in small town and big city. Can take any kind of assignment and desk job. Steady man. B-846, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Sports Editor.
Sports columnist and writer. Virile, vivid style. Prepared to take charge entire sports section. Prefer New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland. Best references. Address Box 221, 304 W. 31st St., New York City.

Sports Editor.
A sports editor who not only knows the sport game from top to bottom but who can write about them in an interesting manner is available to some newspaper in a live city anxious to put punch and color in its sports section. At present employed but desire change for personal reasons only. References will stand strict investigation Box B-87, Editor & Publisher.

Telegraph Editor.
Nine years experience on mid-west papers. Three years managing editor daily, 7,000 circulation. College man. B-877, Editor & Publisher.

University Graduate
wants to learn journalism. Opportunity to train a steady, intelligent and alert man to your own methods. B-868, Editor & Publisher.

What I Want
is a chance to take charge of a run down daily and build it up to leadership and profits. I can do it. Who offers me the job? B-878, Editor & Publisher.

Young Man,
36, with 2 years' experience in circulation work desires to connect with some live newspaper or magazine. At present employed as branch manager of a growing daily in the East. First-class references, and full details of qualifications and past record furnished. B-875, Editor & Publisher.

Young Newspaper Woman with Metropolitan experience desires editorial or secretarial position with magazine, syndicate, publishing house or literary person. "Newspaper Woman, 1622 Stevens Ave., Parsons, Kans."

HELP WANTED

Advertising Salesman
Wanted by Success Magazine, two live-wire, dependable advertising salesmen. Magazine experience and acquaintance with trade essential. Addres Editor Success, 251 Fourth Ave., New York City. Do not call for appointment before writing.

Circulation Manager Wanted.
State salary and experience. Prefer man who has been district manager on large paper. Morning Journal, Daytona, Fla.

Circulation Man
Wanted by Success Magazine, a live-wire, proved circulation man, who understands all branches of his business, including subscriptions and A. B. C. requirements, and can be relied upon to live up to them while getting business. Address Editor, Success, 251 Fourth Ave., New York City. Do not call for appointment before writing.

Feature Salesman Wanted
by high-class syndicate, handling some of the foremost features in the United States. The man we want must be a live-wire and must have record of successful salesmanship. If you can fill the bill, write your qualifications to The McNaught Syndicate, Times Bldg., New York City.

Editor and Advertising Manager.
California newspaper organization has opening for two capable editors, also advertising manager, abie to make investment of $2,500 or more. Present papers dominate fields. This not a promotion proposition, but opportunity for right men to make desirable connection with going organization of high standing and which is expanding. Salary $50-$60, with investment guaranteed. Tell all first letter. Box 2551, Station D, San Francisco.

CORRESPONDENTS CLEARED

Sec. Wilbur Exonerates Them for Undelivered Speech Release

Washington correspondents have been pronounced blameless by Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur in the matter of publication of an undelivered address, prepared by him but recalled when he canceled a speaking engagement in Denver Sept. 20. The standing committee of correspondents, therefore, has taken no action in the case, which seemed to raise a delicate question of newspaper ethics.

Publication of the address was made after it had been read by Senator Caraway of Arkansas at a political gathering in a Washington hotel.

How Senator Caraway obtained a copy of the speech has not been disclosed. His use of it drew sharp criticism not only from Washington newspaper men, but also in editorial columns of newspapers of his own political complexion, who held his reading of it violated all rules of the game.

Help Wanted

Managing Editor
in an afternoon daily, 15,000 circulation. If you have had thorough training on a newspaper of this size, write your experience in detail to the Publisher, Bayonne Times, Bayonne, N. J.

Subscription Solicitor
wanted for live weekly newspaper in rural and small city field. Southerner preferred. Pay and permanence depend on results. Good chance for hustler. Write, giving references. Box 10, Rockwood, Tennessee.

Wanted:
Advertising solicitor. Must know the game, be alive and a business getter. Position permanent. Fine field to work in. Evening Times, Sayre, Pa.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Best Newspaper Buy in Florida
is offered in one of the most talked of towns in State. No competition. Official paper for both city and county. Net cash profits last year 34%. This year over one-third greater with no extra effort. Opportunity of lifetime for experienced, aggressive newspaper man. Price, twenty thousand, cash. No terms. Need of money only reason for selling. For full particulars send bank references to Box B-847, Editor & Publisher.

MAILING LISTS

National Newspaper Reading Service
compiles mailing lists of births, deaths, engagements or marriages from original press clippings. Four Terrace, Buffalo, N. Y.

BOOKS, ETC.

Editors.
Editors interested in government ownership are requested to send for free leaflets giving story of navy yard wages' claims. A record of inefficiency and indifference to wages found due by United States Court of Claims. As attorney acting without charge for old men and women, I appeal to editors with good red Amreican blood, please send for the leaflets. George Hiram Mann, 80 Wall St., New York.

Situations Wanted

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept. MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

NOTICE

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

New York, September 26, 1924

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable October 15th, 1924, to preferred stockholders of record at the close of business October 6th, 1924. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

Printing Inks Increase in Value

The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the data collected at the biennial census of manufactures, 1923, the establishments engaged primarily in the manufacture of printing inks reported products valued at $29,412,122, an increase of 40.9 per cent, as compared with 1921, the last preceding census year. Ninety-nine establishments made reports.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

THE public things of a factory as a mammoth establishment employing hundreds of thousands of workers, yet the bulk of the American industries are made up of very small plants employing two to a score of men. What are the lesser industries of your city? Write short stories about each one telling of its products, how it has expanded, etc. It will make good reading and help to develop home consumption of home products. Advertisements can be obtained from these small factories which will help to increase a paper's size on an off day.—Harold J. Ashe, Long Beach, Cal.

"Your Column," conducted one week each by persons outstanding in various ways, will make a big hit. Permit the column conductor to make any legitimate use of the column during the time she or he is in charge. You'll find the stunt goes big in several ways.—B. A. Teeters, Springfield, O.

To bankers the Dawes plan and the German reparations pact are doubtlessly intelligible but to the laymen the wire service reports about them mean nothing. Even the editorials on those subjects are difficult to comprehend. Why can't some newspaper render a service to its readers and develop a feature that will tell us in everyday English just what the plan means in dollars and cents to us non-banking Americans?—C. A. Grimes.

The Montreal Daily Star runs on Saturdays an interesting column of church news entitled "The Church Everywhere," furnishing considerable general information about churches of more than purely local interest.—C. M. Litteljohn, Washington, D. C.

The names of city streets present good material for a daily or weekly feature. Many streets are named after famous personages—some local, others national—many with a history. Most readers never know who "so-and-so" street was named for until informed in this manner. Old residents might furnish interesting copy in this connection.—H. I. Hamilton.

Most newspaper readers like to read freak stories. San Francisco Chronicle each day runs from one to three good stories of this kind—short—on its first page under a standing head, "News Oddities of the Day," local, special dispatches and occasional stories from press associations supplying the requirements. Such a feature can be made of interest in many papers.—A. N.

Are you deriving full benefit from your market and financial pages through publishing the items most in demand in your territory? One paper wasn't certain so it published a ballot on the market page listing each of the markets and features of that department, and asking readers to check off those that interested them. Space was also left for suggestions by the reader. The replies resulted in the elimination of about 20 per cent of the markets that had been carried, and the addition of about as many new ones.—B. A. Teeters, Springfield, O.

We have a two-column set head "Did You Know That——" which we run over stories of out-of-the-ordinary local interest, such as one we ran about the four-rail hitching fence that once graced Public Square, etc. The old-timers help the feature by phoning or writing in suggestions for the weekly feature.—P. C. Reed, Alliance (Ohio) Review.

Has the retail price of coffee increased as a result of the war in Brazil, chief coffee center? Have restaurants raised prices? Is the five-cent cup of restaurant coffee doomed? Where would your coffee supply come from if the Brazil output were cut off by the revolution?—John H. A. Kelly, Norristown, Pa.

"Here's a Book I Like," is the name of an editorial column which the Portland (Me.) Sunday Telegram has inaugurated and is finding exceptionally popular. Each week some person, well known locally, is asked to name a book which he has read recently and liked; tell why he liked it and give a brief outline of the story. Two attractive features of the column are the introductory paragraph and the "Telegram Pos Crip." The introductory paragraph treats of almost anything except books, usually news events of the past week. From this a smooth transition into direct quotation of the person interviewed is made. The Pos Crip consists of a cartoon representing a miniature man registering extreme surprise who makes a sage remark about books or reading. A hand lettered two column head is used and the copy set across two columns with the Pos Crip cut at the bottom.—C. F. P., Portland, Me.

Interview the first traffic cop your community ever boasted. How did the assignment of policeman to guard and direct traffic begin? Were the police drawn into the roadway so often by congestion of horsedrawn vehicles that they finally got into the habit of stationing themselves at busy intersections? Ask the cop. What is being done today to control traffic, more serious problem now than ever?—John H. A. Kelly, Norristown, Pa.

The Des Moines News has offered the services of its Mr. Fixit to its readers for the purpose of investigating and securing action on complaints regarding laxity in civic affairs. Sidewalks that need to be repaired, paving which has been promised and has never materialized, trees which overhang walks and need to be trimmed, weeds that should be cut, undrained ponds which are breeding places for mosquitoes, unsanitary conditions in various sections of the city, etc., are all brought to his attention by readers. He makes a personal investigation, reports what he finds to the proper municipal authorities, and with the backing of his paper usually succeeds in having the trouble taken care of. A column dealing with the complaints he has received and the way they have been disposed of is a daily feature.—Bruce Cole.

NATIONAL ADVERTISING BULKS LARGE

(Continued from page 6)

In the six-day evening list are 38 newspapers, including nine of those listed under the evening and Sunday classification. Thirty cities are represented in this group, including all of the first ten.

Unique in this class of newspaper statistics is the third column of the table, giving the ratio in percentage of the national advertising to the total volume of each paper for the six months' period. There is no point in a limited table in totalling the total lineage and the national lineage of the papers listed and drawing a proportion from the result. It may, however, be significant to remind readers that the following proportions prevailed in the total lineage of the 870 newspapers whose figures were presented Sept. 13:

Morning papers, including Sunday—national was 17.6 per cent of total.

Evening papers, including Sunday—national advertising was 16.6 per cent of the total.

Evening papers, six-day only—no comparison available.

In the present table, the morning papers present a spread of 19.4 per cent, the Miami Herald's proportion of 11.6 being the smallest ratio listed and the Bridgeport Telegram's 31 per cent being the highest. Most of the ratios are included in a much narrower band, from 20 to 25 per cent.

Evening papers, with Sunday editions, are shown in this table to have extreme ratio limits of 10.9 for the Washington Star, and 34.3 for the Bridgeport Post. Two thirds of the ratios shown are below 20 per cent.

Evening newspapers, six days only, have their low ratio among those listed in the Washington Star's 11.1 per cent, and the Boston Traveler's 36.3 per cent. Twenty-five of the 38 newspapers listed had less than 20 per cent of their volume in national advertising.

This analysis holds half a dozen angles of interest for various branches of the advertising public, and it will be extended to the local display and classified lineage figures in forthcoming articles.

Like a Prairie Fire
the
Cross Word Puzzle Craze
Is Sweeping the Continent
Cash in on this craze, quick!
Wire for our Cross Word Puzzles, daily or weekly.
METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.,
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK

All-Star Features
Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction
Send now for
THE GREEN CATALOG
of
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
M. Koenigsberg, President
NEW YORK CITY

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES
Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other
BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY
The Ullman Feature Service
Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

"A Day In Court"
is the title of
A NEW FEATURE
by
RICHARD SELDEN HARVEY
Recent decisions of Supreme Courts That Bear on Everyday Life Told in Brief Narrative Form and Non-Technical Language
An Informative, Authentic, Popular Daily Service
Ask for Samples
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

NEA NEA
The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
Write for samples and rates
NEA NEA SERVICE INC. NEA
1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager
The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write
CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

New England's Wealth

Measured By Its Resources

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,414	.0275	.0175
Boston Globe	(M&E)	278,616	.50	.50
Boston Globe	(S)	332,083	.55	.55
Boston Post	(M)	362,520	.60	.60
Boston Post	(S)	367,600	.55	.55
Fall River Herald	(E)	15,271	.05	.05
Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,410	.055	.045
Haverhill Gazette	(E)	16,003	.055	.04
†††Lynn Item	(E)	16,517	.06	.045
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
New Bedford Standard-Mercury	(M&E)	32,565	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	27,334	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,604	.04	.035
†††Pittsfield Eagle	(E)	17,073	.04	.035
Salem News	(E)	21,154	.09	.07
Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,551	.04	.03
Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,525	.05	.04
Portland Press Herald	(M&S)	31,115(A)	.08	.08
Portland Express	(E)	28,400	.10	.07
Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	28,734	.10	.07
†††Waterville Sentinel	(M)	5,999	.035	.025

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,328	.0375	.025
†††Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,518	.03	.034
Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	28,846	.10	.07

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

†††Newport Daily News	(E)	6,134	.0336	.0296
†††Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,711	.07	.07
†††Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,075	.17	(B).23
Providence Journal	(M)	33,534	.10	(B).23
Providence Journal	(S)	61,142	.15	.15
Providence News	(E)	26,605	.07	.07
†††Providence Tribune	(E)	23,081	.10	.09
Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,499	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,652	.05	.05

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

Barre Times	(E)	6,885	.03	.025
†††Bennington Banner	(E)	3,059	.0125	.0125
Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,693	.05	.05
Rutland Herald	(M)	10,548	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	46,117	.15	.15
Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,565	.10	.10
Hartford Courant	(M)	31,940	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†††Hartford Times	(E)	46,997	.12	.12
Meriden Record	(M)	7,212	.045	.03
†††Middletown Press	(E)	7,988	.0325	.025
†††New Haven Register	(E&S)	40,106	.12	.11
New London Day	(E)	11,429	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,624	.03	.03
†††South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	3,771	.025	.025
Stamford Advocate	(E)	8,994	.0375	.03
Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	21,951	.08	.07
Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,181	.06	.05

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
(A) Circulation daily edition only.

NATIONAL advertisers starting new advertising campaigns or those who would extend their sales and distribution, would do well to consider the advantages which are offered in these six states—New England.

Density of population—261 persons per square mile, average for the country 35.5.

Wealth of population — 40% of the nation's savings deposits are in New England. Latest figures show per capita wealth at $3306, with the average for the country at $2918.00.

New England has highly developed transportation service.

Unexcelled seaport facilities.

Highest proportion of hard surfaced roads in the country.

Large number of highly skilled workers.

Abundance of public, private, technical schools, colleges and universities.

Abundance of water power; sufficient to overcome New England's remoteness from coal mines.

This is a coveted market for manufacturers of specialties and food supplies of all kinds.

The list of papers herewith will help you to place your commodities.

RECOGNITION

Recognition is the fruit of accomplishment

The circulation record of The New York Telegram and Evening Mail since the consolidation last January has been so satisfying—the sale of the newspaper is so thoroughly local (98.5 per cent within 50 miles of City Hall) and the rates for space are so attractive—that it is no source of surprise that for seven months The Telegram-Mail has continuously ranked third in lineage, The Sun and The Evening Journal being the only New York evening newspapers with a greater total.

Among prominent national accounts that have recently made contracts with The Telegram-Mail are:

Boyce & Veeder Co. (Boyce-ite) Colgate & Co. Kops Bros. (Nemo Corsets) Royal Baking Powder Co. (Royal Gelatine) Standard Milling Co. (Hecker's Flour) Walk-Over Shoes Am. Cranberry Exchange Carbona

CONTRACTS NOW IN FORCE ON TELEGRAM-MAIL

MISCELLANEOUS
Fain Knitting Mills
Dr. R. Geyser
E. T. Hartinger
Knickerbocker Ice
Liebmann Breweries
H. G. McFadden
McCray Refrigerator
N. Y. Telephone Co.
Nulife Co.
Order of Owls
Ovington Bros.
Phila. Jack O'Brien
Ed Pinaud
M. Propp & Co.
Swift Co.
Sibley Pitman
Maison Bernard
Serv. & Comfort Sta.
Standard Oil Co.
W. & J. Sloane
Dr. Bloom
Textile Upholstery
Vacuum Cl. Spec. Co.
Westinghouse Elec.
Edw. Weck
L. E. Waterman
Yellow Taxi Corp.
Boyce & Veeder Co.
Groppers
J. Wess & Sons
Colgate & Co.
Palmolive Co.
Fred'k D. Ramm
House of Health
Lightolier Co.
Frost Lamps
N. Y. Edison Co.
L. I. Duck Growers
I. B. Kleinert Co.
Procter & Gamble
Bohn Refrigerator
United El. Lt. & P. Co.
National Woolen Ex.
Agfa Products

FOOD
Amer. Cranberry
Borden Farm Prod.
Nucoa
Cushman's
Childs
Lea & Perrin's
Easton's Mayonnaise
Empire State Dairy
General Baking
H. A. Heinz
Horlick's Malted Milk
J. M. Horton & Co.
India Tea
Joint Coffee
Thos. J. Lipton
Loft, Inc.
C. F. Mueller & Co.
Mission Garden Tea
McCann's Jam
E. Pritchard
Seeman Bros.
Otto Stahl
Salada Tea
Schraft's Stores
Shults Bread
Ward Baking Co.
Standard Milling
Liebig's Malt
Marshak Maltomilk
Corn Products
Sheffield Farms
Johann Hoff Malt
Nedick's
Royal Baking

FINANCIAL
Chase Nat'l Bank
H. L. Doherty
Dillon Read
Equitable Trust
Foster McConnell
Hornblower & Weeks
Kennedy & Co.
Liberty Nat'l Bank
Lee Higginson Co.
Lawyers' Title & Tr.
J. P. Morgan
G. L. Miller & Co.
Mech. & Metals B'k
A. E. Moysey
National City Co.
Public Service Co.
J. W. Seligman
Speyer & Co.
U. S. Mtg. & Trust
Irving Savings
Kuhn, Loeb Co.
Guaranty Trust Co.
Emigrant Ind'l Bank
Bonbright & Co.
Lehman Bros.
Central Union Trust
Henry Clews

REAL ESTATE
Andrew Brose
Conrad Glaser
Mandel Ehrich
Jos. P. Day
Hutchinski Realty

MEDICAL Bellans
Carlsbad Prod.
Clinical Lab.
Joint Ease
Dearborn Supply
Delsen Chem. Co.
Forhans
Kem-O-Zone
Thos. Leeming
Pepsodent Co.
Paris Medicine Co.
H. S. Peterson
Reserve Remedy
Scott & Bowne
R. L. Watkins
Herpicide Co.
Carlton & Hovey Co.
Allen S. Olmsted
San-I-Sal
E. Laurence & Co.
Dr. Ward
Marmola
Potter Drug & C. Co.

S.S. EXCURSION AND TRAVEL RESORTS
C. R. R. of N. J.
Cunard S. S. Co.
Canadian Pacific
Central Hudson
D. & H. Steamboat
French Line
Furness Bermuda
Hudson Nav. Co.
Hudson R. Day Line
Italian-American
Iron Steamboat Co.
Lehigh Val. R. R. Co.
N. Y., N. H. & H.
N. England S. S. Co.
N. Y. Central Lines
Penn. System
Seaboard Air Line
United Amer. Lines
United Fruit Co.
Lackawanna R. R. Co.
International Mer. Mar.

AUTOS
Fiat
Ford Motor Co.
General Motors
Garland Auto Co.
Haynes Auto
Hupp Motors
Hudson & Essex
Nash Motors
Nordyke & Marmon
Peerless Motor
Packard Motor Car
Rickenbacher
Reo Motor Car Co.
Studebaker Corp.
Stutz Motor Co.
Standard Textile Prod.
Times Sq. Auto Co.
Willys Overland
B. F. Goodrich
Wm. Parkinson
Firestone Tires
Maxwell Chalmers

SPECIALTY SHOPS
Mme. Cluzelle
Mme. Jenne
Jno. Forsythe
Hamilton Garment
Jean Jordeau
A. Jaeckel
Kops Bros.
Nat Lewis
D. Maxon Co.
Russeks
Rhodes & Co.
Wm. Jackman
Thompson Barlow
Wagner Furs
Hudson Bay Fur
French Fur Shop
Orkins
Streng
Jahmes & Co.
Mark Cross
Crouch & Fitzgerald

JEWELRY
Gorham Co.
Tiffany & Co.

SPORTING GOODS
Abercrombie & Fitch
Winchester Stores

NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES
N. Y. Evening Post
Star Pub. Co.
Street & Smith
Herald-Tribune

FURNITURE
Ludwig Bauman
C. Ludwig Bauman
S. Bauman
Curtis Co.
Cowperthwait
Geiger & Braverman
W. A. Hathaway
Clark & Gibby
Kalmus Bros.
Sachs
Deutsch Bros.
Rudolph Roemer
Prospect Fur. Co.
Flint & Horner
Spear & Co.
Lennon & Co.

MEN'S WEAR
M. Arnheim
B. V. D.
Georges
Long's Hats
Monroe Clothes
Phillips Clothing
Herbert Sanger
White & White
Cluett Peabody
Ritchie & Cornell
Finkelstein & Maisel
Sam Blum
Alfred Benjamin
Rogers Peet

DEPT. STORES
B. Altman
Arnold Constable
Best & Co.
Bloomingdale
Koch & Co.
Frederick Loeser
Franklin Simon
Saks & Co.
Stern Bros.
Jas. A. Hearn
Gimbel Bros.
Macy

SHOES
A. Alexander
Blyn Shoe
Jas. S. Coward
W. L. Douglas
Frank Bros.
Andrew Geller
G. R. Kenney
Queen Quality
Walk-Over Shoes
Cammeyer
I. Miller & Sons
Hanan Sons

MUSICAL INST'S
Aeolian Co.
Columbia Graph.
M. Hohner & Co.
Kranich & Bach
Mathushek Piano
Pease Piano Co.
Sterling Piano Co.
Rudolph Wurlitzer
Hardman Peck

TOBACCO
General Cigar
Liggett & Myers
E. Regensburg
A. Schulte
United Cigar Stores
Amer. Tobacco Co.

OPTICAL
M. H. Harris

Average Net Paid Circulation [SIX MONTHS JAN. 26-JULY 26] 220,249

Western Representative
J. E. LUTZ
Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

Publication Office
73 DEY STREET

Eastern Representative
DAN A. CARROLL
110 East 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—THOUSANDS IN CHICAGO FOR FALL ADVERTISING CONFERENCES

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 20 | NEW YORK, OCTOBER 11, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

Features that are carefully selected and edited to build circulation for The News, New York's Picture Newspaper, and for The Chicago Tribune. The News, in four years, amassed the largest newspaper circulation in America and The Tribune is second only to The News in the morning field. The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate offers only features used regularly in The Tribune or in The News of New York.

Blue Ribbon
FICTION
First Run Work of First Class Authors
Blue Ribbon Serials for Sunday (one release a week)
Blue Ribbon Serials Week day (six days a week)
Blue Ribbon Short Stories—from 8,000 words down
Well Written Tabloid Short Stories of 300-600 words

BLACK & WHITE Strips
The Gumps by Sidney Smith.
Gasoline Alley by Frank King.
Harold Teen by Carl Ed.
Winnie Winkle by M. M. Branner.
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard.
Smitty by Walter Berndt.
Little Orphan Annie by Harold Gray

COMICS IN COLORS
8 Chicago Tribune Comics offered in an 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.
THE GUMPS
By Sidney Smith
GASOLINE ALLEY
By Frank King
HAROLD TEEN
By Carl Ed
WINNIE WINKLE
By Branner
SMITTY
By Berndt
MOON MULLINS
By Willard
ONE ROUND TEDDY
By Sals Bostwick
LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE
By Harold Gray

GOOP ETIQUETTE
By Gelett Burgess
W. E. HILL
PAGE OF COMICS
in Gravure or Black and White
HEROES OF THE WEEK
Half Page by Sals Bostwick.
CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon—Carey Orr—Gaar Williams
BURNS MANTLE
Weekly New York Theatre letter
WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED CHILDREN'S STORY
Raymond Kelly
DR. EVANS
The first and best of newspaper Medical Writers
WEEKLY COMIC STRIPS
JOLLY JINGLES
By Hunter
EMBARRASSING MOMENTS
By McCullough
GEORGE M. COHAN
Weekly Article
WEEKLY CROSS-WORD PUZZLE
SENTENCE SERMONS
Roy L. Smith
Daily and Sunday
Men's Fashions, Women's Fashions, Woods and Waters, Farm and Garden, Love and Beauty, Cookery, Etiquette, Home Harmonious, Line o' Type, Sports, Science and Embroidery, Club Ethics, Wake, In Motordom, Outline of Science, Character Reading, Weekly Home Page, Women's page and page of Sports.
LEASED WIRE Service
Foreign—National—Local PACIFIC & ATLANTIC
Photos
Organized by the Chicago Tribune and The New York Daily News
25 Park Place, New York

Add a great literary critic to your staff

H. L. MENCKEN
"The rough boy among the critics."

WHEN Blue Ribbon fiction was inaugurated by the Chicago Tribune, it was an important step in the evolution of the better Sunday newspaper. It placed many American newspapers—including The Tribune—on a higher literary plane.

Another step in the same direction is a new series of weekly articles on literary subjects by H. L. Mencken. These articles will be syndicated through The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

Mr. Mencken is editor of the American Mercury. He is perhaps the foremost literary critic in America for his style and his ideas are so different and original that his books of literary essays become best sellers.

Features of this kind help to increase the number of intelligent readers, who are the backbone of advertising response. H. L. Mencken is the literary critic that great numbers like to read. Write or wire for rates and proofs.

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE
Newspapers SYNDICATE
Tribune Square Chicago
Buy Leadership - - and promote it!

If YOU buy a non-standardized composing machine
TO-DAY and a "NEW MODEL" is introduced TO-MORROW
what happens to the value of YOUR INVESTMENT?

Intertype Standardization protects you against loss through obsolescence.

All Intertype improvements perfected from year to year have been STANDARDIZED and can be applied to outstanding Standardized Intertypes.

No Standardized Intertype has ever become obsolete.

Write for literature—or wire collect if you'd like to see an Intertype representative.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION, 50 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Branch Offices: CHICAGO, Rand-McNally Building; MEMPHIS, 77 McCall Street; SAN FRANCISCO, 560 Howard Street. Sales Offices: BOSTON, 49 Federal Street; LOS ANGELES, 1240 South Main Street. Canadian Representatives: Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd., TORONTO. British Branch: Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, King's Cross, LONDON, W. C. 1.

INTERTYPE

If Hotel News stands Could Talk

¶ When a Baltimorean, away on a vacation or a business trip, goes up to a hotel news stand and looks for a "home-town" paper—

¶ It's usually one of the Sunpapers that he carries away.

¶ He's been brought up on the Sunpapers and if he's the same as most other men from Baltimore, he learned what "S-U-N" spelt long before he solved the mystery of "C-A-T."

¶ They begin to read the Sunpapers early in this town of ours, and the habit sticks through life. Morning, evening and Sunday a copy is delivered at Baltimore's front door and whether there's a mat saying "Welcome" at that door or not, the Sunpaper's welcome is assured.

¶ Not many in numbers—but our out-of-town news stand sales are significant. Here at home we take more pride in the fact that the greater part of Sunpaper circulation is through carrier delivery direct to the home.

September Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) . .	244,599
Sunday	178,526

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

Philadelphia

One of America's most important

RADIO MARKETS

Radio sets and equipment are pre-eminently adapted to home use and entertainment and Philadelphia is without doubt one of the largest single markets for Radio.

There are about half a million separate homes in Philadelphia and its suburbs.

The boys and girls, as well as their parents, in this market are on the look-out for the new things in Radio and wise manufacturers are pushing the idea of Radios for Christmas gifts.

The Bulletin's Radio Columns are carefully read each day because The Bulletin gives its readers reliable and helpful information.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid circulation for the six months ending September 30, 1924—

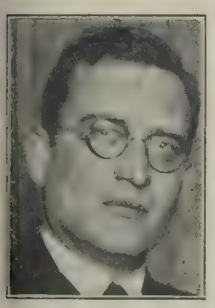
516,609 copies a day

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in the United States.

NEW YORK—814 Park-Lexington Bldg. (46th St. & Park Ave.)
CHICAGO—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
DETROIT—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 117 Lafayette Blvd.
SAN FRANCISCO—Harry J. Wittschen, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1924—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER



Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, OCTOBER 11, 1924 No. 20

Hoover Denounces Radio Advertising; Press Fights Super-Power Station

Newspaper Delegates at Washington Radio Conference Declare Paid Space on Air is Menace to Small Stations and Monopolistic—News Question Also Discussed

NEWSPAPER delegations to the Third Annual Radio Conference in Washington this week lined up solidly in opposition to the so-called super-power station proposal of the big broadcasting companies and aided materially in framing the compromise arrangement which will insure small power stations against injury.

WALTER A. STRONG

The newspaper representatives, speaking virtually for the 41 broadcasting stations operated in conjunction with publications throughout the country, plunged into the fight immediately upon the suggestion that super-power stations were in contemplation. The proposal of the super-power experiment was made to the conference on the opening day by David Sarnoff, vice-president of the Radio Corporation of America, and started a controversy that overshadowed all the other problems of radio development brought before the gathering.

Mr. Sarnoff announced that the Radio Corporation, the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company were ready to begin the immediate erection of a great super-power station at "some point outside the city of New York," located with due regard to minimum of interference with listeners and with local stations maintained by other interests. Similar super-power stations would follow, he said, if the experiment, which will go as high as 50 kilowatts, is successful.

The newspaper delegation, as one group of the conference, entered a strong protest in connection with similar protests from other groups. Belief that super-power stations would ruin the small broadcasting stations was back of the protests, and thousands of telegrams reached Secretary Hoover and delegates adding strength to sentiment against the proposal.

The resolutions committee of the newspaper group appointed as the result of the meeting called by Walter A. Strong, chairman of the Radio Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, protested specifically against removing the existing restrictions upon the power of broadcasting stations. Representatives of the Detroit News, Pittsburgh Press, Oakland Tribune, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Los Angeles Times, Dallas News and Chicago Daily News, who composed the committee, presented the following recommendations:

"Believing that the question of increased power of stations beyond the present governmental limitation of 1,000 watts is the most vital one to come before the conference, because it concerns the future satisfactory service to the great army of radio 'listeners-in,' the committee strenuously opposes removing the present restrictions on the power of stations. It is the conviction of the committee that increase power will destroy the ability of the radio listener to select his program of either local or national interest and tend toward monopolistic control of broadcasting. Any tendency looking toward control of broadcasting by a limited number of broadcasters, which necessarily follows increased power under present conditions, is most dangerous in the same way that the elimination of all but a few newspapers would be most dangerous.

"The committee believes that ample opportunity is given for full development of radio science by experimental licenses to be operated on wave lengths outside the present broadcasting bands. Retaining the present limitation of power, in the opinion of the committee, would in no way interfere with broadcasting of programs or events of national importance through successful existing stations using forms of inter-connecting broadcasting service, the cost of which, however, should be controlled on a uniform and reasonable basis. The committee pledges, so far as posible, cooperation in the broadcasting of events of national importance as suggested by the Secretary of Commerce.

"The committee believes that in the interest of the listener some method should be found to protect existing stations against new stations by sufficient differences in wave lengths and that priority rights of existing stations rendering satisfactory service to the public should be recognized as far as possible.

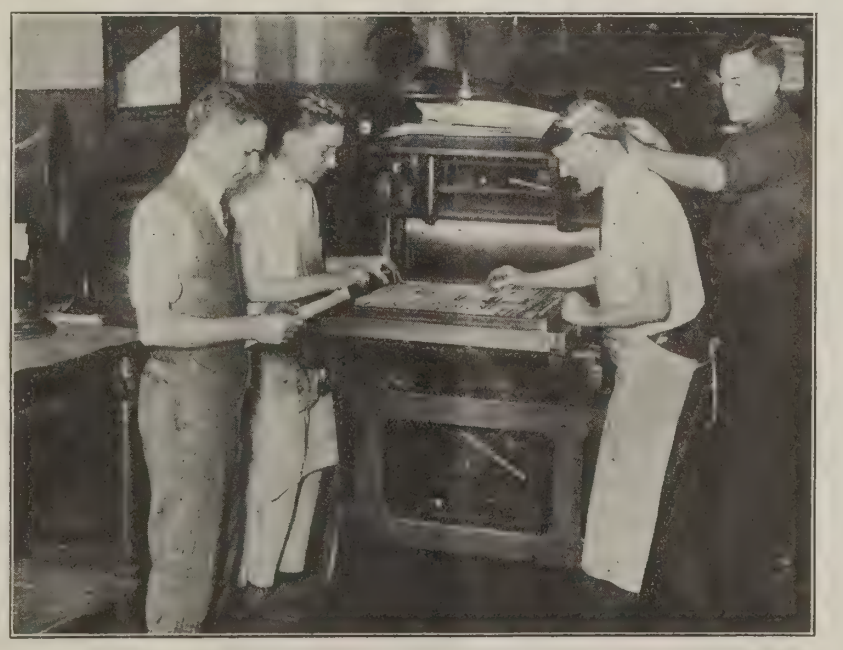
"In order to comply with the request of Secretary Hoover for specific recommendations on other matters, the committee recommends that government departments minimize to a greater extent interference of one form or another which makes good broadcasting service to the public difficult and impossible. It was agreed that the Department of Commerce be vested with the authority to compel stations to eliminate all harmonic transmissions and to maintain in constant use a frequency indicator approved by the Bureau of Standards. The committee pledged the publisher-broadcaster to a program of education to instruct the listener-in to avoid unnecessary interference caused by certain receiving sets.

"For the benefit of future radio broadcasting development, it was recommended that at least 10 per cent of the wave lengths below 150 meters be set aside for special use of broadcasting stations."

The question of advertising on the radio—a subject now engaging the attention of the newspapers because of the tendency to make the radio a means of advertising and publicity ventures, brought the following recommendation from the newspaper group:

"It is the belief of the committee that listeners are opposed to any form of direct advertising."

That view appeared to represent the sentiment of the majority of the conference and was expressed at the opening of the session by Secretary Hoover.



"I believe the quickest way to kill broadcasting," asserted Mr. Hoover, "would be to use it for direct advertising. The reader of the newspaper has an option whether he will read an ad or not, but if a speech by the President is to be used as the meat in a sandwich of patent medicine advertisements, there will be no radio left. To what extent it may be employed for what we call 'indirect advertising' I do not know and only experience with reactions of the listeners can tell."

Mr. Hoover explained that he did not believe there was any practical method of payment from receivers, but he suggested the possibility of mutual organization by broadcasters of a service for themselves similar to the press associations which would furnish programs of national events, arranging for the transmission and distribution on some sort of financial basis as the press associations gather and distribute news among their members.

J. R. Knowland, publisher of the Oakland Tribune, a member of the committee, expressed the opinion that listeners

(Continued on page 30)

MAKING BOX SCORE FROM RADIO

THE New York Sun utilized radio this week to break speed records in printing World's Series box scores.

Instead of compiling the box score from wire dispatches, a compositor working beside a radio loud speaker, set the box by hand as the game progressed.

A special room near the composing room was utilized. The compositor, Pat Scanlon, an old time baseball player, translated the play-by-play account into figures under the familiar headings, making changes inning by inning.

At the first of the ninth, when time was precious, the nearly completed box was placed in its page form on a steam table in the composing room, where from another loud speaker the few remaining plays were recorded. A nearby linotype simultaneously set the last of the play-by-play account.

Larry Shirf, make-up editor, stood by to approve the page. Jack Cunningham, stereotype foreman, directed the making of the mat.

Within 10 seconds after the last "put out" in the ninth, the mat was on the page. In less than five minutes the presses were running with the complete box score and play-by-play.

Keats Speed, managing editor of the Sun declared the system worked smoothly and without error. Wire accounts of the games were available at all times in case of radio interference. The new method eliminated the time formerly lost in handling telegraphic copy.

During the Democratic national convention the Sun used the same system to record the votes by states as they were announced from the convention hall, and that, too, was a time-saver.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER CUTS TO $70 A TON

Announces $3 Decrease Per Ton on 1925 Newsprint Contract—Move Follows Belgo Price Drop of Last Week

Newsprint prices continue their downward trend.

Added to the announcement last week that the Belgo Paper Company, Quebec, would lower its quotation to $70 a ton f. o. b. mill, International Paper Company this week stated that it, too, would quote a similar price to contract customers in 1925, marking a reduction of $3, from its present $73 a ton figure.

International dropped $2 a ton from $75 in the middle of the current year. Great Northern Paper Company, according to report, is already quoting newsprint at $70. The former concern has a capacity of about 1,000 tons daily, leading all other American or Canadian newsprint makers.

International is announcing its 1925 price earlier than usual at the request of customers.

The announcement of International Paper Company's promised reduction given out by J. L. Fearing, sales manager, follows:

"Effective Jan. 1, 1925, and continuing through 1925, the International Paper Company's price for its standard roll news to its contract customers in the United States will be $70 per ton, f. o. b. mill.

"We are making this announcement earlier than usual at the special request of many of our customers who wish to know their costs as far in advance as possible."

SERIES PICTURES SPEEDED

United Newspictures Rushes Ball Photos via Sky, Land, and Water

United Newspictures, working in cooperation with the New York World and assisted by representatives of the U. S. Army and New York Police scored a notable achievement in transporting pictures of the first game of the World Series from Washington to New York.

The motor boat of Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, in command at Governor's Island, was pressed into service to assist this journalistic effort.

Three representatives of United Newspictures, snapped the ballplayers on Griffith's Field.

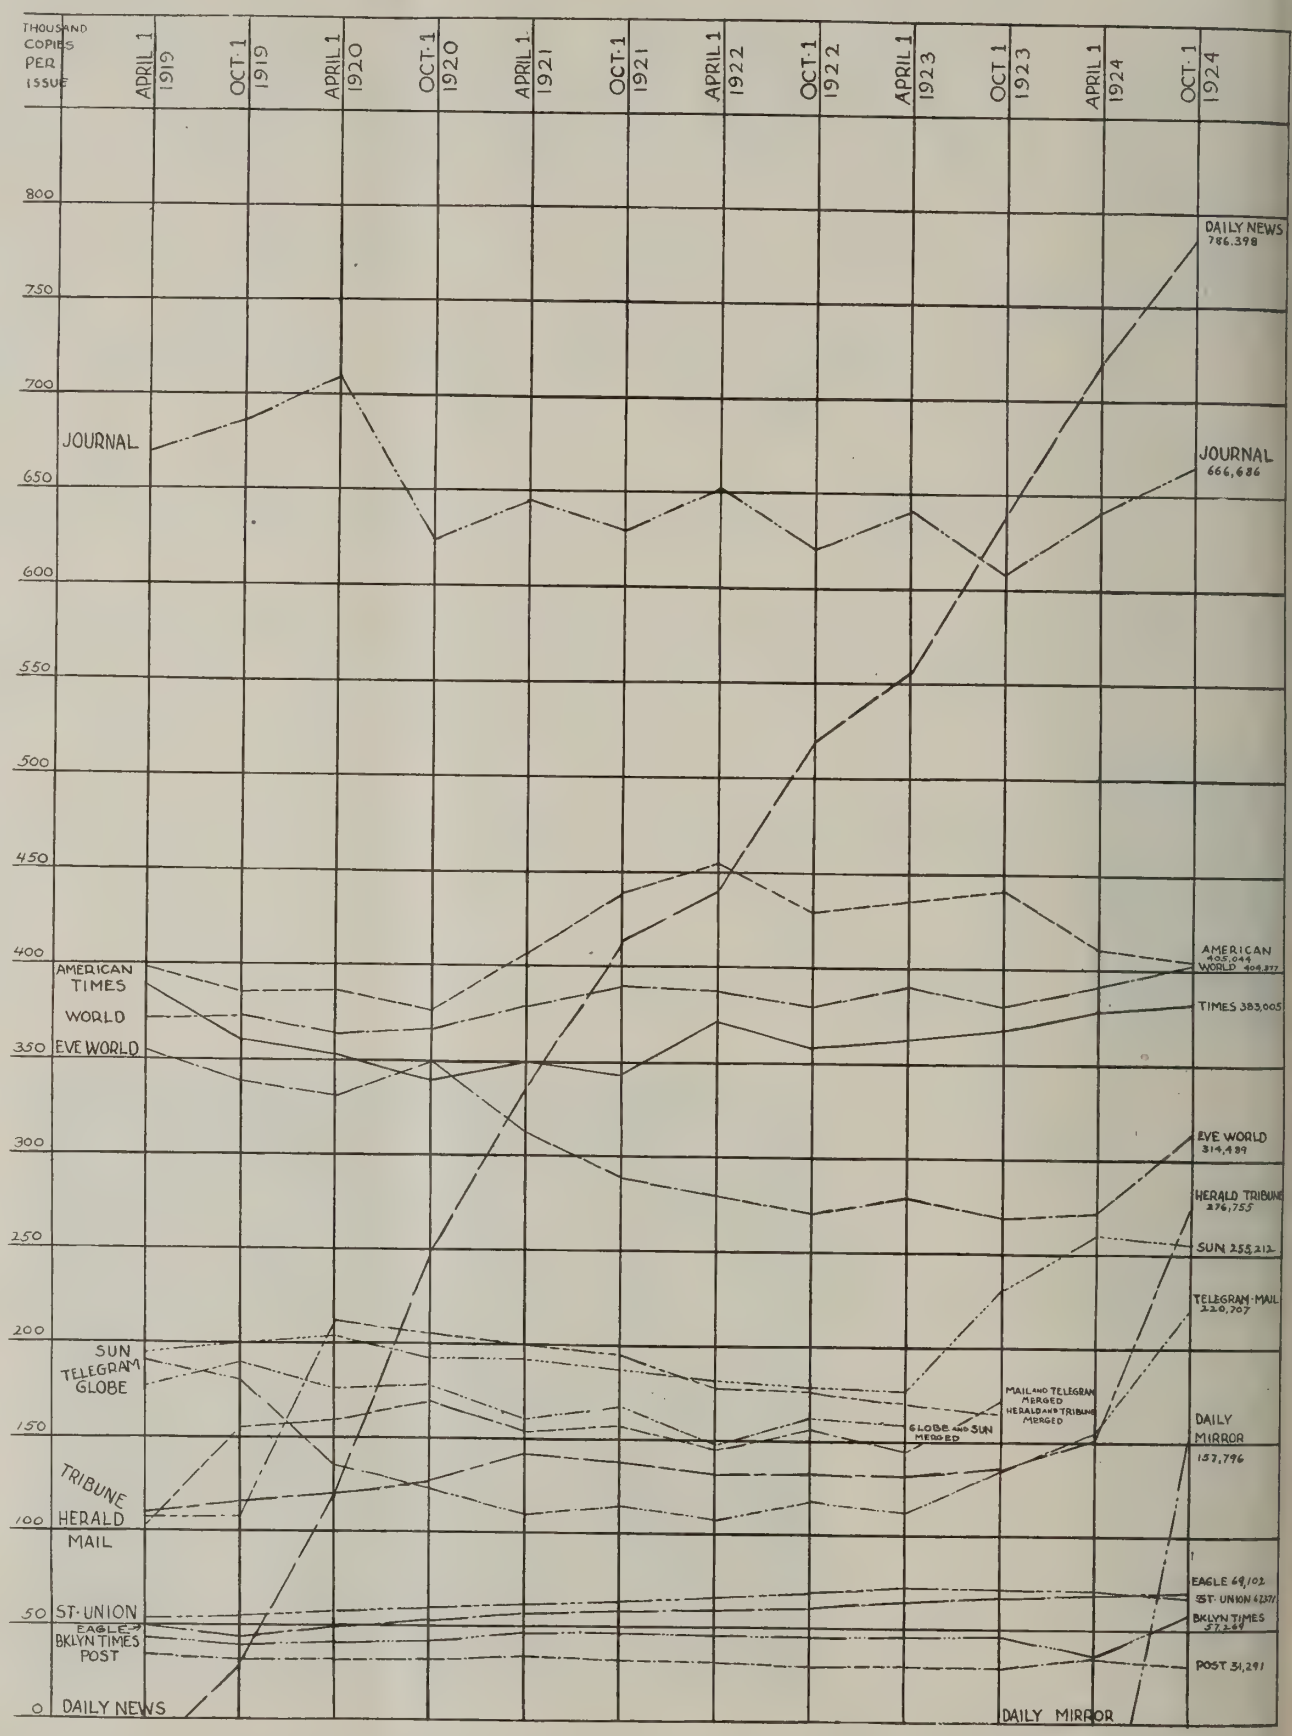
The films, tied in packages covered with canvas and rubber, were placed in a fast automobile at 2:35 p. m., and with police clearing the way were rushed to Bolling Field, arriving at 2:55 p. m.

There a Curtis Oriole plane was in waiting, in charge of Pilot Andrews, and within three minutes of the arrival of the automobile this fast air cruiser was off on its flight to New York.

The trip from Bolling Field to Bedloe's Island was made at a speed of about ninety-five miles per hour. At 5:38 p. m. the package of pictures was dropped from the plane into the water, near the island.

The package was picked up there by Gen. Bullard's launch. From the launch they were passed to Police Patrol Boat No. 5 and taken to the Battery in four minutes.

Here an automobile owned by Newspictures was waiting and with a detail of police for an escort took the negatives to the printing and developing rooms on 8th avenue in record time.



Clarke Enters Realty Field

Sydney R. Clarke, former secretary and manager of the Advertising Club of New York, is now associated with Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., real estate, New York.

N. Y. World Planning Special Section

Celebrating the Centennial of Fifth Avenue as a business thoroughfare, the New York World will issue on Sunday Nov. 16, a separate section devoted to this anniversary.

CIRCULATION CURVES CLIMBED IN N. Y. LAST SUMMER

CIRCULATION increases were general in New York City during the six months which ended Sept. 30, some of the papers making extraordinary gains and none losing appreciably in daily average net paid circulation. This development was to be expected in view of the several consolidations effected during the past year.

Of the three new dailies, only the Daily Mirror issued a statement of circulation, showing an average of more than 157,000 daily since its establishment in May. The Graphic and the Bulletin will make their maiden statements next April.

The above chart shows the course of circulations since April 1, 1919, covering the period of high circulation at the end of the war. It indicates the start and subsequent course of the tabloid Daily News, the only new paper to appear since the war until this year. It also indicates the absorption of the Mail, Herald and Globe and its effect, both upon the absorbers and on their competitors. It appears, incidentally, to indicate that there is still a potential army of readers for the tabloid. Despite the speed which has marked the Mirror's growth, the skyrocket trajectory of the Daily News was not perceptibly flattened during the six months.

Notable gains are also credited to the Journal, World and Evening World, Times and Brooklyn Times, and naturally to the Herald-Tribune and the Telegram-Mail, beneficiaries of recent mergers.

Tributes to Minnesota Editor

Frank A. Day, owner of the Fairmont (Minn.) Daily Sentinel, recently completed 50 years of editorship of his newspaper. Many Minnesota newspapers printed editorial tributes. He is known as "Minnesota's greatest newspaper character."

To Aid Ad Men Visiting England

Samson Clark, of Samson Clark & Co., Ltd., London advertising agency, as Hon. Secretary of the Thirty Club of London has established an information and hospitality service in the London business district for American advertising men visiting England.

CO-OPERATIVE CIRCULATION THAT WORKS

For 50 Years Philadelphia Morning Papers Have Joined Forces to Bridge Gap Between Pressroom and Breakfast Table, Speedily, Cheaply, and Completely—War Is Outlawed

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

FOR more than 50 years, the morning newspapers of Philadelphia have operated a system of city distribution unique in the annals of newspaper circulation.

Publishers have built up for themselves a miniature League of Nations, completely outlawing the possibility of war in the daily city delivery of their newspapers.

Labor troubles are unknown. Operation is extremely cheap. By the system, men of more than average intelligence take the rôle of distributors.

Morning newspapers are carried into nearly 200,000 homes by breakfast.

That is what is accomplished in Philadelphia, city of homes, and the immediate suburbs, by the unique jointly operated carrier system used there by the 4 morning dailies, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the North American, the Record, and the Public Ledger.

It is speedier than it sounds. A matter of one or two hours in the early morning finds weekday papers on Quaker City doorsteps. Sunday takes little longer, despite weightier bundles.

"Here is a city edition carrier route system that is almost 100 per cent effective," say the veteran circulators in charge.

It is a miniature League of Nations. A system that guarantees the publishers that one-third of their circulation will be placed right on the tables, almost, at Philadelphia's first meal each day.

The administration is in the hands of the four circulation managers: J. M. Annenberg, Morning Public Ledger; Howard Lee, Inquirer; James L. Farley, North American, and J. J. Abbott, of the Record.

I watched the seeming miracle performed this week. Presses started at precise minutes, although sometimes mechanical troubles bring delay. Trucks drew up to newspaper curbs with timetable regularity. Trolley cars sped along tracks, spreading newspapers from the center of the city to Willow Grove, Torresdale, Darby, Germantown, Chestnut Hill, Frankfort and surrounding suburbs.

It is in watching such spectacles that editorial men are made to consider themselves mere cogs in a huge manufacturing business and not members of a profession. Circulation managers become the all important gods, deposing the rulers of Parnassus.

How is it done?

Sit with me before the large wall map of Philadelphia and Camden in the office of a Philadelphia newspaper circulator.

See a Gargantuan spider's web of narrow streets of homes, caught here by Chestnut Hill, there by Laundale, Tacony, Pensaukin, Haddonfield, Barrington, Brooklawn, and there by the Philadelphia Navy Yard on the Delaware.

Within this spider's web live a million and a half people; people alive to the interest of news; people soon to awake and find that news in neatly folded form at their doorways.

Look closer at the map. Now you see the lines drawn in, dividing the city into routes or districts.

If you count, you will find there are 261 of these routes. Each one is owned by a carrier.

They are worth money, these routes. The man who owns one has the right to distribute the four morning dailies in his territory. He buys his weekday papers from the publisher at 1 1/16 cents and sells them for two. Sunday he pays 7 and sells for 10.

These prices depend upon whether or not he pays his bill by the 15th of each month for all papers received the previous month. Otherwise, the price becomes 1¼ for the dailies and 7½, Sundays. But the circulators claim that in nearly all cases bills are promptly paid.

The total value of the 261 routes is estimated at half a million dollars. They are bought, sold, transferred like houses. In his route the owner is czar. Yet his route, and its disposition, lies in the publisher's hands. Failure to pay all to the newspaper, may cause a route owner to lose his route, which may be turned over by any of the publishers to a worthier man.

Prices of these routes on the market ordinarily range from $2,000 to $25,000. Only the other day, however, one route owner refused $25,000 for his district. One man may own 2 or 3 routes, as is frequently the case, as long as he takes good care of them and gives honest and fair service to all papers.

When the routes were first divided up by the morning newspapers, they were given to men selected by the publishers. These men were allowed to build up their routes. In time they came to have their present monetary value.

Here. Be specific. Pick out on the map a $10,000 territory. It is in the northwest section of the city, bounded on the south by York street, on the north by Alleghany, and on the west by 29th. Three squares east, west, south and north. In it are 3,000 homes.

To operate a typical district it requires one manager and 3 carrier boys, on the average. A $10,000 district yields the investor between $90 to $100 a week.

A man with so much money to invest is superior in intelligence to the ordinary newspaper distributor. He is a small business man. He is given a month's credit by the newspapers. Each subscriber means money in his pocket. He fights to keep him, and gives efficient service. He sends the bills for the four different newspapers and collects. Then he pays the bills he owes the publishers through the circulation managers and makes adjustments to his orders.

To help him the publishers have devised and placed in operation in all the different routes a uniform collecting system. The same type of book to keep accounts is used by all morning dailies. Collections are made usually every two weeks.

"This part of the distribution system doesn't cost the publishers a cent," one is told. "They can't lose."

After studying the map, now wait for city edition press time. It is 2:30 a. m. News of the day has been collected from the city, state, and distant lands, stereotyped, clamped to cylinders and the pressman has thrown forward the lever. Huge octuple presses are roaring. Three of the papers which have early street editions have been selling their newspapers since 9 o'clock. Trucks have carried other editions to trains.

The bundles of papers, which now move from the delivery room, are for Philadelphia homes. They are thrown into trucks and carried to designated trolley car stops.

Ten freight trolley cars weekly and 15 Sundays are used by the four newspapers co-operatively to supply the 261 districts. Aboard each trolley, each newspaper has one messenger, who is under the direction of the publishers. Each newspaper has several of the messengers in charge. Follow a bundle of papers with me. You are standing on the balcony which surrounds the upper wall of one of the press rooms, with its mammoth octuple presses. It is 2:50 a. m. The sound is deafening. Boys at delivery tables wrap and stamp deftly. Move out into the street and you are almost choked by gas from the line of trucks, which soon loaded speed down narrow Philadelphia streets to the trolley cars. At 2:50 the first car starts from the city's center to Frankfort. At each district on the way the car stops. Carriers stand at the track nearby their routes, ready to receive their bundles and begin the actual house-to-house delivery.

In quick succession down different lines these trolleys follow one another until by 5 o'clock in the morning, the last one has reached its destination. It takes each trolley approximately an hour and a half to make all its route calls.

Distribution of Philadelphia Sunday newspapers calls for an even more elaborate system than weekdays. More trucks are put into service and trolley cars take longer trips. On Sundays the four morning papers control a freight trolley which goes from the center of Philadelphia through Camden to Atlantic City, distributing papers along the way. At Atlantic City bundles are placed on waiting trucks to be carried to routes in that neighborhood.

In the matter of the Sunday newspapers, Philadelphia is one of few large cities, if not the only one, where all the sections are sent out intact, or completely "stuffed." Before the papers leave their four respective offices, they are ready to be sold.

Now that the paper is distributed and maintained by the carriers, how do the four circulation managers increase their subscription lists. There are tricks in this trade. The managers are all silent. The other fellow might learn his best trick. One way, open to all, of course, is that three of the newspapers have their canvassers.

The distribution system is carried out, say the circulators, with very little discord, and never any labor trouble, which of course will never be tolerated in Philadelphia. Bad weather fails to disrupt it completely. There has never been a day when the newspapers were not on doorsteps before breakfast of the average worker.

Fifteen years ago one of the old papers attempted to break away from the system. Then the plan demonstrated itself as a League of Nations. After a year of devastating isolation, the deserter returned to the fold. Such is the co-operation of the publishers.

The carriers all work together. They have banded themselves into a society called the Morning Newspaper Carriers' Beneficial and Protective Association. Members describe it as a social, beneficial and intellectual society.

HIGH LIGHTS OF PHILADELPHIA'S UNIQUE CIRCULATION SYSTEM

TO distribute approximately 200,000 newspapers daily, the four morning newspaper publishers of Philadelphia are today operating a co-operative system, which has stood the test of 50 years.

Philadelphia and Camden, both cities of homes, have been divided into 261 routes, which are owned by the carriers, but controlled by the publishers.

These routes are worth money. The total value is estimated at half a million dollars. They are bought and sold like houses. Prices range from $2,000 to $25,000 for individual routes, according to their location.

To operate a typical route, it requires one manager and three carrier boys. A $10,000 district yields the investor between $90 and $100 a week.

In his route, the owner is Czar. Yet his route, and the disposition lies in the publishers' hands. Failure to pay accounts to the newspaper, may cause an owner to lose his route, which may be turned over by any of the publishers to a worthier man.

Ten trolley cars, operated jointly by the publishers, bring newspapers to the carriers at their different routes.

From start to finish, it requires but one hour and a half to place 200,000 morning newspapers on Philadelphia doorsteps.

ON-TO-HOUSTON NEXT

Robert Thornberry's $500 Offer to London Publicity Club Members

The sending of the first British delegate to the 1925 A. A. C. W. Convention at Houston, Tex., has just been settled, though the identity of the actual delegate will remain a mystery for a while yet. Robert Thornberry, last year's president of the Publicity Club of London, told the members of that body he would give £100 towards the expenses of one of the club members to be present at the Houston Convention next year. Ways and means of selecting the delegate have yet to be discussed but the members will suggest to the committee of the Club the means by which the award shall be made. It is expected that this will take the form of a competition for a paper on some phase of advertising

Robert Thornberry is advertisement manager of the London Daily Graphic, popular penny picture paper owned by Graphic Publications, Ltd., one of the important groups of successful newspapers under the control of Sir William and J. Gomer Berry.

TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE SUSPEND

Famous Weekly Sold to Farm Life of Spencer, Ind.

The Toledo Weekly Blade, for years one of the greatest weekly newspapers in the country, passed out of existence with its issue of Thursday, Oct. 9. The circulation was purchased by Farm Life, a monthly magazine published in Spencer, Ind.

Since the Weekly Blade was founded in 1836 it has had only four editors. The last of these, Jack Warwick, is now devoting his time to writing the editorial paragraphs for which he is famous, and editorials for the Toledo Blade, daily edition.

The Weekly Blade's circulation was at its peak in 1908 with a total of 255,000. Warwick has been editor of the Weekly Blade for more than 19 years.

The letters of Petroleum V. Nasby (E. R. Locke) appeared originally in the Weekly Blade.

Daily Relinquishes Marine Exchange

The Marine Exchange, founded by the San Francisco Examiner about 25 years ago has been merged with the organization operated by the Chamber of Commerce. Newspapers and Merchants heretofore receiving coastwise shipping news through the Examiner will be taken care of by the Chamber of Commerce.

"The live wire editor is the one that reads these ideas and adopts the ones that will fit his community," comments the Sooner State Press, official organ of the Oklahoma Press Association, referring to the EDITOR & PUBLISHER "Hunch" department.

LOCAL DISPLAY FIGURES ANALYZED

Forty-Seven Morning Papers and 93 Evening Papers Listed as Carrying 3,000,000 Lines or More During First 6 Months

Daily newspapers which averaged 500,000 lines or more of local display advertising each month during the period January 1-June 30, 1924, are listed in the three tables on this page, as the second in a series of advertising lineage analyses presented by EDITOR & PUBLISHER. The first, covering national advertising, appeared last week. The newspapers are classified as "morning and Sunday," "evening and Sunday," and "evening six-day."

Forty-seven morning newspapers are included in the first table, five of which have no Sunday editions.

Forty-one evening and Sunday newspapers qualify for inclusion in this table, and the daily editions of fifteen of these newspapers are also listed in the "evening, six-day" table, which comprises a total of 67 newspapers.

Leading all newspapers in volume of local display advertising is the Detroit News, with an evening and Sunday volume of 9,765,084 agate lines. This paper leads the evening six-day list with 7,839,790 agate lines, which total is also ahead of the Chicago Tribune's figure of 7,569,577 lines, topping the morning and Sunday roster.

Second in the evening and Sunday local display lineage and among all those listed is the Washington Star, with 8,617,032 lines. The Star is third in the evening six-day list, its total of 6 252,017 lines being exceeded by the Chicago Daily News volume of 6,507,323 lines.

The Los Angeles Times is second in the morning and Sunday listing, with 7,569,577 lines, and the New York Times is third, with a local volume of 7,157,924 lines.

Fourth place in the evening and Sunday list goes to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, with 7,095,760 lines, but the smaller cities appear fourth in the morning and Sunday and evening six-day tabulations. The Miami Herald, which printed the largest total volume for the period among Southern newspapers, takes fourth place in the morning and Sunday field, with 6,267,114 lines, and the Scranton Times is fourth in the evening six-day compilation, with 5,984,405 lines.

The third column of the tabulation, showing the percentage ratio of local display to total volume of these papers, will bear plenty of study by publishers and advertising space-buyers.

Analysis of the lineage figures for 870 newspapers printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of Sept. 13, shows that local advertising averaged 59.4 per cent of the total volume of morning papers, and 66.9 per cent of the total volume of evening papers.

In this table, morning papers exhibit a spread between 39.3 per cent and 87.4 per cent, with most of the papers between 50 and 65 per cent.

In the evening and Sunday table, the extreme percentage ratios are 45.2 and 86.2, with the bulk of the ratios between 55 and 70 per cent.

In the evening six-day field, the low ratio is 52.3 and the high is 88.3 per cent. Most of the ratios are included between 60 and 75 per cent.

In fairness to the readers of this table and to the newspapers it includes, it should be noted that two, possibly three, morning and Sunday newspapers whose totals no doubt entitle them to inclusion, are omitted, either because they did not furnish the necessary figures, or furnished them in unadaptable form.

The next article of this series will appear in an early issue.

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Local Display Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of Local to Total Lineage
Chicago Tribune ..... (m)	8,771,193	4.198.785	47.9
Sunday ed ..... (s)	5,856,888	3.370.782	57.5
Total ..... (ms)	14,628,081	7,569,577	51.7
Los Angeles Times ..... (ms)	14,904,470	7,496,062	50.3
New York Times ..... (m)	8,002,410	4.614,482	57.6
Sunday ed ..... (s)	5,290,722	2,543,432	48.0
Total ..... (ms)	13.293.132	7,157,924	53.8
Miami Herald ..... (m)	6.315.960	4,442,571	70.3
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,389,247	1,824,543	76.3
Total ..... (ms)	8,705.207	6.267,114	71.9
Los Angeles Examiner..... (ms)	12,225,783	5,896.611	48.2
St. Petersburg Times*..... (m)	6,820,422	5,647,908	82.8
Wilkes-Barre Record* ..... (m)	7,332,997	5,582,091	76.1
Utica Press* ..... (m)	5,499,875	4,949,966	90.0
Memphis Commercial Appeal. (m)	4.953,116	2.950 808	59.7
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,501,506	1,628,872	65.1
Total ..... (ms)	7,454,622	4,579,680	61.4
Cleveland Plain Dealer .... (m)	5,884,564	2,783,662	47.3
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3,646,986	1,794,044	49.2
Total ..... (ms)	9,531,550	4,577,706	48.0
New York American ..... (m)	2,971,756	1,582,912	53.2
Sunday ed ..... (s)	4,836,342	2,923,968	60.5
Total ..... (ms)	7,808,098	4,506,880	57.7
New Orleans Times-Picayune ..... (m)	5,255,645	3,114,378	59.2
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,748,000	1,380,523	50.2
Total ..... (ms)	8,003,645	4,494,901	56.1
San Francisco Examiner ... (m)	4.936,522	1,825,321	36.9
Sunday ed ..... (s)	4.226.801	2,442,539	57.7
Total ..... (ms)	9,163,323	4,267,860	46.5
San Jose Mercury-Herald.. (ms)	5,731,390	4,165,476	72.6
Toledo Times ..... (m)	1,430,604	1,100.341	76.9
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3,628,282	2,997,706	82.6
Total ..... (ms)	5,058,886	4,098,047	81.0
San Diego Union ..... (ms)	6,841,660	4,082,582	59.6
Rochester Democrat & Chronicle ..... (ms)	7,799,657	4,047,200	51.8
New York Herald Tribune. (ms)	6,206.288	4,028,370	64.9
Kansas City Star ..... (m)	4,626,487	2,246,357	48.5
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,682,524	1,688,818	62.9
Total ..... (ms)	7,309,011	3,935,175	53.8
Minneapolis Tribune ..... (m)	5,115.904	3,017,812	59.0
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,026,759	914,176	45.1
Total ..... (ms)	7,142,663	3,931,988	55.0
Tampa Tribune ..... (ms)	5,832,568	3,870,090	66.5
Hartford Courant ..... (m)	3,437,823	2,373,283	69.0
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,166,943	1,467,153	67.7
Total ..... (ms)	5,604,766	3,841,436	68.5
Schenectady Gazette* ..... (m)	5,159,833	3,689,035	71.5
Greensboro News ..... (m)	3,298,666	2,473.100	74.9
Sunday ed ..... (s)	1,493,422	1,314,570	88.0
Total ..... (ms)	4,792,088	3,687,670	76.9
Baltimore Sun ..... (m)	4,223,514	788,522	18.6
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3,149,397	2,879,081	91.1
Total ..... (ms)	7,472,911	3,667,603	49.0
Indianapolis Star ..... (m)	3,678,777	1,859.325	50.4
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,922,153	1,773,435	60.7
Total ..... (ms)	6,600,930	3,632,760	55.0
Detroit Free Press ..... (m)	4,362,638	1,934,940	44.3
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3,181,934	1,687,420	53.0
Total ..... (ms)	7,544,572	3,622,360	48.0
Albany Knickerbocker Press ..... (ms)	5,052,714	3,581,690	70.8
Wheeling Register ..... (m)	2,346,638	1,926,736	82.1
Sunday ed ..... (s)	1,714,594	1,626.436	94.9
Total ..... (ms)	4,061,232	3.553.272	87.4
Boston Globe ..... (m)	4,007,454	2,024,039	50.5
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3.301,428	1,491,297	45.1
Total ..... (ms)	7,308.882	3.515,336	48.1
Allentown Call ..... (ms)	5,228,566	3,455,508	66.0
Omaha World-Herald ..... (ms)	5,928.657	3,440.143	58.0
New York World ..... (m)	4,772,826	1,441,884	30.2
Sunday ed ..... (s)	3,827,288	1,940.656	50.1
Total ..... (ms)	8,600,114	3,382.540	39.3
Philadelphia Public Ledger. (ms)	5,415,103	3,378.084	62.4
Louisville Courier-Journal . (m)	2,840,550	1,058,307	37.2
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2.884.411	2,084,830	72.2
Total ..... (ms)	5,724,961	3,358,851	58.6
Dallas News ..... (m)	3,536.395	1,738,762	49.1
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,630,860	1,597.875	60.7
Total ..... (ms)	6,167,255	3,336,637	54.1
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette ..... (ms)	5,273,184	3.323,544	63.0
Paterson Call* ..... (m)	4,611,973	3.290.365	71.3
Norfolk Virginian-Pilot ... (ms)	4,504.346	3,275,370	72.7
St. Louis Globe-Democrat.. (m)	4,349.736	2,096,907	48.2
Sunday ed ..... (s)	2,518,932	1.177.923	46.6
Total ..... (ms)	6,868,668	3.274.830	47.6
Little Rock Gazette ..... (m)	3.050,522	1,933.476	63.3
Sunday ed ..... (s)	1,703,996	1.296.204	76.1
Total ..... (ms)	4,754,518	3.229,680	67.9
Portland Oregonian ..... (m)	4,728.262	2,058,994	43.5
Sunday ed..... (s)	2,464.672	1,061,032	43.0
Total ..... (ms)	7,192.934	3,120,026	43.3
Asheville Citizen ..... (ms)	4,489,422	3,113 222	69.9
Pittsburgh Gazette-Times... (m)	3.107,482	1,728,286	57.2
Sunday ed..... (s)	2,344,888	1,354.346	57.7
Total ..... (ms)	5,452,370	3.082 632	56.9
San Francisco Chronicle ... (m)	3 224.774	1,769.208	54.8
Sunday ed..... (s)	2.015.360	1,293 502	64.1
Total ..... (ms)	5,240,134	3,062,710	58.4
Birmingham Age-Herald... (ms)	4,181.940	3.020,206	72.2
Rochester Herald ..... (ms)	3,897,690	3,003,014	77.0

*No Sunday edition.
Classified lineage not included.

EVENING AND SUNDAY

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Local Display Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of Local to Total Lineage
Detroit News ..... (es)	15,568,672	9,765,084	62.7
Washington Star ..... (es)	12,630,291	8,617,032	68.2
Pittsburgh Press ..... (es)	12.341,056	8,133.202	65.9
St. Louis Post-Dispatch .... (es)	11,733,400	7,095.760	60.4
Columbus Dispatch ..... (es)	10,776.342	7,022,598	65.1
Birmingham News ..... (es)	8.005.340	5,682,656	70.9
Dayton News ..... (es)	8.230.576	5,632,900	68.4
Dallas Times-Herald ..... (es)	7,451,876	5,558.801	74.6
Oakland Tribune ..... (es)	8,784,888	5,400,682	61.4
Canton Repository ..... (es)	7,408,408	5,210,812	70.3
Cleveland News & Leader... (es)	6,842,286	4.847,964	70.8
Buffalo Times ..... (es)	5,508,412	4,703.720	85.3
Utica Observer-Dispatch ... (es)	6,021,484	4,615,856	76.6
Minneapolis Journal ..... (es)	7,286,266	4,584,463	62.9
Atlanta Journal ..... (es)	7,139.482	4,579,372	64.1
Milwaukee Journal ..... (es)	9,082.859	5,439,266	59.8
Trenton Times ..... (es)	6,595.343	4,485,109	68.1
Long Beach Press ..... (es)	6,589,577	4,377,772	66.4
Denver Post ..... (es)	6,944,112	4,054.288	58.3
San Antonio Light ..... (es)	5,421,976	4,031,916	74.3
Seattle Times ..... (es)	7,065,926	4,013,156	56.8
Brooklyn Eagle ..... (es)	8,804,036	3,982.458	45.2
Peoria Star ..... (es)	5,666,782	3,941,390	69.9
Charlotte News ..... (es)	4,562,176	3,813,940	83.6
Houston Chronicle ..... (es)	6,669,222	3,781,484	56.7
Memphis News-Scimitar ... (es)	4,740,750	3,778,208	79.7
Davenport Democrat & Leader ..... (es)	4,374,268	3,770,636	86.2
Springfield, Ohio, News ... (es)	4,994,192	3,769,402	75.4
South Bend Tribune ..... (es)	5,337,174	3,750,253	70.2
Kalamazoo Gazette ..... (es)	5,009.676	3,736,376	74.5
Paterson Press-Guardian ... (es)	5,177,559	3,665,248	70.8
Terre Haute Tribune ..... (es)	4,796,708	3,614,996	75.3
New Orleans Item ..... (es)	4,854,402	3,478,309	71.6
Erie Dispatch-Herald ..... (es)	4,577,954	3,341,477	73.0
Detroit Times ..... (es)	5,340,371	3,336,076	62.4
Knoxville Sentinel ..... (es)	4,876,515	3,333,687	68.3
Portland Express ..... (es)	4,927,777	3,295,344	66.8
Portland Oregon Journal ... (es)	5,590,172	3,176,824	56.8
New Orleans States ..... (es)	4,183,775	3,166,321	75.7
Jackson Citizen-Patroit .... (es)	4,366,651	3,105,976	71.1
Syracuse Herald ..... (es)	4,764,776	3,027,502	63.5

EVENING SIX DAY NEWSPAPERS

Detroit News ..... (e)	11,548,642	7,839,790	67.8
Chicago Daily News ..... (e)	10,274,341	6,507,323	63.3

(Continued on page 7)

MAGAZINE MEN NOW ASK NEWSPAPER CO-OPERATION IN POSTAL FIGHT

National Publishers Association Meeting at Briarcliff Asks United Front Against Kelly Wage Increase Bill— S. N. P. A. and N. E. A. Pledge Support

RENEWAL of united co-operation on the part of publishers against the threatened $20,000,000 increase in second class postal rates was urged at the fifth annual convention of the National Publishers Association held at Briarcliff Lodge, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., Oct. 7 and 8.

Possibility that certain publishers might organize a distribution system of their own and entirely forego use of the mails for second class delivery was also held up for discussion.

Postal discussions, forming the most important business of the first day, were preliminary to a scheduled get-together meeting of publishers' postal representatives, called by the postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association to be held at the University Club, Chicago, next week.

At Briarcliff, A. C. Pearson, chairman of the postal committee, presented the N. P. A. viewpoint towards the proposed rate raise. He was followed by Urey Woodson, Chattanooga (Tenn.) News, representing the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association and Wallace Odell, Tarrytown (N. Y.) News, former president of the National Editorial Association.

All three pledged their organizations' support to fight the Kelly Bill, providing for an increase of wages for postal clerks, which, recently vetoed by the President, now appears on the calendar for early action as unfinished business at the next short session of Congress in December.

Pearson, reviewing activities of the publishers towards a decrease in postal rates, was forced to admit defeat, although he pointed out that threatened increases have been forestalled, temporarily, at least.

He frankly declared that the big guns must now be trained exclusively against a raise in rates, which, he said, appears imminent even though the Kelly Bill failed a second time in passing the President.

Pearson opened his postal report by discussion of A. N. P. A.'s break from the American Publishers' Conference, which was carrying on an organized drive for rate reduction. He characterized A. N. P. A.'s fight for the McKinley Amendment calling for 50 per cent reduction in second class postage which passed the Senate, as a "good gesture."

"Now the possibility arises," he said, "that the Kelly Bill with its demands for salary increases for postal clerks will be taken up a second time and passed over the President's veto.

"The Postal Department's deficit is now more than $50,000,000. The salary increase would have to be made up in two places, parcel post and second class."

The magazine men, as represented by the N. P. A., are of the opinion that the newspaper publishers are paying far too little attention to this threatened rise, Pearson brought out. He has sent a bulletin to 12,000 publications urging their support, and will soon issue a second one.

"It appears at present as if the raises in second class rates will be made in the first and second zones" he said. "This is a direct slap at the newspapers."

Woodson, representing the S. N. P. A., who followed Pearson, pointed out that his association was a pioneer in working for the postal zone law. He deplored the present lack of interest on the part of newspapers in what he called their "imminent peril."

Odell, offering the support of the N. E. A. to the N. P. A. and other publishers' associations in their fight against postal rate increases, asked for reciprocal support of his organization.

The possibility that the publishers might be forced to operate their own delivery system, excluding entirely use of the U. S. mails, was touched upon by E. V. Lucas, head of the recently organized transportation department of the N. P. A.

The transportation department last month carried out a test at Westfield, N. J., which, Lucas said, proved that a delivery system could be worked out which would be as efficient as that now offered second class mail by the Post Office, and less expensive.

The convention elected Arthur J. Baldwin, McGraw-Hill Company, president; F. L. Wurzburg, Conde Nast Publications, Inc., secretary, and Roger W. Allen, Allen Business Papers, Inc., treasurer. Frederick W. Hume continues as executive secretary.

As advocated by the late H. M. Swetland, 1923-24 president of N. P. A., members this year drew up and adopted a code of ethics and business practices.

Golf winners were: B. A. Mackinnon, Pictorial Review, 36 holes, 155, President's Cup; L. W. Keys, Pictorial Review, 36 holes, 158, Curtis Cup; Eugene Kelly, Musical Courier, 18 holes, 75, Crowell Cup, and Marvin Pierce, McCall's Magazine, 18 holes, 80, McGraw-Hill Cup.

Members of the National Advertising Commission of the A. A. C. W. elected at the convention were A. J. Crockett, Modern Priscilla; Herbert Houston publisher of Our World, and A. H Melville, Conde Nast Publications, New York.

San Francisco Ad Drive Indorsed

The various civic organizations of San Francisco have indorsed the proposition of the Real Estate Board to raise a large fund to advertise the city. The realtors quota of $15,000 has already been subscribed.

Evening and Sunday

(Continued from page 6)

Newspaper	Total Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Local Display Lineage Jan. 1 to June 30, 1924	Percent Ratio of Local to Total Lineage
Washington Star .....(e)	9,396,831	6,252,027	66.5
Scranton Times .....(e)	7,547,904	5,984.405	79.3
New York Journal .....(e)	7,394,870	5,935.370	80.2
Pittsburgh Press .....(e)	8,562.792	5,887,616	68.7
Los Angeles Herald .....(e)	9,312.898	5,838.378	62.6
Flint Journal .....(e)	7,228,410	5,656,784	78.2
Philadelphia Bulletin .....(e)	9,935.787	5,636.388	56.7
Indianapolis News .....(e)	9,038,574	5,631,906	62.3
Grand Rapids Press .....(e)	7,372,176	5,417,160	73.4
St. Petersburg Independent..(e)	6,125,574	5,384.694	87.9
Toledo Blade .....(e)	7,632.953	5.238.341	68.6
Hartford Times .....(e)	6,771,048	5,205,705	79.8
New York Sun .....(e)	6,815.856	5,138,256	75.4
Columbus Dispatch .....(e)	7,765.988	5,128,447	66.0
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader .(e)	6,253 378	5,122 094	81.9
Baltimore Evening Sun .....(e)	9,281,108	5.022.625	54.1
Appleton Post-Crescent .....(e)	5,745,810	4 997.860	86 9
Newark News .....(e)	9,366,489	4,875.426	52.0
St. Louis Post-Dispatch ....(e)	7,327,040	4,843.440	66.1
Cincinnati Times-Star .....(e)	7,143,479	4,817,323	67.3
Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph .....(e)	6,277,138	4,652.102	74.1
Cleveland Press .....(e)	7,384.160	4,617,816	62.5
Altoona Mirror .....(e)	5,809.748	4.546.542	76.5
Los Angeles Express .....(e)	6,215.454	4,513,964	72.6
Rochester Times-Union .....(e)	6,072,248	4,435,648	73.0
Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger .....(e)	6,046,032	4,405,291	72.8
Akron Beacon-Journal .....(e)	5,527,424	4.391,500	79.4
Providence Bulletin .....(e)	6,666.547	4,323,945	64.8
Long Beach Telegram .....(e)	6,687,478	4,315.738	64.6
Johnstown Tribune .....(e)	5,366,942	4,303,096	80.1
Dayton News .....(e)	6,268.625	4.271.064	68.1
Pasadena Star-News .....(e)	6,342.840	4,236.218	66.8
Buffalo News .....(e)	7,390,139	4,163.604	56.3
Chicago American .....(e)	5,742,528	4,143 819	72.1
Richmond News-Leader ....(e)	6,105.904	4,095,364	67.0
Milwaukee Journal .....(e)	6,529,105	4,061.454	62.2
Dayton Herald .....(e)	5,207,328	3.988 936	76.6
Utica Observer-Dispatch ....(e)	5,210,464	3,963,120	76.0
Canton Repository .....(e)	5,611,902	3,940.625	66.6
Elizabeth Journal .....(e)	5,220,516	3,848.278	73.7
Cleveland News .....(e)	5,266,386	3,845,964	73.0
Reading Eagle .....(e)	5,963,524	3,789,604	63.5
Camden Courier .....(e)	5,036,492	3,763,441	74.7
Binghamton Press .....(e)	5,304,071	3,715,346	70.0
San Diego Tribune .....(e)	5,218,066	3,710,350	71.1
Columbus Citizen .....(e)	5,214,846	3,674,160	70.4
Minneapolis Journal .....(e)	5,609,875	3,673,727	65.4
Dallas Times-Herald .....(e)	5,120,292	3,671,456	71.7
Niagara Falls Gazette .....(e)	4,479,228	3,613,680	80.6
Spokane Chronicle .....(e)	5,117,638	3,544,212	69.2
Toledo News-Bee .....(e)	5,083,086	3,525.830	69.3
San Francisco Call-Post ....(e)	4,626,640	3,478,937	75.2
Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Argus ..(e)	3,942,854	3,441,130	87.2
Davenport Times .....(e)	4,637,136	3,412,430	73.6
Trenton Times .....(e)	5,072,244	3,386,743	66.7
Albany Times-Union .....(e)	5,102,130	3,385,068	66.3
Long Beach Press .....(e)	5,135,279	3,356,856	65.3
San Diego Sun .....(e)	4,722,116	3,356,360	71.0
Evansville Press .....(e)	4,342,828	3,319,176	76.4
Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch ...(e)	4,725,000	3,284,946	69.5
Kansas City Star .....(e)	5,532,932	3,116 975	56.3
Lansing State Journal .....(e)	4,662,516	3,115,868	67.9
New York Evening World ..(e)	3,951,176	3,084,170	78.0
Davenport Democrat & Leader .....(e)	3,462,924	3,060,752	88.3
Marion, Ohio, Star .....(e)	3,812,169	3,019,814	79.2

RICHMOND CHOSEN FOR 1925 N. E. A. MEET

Date of Convention to Be Set Later— Tours to Historic Points Including Trip to Washington and Mount Vernon

C. H. Hotaling, of St. Paul, Minn., executive secretary of the National Editorial Association, announced Wednesday, Oct. 8, that Richmond had been selected as the meeting place for the fortieth annual convention of that organization. The exact date has not been fixed upon but will if possible be such so as not to conflict with the dates to be named for the World's Press Congress. Richmond was selected after a personal visit of President Marble to Virginia and after considerable correspondence assuring favorable railway rates.

Not only the Virginia Press Association, but civic groups in all parts of the State joined in the invitation which brought the meet to Virginia.

Present plans are that after spending three days in Richmond for the convention and visiting places of local interest a visit will be made to Williamsburg, once the capital of the state, thence to Jamestown and Yorktown, returning to the train at White Hall for Newport News and Norfolk, where a day will be spent in viewing the points of interest in Hampton Roads and the great shipbuilding plant at Newport News. Then the special train will carry the party to Lynchburg, Roanoke and on to Natural Bridge. Among other points to be touched will be Lexington, the site of the Virginia Military Institute, and Washington and Lee University. The party will be given an opportunity for a trip through Luray Caverns, thence to Charlottesville for a visit to Monticello the home and burial place of Thomas Jefferson, also to the University of Virginia. A visit to Staunton, the birthplace of the late Woodrow Wilson, will be made. From Staunton, the party will proceed to Harrisonburg, New Market and Endless Caverns and Winchester and Harper's Ferry. It is probable that the route will be via Leesburg, the ancient capitol of Loudoun County, where in 1812 the records of the State Department of the Federal Government were taken.

Arriving at Washington, D. C., the party will be carried by special train to Fredericksburg for a tour of that historical section. On returning to Washington a boat trip will be made to Mount Vernon the home and burial place of George Washington, with a return by electric cars with a stop at Alexandria to visit the home of Paul Jones, and other points of interest.

More than 500 editors are expected.

NEW FLORIDA DAILY

Lakeland Evening Ledger Launched by Farabee and Mullen

The Lakeland (Fla.) Ledger, a new evening newspaper made its appearance recently with a 32-page edition. The paper is published by the Ledger Publishing Company, owned jointly by Earl and Charles G. Mullen, and S. H. Farabee.

Mr. Farabee and Mr. Earl Mullen formerly published newspapers in North Carolina. Charles G. Mullen until recently was general manager of the Tampa (Fla.) Times.

NEA service and full leased wire reports of the International News Service are being used. The company purchased a building to house the daily.

Central N. Y. Press to Meet

Central New York Press Association is scheduled to meet at Syracuse University, Syracuse, Oct. 11.

A. N. P. A. to Vote on Fall Meeting

Whether or not the American Newspaper Publishers' Association will hold annually a fall convention in addition to its regular April meeting, will be decided this week at Chicago.

BIG CHICAGO PRESS CONFERENCES THIS WEEK

A. B. C. Meet Nucleus of Important Gatherings—Bureau to Discuss Publicity Ruling—A. A. A. A. to Establish Market Research—Inland Expects Crowd

MORE than 1,000 newspaper publishers and advertising men will make Chicago's famous Loop their stamping ground next week to shake hands over banquet tables and discuss in joint business meetings problems common to both professions.

O. C. Harn

Newspaper's $600,000,000 industry will best be represented, probably, at the eleventh annual convention of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, to be held at the Hotel La Salle, Oct. 16 and 17, at the call of O. C. Harn, National Lead Company, president, and Stanley Clague, director.

The A. B. C. convention has now for five years been made the rallying point of publishing and advertising interests on the North American Continent. Year by year, says the current A. B. C. Bulletin, Chicago as the autumnal focal point of publishing and advertising interests has grown in importance.

This year the Chicago meetings during the week of Oct. 13-18, clustering around the A. B. C. sessions, are those of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, Inland Daily Press Association, the postal committee of the A. N. P. A., Agricultural Publishers' Association, National Industrial Advertisers' Association, United Typothetæ of America, Open Shop Employing Printers' Association, Committee in charge of the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and the board of directors of the Newspapers' Executives' Association.

THE annual meeting of the A. B. C. will open at 10 o'clock Friday morning, Oct. 17, in the Red Room of the Hotel La Salle. President O. C. Harn will preside. Featuring the convention, will be the joint banquet of A. B. C. with the A. A. A. A. at the Drake Hotel Friday evening.

The morning session will be taken up by the president's report; the tenth annual report of the board of directors and reports from the departmental meetings.

Election of directors will take place Friday afternoon. The present members of the board of directors whose terms will expire and who will be reappointed or whose successors will be named are:

O. C. Harn, National Lead Company; Ralph Starr Butler, United States Rubber Company; John Murray Gibbon, Canadian Pacific Railway Company; L. L. King, Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company; and G. Lynn Sumner, International Correspondence Schools, representing the advertisers.

E. I. Mitchell, Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, Chicago, representing advertising agents.

David B. Plum, Troy (N. Y.) Record, representing newspapers.

F. W. Stone, American Review of Reviews, representing magazines.

Marco Morrow, the Capper Publications, representing farm papers.

Mason Britton, McGraw-Hill Company, Inc., representing business papers.

At the newspaper divisional meeting of the A.B.C. there will be considerable discussion centering around the question: "Shall the present publicity rules of the bureau, governing use of the bureau's figures and the use of the name and authority of the bureau in comparative, competitive advertisements be amended?"

Present publicity rules of the bureau read as follows:

A publisher-member of the Bureau is permitted to publish in his own or other publications, or in circular form when using the name and authority or the figures of the Bureau:

Total net paid circulation on his publication only.

The divisions of net paid circulation as shown in Paragraph 8 of publisher's statements or auditor's reports, on his own publication only.

The first page of either the publisher's statements or auditor's reports on his own publication only.

The entire report—either publisher's statements or auditor's reports—on his own publication only.

In Directories, use of figures shall be confined to Paragraph 8, but date and whether publisher's statement or auditor's report as authority shall always be shown.

Stanley Clague

Publishers are not permitted to use the Bureau's figures concerning competitors, either through the direct or implied authority of the Bureau, in any advertising matter.

One group advocates the abolition of the present publicity rules in their entirety. The members of this group claim the Bureau has performed its full duty in issuing publisher's statements and audit reports. If interim claims are made by publishers which are eventually proven to be not in accordance with the facts, the responsibility for accepting them must rest with the advertiser or advertising agent. They also urge that where audit reports do not agree with the publisher's statements, the right shall be given to competing publishers to publicly call attention to the findings of the Bureau.

This might, in the opinion of those opposing this policy, result in injustice being done to a publication where the variation between the circulation statement and audit report was inconsequential, but magnified for competitive purposes. It is also claimed that by allowing the use of excerpts from the reports, without other correlating facts, injustice might result.

Another group advocates the maintenance of present restrictions regarding audit reports, claiming that the publisher's statement figures are public property and not the figures of the Bureau, competitors shall have the right to use the figures, if the name and authority of the Bureau is not used, either direct or implied. The difficulty of defining "direct or implied authority" is obvious.

The third group advocates the continuation of the present rules, with possibly amending the present restriction concerning the number of competitive reports allowed to each publisher. The present rule provides that only thirty copies of competitive reports can be supplied. Suggestions have been made that this number might be increased to fifty, seventy-five or one hundred copies.

The argument in favor of the continuation of the present restrictions—while irksome in some cases—is that to abrogate them would result, as stated by one publisher, "in endless bickerings among competing publishers."

Whether the bureau provide further penalties where audit reports show variations between the publisher's statements and the audit reports is another question to be considered.

The following suggestion has been made:

Let the publisher's statement carry a statement something like this: "On the last audit report on this publication, deductions totalling————were made for these reasons: (listing reasons)."

Let each publisher's statement carry a definite declaration that all of the allowances for unsold, late delivery, missed copies, returns, etc., have been properly deducted from the total of net paid as shown in the statement, and prescribe some adequate penalty for cases where the subsequent audit shows that these deductions have not been made.

Of considerable importance among scheduled discussions at the A. B. C. convention is the matter of determining the difference between morning and evening newspapers. During the year this question has been brought up repeatedly before meetings of the board of directors. Several evening newspapers established such early morning editions that the problem was raised as to whether a new and distinct paper was not thereby formed.

David B. Plum

The questions, "What is a morning paper?" and "What is an evening paper?" were contained in a questionnaire recently issued by the A. B. C. to newspapers on 14 points.

Out of a total of 158 replies to the morning paper question, 24.70, the largest percentage declared for indefinite limitation. In the evening field, 24.06 per cent, also the largest number, were likewise indefinite. The next largest number, 23.43 per cent, classed a morning newspaper as one issuing editions between the hours of 12 midnight and 12 noon, while 20.89 per cent declared an evening newspaper was one issued between the hours of 12 noon and 12 midnight.

Replies to these two questions, together with the remaining 12 of the questionnaire, will be placed in the hands of the A. B. C.'s newspaper division for discussion.

Other questions are:

Where a reward is given for securing a single subscription should it be regarded as a premium or a club raiser offer?

Correspondents and service copies. Should exchange of checks qualify them as paid? Should the pre-date edition of an evening paper be allowed to carry a Sunday date line?

Should contest subscriptions paid for by contestants be recognized as paid circulation?

Returns. Should allowances covering late and missed copies be accepted as such, or should all allowances be considered as representing unsold and equivalent to returns?

Are contests of permanent benefit to a newspaper?

Should the press run in Par. 12 be shown in percentages rather than actual figures?

Should country editions of metropolitan newspapers carry local advertising?

Should present classification of dealers and independent carriers be divided to show independent carriers separately from dealers?

Condition of collections. Should present system be abolished and show only arrears up to one month and three months and three to six months?

How can suburban or trading territory be adjusted to meet the divergent claims of morning and evening newspapers as to its limits?

What safeguard can be put around bonus and salaries to prevent the eating of papers?

When a premium is given, should any reduction in the regular subscription price be permitted?

To each departmental of the A. B. C. will be submitted the following recommendation from the board of directors:

"Resolved, that the managing director be requested to suggest to each division of the bureau the election by the division

(Continued on page 28)

SPEARHEAD OF CHICAGO SKYLINE

The new Tribune Tower, nearing structural completion, will be a new sight for the newspaper and advertising people meeting in Chicago next week.

"STICK TO THE JOB" IS VETERAN'S ADVICE

President G. B. Dealey of Dallas News Celebrates 50 Years' Continuous Service, Oct. 12—Began as Office Boy and Advanced to the Top—Employes Tender Anniversary Banquet

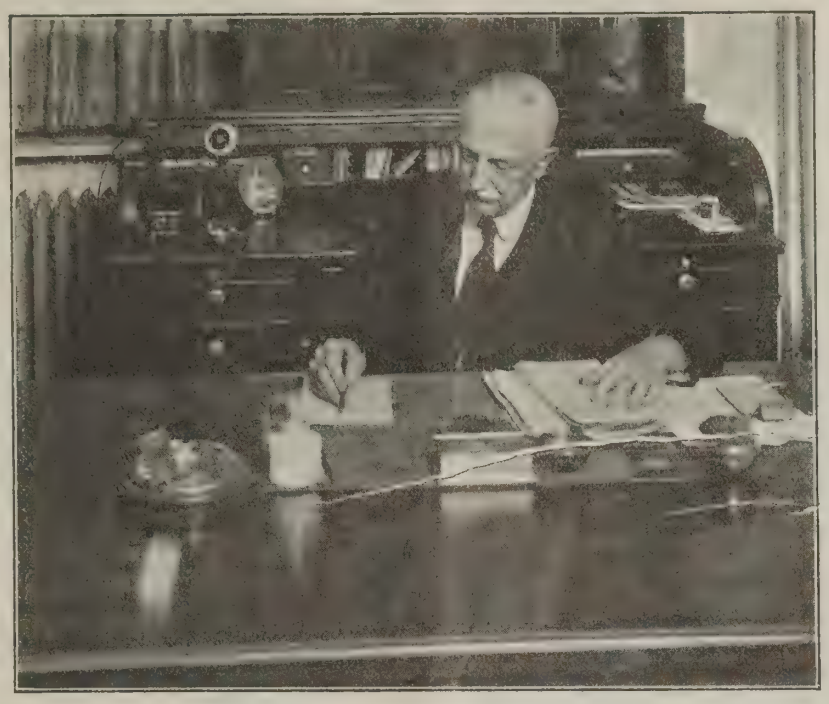
FIFTY years of continuous service with one institution, loving and sticking to his job, without desire to leave it—and without offers to change employment—such is the record that will be rounded out on Oct. 12 by George Bannerman Dealey, president of A. H. Belo & Co., publishers of the Dallas Morning News, the Dallas Evening Journal, the Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News and the Texas Almanac. In celebration of his golden anniversary, a banquet will be given at 2 o'clock of that day in the Palm Garden of the Adolphus Hotel, with the 515 officers and employes resident in Dallas and a number of those from other cities present. It is rated as a happy circumstance that the anniversary falls on Sunday, the one day of the week upon which it is possible for all employes of these newspapers to absent themselves for a time from their posts of duty.

Mr. Dealey began his service with this publishing concern on Oct. 12, 1874, at the age of 14, as office boy. Forty-five years later he was elected to the presidency of the institution, after it had many times multiplied in plant, personnel and volume of business. His was a steady climb, not a meteoric flight. He went upward step by step, missing none; step by step, steadily. When he had gotten to the top, the employes staged a celebration. In responding to the felicitations of the occasion, Mr. Dealey said:

"My attainment to my present place is not so much due to any perfection in me as to the fact that I stuck to the job, and that is the advice that I would give to others. Always stick to the job."

Upon other occasions Mr. Dealey has referred to the fact that never since he has been connected with this institution has he been offered a position elsewhere.

"This," he has said, "I account an honor, for it has indicated a wide realization of the fact that I had a good job and was satisfied with it."



Mr. Dealey began his newspaper career with the Galveston Daily News, 32 years after that newspaper had been launched back in the days of the Republic, and at a time when it was owned by the firm of Richardson, Belo & Co. Somewhat after the fashion of the peripathetic country newspaper man of that time, he let it be known that he had "come to stay." The difference is that he stayed, whereas the itinerant publisher did not.

He stayed in that job of office boy, collector, etc., for some six years, during which time, to paraphrase Pinafore,

"He polished them up so spic and spang,
That they made him the ruler of the whole she-bang."

That is to say, in those office boy days he laid the foundation for his rise to the top. The promotions began in 1880, when he was made foreman of the mailing department. Soon thereafter, in this position, he had the honor of explaining the workings of his department to former President U. S. Grant, who was on his trip around the world.

About the same time, young Dealey had an opportunity to render an unusual service, and he did it. Houston had laid a yellow fever quarantine against Galveston. The Galveston News' gateway to most of the state was through Houston, which it reached over the line of the Galveston, Houston & Henderson Railroad. With this gateway closed, the Galveston News was bottled up. But the cork was pulled in this way: The Gulf, Colorado & Sante Fe Railway was then under construction from Galveston northwestwardly, its end-of-track then being at Alvin, some 18 miles out. The News was sent out on that line to Alvin, from which point it was forwarded by wagon to rail connections a few miles outside the limits of Houston. That was the first time the Santa Fe carried the United States mails, and young Dealey, duly sworn in as a postoffice employe, was in charge.

George B. Dealey at Work.

It was about this time that a big change had come in the affairs of the Galveston News. Colonel A. H. Belo in 1875 had acquired the interests of Willard Richardson in the property. In 1881, the business was incorporated under the title of A. H. Belo & Co.

It was not long until a change of larger import came, and for it Mr. Dealey went in training. This was the founding of the Dallas Morning News. That venture, without precedent, was in contemplation as early as 1883. Mr. Dealey was sent all over northern Texas, visiting nearly every town of consequence, to estimate the probable circulation of the Dallas News, if started. This trip occupied several months. Then, successively, he served as a regular traveling agent for the News, as agent and correspondent at Waco, and as head of the Houston bureau. Finally, in the Summer of 1884, he was located in Dallas as the business manager of the Dallas Morning News, which it had been determined to start on Oct. 1, of that year.

For a little more than 20 years he continued in that position of business manager, directing a very successful and steadily growing business. Early in 1906 he was elected to the office of vice-president and general manager of the corporation, and early in 1920 to the office of president. By this time, the corporation had four publications—the two daily Newses, the Dallas Journal, started in 1914; the Semi-Weekly Farm News, and the Texas Almanac. In March of 1922 the corporation sold the Galveston News to W. L. Moody, Jr., of Galveston, in order to concentrate attention upon its Dallas publications.

Mr. Dealey was born in Manchester, England, Sept. 18, 1859, and came to the United States with his parents in 1870. He had attended the primary schools in Liverpool, and in Galveston he attended the public schools and also a night school. Before entering the service of the News he had worked in a number of business houses in Galveston. He was married on April 9, 1884, to Olivia Allen, of Lexington, Mo. They have five children, three daughters and two sons. The sons are in the service of A. H. Belo & Co., Walter A. as assistant general manager, and E. M. (Ted) as a staff correspondent of the News.

Mr. Dealey's interests center in or radiate from the newspapers of which he is the head. The Who's Who list sums them up thus: LL.D Southern Methodist University, 1921; Pres. United Charities; Hon. V. P. Nat. Housing Assn.; bd. govs. Am. City Planning Inst.; v. p. Nat. Municipal League; v. p. Am. Civic Assn.; 1st v. p. Southwestern Polit. Science Assn.; 2d v. p. Associated Press (1923-4); men. Tex. Hist. Soc., Am. Political Science Assn. Independent Democrat. Presbyn. Scottish Rite Freemason (hon. 33 deg. Ma. Red Cross of Constantine. Clubs: Nat. Press (Washington, D. C.), Country Critic (Dallas), Winslow Park (Ark.) Home, Alice Circle (Highland Pk.).

At the banquet, they are to have on exhibition the little old desk at which "Georgie" Dealey sat and worked when he started as an office boy 50 years ago.

Joseph J. Taylor, the "colyumnist" of the News, is to officiate as toastmaster, and the speakers are to be Thomas Finty, Jr., W. H. Benners, Edwin B. Doran, John F. Lubben, M. W. Florer, Ennis Cargill, Mrs. J. B. Peabody, vice-president of the corporation, and finally Mr. Dealey himself. Charles M. Seay is to pronounce the invocation. A musical program will be given, including songs by Mrs. Albert E. Smith and Miss Evelyn Finty, and violin numbers by Captain Emmett Peck.

As testimonials, Mrs. Peabody is to present to Mr. Dealey a solid gold medal, and the employes of A. H. Belo & Co., one of the 50 solid gold watches that Gruen has made to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of that concern, both bearing appropriate inscriptions.

That Mr. Dealey's example and his advice, "Always stick to the job," have had effect is seen in the fact that 40 other persons to be present at the banquet have been in the service of A. H. Belo & Co. for 21 years or more, and that many others are nearing their majority in that sense. The 40, with the year of their start with A. H. Belo & Co., are as follows:

Charles M. Seay, 1879; John F. Lubben, 1881; J. D. Lorentz, 1883; A. W. Hughes, 1884; William Greene Sterett, 1885; Thomas M. Rinehart, 1885; Arthur M. Allen, 1885; L. L. Daniels, 1885; De Witt McMurray, 1886; Charles H. Blake, 1886; H. G. Stephenson, 1886; M. W. Florer, 1887; W. A. Page, 1891; W. H. Benners, 1891; W. M. Davis, 1892; George T. Ross, 1894; Thomas B. Baldwin, 1894; J. E. Taggart, 1895; R. B. Cammack, 1895; Edwin B. Doran, 1895; C. H. Taggart, 1896; F. B. Richmond, 1896; Thomas W. Porter, 1897; Tom Finty, Jr., 1897; W. L. Maynard, 1897; W. M. Thornton, 1898; A. P. Vaughan, 1898; George W. Morriss, 1899; John Sneed, 1899; A. L. Harper, 1899; T. E. Cornelius, 1900; W. E. Graul, 1900; H. W. Maxwell, 1900; H. C. Scott, 1900; L. E. Hamilton, 1900; Miss Jennie Hogg, 1901; Harold Ward, 1902; W. S. Adair, 1902; W. A. Wright, 1903; James A. Maddox, 1903.

DALLAS NEWS PAYS TRIBUTE TO ITS READERS ON 40TH BIRTHDAY

UNDER the caption "The News Seeks to Pay a Debt of Honor" the following editorial appeared in the Dallas News, on Oct. 1, that newspaper's 40th anniversary:

"By some strange reversal of the rightful order of things it is the custom among us to receive greetings and felicitations upon attaining a birthday. Rather ought the child to honor his parents on the anniversary of that day of sacrifice, and institutions themselves might do the like for those who have raised them up and held them high through good fortune and adversity. In that feeling the Dallas Morning News enters upon its fortieth year today.

"Thirty-nine years ago today the News had its first morning in Dallas. But, reckoned from the beginning of the enterprise which brought the News to Dallas, its traditions and its policies find their root in the days of the Republic of Texas. To its sustenance and growth many able men now dead gave the best that was in them. For their goodly gift their successors pause today in grateful acknowledgment.

"But the prestige of the News can not be fully explained by the loyalty of employes living or dead. Unsuspected by themselves and little acclaimed by others, thousands of citizens of Dallas and of Texas have really made the News. You who read have had your part. The News is human enough to wish to thank you.

"What you have allotted to its business support has helped, of course, for the News is by necessity a business establishment. But on a finer scale of values the outstanding contribution of a subscriber to the News is the countenance of his patronage. The overlooking of that is easy. And yet upon just that rests the character, the integrity—the moral fiber, if you please, of the News.

"According as you and thousands of others approve, the News has strength. It were a base spirit indeed which had no room for gratitude that so generally that approval has been enjoyed. The giving of it, perhaps, was not meant as a favor. Rather it has been the expression of a community of purpose, a continuing desire for fidelity to truth, faithfulness to principle and friendliness to man. Where the News has erred, you have condemned it—and forgiven it. Where it has led aright, you have praised it—and given it aid.

"You have been, in short, a neighbor to the News, and as a neighbor the News could not wish you else than godspeed and happiness."

BOYCE-ITE WON NATIONAL DISTRIBUTION IN A YEAR THROUGH NEWSPAPERS

Remarkable Success Attributed Directly to Newspaper Advertising—Used Small Town Dailies First, Then Entered Larger Centers

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

JUST about a year ago the first advertisement for Boyce-ite, a concentrated product for use in gasoline, was published at Hartford, Conn., in a small tryout campaign. Today this product may be bought anywhere throughout the country and is selling in tremendous volume. A large measure of credit for this result is accorded the newspaper of America.

Recently the executives of the Boyce & Veeder Co., Inc., Long Island City, N. Y., have been checking over their sales to find which markets have been weak and which strong. It is more than a coincidence that any weak spots in Boyce-ite sales are where the company did not use newspaper advertising, and the sections where sales made the best showing are where liberal newspaper space was used. The company plans to go into weak territories shortly with powerful newspaper campaigns.

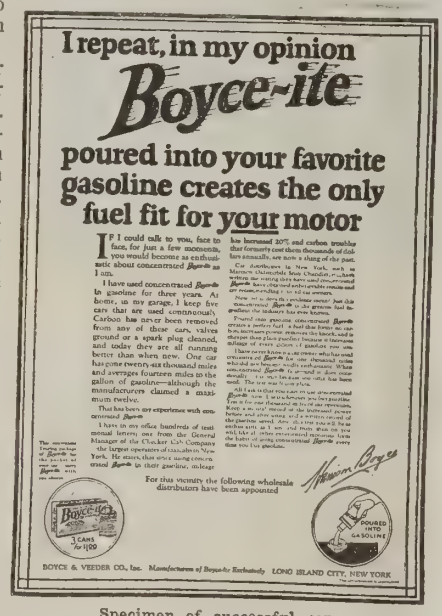
The company put on a crew of four men to call on the dealers in and near Hartford in advance of the advertising. Six dollars' worth, the price of ten packages, was all the men wished to sell each dealer, the order to be filled through whatever jobber the dealer preferred. The advertising was not to be billed until the advertising had appeared. The company believed that if the product "took on" in Hartford, it would all through the country.

The makers of Boyce-ite had been warned by some "advisers" that the product could not be marketed other than through an exclusive jobber in each section, that newspaper advertising would fall down, that newspaper co-operation "didn't mean anything" and that there were other and better ways to get their product over quickly.

At Hartford the interest and co-operation extended by newspaper executives was convincing proof that the long-faced prognostications offered by pessimists were made up 99⅔ per cent of "bosh," at least so far as Boyce-ite was concerned. A large degree of help was extended in information and in direct assistance to the sales force from the start. Results at Hartford were encouraging, although the tryout indicated the wisdom of shaping the container to fit the pocket of all makes of cars and of using larger and more dominant space rather than small space published often.

The advertising was in charge of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., New York.

"Great credit must be given the newspapers of the various trading centers on Boyce-ite for their co-operation in the matter of arranging route lists and analyzing markets before sales crews were placed in the territories," Horace Cleveland, vice-president of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., outlined. "The work of preliminary analysis proved to be invaluable particularly in the timing of the sales campaigns.



"Adverse business conditions reported would tend to hold off our work on a market until the complexion of it had changed. On the other hand, particularly favorable reports such as the announcement of heavy crops or the resumption of manufacturing activity would point to the advisability of working the market immediately.

"The reports received from the newspapers were checked with the Federal Reserve reports and those of statistical organizations. Thus, the sales work and newspaper advertising were planned to hit a market when most receptive, when money was being spent."

The company learned from its experience the value of cultivating the smaller towns around the large centers first, a method of attack which is not fully appreciated by all manufacturers out for increased distribution.

The publisher of the smaller city paper is likely to know the local dealers personally. There is not so large a territory to cover with salesmen, nor are the dealers likely to be quite so hard-boiled and skeptical.

At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for instance, the business manager and editor of the newspaper are friends of the jobber, whereas in a large center it is seldom so close a personal relationship exists. So Boyce & Veeder Company started up activity in the smaller places around the big center, placing small stocks and getting demand stirred up, knowing that when the supply ran out the dealers would apply to jobbers in the big centers, who thus would hear a call for the product and be more interested when the big markets were invaded. The cost of advertising in smaller places was much less than for metropolitan campaigns.

I repeat, in my opinion
Boyce-ite poured into your favorite gasoline creates the only fuel fit for your motor

IF I could talk to you, face to face, for just a few moments, you would become as enthusiastic about concentrated Boyce-ite as I am.

I have used concentrated Boyce-ite in gasoline for three years. At home, in my garage, I keep five cars that are used continously. Carbon has never been removed from any of these cars, valves ground or a spark plug cleaned, and today they are all running better than when new. One car has gone twenty-six thousand miles and averages fourteen miles to the gallon of gasoline—although the manufacturers claimed a maximum twelve.

That has been my experience with concentrated Boyce-ite

I have in my office hundreds of testimonial letters, one from the General Manager of the Checker Cab Company the largest operators of taxicabs in New York. He states, that since using concentrated Boyce-ite in their gasoline, mileage has increased 30% and carbon troubles that formerly cost them thousands of dollars annually, are now a thing of the past.

Car distributors in New York, such as Morrison Chevrolet, Inc., Chandler, Franklin, are using the Boyce-ite and recommend Boyce-ite. Save the cost of new parts, time and car repairs, and like it—let us prove it.

Now, as a step in confidence owner! Just this concentrated Boyce-ite in the gasoline and let gasoline the mileage it has ever known.

Poured into gasoline, concentrated Boyce-ite creates a perfect fuel—a fuel that burns so completely that more power removes the knock, and is cheaper than plain gasoline because it increases mileage of every gallon of gasoline you use.

I have never known a car owner who had used concentrated Boyce-ite for one thousand miles who was not a Boyce-ite enthusiast. When once poured Boyce-ite into—and it does come easily. I am sure you will be one who has been used. The first step is yours.

All I ask is that you start to use concentrated Boyce-ite. Let it do for you what it has done for others. Keep a car owner's record of the mileage before and after using, and a written record of the gasoline saved. Are it is true as I say it is, you will like it as well and more than do you will like the idea of using concentrated Boyce-ite every time you buy gasoline.

Harrison Boyce

For this vicinity the following wholesale distributors have been appointed

BOYCE & VEEDER CO., Inc. Manufacturers of Boyce-ite Exclusively LONG ISLAND CITY, NEW YORK

Specimen of successful copy.

Before New York was approached directly, Stamford and Greenwich, Conn., were thoroughly canvassed, distribution being followed by local advertising campaigns. Poughkeepsie and nearby territory were combed, then advertising was run. In New Jersey, the same line of approach had been followed at Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Hackensack, Elizabeth and Trenton. This all broke the ice for the venture into New York.

The same plan followed elsewhere also meant that the metropolitan newspaper advertising re-covered the adjoining smaller places. The experience of Boyce-ite indicates that publishers of the smaller newspapers are right in claiming a part of contracts issued for national advertising campaigns.

Harrison Boyce (who is inventor of the Boyce Moto-Meter), president of the company, after experimenting with various sizes of copy, concluded the most effective for his sales results was to open with full pages and follow with advertisements of not less than 1,000 lines. Large space made the proposition have more importance and the story stick out more strongly. The reaction to the advertising in each city was prompt. For instance, the company found it could advertise in a city like Cincinnati on Friday and in the next Thursday's mail receive orders from the jobbers in that city. The introduction campaigns varied in length from a month to six months, according to local conditions.

Every advertisement appeared over Mr. Boyce's signature. It sounds more like one man talking to another than writing. The heading is of strong hand lettering and the border distinctive. Space is left for insertion in 18 point Cheltenham bold of the names of wholesale distributors.

"I repeat, in my opinion BOYCE-ITE poured into your favorite gasoline creates the only fuel fit for your motor," one head-line affirms.

A diagram shows a can being poured into the tank and another diagram shows the three-can box.

The latest development is Boyce-ite Treated Gas, termed "The only fuel fit for your motor," also being advertised over Mr. Boyce's signature in the newspapers as local gasoline distributors are lined up.

To distinguish it from ordinary gasoline, this is blue-green in color and may be seen through a visible pump on its way into the tank cars.

A reward of $5,000 was offered by Mr. Boyce to nail false rumors spread about his product. This was featured in large newspaper space. In another advertisement, testimonials were featured. Another stressed using the product continuously. Magazines and some outdoor display have been used as well as helps for dealers.

Results talk.

The first can of Boyce-ite was sold to the consumer Sept. 10, 1923, at Hartford. On June 12 of this year the company had attained national distribution, with 95 per cent of the country's area covered, and more than 90 per cent distribution in that area. The company started with a small factory at Long Island City. Now it is operating a large plant at Farmingdale, Long Island, with a capacity of 150,000 cans a day, and this plant is being doubled in size and capacity to meet the demand.

At a conservative estimate, since September of last year, more than 10,000,000 cans of Boyce-ite have been sold.

Could this result have been obtained without the help of the newspapers? "Roll your own" answer.

TO DISCUSS POSTAL RATES

A. N. P. A. Calls Special Meeting for Chicago Next Week

At the call of the postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, of which J. D. Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse (N.Y.) Post-Standard is chairman, a special meeting of publishers will be held at the University Club, Chicago, next week, to discuss postal legislation.

The Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association will be represented at the meeting by Urey Woodson, publisher of the Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger; Homer Guard, representing the Inland Daily Press Association, and Frederick W. Hume, National Publishers Association.

A. G. Newmyer, president of the S. N. P. A. is also vice-chairman of A. N. P. A's. postal committee.

SEPTEMBER LINEAGE GREATEST FOR MONTH IN NEW YORK NEWSPAPER HISTORY

NEW YORK'S newspapers carried more advertising during September, 1924, than they have ever printed during that month, the opening of the Autumn campaigns. The total was 14,200,418 agate lines, 4,178,816 lines more than last September, and 1,364,802 lines ahead of the previous record for the month, which was made in 1922. The great gain over September, 1923, was due chiefly to the lack of advertising for eight days during the pressman's strike in 1923.

There is no doubt, however, that the trend in New York advertising is sharply upward. Ten of the thirteen papers whose existence dates back of 1924 enjoyed the heaviest September patronage of their history. Only one fell behind the curtailed September, 1923 lineage. The total business of the Herald and the Evening Mail, listed last year but not now as individuals, was 1,138,906 agate lines. The lineage of the newcomers, the Mirror and the Bulletin, totals 556,268 agate lines. September, 1923, had five Sundays against four in 1924, but received the advertising benefit of only four, due to the oft-mentioned strike of the pressmen.

These and other definite indications that advertising is climbing again, appear in the tables which follow:

SEPTEMBER, 1924-1923

Pages 1924	Pages 1923		Percentage of Total Space	1924	1923	Gain	Loss
1,260	974	American	8.5	1,206,792	913,642	293,150	.....
....	804	Herald	...	.....	§736,822	.....	.....
1,262	778	Herald Tribune	9.4	1,333,986	628,436	705,550	.....
814	....	*Mirror (Tabloid)	2.5	359,010	‖.....	.....	.....
1,068	816	News (Tabloid)	3.5	500,636	285,886	214,750	.....
1,746	1,116	Times	17.9	2,531,332	1,433,464	1,097,868	.....
1,262	906	World	11.1	1,576 226	1,126,548	449,678	.....
350	....	*Evening Bulletin	1.4	197,258	**.....	.....	.....
1,112	648	*Evening Journal	8.6	1,223,742	630,378	593,364	.....
....	404	*Evening Mail	...	.....	¶402,084	.....	.....
714	506	*Evening Post	2.5	367,900	397,288	.....	29,388
686	454	*Evening World	4.8	680,406	419,044	261.362	.....
856	504	*Sun	8.0	1,139,532	601.640	537,892	.....
638	480	*Telegram and Mail	5.3	748,592	††540,070	208,522	.....
1,122	800	Brooklyn Eagle	9.7	1,377.046	1,049,342	327.704	.....
518	442	Brooklyn Times	2.8	302,468	339,500	52.968	.....
558	478	Standard-Union	4.0	565,492	517,458	48,034	.....
13,966	10,110	Totals		14,200,418	10,021,602	4,178,816 Net Gain.	.....

*No Sunday edition.
¶Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924 Sunday issue discontinued March 16, 1924.
††Evening Telegram carried 118,056 lines in the 5 Sunday issues of September, 1923; this lineage is included.
§Herald and Tribune combined March 19, 1924.
Evening Bulletin first issue June 19, 1924.
‖Mirror (Tabloid) first issue June 24, 1924.
General strike of the New York newspaper pressmen September 18 to September 26, 1923, inclusive.

SEPTEMBER, 1924-1918

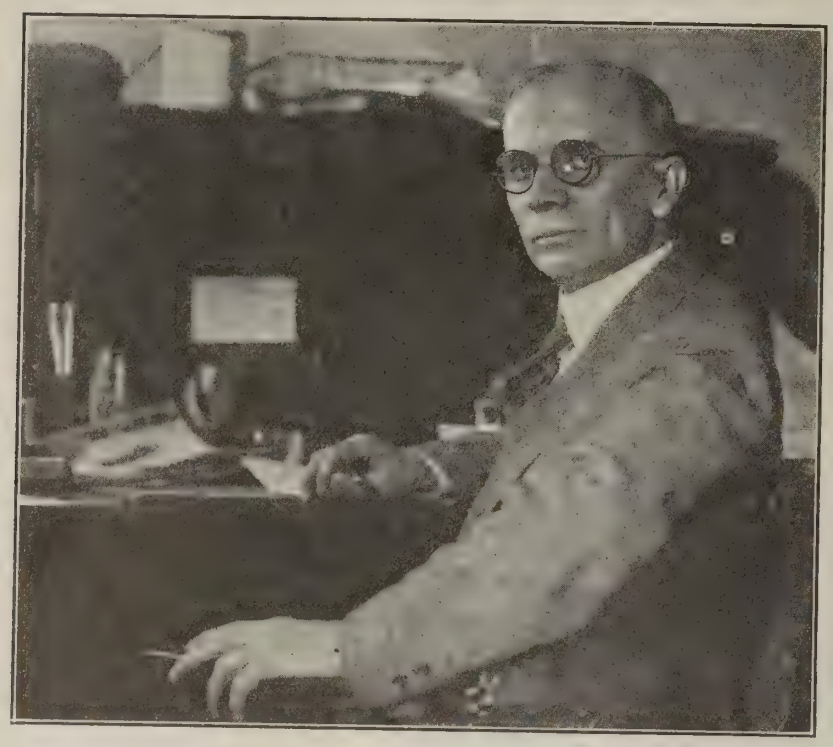
	1924	1923	1922	1921	1920	1919	1928
American	1,206,792	913,642	891,362	788,818	815,126	935 638	701,797
Herald	.....	736,822	982,604	967,058	1,041,284	755,556	573,890
Herald Tribune	1,333,986	628,436	724,190	753,188	799,570	707,858	328,750
Mirror (Tabloid)	359.010	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tabloid)	500,636	285,886	252,596	257,694	181,804	.....	.....
Times	2.531.332	1,433,464	2,074.500	1,851.767	1,897,614	1,785,816	1,240,057
World	1,576,226	1,126,548	1,527,720	1,176,962	1,524,068	1,562,780	1,387,429
Eve. Bulletin	197.258	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Eve. Journal	1,223,742	630.378	938,506	919,910	793,936	785,234	512,630
Eve. Mail	.....	402,084	468,138	490.212	500,280	371,892	243,687
Eve. Post	367,900	397,288	316,930	378,494	416.094	405.483	255,711
Eve. World	680,406	419,044	636,952	737.182	723.496	624.650	377.953
Globe	.....	‡.....	565,798	645,092	563,202	718,238	427,993
Sun	1,139,532	601,640	756,480	706,318	737,914	755.718	425,648
Telegram and Mail	748.592	540,070	584,950	542,536	540.294	730.156	656,165
Brooklyn Eagle	1,377,046	1,049,342	1,250,910	1,112,568	1,097.764	1,033,718	699,665
Brooklyn Times	392,468	339,500	253,154	296,588	316.538	†.....	†.....
Standard Union	565,492	517,458	610,826	559,572	698,786	573,092	471,537
	14,200,418	10,021,602	12,835,616	12,813,959	12,647,770	11,745,829	8,302,912

†Figures not recorded.
‡Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923, name changed to Sun March 10, 1924.

Decade of Detroit News Rotogravure Proves Its Worth

TEN YEARS ago The Detroit News introduced its Rotogravure Section to Michigan. At that time there were few newspapers that foresaw the ultimate possibilities of Rotogravure. The News was one of these pioneers and benefited almost from the start. At the inception of the Rotogravure Section the circulation of The Sunday News was 110,000. Circulation began to rise immediately. By 1916 it reached 170,000. Then the Rotogravure Section was increased to eight pages and the circulation again began to rise. Now it is well over 285,000. Inasmuch as no other change in editorial content of so equally radical a nature took place during this period the Rotogravure Section must be given the credit for much of the great circulation increase of The Sunday News, which now surpasses even that of its week day issue.

Advertisers wishing to cover the rich Detroit field and to take the utmost advantage of the great circulation of The Sunday News should use this perfect attention compelling medium. The Detroit News has led in Rotogravure advertising from its inception and printed so far this year 95% more Rotogravure advertising than the second Sunday paper.



The Detroit News

News Square — Detroit, Michigan

Greatest Circulation Week Day or Sunday in Michigan

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

FREDERICK B. FORBES—Editorial Success Depends on Business Success.

"THE first requisite of a newspaper is that it be a commercial success. If it can't pay its way, it will soon seek to perform any public function except that which it fulfills in the sheriff's sale."

So believes Frederick B. Forbes, managing editor of the Philadelphia North American, a serious, straight-thinking newspaper executive.

"Now, please do not misunderstand me," he requested. "Do not think me one of those cynical newspaper men who believe that a newspaper is exclusively a mercantile proposition. While it is true that newspapers are privately owned, it is equally true that the constitution and the statutes endow newspapers with special privileges and powers, and also impose on newspapers profound obligations of public service.

"But, before they can perform such public service adequately, they must be made business successes. If a newpaper is not a paying proposition it soon becomes a very impotent weapon with which to fight the battles of the public. So whatever ideals of public service a newspaper may have, its first duty to the public is to make it a business success.

"The fundamental principle of such success is to make an entertaining paper, and the basis of an entertaining newspaper is news.

"To get and to keep readers and to keep the confidence of the public the newspaper's news must be first, last and always honest.

"The editor who poisons news is the most despised figure in the newspaper world. Editorials denouncing this practice would fill a library if collected, and yet, many of the very editors who have written such editorials have been guilty of the practice. They salve their consciences with the unction that they are guiding public opinion for righteousness. But every poisoner of news thinks he is doing it in a good cause. There is only one honest course, and that is to be honest. Print the news, decide on what has its first call on your space by the standard of readers' interest.

"While the circulation department of a newspaper sells the product, no amount of enterprise, no premium or other schemes can keep up the sales if the newspaper itself does not attract and keep readers.

"It is the business of a managing editor as the director of production, to see that his paper presents the news honestly, clearly and concisely. He should have men about him who can select that which has the widest interest and present it in the most attractive way. He should then add to his paper entertainment in proportion to the need of the season, by the selection of timely, atractive and interesting features. This formula backed by progressive business policies will make it possible to publish a successful newspaper in any field.

"The editor will then have an instrument for tremendous good in promoting honest government and in developing clean public opinion.

"But, unless the paper is made first of all with a view to its selling qualities, he will find that the editor has a weak weapon with which to fight the public wrong or promote the public good.

"Summing up, I would say honesty, impartiality, fairness and conciseness in presenting news and a discriminating taste in selecting entertaining features are the fundamentals of a managing editor's work."

Ever since he was 14 years old, Forbes has had intimate contact with newspaper offices, and today knows the business thoroughly.

When he first started newspaper work, it was as printer's devil on the Carbondale (Pa.) Leader, a bi-weekly. His first assignment was to man a broom and sweep out the entire shop. Next he was intrusted with the important duty of building the office fire.

From this work, he became a journeyman printer, working in job shops in Pennsylvania and New York until he was 19 years old, when he returned to Carbondale to become teacher in one of the public schools.

He had a knack for writing and was a conscientious student. He read law and passed the bar examinations, but then decided that he did not want to practice. Instead, he heard again the call of the newspaper, and became editorial writer on a Carbondale daily. This was when he was 22 years old.

After a short time, he left Carbondale to become editorial writer on the Scranton Republican, where he remained 3 years, transferring to the Williamsport (Pa.) Grit.

In 1905, he joined the staff of the Philadelphia North American as copy reader. Within four months he was promoted to assistant managing editor. For seven years he combined this position with that of special writer, spending considerable time on out-of-town stories. He covered the Roosevelt campaign at this time for the North American.

At the end of four years of this work, he began writing editorials exclusively, being with E. A. Van Valkenberg, editor. He was made managing editor in 1914 and has held that position ever since.

Concentrated Circulation

Of the more than 250,000 intelligent, ready-to-buy, able-to-pay, average daily purchasers of The Sun, 97% live in New York's trading area.

The Sun has a larger proportion of its circulation in the territory that New York advertisers prefer than any other New York newspaper.

The Sun

New York City

Average net paid circulation exceeding 250,000

Calls Meeting of German Dailies

August J. Fertig, editor of the Cleveland Waechter & Anzeiger, and president of the German Newspaper Publishers' Association, has called a meeting of the German dailies in the country, to be held in Chicago, Oct. 14.

The object of the German paper publishers meet is to get a more representative membership from their ranks in the A. B. C., according to Mr. Fertig.

Cleveland Dailies Gain Circulation

Every newspaper in Cleveland showed substantial circulation gains for the last six months in the circulation figures published Oct. 3. The Plain Dealer rose from 192,000 to 210,000 daily average; the Press jumped from 187,000 to 194,000 daily average (six business days a week); the News rose from 161,000 to 164,000 daily average and the Times and Commercial jumped from 21,000 to 26,400 daily average (six business days a week.)

Canadian Newsprint for Britain

The Canadian Export Paper Company is looking forward to a new field opening in England as a market for Canadian newsprint as the result of a contract entered into by Price Bros. & Co. with the London Daily Express for the shipment of a large quantity of newsprint to England regularly. The amount covered in the agreement is understood to be in the neighborhood of 15,000 tons, which would cover a daily production of 50 tons for a whole year, and run in the aggregate at present prices to over $1,000,000.

Railroads Increase Ad Budget

The original $1,000,000 advertising campaign previously planned by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroad companies will be increased to $1,500,000, it has been decided by the traffic managers and agricultural experts of those roads after a tour of Montana, Idaho and Washington State. The officials conclude that now is the best time to advertise that section.

MORNING PAPERS THE GET ACTION SAME DAY

CINCINNATI from a Buying Standpoint

As four newspapers serve the Cincinnati market, the advertising or agency man is up against a difficult problem to select the newspaper best fitted to his needs.

Three of these newspapers claim complete coverage and two out of the three argue circulation.

But in this market there is one paper that is PREDOMINANT: The Cincinnati Enquirer. Its Sunday edition covers practically every home in town, and its daily circulation is with the upper and the strong middle class—the class that earns over 82% of Cincinnati's total income.

The Enquirer offers a kindly audience to advertisers—and an intimate and influential interest in every account that it carries.

Our Merchandising Dept. will furnish route lists, surveys, etc.

I. A. KLEIN
Chicago
New York

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

In St. Louis more than 500 National Advertisers use the POST-DISPATCH Exclusively

More than 500 National Advertisers, coming from great and small advertising centers in the United States, depended entirely upon the Post-Dispatch to introduce and maintain the sale of their products in St. Louis and the Great Southwest during the first six months of 1924.

This striking endorsement of the Post-Dispatch is not restricted to any class or price of merchandise. Keen advertisers in every line have found success in this great territory through CONCENTRATING their advertising in ONE newspaper, the Post-Dispatch, which has sales-making influence both with the merchant and the consumer

These successful National Advertisers, like Home Merchants, measure the value of advertising by the results it produces—that is why the Post - Dispatch published 42% of all the National Advertising carried by the four St Louis newspapers during the first six months of 1924.

Ask the Home Merchant why he, too, prefers the Post-Dispatch, and he will tell you that for more than 25 years the business men in the 15 important divisions of retail selling in St. Louis have found the Post-Dispatch more productive than any other newspaper. During the first six months of 1924 the preference of these Home Merchants was so emphatic that they used 53% of all of their newspaper advertising in the Post-Dispatch alone, more than in all three other newspapers COMBINED.

Here are a few of the 500 National Advertisers who used the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH exclusively during the first six months of 1924:

Ask any of these Exclusive Advertisers WHY they Concentrate

A. B. C. ELECTRIC WASHERS
AMERICAN THERMOS BOTTLE
ANDREW JERGENS CO
AZUREA PERFUMES
BEEMAN'S GUM
BERRY BROS. VARNISH
BLUHILL CHEESE
BOYLES OLD ENGLISH WAX
BUTTERFIELD & CO., FRED
BUTTERICK PUBLISHING CO
CARACO SHAMPOO
COHEN, GOLDMAN & CO
COLGATE & CO. (FAB)
CREME ANGELUS
CROSSLEY RADIO CORP
CROWN CORSET CO.
DEL MONTE CANNED FRUITS
DJER KISS PERFUME
EASTMAN KODAKS
EDUCATOR SHOES
EIGIN WATCHES
EL PRODUCTO CIGARS
ENOZ CHEMICAL CO
FIRESTONE APSLEY RUB CO
FLEISCHMAN CO
GENERAL PHONO CO
GREBE & CO., A. H.
GREEN RIVER
HEARST'S AMERICAN WEEKLY
HENNAFOAM.
HICKORY GARTERS
HOFSTRA
HOLLAND FURNACE CO
HOOVER VACUUM SWEEPERS
HOT POINT PRODUCTS
HOUBIGANT PERFUMES
ILLINOIS REFRIGERATOR CO
IELKE MARGARINE
JOHANSEN BROS. SHOE CO
JOHN RUSKIN CIGAR.
JOHNSON FLOOR VARNISH
KAUFMAN & BROS., CHAS
KIMLARK RUGS
KIRK CO., JAS. S
KLEEN HEAT OIL BURNER
LA FRANCE MFG. CO.
LA MAY FACE POWDER.
LANDERS FRARY & CLARK
LEE UNIONALLS.
LEGGETT & CO., FRANCIS H
LIEDERMAN, EARL E
LISTERINE.
LLOYD MFG. CO
LORRAINE HAIR NETS
LUX.
NIAGARA WALL PAPER CO
NORTHERN PAPER MILLS
NUBONE CORSET CO
NUJOL.
ONYX HOSIERY
PARAPAD CO.
PICTORIAL REVIEW
PHOENIX HOSIERY
PLUTO WATER
POMPEIAN CO
PROCTOR & GAMBLE
Q. R. S. MUSIC ROLLS
RADIO CORP OF AMERICA
RAND CO.
RUBBERSET CO
SALADA TEA.
SIMMONS BEDS
SONORA PHONOGRAPH.
S. O. S. ALUM CLEANER
STANDARD OIL CO (FLIT)
STANDARD TEXTILE CO
STEARNS ELECTRIC PASTE
STORY & CLARK.
STREET & SMITH.
SUNBEAM ELECTRIC IRON
SWEETHEART SOAP
SWOBODA, A. P
TINTEX.
THOR ELECTRIC WASHERS
UNDERWOOD & CO., WM.
U. S. RUBBER CO. (JAR RINGS)
VAN RAALTE SILKS
WARNER BROS. CORSETS
WASMUTH ENDICOTT
WENATCHEE APPLES.
WHITTALL RUGS.
WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION
YEAST FOAM.
YUCATAN GUM
ZONITE

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

FIRST IN ST. LOUIS CIRCULATION - FIRST IN ADVERTISING - FIRST IN EVERYTHING

NATIONAL ADVERTISING OFFICES

EASTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE: World Building, New York
R. A. Fletcher, Manager. Telephone Beekman 4902.

DETROIT OFFICE: General Motors Bldg.

SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE: 564 Market St.

LOS ANGELES OFFICE: Title Insurance Bldg.

WESTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE: Mallers Building, Chicago
P. L. Henriquez, Manager. Telephone Dearborn 4636.

KANSAS CITY OFFICE: Coca Cola Bldg.

SEATTLE OFFICE: Securities Bldg.

JUNIUS B. WOOD OF CHICAGO NEWS SOLE CIVILIAN ON SHENANDOAH

Brilliant Correspondent Adds to Distinction on Historic Flight—Covered Arms Conference and Japan's Quake—Called "Pershing's Pet" in War

THE Shenandoah, giant dirigible of the United States navy, will sail through columns and columns of newspaper space during the next 17 days on her history making flight from Lakehurst, N. J., to the Pacific Coast and back a distance of 7,000 miles.

JUNIUS B. WOOD

And the sole newspaper man on board, the writer who will be responsible for a great share of those columns, is Junius B. Wood of the Chicago Daily News, war correspondent and adventurer.

Of course all press associations and many newspapers applied for the right to have their respresentative the single civilian allowed in the dirigible's gondolas to give the public its news from the air of the Shenandoah's journey.

But, when the ship glided away from her mooring mast at Lakehurst this week, Wood was the only newspaper man allowed to go. The answer why is the story of Wood's newspaper career.

Wood, known as "the newspaper man who is always going somewhere," was recalled from the Far East, where he covered the Japanese earthquake, in order that he might personally make application for a place with the crew of the Shenandoah on its trip to the North Pole, which former Secretary of the Navy Denby was planning. Before Wood arrived in Washington, Denby had resigned and the North Pole trip was abandoned.

It naturally followed that the strong recommendations of Wood which had been placed before the navy department and the high regard felt for him by men like Gen. Pershing and Admiral Moffett, sufficed, with the approval of the various press associations, which knew him as a square dealing, competent correspondent to win for him the distinction of being the dirigible's only civilian passenger on its present cross-continent flight.

For ten years Wood has been looking for trouble in distant lands. Usually he has found it. Previous to going far afield for news, he had won, by enterprise and hard work, the distinction of being recognized as "The Best Newspaper Reporter in Chicago."

A graduate of the University of Michigan, where he made a record as an athlete—he was a mile runner on the track team, running second in the western collegiate meet in 1897 and again second in the meet of 1898—he took to newspaper work as a duck takes to water. His reputation for getting whatever he went after was soon well established and, being a glutton for work, he was usually accommodated with the most difficult and most spectacular assignments.

Wood was at Vera Cruz with the American Marines after they captured that city. He was with General Pershing on the celebrated chase of Villa into Mexico and he participated in many of the weird adventures of that expedition. His exposure of the shocking condition of the American Army airplanes endeared him to the army officers who suffered from that situation. When the United States entered the war he reached France before General Pershing, and stayed in France and Germany until the American troops began to come back from beyond the Rhine.

Wood won unique distinction with the American forces, not only because he was in the front trenches with them much of the time and under fire innumerable times, but because in battles he made it his special duty to tell in his dispatches what individual soldiers did. The consequence was that his long reports on what happened to fighting men of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Iowa, and the other States read like so many rolls of honor. These chronicles of the achievements of individual doughboys are still treasured in thousands of American homes.

Wood and General Pershing had achieved a special liking for each other. Envious correspondents called him "Pershing's Pet." Not infrequently Pershing would use Wood's vigorous pen to make known conditions that needed rectifying. On trips of inspection by the Commander in Chief, Wood frequently was the one civilian member of the party. Because he was fearless, outspoken and not to be bullied or terrified by any number of stars on an Army uniform, he was accepted throughout the Army as a valued champion of fighting men of all ranks. He was especially liked by the fighting Generals because he was always at the front and was always endeavoring to get the exact facts regarding any action that had been fought. As an example of his thoroughness, it may be said that for weeks after the Armistice he scoured France and Germany, interviewing hundreds of officers and privates to discover evidence that would settle the great dispute between the First Division and the Rainbow Division regarding which of them won the famous race to Sedan.

When the war was over and the American soldiers had mainly returned home, Wood also came back and soon was sent by the Daily News to the Far East, where for many months he traveled through Siberia, Manchuria, China, Japan and the Philippines, reporting conditions in those countries. When the Limitation of Armaments Conference was about to meet in Washington, Wood was ordered back to assist his newspaper at the conference, because of his special knowledge of conditions in the Far East. The conference over, Wood returned to the Orient by way of Europe and Asia Minor and traveling across the Arabian Desert. Previous to the Japanese earthquake of September, 1923, Wood and his wife had been making their home at the Grand Hotel in Yokohama. Just a few days before the earthquake Wood started for Mukden to interview the Manchurian War Lord, Chang Tso Lin, while Mrs. Wood went to a Japanese summer resort outside of the city. The Grand Hotel was destroyed by the earthquake and many persons were killed.

Since Wood's return from the Orient a few months ago he has written some notable articles.

Protests from various sources over the arrangements for covering the news of the transcontinental flight of the Navy dirigible Shenandoah has caused Secretary Wilbur to instruct the commanding officer of the ship to see that no favoritism is shown or advantage given to the Chicago Daily News because Mr. Wood is the press observer aboard the ship.

Apparently captions put upon Mr. Wood's first story the day the Shenandoah left Lakehurst, N. J., and a Chicago Daily News copyright line also carried, gave the impression that the News was representing that Wood was covering the story exclusively for the News, or at least every advantage was being taken of the fact that he was a News man.

An exchange of messages between Secretary Wilbur and the publisher of the Daily News resulted in assurances from the newspaper that Wood represented all news services on a basis of equality.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

By Henry Edward Warner

THE ERUDITE.

I am a linguist, verging on renown.
My mind runs glib to every written tongue;
Rare the derivatives I can't trace down—
I hunt them early and I catch them young.
Scarce is the patois I have not dug through
Of race extinct and hidden parlez vous.

Masters there are who search the chiseled word
Of hieroglyphics and the cuneiform,
Writing down sounds of signs they've never heard,
Bringing them cold from stone to make them warm.
I who would use them, bide my time and hook them
From those back pages where the Wise Men book them.

Thus do I delve, when I must have a phrase
To round a period, to impress a mind;
Knowing the Dictionary secret pays
When one gets credit for an easy find!
Thus I became a Wise Guy in my town,
Known as a linguist verging on renown.

MOST NEWS
The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh
The Pittsburgh Post
MORNING AND SUNDAY
Daily Circulation 118,000
Sunday Circulation 175,000
Member A. B. C.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia
and GROWING!

First Choice in Tulsa

The Vandever Dry Goods Co., opening a new department store home, selected The Tulsa Tribune to carry a special section of advertising.

The Tribune published an 18-page section—the largest ever run for any Oklahoma department store.

The fact that The Tribune is first choice IN TULSA is food for thought by national advertisers who want to use the logical medium to sell to Tulsa and vicinity.

The TULSA TRIBUNE
Published Evenings and Sunday Mornings
GREATER READER INTEREST MORE FEATURES
BETTER RESULTS in Tulsa and Tulsa's Trade Territory Than Any Other Tulsa Publication.
If it's good for the local advertiser, it's good for the national advertiser

WHAT THE A. B. C. REPORTS WILL NEVER TELL NATIONAL ADVERTISERS ABOUT COLUMBUS, GA.

HERE'S A CLOSE-UP of the ENQUIRER-SUN by A. T. ROBERTS Vice-President Southland Pecan Co.

SOUTHLAND PECAN COMPANY
GROWERS AND SHELLERS
Office of the Vice-President.
COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 9, 1924.

Mr. Julian Harris,
Editor Enquirer-Sun,
Columbus, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Harris:

I question whether any but a newspaper man can fully appreciate the distinction accorded The Enquirer-Sun and you, and the city of Columbus as well, when a writer such as Ernest Gruening and a magazine of the character of The Century singles you out from among all the Southern editors as the outstanding exemplar in the South of editorial independence and ideals.

Four years as advertising manager of The Enquirer-Sun gave me a better understanding of how little the "business office tail wags the editorial dog" at No. 15 Eleventh street than could be possible for a man less familiar with the inside workings of the newspaper.

I have lost business many times where a less rigorous editorial honestly might have left the way open for a regular triumph of space.

Yet I never felt like making any apology to an advertiser, or groups of advertisers, who felt aggrieved by the editorial policy of the Enquirer-Sun. That very honesty and fearlessness of the editorial department was a matter of pride to me rather than an irritation.

Cordially yours,
A. T. ROBERTS.

The article to which Mr. Roberts refers appeared in the September issue of the Century Magazine—an article which mentioned the Enquirer-Sun as among the newspapers whose editorial and news policies are completely divorced from business office control.

As a matter of fact, there are a number of such newspapers, particularly among the smaller dailies of the country, so that the Enquirer-Sun accepts the compliment with the reservation that it was merely fortunate in being singled out by Mr. Gruening.

However, we would not be human if we were not immensely gratified by Mr. Robert's expression of continuing interest and faith in the Enquirer-Sun.

EDITOR ENQUIRER-SUN.

For one thing—The A. B. C. reports will never tell them that in Columbus, Georgia, The Enquirer-Sun — THE MORNING NEWSPAPER—led in the amount of Department Store and Ready-to-wear advertising last month by thousands of lines. Here is the September, 1924, record in Department Store and Ready-to-wear advertising:

The Enquirer-Sun	61,757 lines
The Afternoon Paper	34,450 "
Enquirer-Sun's lead	27,307 "

Nor do the A. B. C. Reports show that also in Classified Advertising The Enquirer-Sun in September, 1924, led the Afternoon Paper in Columbus, Georgia, by thousands of lines. Here is last month's record in Classified:

The Enquirer-Sun	57,743 lines
The Afternoon Paper	40,378 "
Enquirer-Sun's lead	17,365 "

Combining the Department Store, Ready-to-wear and Classified advertising for September, 1924, the figures begin to show The Enquirer-Sun's leadership—a lead of 44,672 lines over the Afternoon Paper in the foregoing named classifications.

But—

In Columbus, Georgia, in September the Afternoon Paper led the Enquirer-Sun in National Advertising by 54,568 lines.

Why?—

Because the average agency handling national accounts looks at the A. B. C. reports and observing that the Afternoon Paper has more circulation than The Enquirer-Sun, lists the evening medium, often without further investigation.

Fortunately—

The Department Stores of Columbus are not interested in A. B. C. reports. What they want is results. They know that The Enquirer-Sun's subscribers have a far greater per capita purchasing power than those of the afternoon paper—and they advertise accordingly. A. B. C. reports don't tell about that.

These merchants who put the bulk of their advertising in the morning newspaper also know that The Enquirer-Sun possesses the confidence of its readers. And accordingly, for them, the circulation of the Morning Newspaper—now well in excess of 7,000—is preferable to that of the afternoon paper. This information is not given in A. B. C. reports.

The Enquirer-Sun, which is a member of the A. B. C., is edited and owned by Julian Harris. It was the first paper in the South to attack the Klan. And it is continuing its fight against all who seek to arouse racial prejudice or foment religious intolerance. In short, The Enquirer-Sun not only produces a maximum of results in its territory, but is, in addition, the type of newspaper in which any advertiser should be glad to have his copy appear.

Represented Nationally

by THE S. C. BECKWITH SPECIAL AGENCY

New York Chicago St. Louis Detroit Atlanta
San Francisco Los Angeles Kansas City

R. HOE & CO. SOLD TO BANK SYNDICATE

Guaranty Company of N. Y. Heads Group Which Purchases Famous 121-Year Old Company From Hoe Heirs, Arthur I. Hoe Alone Retaining His Interest—80,000 Shares Preferred Stock, $4,500,000 First Mortgage Bonds Being Sold.

ALL heirs but one of Robert Hoe, founder of R. Hoe & Co., printing press manufacturers, New York and London, have sold their interests in the company to a syndicate of bankers headed by the Guaranty Company of New York.

The concern now becomes R. Hoe & Co., Inc.

Arthur I. Hoe alone remains as one of the larger stockholders among the Hoe heirs.

The amazingly important transfer marks the first time in the history of the famous firm, established in 1803, that the Hoe family has not held the majority of stock.

Richard Kelly remains as president. The present executive management is held intact, although additions will be announced later.

An excess of $11,300,000 tangible assets is shown on the balance sheet as of June 30, 1924.

Dominick & Dominick, members of the New York Stock Exchange, are now offering an issue of 80,000 shares, at $50 a share, of Class A stock, preferred and participating, of the new corporation, and 160,000 shares of common stock, while the same house, with the Guaranty Company of New York, and Edward B. Smith & Co., are selling $4,500,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent gold bonds.

The bonds are dated Oct. 1, 1924, to mature Oct. 1, 1934.

Proceeds of these bonds and the Class A stock and the common stock are to be used for retirement of $800,000 of mortgages and for purchase of the assets and business of R. Hoe & Co.

The bonds are secured by a first mortgage upon all plants of the company in the United States, and by pledge of the stock of the British subsidiary.

The bond prospectus states additional authorized bonds may be issued to the extent of 70 per cent of the cost of additions and betterment to the properties, provided earnings available for interest in two years preceding have averaged at least twice requirements upon all first mortgage obligations then outstanding and those which it is proposed will be issued.

The company gives its average annual net earnings for the past six years, as $1,250,000. Net earnings for six months ended June 30, 1924, were $523,893.

Net earnings for the different years are listed as follows: 1918, $1,137,276; 1919, $1,425,425; 1920, $815,243; 1921, $1,198,812; 1922, $1,454,600; and 1923, $1,473,281.

The fact that earnings of the current year are somewhat below the average is said by President Kelly to be due to delays in shipment and the inclusion of high-cost materials, resulting from the strike in the latter part of 1923.

"In this strike the company was completely successful," Mr. Kelly writes in the prospectus, "and as a result has established its plants on an open shop basis."

Main offices and plant of the company are located on Grand street, New York, covering two entire city blocks and parts of three others, comprising more than 20 acres of floor space.

In addition there are 16 acres of land and 110,000 square feet of floor space in the recently purchased plant at Dunnellen, N. J., while subsidiary works in London, England, occupied continuously in making printing machinery for the European markets, are, according to claim, larger than those of all other printing press manufacturers of Great Britain combined.

Employes of the three plants number more than 3,700. Branch offices are maintained in Boston and Chicago.

This mammoth manufacturing enterprise is the growth of 121 years, a history that closely parallels that of mechanical printing.

Although Gutenberg printed his first book from movable types about the year 1450, little improvement or advancevancement was noted during the next 300 years. It was not until 1798 that the first press built of iron instead of wood was devised, and even then it was nothing but a modification of the old hand press such as was used by Guttenberg.

Robert Hoe, the first, came to this country from England in 1803 and established a carpenter business in New York City with Matthew and Peter Smith, his brothers-in-law. From building wooden hand presses, they worked into the design and manufacture of iron frame machines, and in 1822 the Smith press, the first iron hand press in which the toggle-joint principle was employed, was put on the market. In rapid succession thereafter they developed the Washington hand press, the precursor of all modern hand proof presses, the first flat-bed and cylinder press used in the United States, and the first single-cylinder and double-cylinder flat-bed presses.

In 1833 Robert Hoe died and was succeeded by his eldest son, Richard March Hoe, who, with Robert Hoe, the second, and Peter Smith, carried on the business until 1836.

Under him the company kept steady pace with the demands of the newspapers and other printers for improved and more rapid presses, the most striking developments being the rotary type-revolving machines for newspaper printing, the first one of which was placed in the office of the Philadelphia Ledger in 1846; the development of machinery for making curved stereotype plates; the invention of the first roll-fed continuous printing rotary press in 1871; the first four-page wide newspaper press in 1874; the invention and perfection of the rotary folder, and the introduction in 1881 of the triangular former folder, which made possible the modern high-speed newspaper press. In 1915 R. Hoe & Co. developed and patented automatic ink pumping mechanism for high-speed newspaper presses.

After the death of Richard March Hoe in 1886, Robert Hoe, third, became the head of the firm and carried it on up tions, developments and improvements followed one another rapidly, more than keeping pace with newspaper growth.

Since 1828 the company has also specialized in the manufacture of saws, and it was not only the first American producer of circular saws, but the originator of the famous inserted-tooth saw now used almost universally.

The business has been conducted as a corporation since 1910, although owned in its entirety by the immediate heirs of Robert Hoe, third.

Keeping the Telephone Alive

Americans have learned to depend on the telephone, in fair weather or in foul, for the usual affairs of the day or for the dire emergency in the dead of night. Its continuous service is taken as a matter of course.

The marvel of it is that the millions of thread-like wires are kept alive and ready to vibrate at one's slightest breath. A few drops of water in a cable, a faulty connection in the wire maze of a switchboard, a violent sleet, rain or wind storm or the mere falling of a branch will often jeopardize the service.

Every channel for the speech currents must be kept electrically intact. The task is as endless as housekeeping. Inspection of apparatus, equipment and all parts of the plant is going on all the time. Wire chiefs at "test boards" locate trouble on the wires though miles away. Repairmen, the "trouble hunters," are at work constantly wherever they are needed in city streets, country roads or in the seldom-trodden trails of the wilderness.

Providing telephone service for this great nation is a huge undertaking. To keep this vast mechanism always electrically alive and dependable is the unending task of tens of thousands of skillful men and women in every state in the Union.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY AND ASSOCIATED COMPANIES
BELL SYSTEM
One Policy, One System, Universal Service

first IN CENTRAL OHIO
COLUMBUS IN CIRCULATION & ADVERTISING

94,150

Sworn government statement for the 6 mos. ending March 31, 1924.

Advertising Leadership

The Dispatch leads all other Ohio newspapers in advertising (first 9 mos. 1924), exceeding the next largest (Cleveland) paper by over 1,000,000 lines. For the first 9 months the Dispatch exceeded the other Columbus Newspapers combined by 2,592,357 lines.

DISPATCH . . . 15,383,656 lines
SEC. PAPER . . 7,469,697 lines
THIRD PAPER . 5,321,602 lines

462 exclusive national advertisers first 9 mo. 1924

362 exclusive local display advertisers first 9 mo. 1924

MAKE CENTRAL OHIO YOUR TEST MARKET

The Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Certified Dry Mats Made In America!

An Announcement and a Pledge.

PUBLISHERS and stereotypers realize and appreciate the "economic soundness and humaneness" of the cold process of stereotyping. That is why the dry mat has made such rapid strides in recent years.

Fully fifty per cent of the American dailies that stereotype have discarded the obsolete wet mat hot process and now use the dry mat cold process, and it has been predicted in some quarters that by 1928 every U. S. daily newspaper will be using dry mats exclusively.

Many publishers and stereotypers, while realizing the value of the dry mat, have hesitated to adopt it for the simple reason that the source of supply in the U. S. has heretofore been in the hands of but one manufacturer. Today American-made Certified Dry Mats are available, and publishers and stereotypers are assured of a free and competitive market. American dailies need no longer depend on foreign supply with its uncertainties, and with an open market in the U. S. publishers and stereotypers cannot afford to do so.

Where Certified Dry Mats Are Made—West Groton, Mass.

By manufacturing in America we have assured the security and continuity of supply so essential to the newspaper business as well as the dry mat itself. Publishers and stereotypers need no longer hesitate about discarding the time-consuming, expense-devouring steam table, roll-your-own wet mat process. The time-saving, economic cold process of stereotyping has arrived and is here to stay.

Certified Dry Mats are new in name only. The manufacturing process is that of the well-known Claus Ideal dry mats which have been in use for many years throughout Europe and for the past four years in America. In extensive tests made here during the preliminary stages of manufacture we have developed an all-American dry mat which embodies the experiences, needs and preferences of our publishers and stereotypers.

We cheerfully acknowledge our deep feeling of appreciation and gratitude to the craft for their constructive criticisms, and the painstaking tests which they have made in the friendliest spirit of co-operation.

So we come to you with a time-tried and proven quality, checked up as it were, by the prospective users themselves. And with Quality will go hand in hand a Service which publishers and stereotypers will not be long in recognizing and adopting as their own.

The officers and personnel of this company are all well versed in the dry mat business and are familiar with the requirements of our newspaper plants and stereotype job shops. Our business policy may be summed up in the slogan "Profits through Service," and we are all heart and soul bound to make this slogan a living force in the dry mat business.

Now a word as to price. While Certified Dry Mats are made and sold on the basis of Quality, first, last and all the time, our prices will always be the lowest consistent with the high quality standards governing this business.

Certified Dry Mats have the heritage of twenty years of experience to maintain as well as to back them, and it is our conviction that this reputation will not only be carried forward but augmented by the daily performance of American-made Certified Dry Mats in the newspaper plants and stereotype job shops of the country.

If you want to be assured of results in your stereotype department, not once in a while, but day in and day out the year round, you will need Certified Dry Mats. Samples are yours without any charge or obligation—just indicate the kind of equipment you employ such as casting box, press and the number of casts you must have from each mat, and we shall furnish you with the Certified Dry Mat made specially for your needs, and quote you prices as well as supply you with any other information you may desire.

A trial in your own plant will demonstrate to you what Certified Quality and Certified Service can be made to mean to you in your business.

We are now ready to serve you, and we welcome the opportunity to put Certified Dry Mats to the test.

Geo. A. Kubler,
President.

Certified Dry Mat Corporation

342 Madison Avenue New York, N. Y.

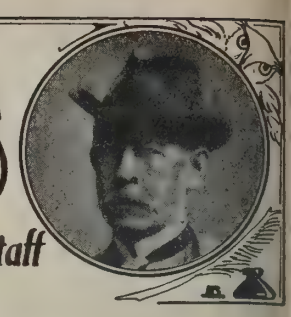
TRADE MARK



MADE IN U.S.A. BY THE CERTIFIED DRY MATS ORIGINAL CLAUS IDEAL PROCESS

"Profits Through Service"

Copyright 1924 C. D. M. C.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

Herald the First to Use the Atlantic Cable

Another clash occurred between the Herald and Tribune, in a dispute as to which paper received the first special dispatch by the new Atlantic Cable. Said the Herald:

"The Tribune claims the first special news despatch through the Atlantic cable. Unfortunately for this claim it is upset by the facts. The first Herald special despatch from our correspondent in London through the cable was the following:

"'HERALD SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

"'QUEEN'S HOTEL, LONDON, July 28, 1866.

"'An armistice of four weeks from yesterday has been signed by Prussia, Austria, Bavaria and the other German states.

"'The propositions embrace a lasting peace over the whole continent of Europe.'

"This despatch, received at a late hour of Monday night, was published in the Herald on Tuesday morning, July 31. It was sent around from this office to the Associated Press as soon as possible, but only appeared in one other journal than ours on Tuesday morning, and that journal was the Tribune."

The Tribune's first special was dated July 30, and The Herald went on to say:

"This was published in the Tribune, Herald and other journals of the Association on Wednesday, Aug. 1, the next day after the publication of our special despatch. This settles the question, and the Tribune has done very well in being only a day or two behind the Herald, and with this, as the facts will carry it no further, it ought to be content."

The original cable of 1858 worked only a few days when it broke, and it was on July 29, 1866, that Cyrus W. Field sent the first despatch, after the new cable had been laid to Heart's Content, Newfoundland, saying, "We are in telegraphic communication with Ireland." This memorable message marks the inception of the world's present complete cable service. Messages then cost $5 a word and were naturally restricted to the barest skeleton outline of the news.

It was on June 28, 1867, that Mr. Bennett first drew attention to another editor destined to become nationally famous, in the person of Charles A. Dana, formerly managing editor of the Tribune, who had disagreed with Greeley and was forced to resign; had made a failure of the Chicago Republican, and had returned to New York, it was reported to start a new penny evening paper. His extreme political views Mr. Bennett considered would render the success of the enterprise very problematical, and he concluded his editorial with a most lucid statement as to the causes of the Herald's marvellous success as follows:

"The Herald started as a penny paper; for at that time enterprise supplied the place of capital; in fact, enterprise was then unknown to the press. We did not run the paper as a party organ. We knew better than that, for we saw a field before us that was unoccupied and plunged confidently into it. An independent journal was then the great want of the country. The appreciation of that fact and the consciousness of the ability to supply it stood us in place of capital. Our success raised a host of competitors. About 20 penny papers were started, and of all of them the Sun alone remains. Our rivals endeavored to imitate us in all but the essential point. They forgot that it was to our independence and freedom from party ties we owed the greater share of our success, and they fell into the hands of political schemers. The result was of course failure. The opportunity which they lost they can never recover. The Herald occupies exclusively the ground which they might have divided with it."

On Dec. 3, 1867, Mr. Bennett, in his richest vein of satire commented on President's Johnson's nomination of Mr. Raymond, editor of the Times, and of Mr. Greeley for diplomatic posts.

Raymond was rejected by the Senate, after his nomination, the Herald said:

"As a reward for one who had supported the President and was a member of the same party which had raised him to his high office, but the Senate had become radical and spurned this man of moderate and compromising tendencies. * * *

"The confirmation of Greeley's nomination as Minister to Austria by the Senate was quite natural. He is as radical as the Senate, or more radical, and consequently his nomination passed without the least difficulty. But the strangest thing is that the President should have nominated him. He has been throwing dirt at Johnson for the last two years. The Tribune has so besmeared the President with filth that the readers of that journal can no longer recognize his features or form. The charges have been rung in the coarsest Five Points epithets, over and over again, to blacken him in the eyes of the public. The man whom he has appointed Minister to Vienna has called him a drunkard, a debauched sot, renegade, liar, scoundrel and everything else vile. What a commentary on the ways and doings of Presidents!

"However it may be that the President considers Greeley's appointment a good stroke of policy. He may think that Greeley will be out of the way of doing mischief. * * * *

"In his coon-skin boots, white coat and slouched hat, we can imagine the benign smile upon his countenance as the beautiful ladies of the Court of Vienna crowd around this unique specimen of American Republicanism. * * * *

"To make the mission perfectly agreeable to his taste and truly representative of our country under the new order of things, the only other thing to be done is to send with him full-blooded plantation negroes from the South as Secretary and attaches of Legation."

Greeley eventually declined the honor of being Minister to Austria, and President Johnson, being asked about it, replied:

"I wished to give the Senate a chew of very bad tobacco."

And Greeley did the spitting—as the Herald said:

"He spat on the nomination and the confirmation—President, Senate and all together; and that is an end of Greeley's diplomacy!"

(To be continued next week)

"193 PROMINENT AND SATISFIED NEWSPAPER SUBSCRIBERS—WHY?"

Our service was started in June 1919 — with these subscribers:—

Boston American: Boston Herald-Traveler: Boston Post
Boston Transcript: New Haven Register: Baltimore News
Springfield Union: and The Worcester Telegram-Gazette

The following month we added these subscribers:—

Hartford Times: Detroit News: Buffalo Courier-Enquirer
Buffalo News: Ithaca Journal-News: and The Sioux Falls Argus-Leader

That was the start — and so our list continued — but more important to us was the fact that our subscribers stuck—year in and year out. Every one of the above is still with us.

Surely our checking proof service must have made good.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

Ask the Canadian Pacific about Canada — CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Bureau of Canadian Information

THE Canadian Pacific Railway through its Bureau of Canadian Information will furnish you with the latest reliable information on every phase of industrial and agricultural development in Canada. In the Reference Libraries maintained at Chicago, New York, and Montreal are complete data on natural resources, climate, labor, transportation, business openings, etc., in Canada. Additional data is constantly being added.

Development Branch—If you are considering the establishment of your industry in Canada, either to develop your Canadian business or export trade, you are invited to consult this Branch. An expert staff is maintained to acquire and investigate information relative to Canadian industrial raw materials. Information as to such raw materials as well as upon any practical problem affecting the establishment of your industry, including markets, competition, labor costs, power, fuel, etc., is available.

No charge or obligation attached to the above services. Business men and organizations are invited to make use of it.

Canadian Pacific Railway Company

Department Colonization and Development
C. P. R. Building

Windsor Station, Montreal, Can. — Madison Ave., at 44th St., New York. — 165 E. Ontario St., Chicago, Ill.

A REGION OF Super-Expansion

There is no other region in the world of like area equal to the South in its possibilities or limitless opportunities for merchandising your product.

The increase in diversified agricultural production, lumber, minerals, and manufacturing in the South has opened a most fertile and profitable market for advertisers of every class.

The South no longer ships all its raw material to the East and North, but she is now manufacturing, in her own cotton factories, over 60% of all cotton used in American plants.

The most striking feature of the South's progress, in mill and factory, is the fact that expansion not only has been persistent but has run ahead of the country as a whole.

This same story of progress is true in every line of endeavor throughout the South.

Never before was there such a time to establish "good will" and buying habits for advertised merchandise. The market of the South offers vast and increasing opportunities for the American manufacturer.

The Southern market is ready and anxious to buy those products which are sold under a trade mark, and it has the means to pay.

For information regarding the cash buying power of these individual markets, these listed dailies are authorities.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald (M)	30,930	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald (S)	49,177	.10	.10
Birmingham News (E)	75,304	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	83,228	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,217	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,227	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	31,962	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	3,165	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville (M&S)	39,226	.09(.10S)	.09(.10S)
Miami Herald (M)	19,492	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	23,404	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	5,965	.035	.035
†††St. Petersburg Independent (E)	7,236	.04	.04
Tampa Times (E)	14,770	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	29,685	.07(.08S)	.06(.07S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	23,878	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	25,135	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 19,882 (S)	21,880	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,759	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
Asheville Times (E)	7,096	.04	.04
Asheville Citizen (M)	10,277	.055	.055
Asheville Citizen (S)	11,009	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	22,424	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News (S)	29,807	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	15,025	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	15,695	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,366	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	22,028	.06	.06
Columbia State (S)	23,079	.06	.06
Greeneville News (M)	18,214	.065	.06
†††Greenwood Index Journal (E&S)	4,378	.025	.025
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,799	.04	.04
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,014 (S)	8,023
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,122	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,355	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner (E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner (S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,225	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,890	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,660	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,725
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	25,048	.07	.06
Roanoke Times (S)	17,596	.07	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

MIXED
CONTINUOUSLY COMPOSED

The specimen newspaper ad shown below is just an example of the many ways in which continuous composition of mixed faces saves time and reduces production costs in the newspaper composing-room. The operator of a Model 26 can set every line of such an ad without leaving his keyboard.

The faces used in setting this ad are as follows:

24 Point Bodoni Caps in upper auxiliary magazine
NEW SPRING SUI

18 Point Bodoni Italic—Caps in lower auxiliary
HANDKERCHIEFS

Lower Case in cap channels of main magazine
Ready For Your Survey In

10 Point Bodoni with Italic and Small Caps n upper main magazine
Diagonal Cheviot By ROTHSTEIN Priced

10 Point Bodoni Bold with Italic in lower case and center channels of lower main magazine
STATE Blue-Gray A SPECIAL Today

All of these faces are instantly available for new composition or corrections and any or all of them can be set continuously in the same line as desired.

MODEL 25

TWO MAGAZINES of the Standard Model 5 type, interchangeable in both positions on the machine and also with all Linotypes using the Model 5 magazines. Magazines may be split or full length, in either or both positions.

MODEL 26

TWO MAIN MAGAZINES. Standard Model 5 magazines, interchangeable in either position on the machine. Magazines may be split or full length, in either or both positions.

TWO AUXILIARY MAGAZINES. Wide auxiliary magazines, interchangeable with those of Single Keyboard Models 14 and 22. Each auxiliary magazine will carry a complete alphabet and figures or a corresponding number of special characters of any kind.

CONTINUOUS COMPOSITION. Faces from the two main magazines and from the two auxiliary magazines may be assembled in the same line and mixed at will. The auxiliary magazine will accommmodate 24 and 30 point display faces and condensed faces up to 60 point, as well as advertising figures, accents or special characters of any description.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

the Licensed Vehicle ... issued a summons for both Mahoney and Larney to appear before him.

... charged last Saturday disappearing with his cab for two days while in an intoxicated condition. At the time he took the badge and book

... Magistrate Ober... missed the case.

The entire situation could be cleared up, Larney said after giving vent to his

... companies were bonded. At present there are only eight inspectors for the 16,000 cabs in the city. Larney said

A Blue-Gray Diagonal Cheviot Spring Suit; 3-Button Coat; Tailored Expressly For Us By ROTHSTEIN, Priced at $45

❖

A Plain Blue Unfinished Worsted Spring Suit; Tailored Expressly For Us By ROTHSTEIN, Priced at.. $50

❖

Our Special for Today—White Oxford Basketweave Shirts Come With Collar Attached Or Collarless. This Remarkable Shirt Has Never Been Equaled In Popularity, Because It Has Never Been Equaled In Value. Specially Priced at $1.95

NEW SPRING SUITS AND TOP COATS

Ready For Your Survey In Those Smartly Conservative Styles Which Alone Command The Approval Of The Well-Dressed Man.

JOSEPH SMART
Men's Clothier Haberdasher

STATE AND MARKET STREETS

SPECIAL SPECIAL

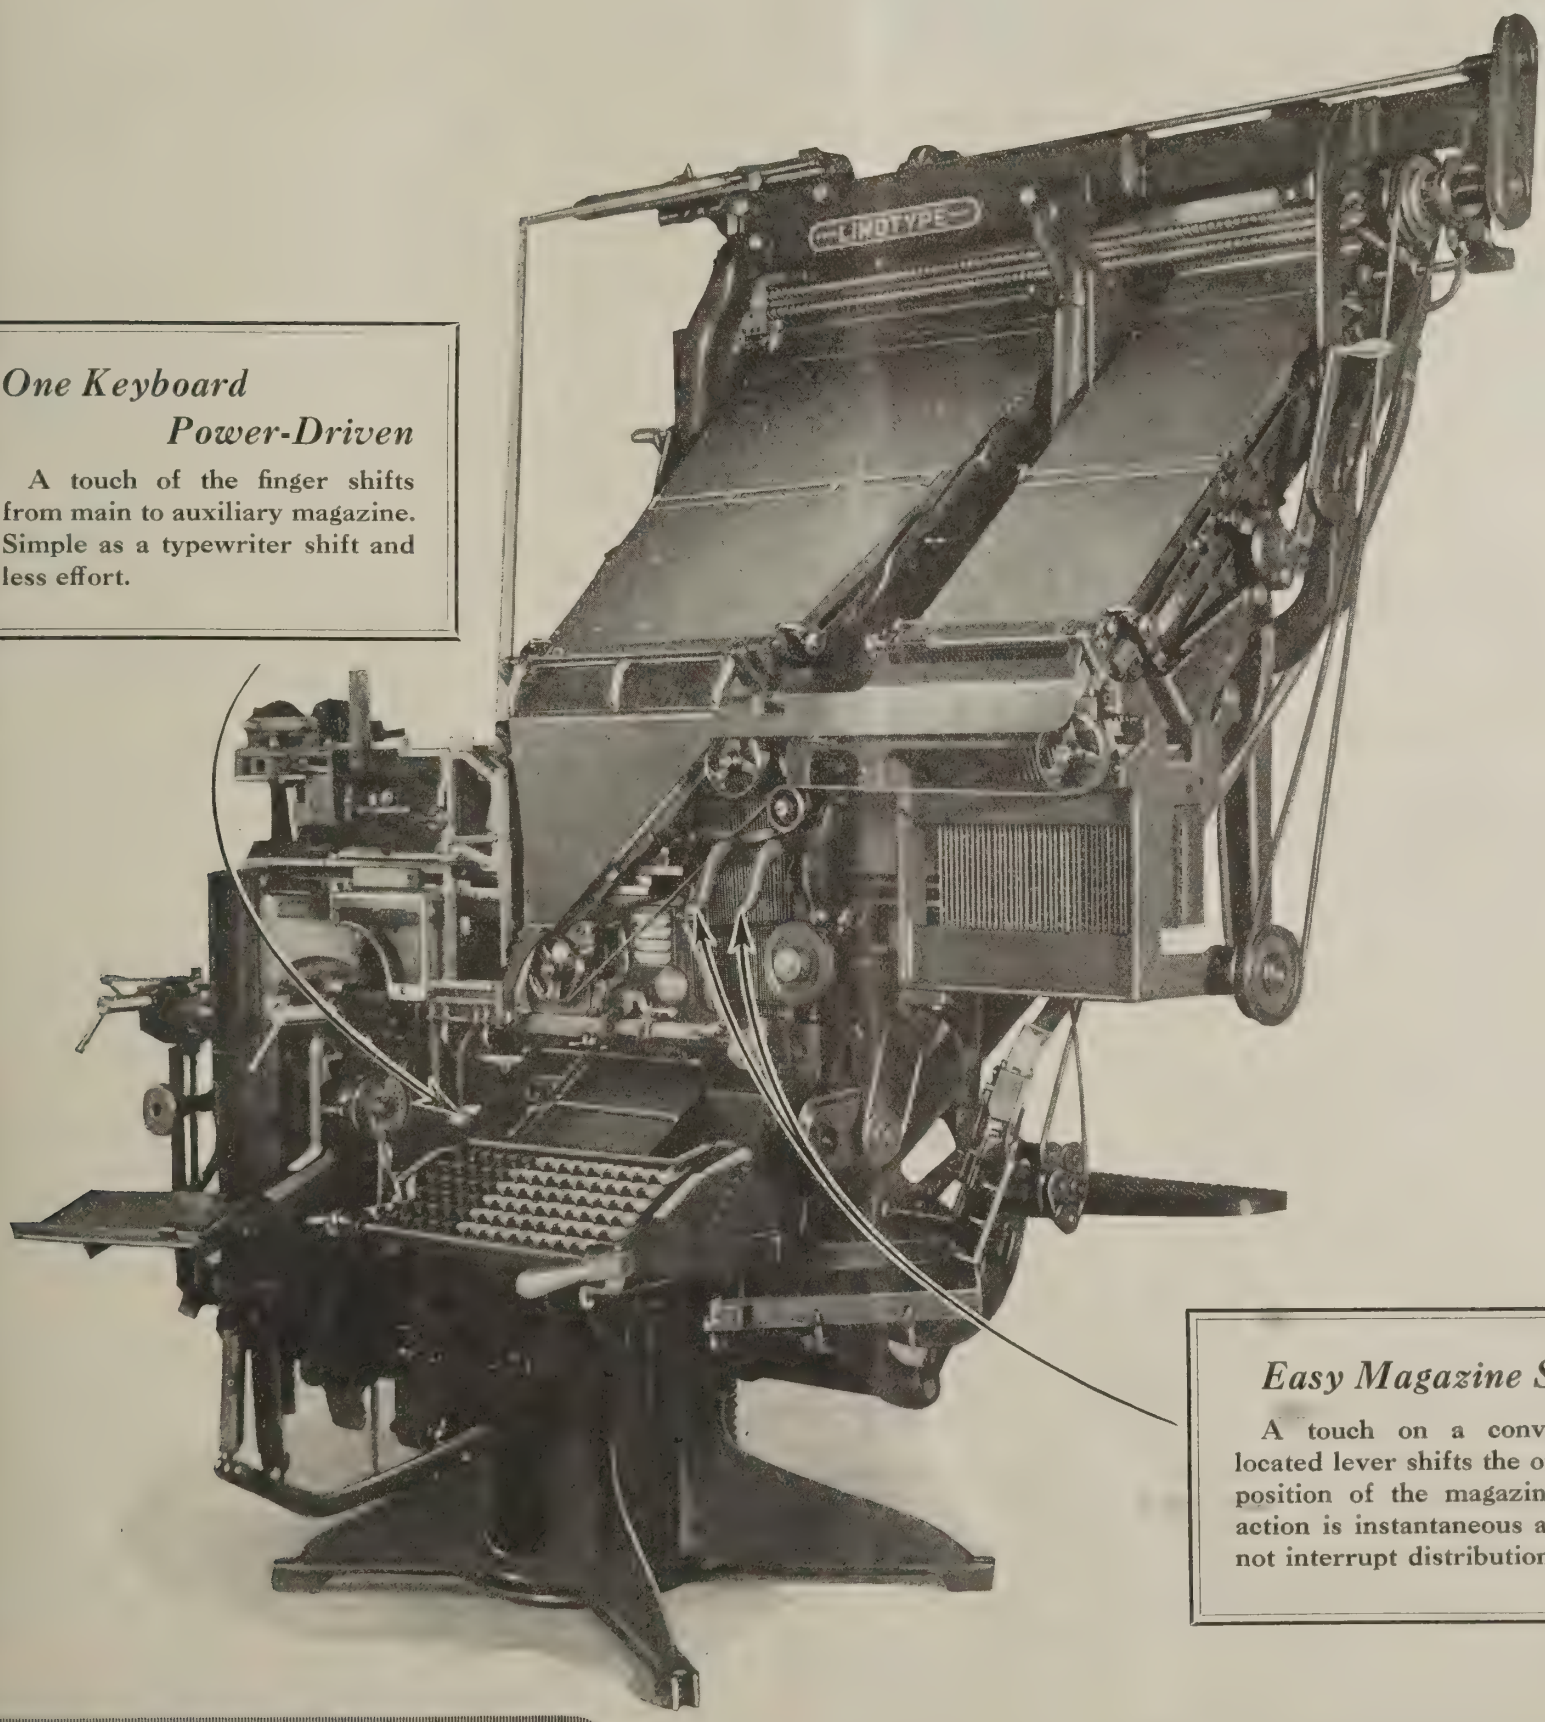
Men's Fine Imported IRISH LINEN

HANDKERCHIEFS

in plain white or with hand-embroidered initials. Handkerchiefs that will retain their crispy newness in spite of the constant trips to the laundry. Packed six to a box—they provide an opportunity at today's price! Six for..... $2.00

Dayli... $5,000 i... of Morris... Lexington... and thrusti... basement. ... free the ro... store and ... stones.

The jew... one of the... passed con... the price of... pin.



Politi... In Ph... Gen.

Improve... tions, ... Bette... Signs

WAS... conditio... ported ... cal ag... excelle...

FACES

CONTINUOUSLY DISTRIBUTED

One Keyboard Power-Driven

A touch of the finger shifts from main to auxiliary magazine. Simple as a typewriter shift and less effort.

Easy Magazine Shift

A touch on a conveniently located lever shifts the operative position of the magazines. The action is instantaneous and does not interrupt distribution.

TADE LINOTYPE MARK ®

Composed entirely on the Linotype with the exception of the hand-lettered display line.

EDITORIAL

$70 NEWSPRINT

THE contract level for newsprint for 1925 is apparently being arranged by the mill interests at $70 per ton, which is a $5 reduction from the general price as of January 1, 1924, and a $2 reduction from the price now being quoted by International Paper Company. International Paper Company makes its $70 announcement this week. Several weeks ago EDITOR & PUBLISHER announced a $70 price for Great Northern and other companies.

The $70 per ton rate is $20 or more above pre-war contract levels.

The more favorable paper price situation should by no means be regarded as an invitation to relax vigilance in the matter of newsprint conservation. Anyone who has even casually studied the statistics lying behind the paper making industry knows that, while all is clear sailing today, there is a mathematical certainty of trouble in the future if newsprint is not conserved, if reforestation is not undertaken in a broad way by the government or if a substitute for spruce is not found, which seems unlikely.

Because newsprint is cheaper will publishers use it to print increasing volume of low rate advertising to such an extent that newspapers will become unhealthy, through unweildly bulk and indigestible content? There is such a thing as making daily newspapers too large. It is a sensible business proposition to sell smaller spaces at higher rates, if such spaces yield the service which an advertiser seeks to obtain.

How many items in today's paper can conceivably challenge and hold the interest of 100 per cent of readers—how many cannot possibly interest five per cent? If you know your city and your people you can make a true analysis of interest in percentages. The results might surprise you.

STATE CONTROL

PROFESSOR ALLEN SINCLAIR WILL, of Columbia University, addressing the New Jersey Newspaper Institute last week, made a curious suggestion leading to state control of newspapers. After discussing the magazine's criticisms of newspaper mergers and economic consequences to newspaper workers, Professor Will was quoted as having said:

"In the absence of any form of state regulation, as in the medical and legal professions, professional journalism is falling into some conditions which impair its usefulness to the public.

"It is in the interest of the freedom of the press to keep the hands of the state off the newspaper profession. If, however, public pressure for remedial measures should become imperative, the least objectional beginning might be a state registration of newspaper men—that is, of editors, assistant editors, copy readers, reporters and special writers.

"The law might provide that the State Department of Education in each commonwealth be required to register such workers, without charge, upon voluntary application, entering the name, age, birthplace, and place of residence of each applicant, together with a record of his newspaper experience.

"Such registration data ought to be open to public inspection. It would convey no special privilege or legal status. The official enrollment of the serious-minded newspaper men and women of experience would have some effect in stabilizing the profession without interfering with it. After the results of this mild experiment became clear, other steps in the same direction, if any might be considered."

If it is in the interest of the freedom of the press to keep hands of the state off, as EDITOR & PUBLISHER earnestly believes, why invent means leading directly to that end?

Why do subscribers "stop" your paper? If you can accomplish the difficult task of getting them to tell the truth about it, you may quickly remove the havocing monkey-wrench. The best way to find out is to write a candid letter or make a personal call.

ST. MATTHEW

Chapter V—14-15

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid.

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

STICKING TO THE JOB

WHEN the 515 officers and employes resident in Dallas, Tex., of the A. H. Belo & Co., publications, meet tomorrow in the Palm Garden of a Dallas hotel to felicitate George Bannerman Dealey, on the occasion of his fiftieth year of "sticking to the job," they may be assured that many hundreds of invisible hands are in spirit extending to the honored guest from many cities of this country.

In faithful devotion to his local task Mr. Dealey has won national reputation among newspaper men as an executive of uncommon skill, a practical idealist in professional relationships, a good citizen, as his long list of affiliations with civic and religious movements plainly indicates, and newspaper man through and through.

Half a century in one job is an enviable span, when much has been accomplished. "Always stick to the job," is the slogan Mr. Dealey gives to us on this occasion. He of course assumes that the job is fitting the man and the man is fitting the job. He means that everlastingly sticking at a newspaper job, in normal conditions, wins the best rewards. He means that patient, tolerant, earnest, judicious and enterprising work for the newspaper that makes you its life-time choice yields delightful compensations. He contrasts the fixed, planned career with one which goes by fits and jerks, here and there, without balance or true objectivity.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER joins with Mr. Dealey's friends in cordial congratulations on this occasion, with lively anticipation of many added years of "sticking to the job," both for the sake of Mr. Dealey and the newspapers he ably serves.

"The out-standing public service of the American press today is its handling of business news and its interpretation thereof," says Merle Thorpe, editor and publisher of The Nation's Business.

October 11, 1924 Volume 57, No. 20

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher,
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: Sam Bell, 26 Jackson Place.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout; Special Commissioner, H. Rea Fitch, Hastings House, 10 Norfolk Street, Strand, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulonge-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.

10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

CIRCULATION FRIENDS

THE greatest single gift that a circulation manager can make to a newspaper is to establish the fact that the dealers and boys of his city believe, with sound reason, that the newspaper is their best friend. We do not mean that prizes must be offered, picnics given in summer, theatre tickets showered, although the best circulators we have known have long taken such paternal interest in their customers, being always on the look-out to do them some substantial favor. What we particularly mean is that the dealings between the agents of the newspaper and its selling clientele be on a high plane of individual justice and good nature.

In the bustle and extremely hard work incident to swift newspaper distribution there is often a tendency to sharply cut the corners of courtesy, and sometimes ignore seemingly small grievances which look big in the eyes of a boy or an adult who may feel that life is none too easy. The sympathies of the class composing city news selling forces are very keen. An injustice to one, is an injustice to all.

There are doubtless occasions when a firm hand must be used, but the sort of brutality that once characterized the business in the great cities was a black piece of destruction of newspaper property, to say the least. The new method of scientific circulation is open-handed justice and the up-building of business friendships. Drivers, in the rush of delivery work, may have no time for pleasant conversation, but they may act as business men toward good customers. There is no telling how much havoc a single delivery man can work if his slant is to brow-beat and abuse dealers and boys, and practice sharp tricks upon them. He is the representative of the newspaper and what he does reflects the whole newspaper organization in the eyes of the customer.

"Every little movement has a meaning all its own," to recall the old song, in circulation work. Much of it is detail. Thus the circulator with infinite patience to judiciously handle small affairs is a prize man for any publisher.

There is such a thing as an occasional encouraging letter from the office to a news dealer, in appreciation of some act of co-operation. There is such a thing as a friendly call upon some poor devil who has had hard luck and needs a boost. There is such a thing as convincing, by such contacts, the new dealers and carriers of a city that your newspaper is an unfailing friend.

Even as you often know what is in a man's heart by his facial expression, so you may often judge the character of a retail shop by its display advertising.

BLOW AT RADIO ADVERTISING

"I BELIEVE that the quickest way to kill radio broadcasting would be to use it for direct advertising."

So said Secretary of the Department of Commerce, Herbert C. Hoover, this week before the National Radio Conference.

Last week the following statement appeared in this column: "EDITOR & PUBLISHER urges the conferees to consider 'publicity' radio advertising as not only destructive of established advertising principles, but as a menace to the radio industry."

Mr. Hoover struck out straight from the shoulder in his condemnation of radio advertising. "If a speech by the President is to be used as the meat in the sandwich of two patent medicine advertisements, there will be no radio left," was his pointed view.

We predict that radio advertising will be discontinued. Not only is it unscientific as advertising, but destructive in many ways. The industry will find other means to make broadcasting profitable, if indeed the sale of equipment through broadcasting does not offer sufficient opportunity for profit.

Mr. Hoover's suggestions regarding super-continental broadcasting of entertainment, which includes news of major events, merits the close consideration of newspaper interests. Is the American press to be superseded in the flash news function? It's up to the organized press.

PERSONALS

ROBERT P. SCRIPPS, editorial director of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, has purchased the $250,000 estate of Reginald M. Lewis, one of the show places of Ridgefield, Conn., for a summer home.

Rev. A. H. Moore, editor of the St. Johns (Que.) News and a director of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association, has left Montreal to undertake his new duties as president of the University of King's College, Halifax.

Walter Thomas Layton, C. B. E., editor of the London Economist is now touring Canada and will shortly proceed to the United States.

Herbert J. Fowler, publisher of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Morning Sun, was a visitor in New York the past week.

Eugene Bolles, publisher of the Newark (N. J.) Courier, spent several days in New York this week.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

MURRAY R. SCHWERENS, formerly connected with Albert Frank & Co., is now with the financial advertising department of the New York Evening Post.

Leslie Tyler has been appointed general manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican, succeeding W. J. Pattison, formerly of New York, who recently sold his interest in the Republican to Col. L. A. Watres, of Scranton.

B. F. Grant, general manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, and his son recently participated in a buffalo hunt on Antelope Island in Great Salt Lake, near Salt Lake City.

Hobson G. Savoie has been made business manager of the Faribault (Minn.) Daily News and will continue also as advertising manager. Leonidas St. Martin becomes office manager and will have charge of circulation and classified advertising.

A. R. Tuohy has become advertising and business manager of the Manila (P. I.) Daily Bulletin, succeeding Ralph B. Clark, resigned. Clark plans to get into the British newspaper field on a Hongkong daily. Tuohy was advertising manager of the Bulletin four years ago.

Roy F. Homer, recently circulation manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, has been appointed city manager of the Rocky Mountain Agency of a Kansas City life insurance company.

Harold L. Goldman, classified advertising manager of the Baltimore Sun, returned Sept. 26 from a five weeks' trip abroad, accompanied by Mrs. Goldman.

W. P. Lyon, business manager of the San Jose (Cal.) Mercury Herald, who is visiting in New York, gave a luncheon Oct. 4 to a number of advertisers and advertising agents. A film of San Jose and the Santa Clara Valley was shown.

Louis F. Gautier, circulation manager of the New York Commercial, has resigned to take up publicity work in New York. F. Adams, of the circulation department, has succeeded him.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

DON SKENE, of the Chicago Tribune foreign staff, who covered the world fliers from England to the United States, is visiting his home in Portland, Ore. He formerly worked on the Portland Oregonian.

Malcolm W. Bingay, managing editor of the Detroit News, was elected one of the candidates for the Masonic thirty-third degree at the recent Masonic meeting in Boston. The degree will be conferred next year.

Frank H. Bloomer, veteran reporter of the Buffalo Evening News, is in a New York hospital to undergo an operation for war injuries received while he was serving in France as a lieutenant in the 108th Infantry.

Oliver W. Tuttle, radio editor of the San Francisco Examiner, has resigned to become manager of KPO, a local station. He is succeeded by E. A. Charlton, lately real estate editor of the Examiner.

George C. Taft, assistant church editor, Detroit News, has purchased the Shelburn (Ind.) Enterprise, a weekly publication, and took possession October 1.

E. Lawson May, for three years assistant city editor of the Manila (P. I.) Daily Bulletin, going there from the United Press, is returning to the United States, via Suez, arriving in New York about the first of the year. May's home is in Hutchinson, Kan.

Paul W. Meredith has joined the staff of the Providence Evening Bulletin as a re-write man.

Conrad Alexander, formerly of New York, has been made city editor, Yakima (Wash.) Herald.

H. Sherman Mitchell, former owner of the Ferndale (Wash.) Record, has joined the editorial staff of the Walla Walla (Wash.) Bulletin.

Miss Mary Hanlon, society editor of the Manila (P. I.) Daily Bulletin, spent the month of September in Northern China on a buying trip.

Constantine Rassis, on the exchange desk of the Detroit News, was elected secretary of the American Chess Conference recently at Cedar Point, Ohio.

John B. Long, Jr., city editor of the Omaha Bee, and Mrs. Long are parents of a daughter, Annette Victoria.

Abraham Lincoln Finestone, formerly on the Southbridge (Mass.) News, is attending the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

J. L. McLean has joined the staff of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News as copy reader.

Bernard E. Meyers, copy reader, Detroit News, and Mrs. Meyers are parents of a son, born Sept. 27.

E. C. Penrose, of the Salt Lake City Desert News editorial department, is convalescing at his home following an operation.

Marjorie Stoneman Douglass, of the Miami (Fla.) Morning Herald staff, has resigned to do publicity work.

E. Clarke King, Jr., formerly manager of the branch office of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald at Fulton, is now in publicity work in Detroit.

Morris J. Harris, recently with the United Press at Philadelphia and for three years previously with the Tokyo Japan Advertiser, has joined the editorial staff of the Manila (P. I.) Daily Bulletin.

Elwood Lloyd, financial writer for the Los Angeles Evening Herald, has returned home, after a business trip to Chicago recently.

John Gunther, of the staff of the Chicago Daily News, left last week for a trip to England.

Raymond S. Tompkins, of the editorial staff Baltimore Sun, has resigned to become publicity director of the United Railway Company of Baltimore, Md.

Miss Mary Esther Tull is a new reporter on the Frederick (Md.) Daily News.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

ALBERT W. BAILEY, from exchange desk, Detroit News, to Chicago Herald-Examiner.

John Ryckman, from the Chicago Evening Post, to re-write desk, Chicago Daily News.

George F. Collins, from court reporter, Worcester Telegram, to staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Jack Hohenberg, from Seattle (Wash.) Star, to staff, New York Daily Graphic.

C. Francis Evans, from staff, Binghamton (N. Y.) Morning Sun, to Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Rhodes MacPhail, from Miami (Fla.) Herald, to copy desk, Miami (Fla.) Daily News.

Hugh G. Croll, from staff, Cleveland Times and Commercial to staff New York Daily News.

Edward H. Lewis, Jr., from staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican, to Hartford Courant staff.

WITH THE SPECIALS

GEORGE B. DAVID COMPANY has been appointed to represent the Asheville (N. C.) Times.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

REGINALD COLLEY, former advertising manager of the Fargo (N. D.) Forum, has joined the headquarters staff of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World as assistant to Earle Pearson, educational director. Colley will give special attention to the organization of new clubs and will assist in the educational work among established clubs.

REGINALD COLLEY

A graduate chemist from the North Dakota Agricultural College, Class of 1915, Colley first spent several years as deputy fruit inspector for his state.

During trouble along the Mexican border in 1917 he served in the army as first lieutenant, being promoted to captain in the World War, when he served 19 months in France.

He attended the international advertising convention in London as a delegate from the Fargo Club. He is familiar with advertising club work, having been president of the Town Criers Club of Fargo, and has been a member of the board of governors of the club since he quit the chair. He assisted in the direction of an educational course in the Fargo Club which attracted wide attention two years ago, as one of the largest advertising club study classes in any small city in the country. The course was based on the book by Ruth Leigh, "The Human Side of Retail Selling," which the national Educational Committee was featuring at that time.

Knill-Burke, Inc., publishers' representatives, have opened an Atlanta office in the Constitution Building.

MARRIED

A. H. MONTGOMERY, manager editor of the Clinton (Ill.) Daily Public, to Miss Bertha Van Howe in Chicago, Sept. 27.

Miss Helen V. Jenkins, for five years on the proofreading staff of the Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News, to Angus E. Saxon, of Lockport, Ill., Oct. 1.

Vera Brown, reporter for the Detroit News, to A. Maxwell McKenzie, a consulting engineer in Detroit, recently.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

OTIS SWIFT, cable editor, United News, New York, left this week to take charge of the Chicago bureau.

E. L. Powell, correspondent for the Associated Press in Manila, spent the month of September in Canton, Hongkong and Shanghai, China.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

BURNS HEGLER, former editor of the El Dorado (Kan.) Daily Times, recently part owner of the Wichita Falls, (Tex.) Record News, has sold his Texas interest and will return to Kansas.

Miss Anna Himrod, owner of the Ironton (Minn.) News, has bought the Brainerd (Minn.) Tribune from R. S. Wilcox.

W. E. Phipps has sold the Medford (Ore.) Clarion to L. B. Tuttle, formerly publisher of the Elgin Recorder, and James W. Young, formerly a printer at Calgary, Can.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

BLOOMSBURG (Pa.) Morning Press, 112-page 12th County Fair edition, Oct. 4.

Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, 18-page section Sept. 28 on the opening of the new Vandevers department store.

Peoria (Ill.) Evening Star, 16-page edition on Greater Peoria Exposition and National Implement Show.

Fairmont (Minn.) Daily Sentinel, a 28-page Golden Jubilee edition Sept. 29.

Sheridan (Wyo.) Post-Enterprise, annual fair edition, Aug. 31.

Rice Lake (Wis.) Chronotype, a 24-page, fiftieth anniversary edition, Sept. 3.

SCHOOLS

A COURSE in "The Country Newspaper" has been added to the curriculum of the University of Missouri School of Journalism this year. The students, under the supervision of Prof. John H. Casey, will issue a weekly country newspaper for Boone County, Mo., in which the university is located. The Columbia Herald-Statesman, a private enterprise of long standing, has been taken over by the School of Journalism for this purpose. It is also planned to publish a regular feature story magazine this year.

Ralph D. Casey, associate professor of journalism in the University of Oregon, completed work for the degree of master of arts at the University of Washington during the summer quarter.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

Little Rock (Ark.) Daily News has installed a new Intertype.

The editor who uses the free information bureau conducted by Frederic J. Haskin provides a special representative in Washington for every one of his readers.

Obituary

JAMES G. CHILDS, 74, for many years publisher of the Akron (N. Y.) News, died recently while in a physician's office awaiting treatment for heart trouble.

CHARLES B. GLASE, 50, manager of the service department of the Los Angeles Daily Journal, died suddenly Sunday, Sept. 28.

GEORGE G. PENDELL, 56, former editor and publisher of the Waverly (N. Y.) Free Press, died recently.

OSCAR LUCAS, former city editor, Victoria (B. C.) Times, died recently, following an operation.

MRS. HARRY LEDUC, wife of Harry Leduc, assistant sport editor of the Detroit News, died Sept. 28, following an operation.

LEON B. CAMERON, 45, editor of the Wellsboro (Pa.) Gazette and brother of Peter G. Cameron, Secretary of Banking of Pennsylvania, died at his home in Wellsboro, Oct. 2.

FRANK E. WIXON, for 15 years a member of the editorial staff of the Watkins (N. Y.) Review, is dead after an illness of three months.

JACK T. FORD, 43, for many years a printer on the Spokane (Wash.) Chronicle, died in Seattle Sept. 26.

CHARLES SCHEUER, publisher of the Ventnor (N. J.) News, dropped dead Oct. 5 on the boardwalk in Ventnor.

FRED J. BROWN, 54, city editor of the New Albany (Ind.) Tribune, died Oct. 4. Born in Plymouth, Ind., Mr. Brown entered the newspaper business at South Bend when 20 years old. Two years later he joined the staff of the New Albany Tribune and had remained with that paper ever since.

ARCHIE C. SMITH, 62, editor of the Storm Lake (Ia.) Pilot-Tribune, died Oct. 1, at his home after a long illness. He was former county recorder and prominent in northwestern Iowa politics. He had served as internal revenue collector at Dubuque and assistant secretary of state.

GEORGE F. RODGERS, 52, founder of the Rodgers Paper Company, Salem, Ore., died Sept. 29 as the result of injuries sustained in an airplane accident.

WILLIAM A. FINNEGAN, 35, street circulation manager for the Houston (Tex.) Press, died Wednesday, Oct. 1, from injuries received in an automobile accident.

WILLIAM W. TOLLADY, a printer in the employ of the Vancouver (B. C.) Sun, was killed Aug. 3 in an automobile accident.

EDWARD HINE JOHNSON, 70, of Philadelphia, vice-president and manager of the American News Company died at Southampton, N. Y., recently.

MRS. ANNE EBERBACH AUGSBURG, wife of Paul D. Augsburg of the editorial staff of the Chicago Tribune, died suddenly at her father's home in Conway, Pa., recently. Mr. and Mrs. Augsburg were married in Chicago last December.

MRS. HONORE CHASSE, 59, former managing editor of Quebec L'Evenement, died Sept. 23. For 11 years she had charge of the newspaper, retiring 3 years ago when it was sold to J. H. Fortier of Quebec.

JOHN R. O'NEAL, 56, a printer formerly employed on the Uniontown (Pa.) Morning Herald, died recently.

GEORGE K. BIRELY, one of the owners of the Great Southern Printing Company, publishers of the Frederick (Md.) Daily News and the Frederick Post, died at his home at Frederick recently.

COL. W. G. STERETT DEAD

Veteran Dallas News Washington Man Was Friend of Presidents

Col. William Greene Sterett, 77, for many years Washington correspondent of the Dallas (Tex.) News, died at his home in Dallas, Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Col. Sterett was the close friend of Presidents, Cabinet officials and members of Congress.

Colonel Sterett came to Dallas in the early '70s. He was one of the editors of the old Dallas Evening Times before the establishment of the Dallas News, the staff of which he joined only a short time after the News began publication in Dallas, on Oct. 1, 1885.

He served the News as an editorial writer and as staff correspondent at State and national capitals and at national conventions.

OREGON VETERAN DIES

Addison Bennett, 79, of Portland Oregonian Succumbs to Fall

Addison Bennett, 79, dean of Oregon newspaper men, died Sept. 30, in Portland. Death was the result of a fall a few days earlier by which he fractured his hip.

Up to the time of his injury Mr. Bennett was active as a special writer for the Portland Oregonian. He joined the Oregonian staff almost 20 years ago. Mr. Bennett was born in Orange county, New York, Jan. 8, 1845, and began his newspaper work in Wheeling, W. Va., at the close of the Civil War. He worked later in Zanesville, O., and in 1879 went to Kansas where he founded the Pearlette Call, later going to Dodge City. Bennett next moved to Garden City and soon owned 17 papers in this part of Kansas. When the boom broke he went to Denver and from there to Baker, Ore.

Some 22 years ago Mr. Bennett founded the Irrigon (Ore.) Irrigator. Although published in a town of only a few hundred people the Irrigator was soon known all over the country through Mr. Bennett's column of "Rabbitville" notes which were quoted everywhere. It was his Rabbitville column that attracted the attention of the Oregonian and led to his employment by that newspaper.

"JOHNNY" O'BRIEN DEAD

Veteran San Francisco Police Reporter Was Idol of the Force

"Johnny" O'Brien, veteran police reporter on the San Francisco Examiner, died from apoplexy Oct. 7. O'Brien was an idol of the police force and "Johnny" always got the "inside stuff."

About 20 years ago, O'Brien, with a policeman, surprised a burglar at work. The holdup man pressed his revolver against the policeman's body. O'Brien jammed his hand between the hammer and firing pin. The police force presented O'Brien with a handsome watch. This watch was taken by a pickpocket. When word went out that it was stolen, the entire force went to work. O'Brien got the timepiece back in 24 hours.

O'Brien came from Carson City, Nev., and was trained by Sam Davis, a chum of Mark Twain.

Bridgman Wills Estate to University

Herbert L. Bridgman, late business manager of the Brooklyn (N.Y.) Standard-Union, left his estate to the University of the State of New York. Mrs. Helen Bartlett Bridgman, his widow, is to receive the income from the estate for life. Two grandchildren have conditional claim on the income. Bridgman had been regent of the University for many years.

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in New Jersey's Fastest Growing City
TRADING POPULATION
167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

JOHN H. HARRISON, editor of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News and president of the Illinois Press Association, learned the printer's trade in the office of his father's newspaper, the Lebanon (Ind.) Pioneer. He did college newspaper work while attending Depauw University at Greencastle, Ind.

JOHN H. HARRISON

In 1888 he got his first assignment on the old Indianapolis Sentinel. That first assignment was to interview Benjamin Harrison, then the Republican nominee for president. Later he was three years on Chicago newspapers. Then for two years he was press agent of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, followed by service for a theatrical syndicate operating houses in Indianapolis, Toledo and Columbus.

In 1897, he went to Danville, Ill., where he has been located ever since. He began with a small paper, one of four then published in a city of 14,000 people. Danville now has 40,000 people and Mr. Harrisons' paper has grown from 900 circulation to 22,000 with three editions daily.

In 1923 he was elected president of the Illinois Press Association. He has also been president of the Illinois Daily Newspaper Association.

Daily Launches Retail Organ

The Greenville (S. C.) Piedmont has begun publication of The Business Booster, an 8-page monthly organ for retailers. George R. Koester, publisher of the Piedmont, is editor.

M. H. de YOUNG HONORED

San Francisco Chronicle Publisher Feted on 75th Birthday

M. H. de Young, publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle was given a luncheon Oct. 2, by business, professional and artistic leaders of San Francisco in honor of his 75th birthday.

M. H. DE YOUNG

More than 200 representative men and women joined in paying tribute to Mr. de Young as a lifelong promoter of the industrial, commercial and artistic development of San Francisco.

"He has done more single-handed, without the aid of societies or organizations, for the city he loves so well than any other man could possibly do," said George H. Baron, curator of the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in eulogy.

"I am inspired by the great man, whom we are met today to honor," Senator S. M. Shortridge declared speaking in tribute at the banquet. "For, if there has been a great newspaper, guided and inspired by a great mind and one that has stood four square under all conditions, in victory or defeat and for the principle of protection, that great newspaper, the San Francisco Chronicle, has been inspired by its owner and publisher Gen. M. H. de Young.

Toronto Firm Plans Ad Drive

Using Canadian newspapers, the Woods Underwear Company, Ltd., Toronto, will shortly start a campaign to promote sale of a new line of underwear under the name of Lancaster. R. C. Smith & Son, Ltd., Toronto, will handle the account.

The Shop-o-scope
TRADE MARK

Get in on it this year —without fail!

It's better than ever —and last year 225 newspapers voted it the best Christmas classified campaign on record.

Write today for your sample Portfolio—and make sure of a good December for your newspaper!

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.
Otis Building Philadelphia

ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

ADVERTISING SPECIALTY ASSOCIATION elected Frank A. Geiger of Geiger Bros., Newark, N. J., president at the Twenty-first Annual Convention just held in Chicago. Other officers elected were: 1st vice-president, Edward N. Ferdon, president, Blanchard Company, Aurora, Ill.; 2nd vice-president, H. C. Boyeson, president, H. C. Boyeson Company, St. Paul, Minn.; treasurer, J. B. Carroll, president J. B. Carroll Company, Chicago. Mrs. Bernice Blackwood was re-elected executive secretary.

Advertising Club of St. Louis recently elected R. Fullerton Place, editor of house organs, president; C. E. Williams, retail shoe dealer; Felix Coste, D'Arcy Advertising Company, and E. L. Hill, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, vice-presidents; Douglas Williams, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, secretary, and P. M. Fahrendorf, Fisher-Brown Advertising Agency, treasurer.

National Poster Advertising Association will hold its annual convention in Detroit, Oct. 13 to 18. W. C. Hunt of the Walker & Company, is in charge of the arrangements. The Canadian Poster Advertising Association will meet for its annual convention in Windsor on Oct. 16. S. S. Scane of Chatham, Ont., is making the arrangements.

New York Advertising Club's Export Advertising Round Table held its first session of the coming year Tuesday, Oct. 7. At the regular meeting of the club on Tuesday of this week Fred B. Smith, of the Federated Council of Churches, who has just returned from Europe, spoke on conditions abroad. Mr. Smith went overseas to attend the A. A. C. W. convention at Wembley, and has spent the past two months touring the Continent.

Sphinx Club, New York, will hold its first dinner of the season at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Oct. 14. The 100th anniversary of Fifth avenue will be celebrated. Principal speakers will be Robert Grier Cooke, president, Fifth Avenue Association, and Horace A. Saks, head of the new Saks Fifth avenue store.

New York Editorial Conference at luncheon Oct. 4 discussed plans to better the editorial policies of technical and trade journals. James Dalton, industrial editor of Motor, complained that technical papers were too funereal in tone and urged injection of more reader interest.

Baltimore Press Club members are to be given the opportunity to hear issues of the Presidential campaign discussed by representatives of the three parties the evening of Oct. 15. Speakers will be Hon. John H. Bartlett, First Assistant Postmaster General, former Governor of New Hampshire, Republican; Hon. Norman H. Davis, New York, former Secretary of State, Democrat; and Hon. John J. Blaine, three times Governor of Wisconsin, Progressive. Judge T. J. C. Williams, Press Club president, will preside.

Six-Point League, New York, newspaper advertising representatives society, will hold a special meeting of its executive committee Oct. 21 to vote on the question of adopting a name more descriptive and better fitting. Joseph F. Finley, of Story, Brooks & Finley, Inc., is president. First of the League's fall round-table luncheons will be held Oct. 28, to be continued the last Tuesday of each month.

Press Club of Chicago recently elected Everett E. Friganza, assistant editor of the Bell Telephone News, president. Other officers are Paul Hughes, vice-president; Harold J. Bromley, vice-president; Robert E. Belcher, treasurer; Charles M. Carr, secretary.

Associated Business Papers, Inc. announces the admission to membership of the Architectural Forum, New York.

New England Advertising Clubs has decided to make "Know New England" the theme of its annual convention to be held at Hartford, Conn., Nov. 16 to 20. Frederick W. Bliss, of the Town Criers, Providence, was elected chairman of the New England district at a recent meeting of the executive committee, when the local pride campaign was agreed on.

Bosshard Succeeds Bridgman

Theodore Bosshard has been appointed business manager of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, succeeding the late Herbert L. Bridgman. Bosshard has been assistant business manager for about two years and prior to that was managing editor of the Standard Union for many years.

Injured News Man Improving

Joseph S. Jordan, who writes the column "Sought, Seen and Heard" for the New York Evening Post, was reported slightly improved on Oct. 9, at the Broad Street hospital, where he was taken Friday, Oct. 3, suffering from a fractured skull as the result of a fall. He uses the pen name of Mann Hatton. Until recently he was the legislative correspondent at Albany for the New York Evening World. He came to New York from San Francisco in the year 1910.

CANADIAN GROUPS MEET

Alberta, British Columbia and Yukon Editors Gather in Vancouver

Members of the Alberta, British Columbia and Yukon press associations, held a joint two-day convention in Vancouver on Oct. 3 and 4. Visiting pressmen were greeted by J. A. Bates, Mission, B. C., vice-president of the B. C. Association, in the absence of Hugh Savage, Duncan, B. C., president, now in England. The welcoming address was responded to by John Mackenzie, president of the Alberta Press Association. Reports of officers and discussion of advertising matters followed.

A question box, presided over by J. M. Walker, Okanagan Commoner, was a feature of the first day, during the afternoon of which delegates were guests of the Vancouver Harbor Commission on a tour of the harbor.

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent, live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

HE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles San Francisco

Why Gannett Likes His Ludlows

Mr. Frank E. Gannett, Editor and Publisher of Gannett's Empire State group of daily and Sunday newspapers, controls the following papers that circulate chiefly in the heart of New York State.

Rochester Times-Union
Utica Observer-Dispatch
Elmira Star-Gazette
Elmira Advertiser
Elmira Telegram
Ithaca Journal-News

IN writing of his experience with his Ludlows, Mr. Gannett says: "I never hesitate to recommend the Ludlow to any publisher. We have two in Rochester, two in Utica, one in Elmira and one in Ithaca. I don't believe we could get along without them. It was difficult at first to sell me on the Ludlow because I could not see in advance any saving of time or money, but I have been convinced that the Ludlow is a very profitable investment, and any publisher who does not look into it with an open mind is missing a chance to save money."

Superintendent Parmiter of the Utica Observer-Dispatch backs up the statement of Mr. Gannett by adding: "For true economy, low maintenance cost and capacity for unlimited out-put under tremendous pressure. we believe the Ludlow superior to any other system."

The three basic ideas that have made Ludlow success possible are: (1) Simplicity of construction, (2) Unlimited type on slugs, with great range from six to sixty point, including bold and extended faces, and, (3) Speed in operation. In fact, the money-making advantages of the Ludlow System of matrix composition for display is now admitted by successful printers.

The extent of your profits this year may be determined largely by the quantity of Christmas advertising carried by your paper during the next few weeks. There is still time for you to fully investigate the Ludlow System and to equip your plant for meeting the peak load of Christmas business.

With less than an hour's instruction any printer can learn to operate the Ludlow.

Say the word, and we will write you fully about the Ludlow, and send you specimens of new Ludlow typefaces from six to sixty point that will increase the attractiveness of your paper.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue
San Francisco: Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO New York: World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

MEL RICHARDS, Chicago illustrator and designer, who has been connected with some of Chicago's leading advertising agencies, has entered the syndicate field with a one-column comic feature of his own creation headed "Sadie Says," being the illustrated remarks of, according to the advertisement, "a genuine newspaper lady," inclined to be philosophical and witty. The new syndicate Richards has established goes under the name of Richards & Richards, with headquarters in Chicago.

It developed upon the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, to give a new twist to the cross word puzzle craze. Their latest variation is entitled "Cross-Word Celebrities" and it is conducted by O. L. Griffith. When the puzzle is completed correctly, the left hand vertical column spells the name of a well-known person, the celebrities ranging from Norma Talmadge to Gene Sarazen.

Chief John Kenlon, of the New York Fire Department, veteran of 50,000 fires on land and sea, has written a series of five articles for the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, telling of facts of heroism by firemen which he has witnessed, or which have occurred under his administration of the department. Some of the rescues include acrobatics at great heights and show the flashes of resourcefulness to which firemen are put in the pursuit of their calling.

F. J. Clode, formerly with the Bell Syndicate and Metropolitan Newspaper Service has joined the sales staff of the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia.

Prof. Norman Roy Appleton, B. S., M. S. and Dick Carson, world war veteran, members of the Lewis Wilson Appleton Jr., Syndicates, Philadelphia, have just left for Colorado. After a short stay there, they will proceed to Arizona on horseback, gathering material along the way, bringing their trip to an end at the Indian Reservation.

Herman Bernstein, editor, will sail from New York for Europe, Nov. 15, to write a series of 100 daily articles for the Federal Feature Syndicate, New York, under the caption "Close-ups of Europe." He will remain abroad about 4 months, visiting, among other places, England, France, Poland, Jugo-Slavia, Turkey, Palestine, and Egypt.

W. O. McGeehan, sporting writer, who conducts the "Listening Post" for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, has returned to New York, after a hunting trip at Creek des Prairies and La Tuque, northern Quebec, where he shot a bull moose with a 56-inch spread of antlers.

John Held, Jr., who draws "O Margy!" for the United Feature Syndicate, New York, was this week elected constable of Wilton, Conn., artist colony.

R. M. Brinkerhoff, creator of "Little Mary Mix-Up" for the New York World Syndicate, and Mrs. Brinkerhoff have returned from a pleasure trip abroad.

Paul V. Collins, former Republican candidate for Governor of Minnesota, and newspaper writer, who now conducts his own editorial syndicate from Washington, D. C., has been touring the Northwest writing politics for the Washington Star. His regular syndicate feature runs under the heading "In Today's Spotlight."

Eddie Cantor, comedian, beginning Nov. 15, will write a weekly humorous article for newspapers through the United Feature Syndicate, New York.

Richard S. Bond has discontinued the Business Story Syndicate, Philadelphia, and the Joke Syndicate, both formerly owned by him, and is now devoting his full time as commercial broadcaster and writer of a trade paper series of business stories.

Irvin S. Cobb, whose humorous stories are syndicated by the McNaught Syndicate, has spent several weeks hunting in and about the Lake Edward country in northern Quebec.

FLASHES

A spectacle of wasted energy is a hundred motorists blowing their horns at a traffic cop on a congested downtown crossing.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

With the first report of army graft and profiteering in China, we'll know it's a real war.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

If the Prince wants to take part in a real American sport he should try apartment hunting.—New York Evening World.

A family budget is a good thing, and of course the car's expenses appear right at the top.—Cleveland Times & Commercial.

"Hoist on his own petard" means what happens to the gas stepper.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

Understanding of the reason for China's civil war is vague in America. There may be some who, taking into account their own experience, believe it due to a failure to standardize the mah jong rules.—New York Herald Tribune.

It takes a red-nosed man with a greasy vest and a soiled collar and a cheap cigar, with his feet on another chair, to put the proper emphasis into the words, "These women reformers make me weary."—Altoona Tribune.

It is pretty hard to get Grand Jury proceedings that suit ex-Secretary Fall.—Philadelphia Record.

Any apartment house owner who puts an anti-boiled-cabbage clause in his lease will never have a vacant apartment.—New York American.

Arthur Brisbane is about to erect a 30-story apartment house in New York, and yet there are people who say the newspaper editorial has lost its power.—Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

Proposed outline for a modern yarn: They met one morning in a barber shop.—Detroit News.

Perhaps Mars just drew near to observe the result of what he did in 1914.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

They have solved the divorce evil in Russia; it isn't an evil—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

We can't help thinking that a course in a cooking school would do a lot more to glorify the American girl than Ziegfeld ever did.—New York Herald-Tribune.

If there should come another war, the common people should demand that it be fought out by the gentlemen who are inventing all the deadly war engines we read about.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Increased Circulation

Means More Business for National Advertisers

FIGURES submitted by the Audit Bureau of Circulations for the year show a marked increase in the circulation of the Altoona Mirror.

For the year ending JUNE 30, 1923, the report showed 25,265 net paid subscribers.

For the year ending JUNE 30, 1924, the report shows 26,549 subscribers, or an increased circulation of 1284 daily.

For the six months ending JUNE 30, 1924, the report shows

27,034

Altoona is growing. Her population is increasing. Business is good.

The ALTOONA MIRROR is the favorite newspaper. The A. B. C. statement will prove it.

USE ITS COLUMNS TO TELL YOUR STORY

The ALTOONA MIRROR

ALTOONA, PA.

BUSINESS DIRECT

Mother-Earth is the Foundation of OHIO'S Prosperity

OHIO'S buying power, as always, comes from her soil. While an industrial leader, Ohio measures her wealth by returns from her soil in agriculture, minerals and other natural resources.

Agriculture in Ohio is the backbone of the state's wealth. It produces vast quantities of vegetables, cereals, hay, fruits, nuts, dairy products, wool, honey, wax and livestock amounting annually to nearly $1,000,000,000.

Its mineral wealth includes coal, iron, glass sand, clays, salt, petroleum, natural gas, limestone, sandstone, gypsum, mineral waters, some potash and pyrite.

Ohio ranks fourth in mineral wealth extracted from mother-earth. Bituminous coal is produced in thirty counties taking approximately 45,000,000 tons annually.

Oil production is very great, the total value being around $45,000,000 per year.

In the production of fireclay and the making of pottery, Ohio stands first in the nation and in the world.

All the agricultural districts, mining districts and manufacturing centers are covered by this list of newspapers, and advertisers can get their story before all classes and all people in Ohio.

National advertisers should choose

"OHIO FIRST"

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Akron Beacon Journal	(E)	40,558	.10	.10
Akron Times	(E)	24,499	.06	.06
Akron Sunday Times	(S)	24,468	.07	.07
†††Bellefontaine Examiner	(E)	4,706	.02	.02
†††Cincinnati Enquirer	(M&S)	76,789	.17-.35	.17-.35
†††Columbus, O., State Journal	(M)	43,588	.12	.11
†††Columbus, O., State Journal	(S)	43,588	.12	.11
†††Conneaut News Herald	(E)	3,095	.0225	.0225
††Dover Daily Reporter	(E)	5,046	.025	.025
††Ironton Irontonian	(M)	3,400	.0179	.0179
Kenton Democrat	(E)	2,500	.014	.014
Lima Republican-Gazette	(E&S)	11,742	.05	.05
Lorain Journal	(E)	4,866	.025	.018
Middletown Journal	(E)	4,345	.025	.025
†††Newark American-Tribune	(E)	7,893	.025	.025
New Philadelphia Times	(E)	7,904	.025	.025
Piqua Call and Press Dispatch	(E)	6,142	.03	.03
†††Portsmouth Sun and Times	(M&E)	18,879	.06	.06
†††Portsmouth Sun-Times	(S)	13,112	.04	.04
Springfield Sun	(M)	13,272	.035	.035
Toledo Blade	(E)	109,123	.27	.25
Youngstown Vindicator	(E)	27,441	.07	.07
Youngstown Vindicator	(S)	27,441	.07	.07

††Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

BIG PRESS CONFERENCES AT CHICAGO

(Continued from page 8)

of a divisional committee of five, whose duty it shall be to bring before the board, either in writing or in person, any suggestions which they may consider desirable for the welfare of their division or any member thereof; such divisional committees to be elected for a period of one year."

Schedule for the departmental meetings follow:

The Advertiser Division will meet in Room 104, Hotel La Salle; President O. C. Harn, National Lead Company, in the chair.

The Advertising Agents' Division will meet in Room 103; Director Walter Hine, of Frank Seaman, Inc., presiding.

The Newspaper Division will meet in the Red Room; Director Walter A. Strong, Chicago Daily News, will preside.

The Magazine Division will meet in Room 102; Director Stanley R. Latshaw presiding.

The Farm Paper Division will meet in the East Room; Director B. Kirk Rankin, Southern Agriculturist, in the chair.

The Business Publication Division will meet in Room 210; Director E. R. Shaw, Power Plant Engineering, in the chair.

LONG PROGRAM FACES INLAND PUBLISHERS

WHAT it considers will be the most important annual meeting it has ever held is scheduled for the Inland Daily Press Association at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, Oct. 14 and 15.

GEORGE D. LINDSAY

Sessions will be opened by the report of George D. Lindsay, publisher of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle, president, to be followed by the annual accounting of Wil V. Tufford, secretary.

One of Mr. Lindsay's chief activities as president during the past year has been the direction of a drive to obtain new Inland members. Election of new members and their introduction to the present membership will follow immediately after the secretary's report.

Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram, heads the list of speakers on the first day, with the topic "Contempt of Court Abuses."

Second on the program is George W. Purcell, Vincennes (Ind.) Sun, on "First Newspapers in Inland States." Purcell has made a study of old newspapers and will also have an exhibit of some 100-year-old newspapers of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia, Mississippi, Louisiana, Vermont and New York. Among them will be souvenir copies of Volume 1, No. 2, of the Indiana Gazette, Aug. 7, 1804, containing an account of the Hamilton-Burr duel.

The program for the first morning will close with an address by Prof. Willard G. Bleyer, of the School of Journalism, University of Wisconsin, on "The Importance of Maintaining High Editorial Standards."

Luncheon this first day will be addressed by Col. Arthur Johnson, U. S. A.

With but one break, the afternoon session will be devoted to talks on newspaper advertising. Mrs. E. O. Susong, Greenville (Tenn.) Democrat Sun, opens the afternoon speeches with an address on "A Woman's Experience as a Newspaper Publisher." Then will follow: Jesse F. Mattesson, chairman, newspaper committee, A. A. A. A. on "National Advertising in Newspapers; Ralph Shannon, Washington (Ia.) Journal, "Getting the Personal Touch in Advertising," and Jason Rogers, New York, on "How to Double the Volume of National Advertising in Newspapers."

WIL V. TUFFORD

Reports of the different committees feature the morning program of Oct. 15. These reports will be made and subsequent discussions led by the following committee chairmen:

A. L. Miller, A. B. C. Committee; Arnold L. Guesmer, Federal Tax; Homer Gard, Postal; Will O. Feudner, Labor; E. H. Harris, Cost Finding, and E. P. Adler, Paper.

Free publicity will be held up for discussion under the leadership of L. I. Noyes, of the Ironwood (Mich.) Globe, first speaker after the committees have concluded their reports. Frank T. Carroll, Indianapolis (Ind.) News, president of the Newspaper Advertising Executives, will talk on his association, and either W. P. Strandborg or Joe Carmiechael, president of the Public Utilities Advertising Association, will speak on "Public Utilities and the Press."

On this day the Inland luncheon will have as guest of honor, Hon. Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, who will speak on "The Relation of the Newspaper to the Farm Era."

Circulation, classified advertising, and state press associations will occupy attention during the afternoon. Robert S. Weir, Syracuse Journal, president of the International Circulation Managers' Association, will explain the aims of his organization, while H. L. Williamson, secretary, Illinois State Press Association, will speak on the "Functioning of a State Press Association." Basil L. Smith will discuss "Standard Classified Advertising."

Featuring the entertainment side of the program will be a theater party on Wednesday evening to "The Beggar on Horseback," arranged by President Lindsay through the courtesy of S. E. Thomason, business manager, Chicago Tribune, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. Robert B. Harbison, western sales manager of the International Paper Company, has extended golf privileges to all Inland members to play at Olympia Fields. A golf tournament is scheduled for Oct. 13.

MARKET RESEARCH IDEA IS FOUR-A TOPIC

WHEN the American Association of Advertising Agencies opens its eighth annual convention at the Drake Hotel, Oct. 16 and 17, one of the subjects to be discussed of particular interest to newspaper publishers will be the establishment of the A. A. A. A. Market Research Department, recently announced by Stanley Resor, president, through EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

STANLEY RESOR

Resor this week declared no director for this department had yet been named, the final appointment being held over until the matter can be acted upon by the association's entire membership in Chicago.

According to plan, the Research Department will make a "qualitative" analysis of newspaper and magazine circulations in the United States and will in no sense be in competition with A. B. C. It is confidently expected by the creators that the department will be a saving to both advertising agencies and publishers. Trade areas are to be surveyed without bias.

The Research Department, James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the A. A. A. A., this week told EDITOR & PUBLISHER, will also take charge of the "comprehensive data regarding all publications of the world, collected and tabulated by the association during the last year and a half in co-operation with the United States Department of Commerce."

JAMES O'SHAUGHNESSY

"These files, which we now have in our possession," O'Shaughnessy said, "include the advertising rates, circulation, size of columns, screen used, standard rate card information, and the age and stability of all newspapers and other publications in every considerable city of the world.

"Carbon copies of this tabulated information have been filed with the Government, where they are now available to any applicant. The government copies, however, are not manifold and must be inspected in Washington, whereas, the can be sent out from our New York office to A. A. A. A. members.

"The Department of Commerce collected the material for these files through consuls, special agents, commercial attaches and trade investigators in all parts of the globe. They are practically com

First eight months of 1924

Carried more Men's Wear advertising than the World and Sun combined.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

Reason-Why Copy For Your Churches

Help your churches to have a constructive message in their display space. It is not enough to say "Come to Church." Here is one of the 52 ads offered by this Department as Series No. 6, designed for use on behalf of all the churches in your town.

AND THEN THE SLIP

"This man was a trusted cashier for twenty years," said the underwarden as a visitor watched a man in the office of a state penitentiary.

The story was the old one of temptation becoming too much for a man who had handled the money of another for two score years. One slip spoiled his life and that of his wife and children.

A man may struggle against temptation for more than twenty years and get no credit for the times he might have slipped and didn't. The one time he does slip tears down the whole structure he had built so carefully—and hundreds of men in (name of town) know how easy it is to slip!

But if we are to believe the testimony of men who have wanted to slip but didn't, and those who have slipped and then "came back," the Bible and the Christian religion are restraining forces and assistants of supernatural power which can be had by any man who desires the help.

Every church in (name of town) is eager to help the man or woman who knows he must fight a battle which, if lost for a day, means the wreck of his life.

Let the churches help you. Talk with any pastor.

Use of this entire series of 52 ads may be purchased by one paper in a town for 3 cents per week per thousand circulation. For full set of proofs address Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

e and have been kept efficiently up-late."
'Shaughnessy pointed out that these are of particular value in developing ign markets for American products.
"We believe," he said, "that foreign ertising is necessary to the mainnce of domestic advertising. Often y producing American factories must abroad or go broke.
When I was abroad this summer, I hundreds of American products in opean stores. But they were not be-extensively advertised. If they were ertised, their sale would be far greater, output of American factories could ncreased, price to the domestic con-er reduced, the total business enlarged great additions made to domestic ad-ising appropriations."

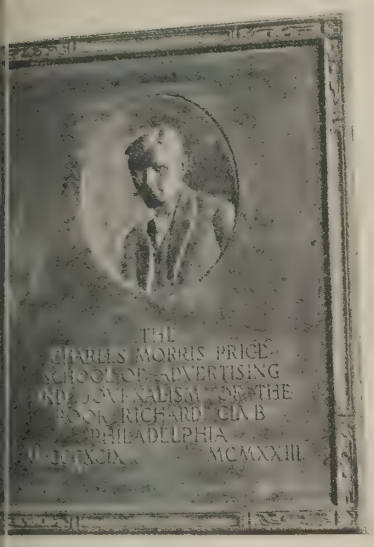
The first business, therefore, of the Research Department, he pointed out, would be concerned with adjustment of these files to more efficient use.

Undoubtedly the matter of the Research Department will be brought up before the friendly get-together luncheon, which the A. A. A. A. will give to about 1,000 publishers on Thursday at the Hotel La Salle.



President Resor will talk briefly at this luncheon, to be followed by William H. Johns, of the George Batten Agency, chairman of the A. A. A. A. board of ex-presidents; O. C. Harn, National Lead Company, A. B. C. president; and A. W. Erickson, of the Erickson Company.

The annual directors' meeting of the A. A. A. A. is to be held Oct. 15.

Election of officers will be held Oct. 17.

PHILADELPHIA POOR RICHARDS LAUNCH FIRST ENDOWED AD CLUB SCHOOL

HE Charles Morris Price School of Advertising and Journalism was in-rated by the Poor Richard Club of adelphia at a luncheon at the Belle-Stratford Hotel on Thursday, at-ed by the Mayor of the city, many ing educators and about 300 Poor ardites and their friends.
he school starts with an endowment $30,000 given to the Poor Richard by Michael G. Price, the entire e of his son, Charles Morris Price, many years a member of the Poor ard Club, who was lost at sea in the diterranean in November, 1922.

Irvis A. Wood, of N. W. Ayer & president of the club, who presided, of the generosity of the father who lost his only son, of the kindly heart had prompted this action in a modest that the Poor Richard Club was in unique position of having received irst endowment of any club in the try for educational purposes, and out-the progress of advertising during the past 50 years. He told of an experience that befell his late associate, F. Wayland Ayer, who was largely responsible for the success of N. W. Ayer & Son, and who as a young man resigned his position as a teacher to take a job in an advertising agency.

One day, a man whom he had approached for business told him he regretted his move—that he didn't think advertising a respectable business, and that if he really needed help he would be glad to give it to him. "F. W." retired as gracefully as he could, but in the next interview informed his friend that if advertising was not respectable he, personally, would try to make it so. Mr. Wood said the establishment of this school was a milestone in the progress of advertising.

The school opened on Tuesday in the Poor Richard rooms, with an enrollment of 115 and some 500 applications. Instruction is under guidance of the Poor Richard Club and direction of Messrs. Lutz and Mulvey.

Bartley J. Doyle, past president of the Poor Richards, paid tribute to Charles Morris Price. He had a bent for journalism, he said, was quiet, and unassuming and liberal. He was sure the poor Richard Club, with the aid of this fund and the backing of the father who stood ready to assist in every way, could do everything that was necessary to make both the advertising and journalistic courses successful.

The Poor Richards have the support of Dr. Smith of the university, the president of the Board of Education and the other leading educators of Philadelphia.

They are planning to place in their club rooms a bronze memorial tablet as shown in the accompanying cut.

Schnackenberg Leaves Hearst

Planning to devote all his attention to a public accounting practice for publishers, John H. Schnackenberg has resigned from the staff of the Hearst General Management, with which he has been associated since 1921.

UBLIC LEDGER MAGAZINE PAGES

The Ultimate in Art Layout and Subject Selection

New Front Cover in four colors; Complete Story Page; Seven Feature Pages; Edith Burtis' Fashion Page; Humorous Art Page in pen and ink—"Vignettes of Life" by Frank Godwin.

For Samples and Terms Wire

EDGER SYNDICATE
EPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA

Experience
The Best Teacher

Has taught American exporters that the best advertising medium in Japan is

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

The explanation is readily apparent to all who have examined carefully the comparative status of newspapers in Japan. There are journals which cater to one political party, to the literati, to gay circles and even to the rikisha men and coolies. But The Jiji Shimpo is known throughout Japan as the Empire's foremost NEWSpaper and the favorite in business circles. The Jiji's circulation is greatest among prosperous Japanese. Its typical readers are found among those progressive Japanese who lead the way in the introduction of foreign goods in our country. To interest them is the foreign salesman's first requirement.

J. P. Barry, an authority on Far Eastern advertising, represents the Jiji in the American field. Mr. Barry is thoroughly equipped to assist you in planning your advertising campaign in Japan, and will take pleasure in serving you in every possible way. Communicate with him at

JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE
342 Madison Avenue New York City

THE JIJI SHIMPO
Tokyo

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

PRESS FIGHTS SUPER-POWER RADIO

(Continued from page 3)

doubtless would be opposed to direct advertising, and the same view was advanced by James M. Cleary, of the Chicago Tribune, who was a member of the general committee of the conference dealing with the problems confronting the newspaper group.

Secretary Hoover in part said:

"In the whole history of scientific discovery there has never been a translation into popular use so rapid as in radio telephony. So late as the year before I became Secretary of Commerce there were no broadcasting stations. At the end of four years 530 are in operation. The sales of radio apparatus have increased from a million dollars a year to a million dollars a day. It is estimated that over 200,000 men are now employed in the industry, and the radio audience probably exceeds 20 millions of people.

"I have been convinced that development could only be accomplished by organized cooperation of the industry itself.

"Experimental broadcasting upon a national scale during the past year has now brought us to the stage where we know it can be done. The local material available for the local program is not in my view enough to maintain assured interest, and therefore the industry, or to adequately fulfill the broadcasting mission. So far as the art has developed, I think we all agree that for accuracy and regularity of reception we can depend only upon the local broadcasting stations. My proposition is that the local stations must be able to deliver every important national event with regularity. The local station must be able to bring to its listeners the greatest music and entertainment of the nation, but far beyond this it must be able to deliver important pronouncements of public men, it must bring instantly to our people a hundred and one matters of interest. To this it must add its matters of local interest. This can only be accomplished by regularly organized interconnection on a national basis with nationally organized and directed programs for some part of the day in supplement to more local material.

"It is our duty to consider the possibilities and potentialities of interconnection as a regular daily routine of the nation. Unless it be systematically organized we cannot expect its continuation. I realize that this matter, except insofar as it may be fostered and encouraged, does not lie in the Government. It would be unfortunate indeed if such an important function as the distribution of information should ever fall into the hands of the Government. It would be still more unfortunate if its control should come under the arbitrary power of any person or group of persons. We have promises of super radio and we have promises of interconnection of wired wireless. If there are several methods, it means that we might have several alternative programs always available. But whatever the method of interconnection may be, we are lacking in a definite organization of a national system of programs and a basis of support.

"I believe that the quickest way to kill broadcasting would be to use it for direct advertising. The reader of the newspaper has an option whether he will read an ad or not, but if a speech by the President is to be used as the meat in a sandwich of two patent medicine advertisements, there will be no radio left. To what extent it may be employed for what we now call indirect advertising I do not know and only experience with the reactions of the listeners can tell. I do not believe there is any practical method of payment from the receivers.

"I wish to suggest for consideration the possibility of mutual organization by broadcasters of a service for themselves similar to that which the newspapers have for their use in the press associations, which would furnish programs of national events and arrange for their transmission and distribution on some sort of a financial basis just as the press associations gather and distribute news among their members.

"It is of some interest to classify and study the ownership of the stations. So far as the Department knows, of the present stations, 196, or over one-third, are owned and operated by manufacturers of or dealers in radio apparatus, whose interest is of course apparent. Department stores and similar mercantile concerns add 39 to this number, and publishers 41, making a grand total of 276 known stations, of which 44 may be said to have a direct interest in the publicity legitimately resulting from their own broadcasting. On the other side we have 85 educational institutions, 35 churches, 12 city and state agencies, 12 clubs, 4 schools, 2 state or city agencies, and 1 church, all of which may be said to operate from more altrustic motives."

Representatives of newspaper broadcasting stations and radio news services and publications who took an active part in the conference were: Carl H. Butman, Washington Radio News; Howard E. Campbell, Detroit News; James M. Cleary, Chicago Tribune; Captain Stephen L. Coles, Radio Magazine of New York Herald-Tribune; R. G. Call, Portland Oregonian; W. M. Dewey, Chicago Evening Post; William G. H. Finch, International News Service; David Grimes, Radio in the Home; Arthur H. Halloran, editor of Radio; E. H. Hansen, New York World; Robert D. Heinl, Listening In on the United States; Volney D. Hurd, Aviator Service Monitor; Lamden Kay, Atlanta Journal; Israel Klein, Newspaper Enterprise Association; L. M. Lamm, Radio Digest; Arthur H. Lynch, Radio Broadcast Magazine; Harry J. Marx, Radio Digest; Henry M. Neely, Radio in the Home; Charles A. Segner, Chicago Evening Post; Arthie M. Stevens, Universal Service; Walter A. Strong, American Newspaper Publishers Association; R. M. Rolan, Cleveland News-Leader; D. C. Wilkerson, Radio Writers' League; Mrs. A. C. Jenkins, Chicago Daily News; T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Press; Miss Judith C. Waller, Chicago Daily News.

NORRIS A. HUSE JOINS WESTCHESTER DAILIES

Former General Manager United Features, Now Business Manager, Mount Vernon Argus and New Rochelle Standard-Star

Norris A. Huse has become assiciated with Westchester Newspapers Inc., proprietors of the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Daily Argus, and New Rochelle Standard-Star as business manager. Mr. Huse is a former Nebraska publisher and also has been prominent in the field of advertising and newspaper business making in both the east and west. He comes to Westchester Newspaper Inc., from the United Features Syndicate, of New York, where he has been the general manager, and where his business ability brought about a big increase in the volume transacted by this important and well known organization.

Norris A. Huse

His newspaper career began in Norfolk, Neb., where he was associated with his father and brother in the publication of the Norfolk News in both the business and editorial departments, afterwards succeeding to its control and direction. The success that he achieved here was indeed noteworthy as the paper gained a circulation of 10,000 although the city in which it is published, only has a population of 6,000.

His work here attracted the attention of Courtland Smith, then president of the American Press Association, and Mr. Huse was invited east to develop the advertising in the foreign field for the association, the representative for 7,000 weekly newspapers. He became vice-presiden and continued in this work for a space o four years. On the sale of the organiza tion, he accepted the general managershi of the United Features Syndicate.

Mr. Huse is a graduate of the Univers ity of Nebraska and was appointed b the governor as the state chairman of cit izens for the welcome home of the soldier from the World War. In every under taking both in his home state and in Ne York where he has resided since takin up his work there, he has won distin guished success, and he enjoys the conf dence and esteem of his country-wide ac quaintance in the publishing business.

Lou Holland Resting

On advice of his physician, Lou Ho land, of Kansas City, A. A. C. W. pres dent, has given up all active participatio in his business interests and in his at tention to association affairs to take complete rest. His travels in the pa two years in the interest of the A. A. W. have taken him more than 40,0 miles, and he has been under heavy strai

Prints Edition on Kraft Paper

Monroe (La.) News-Star printed a 4 page special edition on brown Kraft pap recently to celebrate the opening of new paper mill of the Brown Paper Com pany of Monroe.

The Market Barometer

will give your readers at a glance the movement of the markets' transactions noting particularly high, low, close and net change of 25 Rails, 25 Industrials and average of the 50 stocks combined, together with number of shares traded-in on the market, showing today, yesterday, last week and last year and includes also high, low, close and yield of all issues of Liberty Bonds.

With

The Market Barometer

there is an excellent market lead covering all the stock, curb and bond markets. Ready at 7 p. m. nightly in approximately 250 words, f. o. b. night press toll wire, New York.

Write or wire us regarding this and other business and financial features for your morning editions.

INTERSTATE COMMERCIAL NEWS SERVICE
38 Park Row, New York

The Cathedral Towns of England

NORWICH

Norwich was at one time the second city in England. It is still a busy centre and provides abundant interest for the visitor. The Cathedral, mainly Norman work, is one of the noblest in the country. Its cloisters are exceptionally fine and well preserved. A beautiful crocketted spire rises above the tower and gives to Norwich that splendid silhouette which makes it comparable only to Salisbury.

The massive castle, containing a museum second only to London; St. Andrews Hall, the Guildhall, St. Peter Mancroft Church, the 13th Century Bishops Bridge and a wonderfully preserved Merchants house of the 15th Century, all contribute towards making Norwich one of the most interesting of English towns.

London & North Eastern Railway from Liverpool Street Station, London

Apply for free booklet describing
ALL YOU OUGHT TO SEE IN BRITAIN

H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent

LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY,
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.),
New York

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 40,000 Average

Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

First

In nine months of this year The New York Times published 19,005,044 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 1,662,576 lines over the corresponding period of 1923, and an excess of 6,544,346 lines over the second New York newspaper.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Present average circulation 126,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 7,249 Daily Average Circulatio

Sworn Government Statement, Six Monti Ending March 31, 1923, 166,300 Daily. S Months Ending March 31, 1924, 173,5 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circul tion, 7,249.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New Yor
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., Sa Francisco, Calif.

NEWSPAPER COPY SOLD UTILITY STOCK AND APPLIANCES AT LOW COST

Remarkable Results in Conclusive Figures Reported by Central Main Power Company—Electric Washer and Vacuum Cleaner Drives Reaped Sales

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith presents the third of a series of nine articles dealing with public utilities and advertising prepared, in response to many requests, by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The purpose is to help public utility companies build business through newspaper advertising. The articles are built upon facts rather than theories.

A TWO months' newspaper drive selling washing machines resulted in sales of 108 per cent of the quota.

A vacuum cleaner campaign sold 190 cleaners in a month at a cost of $1.95 apiece.

A six weeks' customer ownership campaign netted the sale of 2,368 shares of stock at the regular price, $107.50.

These are experiences of the Central Maine Power Company, Augusta, Me., in its early 1924 newspaper advertising.

Data books list the Central Maine Power Company as having 65,000 customers, many of them large users of power for manufacturing purposes; a capital investment of $18,272,941; kilowatt hours generated last year numbered 146,136,610. The company makes this interesting comment on its advertising:

"Our first campaign of the year had as its objective the sale of 135 'Easy Washers' and it turned out a real success. We used six newspaper advertisements during January and February. We sold 147 machines at an advertising cost of $4.70 apiece or approximately 2¾ per cent of the machine cost. And furthermore, we found that demonstrations were easy to give as customers became acquainted with the aims of the campaign.

"In April we had a vacuum cleaner campaign which centered around a new cleaner called 'The Cempco,' a machine we had made under our own trade name. This campaign ran for a month and we tied the newspaper work up with some direct mail, extra sales solicitation and demonstrations.

"The advertising cost was $370.88; we sold 190 cleaners during the four weeks.

"Along different lines we have been running a series of advertisements on our 7 per cent preferred stock, which we are selling to customers and the public with much of the appeal directly to Maine people.

"Every so often, to keep our customers sold on this security, we run a series of advertisements just to check up on the general advantages of owning our security.

"This year, from February 7 to March 24, we put out a group of advertisements headed, 'A Series of Advertisements to Explain Why C. M. P. Preferred is a Good Investment.' Our objective was to sell more stock and also to keep our shareholders sold on the stock they already owned.

"During the six weeks period we spent $1,305.56 for advertising. We sold for cash 2,368 shares of stock at our regular price of $107.50 per share. In addition, a large number of shares were sold for delivery at some future date and these shares were not counted in the above total.

" * * * The value of newspaper advertising is great. Especially do we keep everlastingly at it in the sale of our preferred stock."

All copy in this series was less than 36 inches in size. It brought sales.

Federal Council Promoting Church Ads

The Federal Council of Churches has sent a series of 12 advertisements to all local church federations, to special groups that will work together where there are no federations, and to individual congregations in thousands of communities suggesting that these advertisements or similar ones be used in the local daily newspapers. Copies were also sent to business managers of newspapers asking them to co-operate in getting the campaign under way. Arthur E. Hungerford, Baltimore, Md., is the publicity advisor for the council.

Princess Writing Ad Copy

Madame la Princesse Lucien Murat of France has joined the ranks of advertisement writers. In a recent issue of the Paris Le Matin there is a column write-up describing the wonders of a dress-making establishment in the fashionable Avenue des Champs Elysées above her name.

Will Charter Boat to Houston

Portland (Ore.) Ad Club has decided to charter a boat to take its members to the convention of the A. A. C. W. at Houston, Tex., May 10-14. The other 38 Pacific coast delegations will be invited to join the Portland group for the trip, prorating the cost.

To Help Small Stores Advertise

The United States Chamber of Commerce has issued a new bulletin, entitled "Small Store Advertising," which includes recommendations as to amounts to be spent for advertising by small stores, deduced from statistics established by the Harvard Bureau of Business Research.

Advertising Course Opens Next Week

New York Advertising Club's course in advertising and selling will open Thursday, Oct. 16, with a lecture on "Can Your Product Be Advertised?" by H. H. Duete, general sales manager of the Borden Sales Company. The course consists of 40 lectures by men prominent in advertising and selling.

HERMAN BERNSTIEN

DISTINGUISHED foreign correspondent for fifteen years with the New York Times, Herald, Sun and American, with many notable beats to his credit, including the acquisition of the WILLY-NICKY TELEGRAMS, is sailing on a four months' trip to Europe and the Near East November fifteenth, under exclusive contract with the Federal Feature Syndicate.

MR. BERNSTEIN will visit England, France, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Poland, the Baltic States, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, the Balkans, Turkey, Palestine, Egypt and Russia (if the Soviet government will permit him to enter the country following his articles on Soviet Russia published in the New York Herald and forty other newspapers).

LISTENING in on the cross currents and undercurrents of life in these countries, MR. BERNSTEIN will write a striking and novel daily feature:

CLOSE-UPS OF EUROPE

One Hundred Days in the New Old World

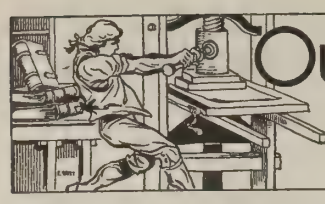
By HERMAN BERNSTEIN

IN THESE ONE HUNDRED CLOSE-UPS—a 750-word letter, six times a week, for four months—Mr. Bernstein will give to your readers:

Trenchant, penetrating articles telling what is going on behind the scenes with the leaders in politics and thought;

Colorful, human interest stories of the day-by-day life in these old and new nations;

Illuminating interviews with the high and the low, the great and the humble, with every sort of person who can throw light on what Europe is thinking and doing.



HERMAN BERNSTEIN'S One Hundred Close-Ups will not interfere with your regular foreign service. They will be something new and different, for he will ferret out the striking human side of Europe that regular correspondents of necessity do not handle in their daily routine.

The First Release, "CLOSE-UPS OF ENGLAND," will be ready January fifth.

This is the first announcement of this notable feature.

Write or Wire for Rates and Exclusive Territory.

THE FEDERAL FEATURE SYNDICATE
160 Fifth Avenue New York City

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

THAT newspapers are not colored, but are colorless, is the opinion expressed by Carl Dickey in his article, "Honesty in Printing the News"—the second of a series, "The Truth About Newspapers," now running in The World's Work. In a half-whimsical, half-truthful way he sums up the opinion held by certain critics of the press as follows:

> The publisher calls the managing editor and demands to know whether the news has been properly colored, the financial news duly twisted, the proper proportion of inaccuracy, bias, and press agents' propaganda displayed in the news, and upon receiving an affirmative answer, he replies: "All right, let's go to press. We've got a perfect newspaper."

Mr. Dickey frankly admits that there is less charm today in the presentation of news than when Charles Anderson Dana ran the old New York Sun. He does, however, pay a fine tribute to Kirke L. Simpson, who covered for the Associated Press the story of the burial of the Unknown Soldier in Washington. He makes the same point about headlines that he does about news stories in the matter of mode of treatment. By way of illustration he reprints the famous headline of "Boss" Clarke, who was night city editor of the Sun for more than 30 years. This headline put over the story, which told of the finances of two city architects who pleaded poverty but admitted having turned over property to their wives, was:

"WE'RE BROKE," SAYS HORGAN.

"Sure," Says Slattery, "But Our Wives Are Doing Fine."

To illustrate the point that the coloring of news is rarely intentional he puts in a box the placard found on the walls of the news room of the New York Illustrated Daily News—the paper with the largest morning circulation in this country:

> Accuracy is of First Importance. It is better for this newspaper to be a little slow and right than fast and wrong.
>
> There is a superstition that a popular newspaper must be full of fakes. This newspaper is certainly popular, but everybody on it does his best to avoid fakes.

I, for one, wish that writers about American newspapers would keep in the morgue that old Gimbel story about which we have heard enough—and to spare. Another Gimbel story, in my opinion, would have been much more to the point. A member of the Gimbel family in Philadelphia was arrested for profiteering. Some of the Philadelphia papers printed this fact; others did not. Later this Gimbel was freed from the charge by the courts. The papers which had not published his arrest were put in the most embarrassing position of informing their readers that a man had been declared innocent when nothing had been printed to tell why he had been arrested. For once at least, the newspapers that printed the facts had their just reward.

Mention is made in the article of the survey of the Pittsburgh papers during the steel strike of 1921. This survey, made by the Inter-Church World Movement, was published in book form under the title "Public Opinion and the Steel Strike." (Harcourt, Brace & Co.) I have been frequently asked why I have not mentioned that book in this department—a question I will answer now. The book was published before this department was started. In the second place no one could review the book without an endless amount of research impossible for me to undertake on account of the distance. I have, however, reached one or two conclusions about the contents of the volume. The book is marketed under the direct assertion that the analyst of the Pittsburgh newspapers was at one time Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Sun. Now a survey made by the man who has had the great honor of being Washington correspondent of a great New York newspaper is entitled to most serious consideration. But the trouble with this volume is that I am unable to find out when the analyst held that great honor, though I have often taken the matter up with Daniel A. Poling, Vice-Chairman of the Commission of Inquiry and pastor of the church of which my wife is a member. The newspaper in question informed me that the analyst mentioned was never its Washington correspondent, though at one time he did do some special work for it in Washington—a big difference, in my opinion, when one is looking for extreme accuracy in matter of presentation.

Nowhere in the volume can one find any account of the attempt of Pittsburgh newspapers to get news from strike leaders. I maintain that no survey is worthy of that name where there is such an important omission. The alleged investigation becomes, not a survey in the true sense of that term, but an indictment. I ask in a survey that the same standard of honesty of purpose and accuracy of reporting be applied as should be applied in testing the news columns of the press. The newspapers of Pittsburgh may or may not be entitled to the epithet "the prostitute press" but so far as this survey of the Inter-Church World Movement is concerned the case is not proven—in my opinion. I know how hard some reporters on Pittsburgh papers worked to get news from the strikers' point of view and I also know how they were treated at strike headquarters.

The conclusion reached by Mr. Dickey is:

> The American press, despite the fire of criticism, does a fairly good job of telling the news of its own community, the nation, and the entire world. It is trying to expand its scope of service beyond its already large realm of usefulness, and its faults are due more to keen competition and deleterious influences, which will pass away, than to lack of high ideals which the entire profession cherishes but does not fulfill. The fact that the press is so roundly abused and criticized is a good sign; it shows that America takes its newspapers seriously, that the press is a vital element in our national life, and that a general desire exists to see our newspapers improved and lifted to a higher plane of influence, prestige, and service.

This second article in the series, "The Truth About Newspapers," is illustrated by photographs of Victor F. Lawson, publisher of the Chicago Daily News; Carr Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Sun; Hilton U. Brown, general manager of the Indianapolis News; Frank W. Taylor, Jr., managing editor of the St. Louis Star, and Selah Merrill Clarke, who has already been mentioned in this comment.

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

KANSAS

is an agricultural state. 1924 is its best crop year in a decade. The towns and cities share with the farmers in the new prosperity. Topeka, the capital city, is the buying center for the rich Kaw Valley.

Primary Distribution

Owing to the class of its merchants, its strategic sales territory and the cooperation given by the CAPITAL, most national advertisers include Topeka in their primary distribution campaigns.

Topeka Daily Capital
Member A. B. C.
Arthur Capper, Publisher — Marco Morrow, Asst. Publisher

HELPING Dallas to grow from a small town into a fine city has been The News' great privilege. Helping to build a finer city, of far more splendid ideals and attainments will be The News' supreme destiny.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

first!
—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results
The Indianapolis NEWS

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World.
MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago — General Motors Bldg. Detroit

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LET US BUILD YOUR CIRCULATION
Famous stories by famous authors.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

General Features

A SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
Decker's Caricatures — Home Features — Daily Column—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties
Tri Feature, 110 West 40th Street, New York
Write for Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman
Washington Radio News Service,
Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Weekly Column

A WEEKLY COLUMN OF QUIPS AND JESTS
Timely and real live matter. Write for sample.
Rosen Associates, 7131 Manse St.,
Forest Hills, New York.

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by
THE
Salt Lake Tribune
No other section of the country offers the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using one newspaper.
FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Louis—Kansas City—Atlanta.
PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE
M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By THEODORE SCHEEL

His Youthful Diversion Was Drawing Soldiers in School Books

THEODORE "BUDDIE" SCHEEL, cartoonist for the Tri-Feature Syndicate, says he entered "this tough existence" Oct. 21, 1898, in St. Louis, Mo., entirely unconscious of what was in store for him.

As a schoolboy his favorite diversion was drawing soldiers in school and library books—an artistic pursuit which cost his father many a fine.

Upon entering high school an ambition to be a bookkeeper actuated him, and he registered for a business course. Three years later he entered business at $4 a week in the mailing department of a hardware concern. Later he entered a real estate office where he remained for five years without piling up a much higher salary. All the time drawing of caricatures interested him. And so, it was not hard at this time for a girl acquaintance to persuade him to quit his job and enter the St. Louis School of Fine Arts.

Upon leaving school he free-lanced for a time.

"Then I tried the advertising route and landed as a staff artist of a new weekly publication," Scheel relates. "I made a few sketches for it then the blamed thing up and died. Then I looked at my bank roll, discovered there enough to take me to New York, took the train and arrived in town.

"I walked the streets visiting every corner and circle but had no luck at all, and so I grabbed a train for Philadelphia, lasted one day there and then back again to New York. Then the Democratic Convention happened and some of my sketches sold and the bank-book sang again.

"Then the Tri-Feature Syndicate gave me office space and now it's a daily cartoon for sport and radio fans."

ORGANIZING NEW PRESS SERVICE

Spanish Newspaper Man Plans to Give Europe Constructive News

Constructive news from Canada, United States, and South America is in great demand in Europe, according to Enrique Des Champs, Spanish newspaper man, who arrived in this country this week to make arrangements for a press association he plans to organize, Jan. 1, to be known as the International Press Bureau, with headquarters in Paris and Madrid.

He said he had also obtained contracts from the South American governments, promising to furnish him with the type of news he desires.

Des Champs expects to make similar arrangemens with the U. S. and Dominion governments.

To connect the 8,000 newspapers who it is claimed desire service of the proposed press association, Des Champs declared he had signed contracts with two telegraph companies who have agreed to grant him a low rate.

Des Champs will be managing director of the International Press Bureau. He was formerly on the staff of the Madrid Grafico and has spent 38 of his 50 years as a newspaper man.

JOURNALISM CONFERENCE

Illinois Press Association Meeting at Champaign-Urbana

Two banquets, both addressed by prominent speakers, feature the journalism conference and the annual meeting of the Illinois Press Association being held at the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, this week, Oct. 9-11. John H. Harrison, Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News, is president.

On Thursday evening the association's annual banquet was held in the University's Great Hall, with Lee A. White, of the Detroit News, principal speaker.

The "President's Dinner" was scheduled for Friday, Oct. 10. Dr. David Kinley, University president, was to deliver an address of welcome, and speakers were to be Frank W. Scott, director of the University's journalism, and James T. Williams, Jr., editor-in-chief, Boston Transcript, on "Militant Aspirations of American Journalism."

Other speakers on the program were: A. L. Bowen, Illinois State Journal; Charles Mead, Geneva; I. S. Dunn, president of the Southern Illinois Press Association; John B. Sheets, Oblong, and Ernest Gruening, formerly managing editor of the New York Tribune, on "Journalism as a Profession."

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

Road Building Far Behind the Automobile

Millions now recognize the automobile as a necessity. It is no longer a luxury for the few. Sixty per cent of its use is for business.

Because of this the modern paved highway has become an economic necessity.

Yet although the mileage of Concrete Roads and Streets has been steadily increasing, our highway system today lags far behind the automobile. The great majority of our highways are as out of date as the single-track, narrow gauge railway of fifty years ago.

Such a condition not only seriously handicaps the progress of the automobile as a comfortable, profitable means of transportation, but also holds back commercial, industrial and agricultural advancement in practically every section of the country. It is costing taxpayers millions of dollars annually.

Highway building should be continued and enlarged upon.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support. Tell them you are ready to invest in more and wider Concrete Highways now.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

111 West Washington Street
CHICAGO

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

OFFICES IN 29 CITIES

THREE PENNSYLVANIA PRESS GROUPS TALK SHOP AT STROUDSBURG

150 Editors Attend Two-Day Session October 3-4—Bickel and McKernon Speak—Recreation Features Are Plentiful

PENNSYLVANIA publishers and editors combined business with pleasure at the meetings of the Associated Dailies, Weekly Newspaper Association, and State Editorial Association held at Stroudsburg, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 3 and 4. Business sessions were plentifully interspersed with recreation features, including sightseeing trips to Delaware Water Gap and the Pocono Mountains. About 150 attended the interesting sessions.

JOHN L. STEWART

The general dinner Saturday night climaxed the sessions. John L. Stewart, of the Washington Observer and president of the Associated Dailies, presided. Addresses were delivered by Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, C. N. Andrews, of the Easton Free Press, Charles B. Spatz, of the Boyertown Democrat, and president of the Pennsylvania Weekly Newspaper Association, H. L. Williamson, of Springfield, Ill., and George S. Dougherty, a former captain of detectives of New York City.

Friday's business session was addressed by H. M. Donovan, of the advertising firm of Donovan and Armstrong, and Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associations. The business sessions Saturday morning were addressed by Edward McKernon, superintendent of the eastern division of the Associated Press, John Reitinger, Philadelphia manager of the Associated Press, George J. Campbell, of the Pittsburgh Law Bulletin, State Congressman Benjamin H. Ludlow, Leonard Ormerod, information manager of the Bell Telephone Company, and Charles M. Meredith, of Quakertown.

Between the Friday and Saturday meetings a golf tournament and dance were staged. Motor trips were arranged for wives and daughters accompanying the newspapermen.

A silver cup, "The Paste Pot Trophy," was presented for competition in the annual golf tournament by William L. McLean, Jr., of the Philadelphia Bulletin. Competition for this cup is open to all newspaper golfers of Pennsylvania, and it is to become the permanent property of the player winning it three times (not necessarily consecutively) in annual handicap medal play.

George E. Graff, of the Williamsport Sun, was awarded the trophy for this year, and Charles R. Long, of the Chester Times, was runner-up. They were presented with individual trophies, as was Charles R. Spatz, of the Boyertown (Pa.) Berks County Democrat, who won the novice competition.

Judge Shull, in his address, urged the retention of the present judicial system. Corruption in the executive and legislative branches of the government, he declared, can easily be corrected, but the breaking down of the judicial branch will shake the confidence of the people in the government.

Mr. Williamson outlined the organization of the Illinois Press Association and recommended one big press association for the state of Pennsylvania. It should charge reasonable dues, he said, and maintain an office with a paid secretary.

Mr. Ludlow, in addressing the Saturday morning session, dwelt upon the systems of taxation existing in the state.

Although the three associations were the guests of the city of Stroudsburg, all arrangements were made by Colley S. Baker, editor of the Stroudsburg Record and Times-Democrat, N. A. Frantz, president, and A. F. Everitt, city editor of the same paper.

Among the publishers and editors attending were: E. J. Lynett, Scranton Times; C. N. Andrews, Easton Free Press; John L. Stewart, Washington Observer; J. H. Zerbey, and J. H. Zerbey, Jr., Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper; Robert McLean and William L. McLean, Jr., Philadelphia Bulletin; George J. Campbell, Pittsburgh Law Bulletin; Elmer L. Stoll, secretary, Publishers' Association of Pittsburgh; John J. Mead, Erie Times; Herbert D. Brauff, Reading Tribune; E. L. Clifford, Pottsville Republican; C. J. Smith, Allentown Call; Charles R. Long, Chester Times and Republican; C. R. Meredith, Quakertown Free Press; Charles K. R. Schropp, Lebanon News; W. J. Sanborn, Lansdale; Howard W. Paige, Legal Intelligencer, Philadelphia; George Ross Esselman, Lancaster Law Review; Howard Reynolds, Boyertown; Charles Spatz, Boyertown; William Hower, Bryn Mawr; Elwood Moser, Norristown Register; Irving Haywood, Conshohocken Reporter; John G. Zock, Lititz Express; Mrs. Estelle Steele, Mechanicsburg Journal; Fred C. Godcharles, Milton Miltonian; Frederick Stapz, Bucks County Democrat; Joseph F. Biddle, Huntington; C. S. Yeager, Ephrata; H. E. Grosh, Lititz Express; C. H. Heintzelman, Coatesville Record; A. H. Swing, Coatesville; J. R. Deershuck, Hazelton Plain Speaker; Henry Walser, Hazelton Standard Sentinel; Wilmer E. Crow, Harrisburg; Gus Steinmetz, Harrisburg Telegraph.

Former N. Y. Publisher Dies

Robert Edwin Bonner, 71, for many years publisher of the New York Ledger, died at his home in Lenox, Mass., Oct. 7. He was born in New York, son of the late Robert Bonner, and was graduated from Princeton University in 1876. He was a member of the University, Princeton, Lotos and Press Clubs of New York and the Nassau and Ivy Clubs of Princeton.

CITY STAFF "STEPS ON IT" WHEN TWO MURDERS BREAK ON DEADLINE

"AN illustration of why newspaper men tear their hair out instead of bobbing it," says Ferman A. Wilson, news editor of the Miami (Fla.) Daily News, an evening publication, in a communication to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, "is found in a recent day's routine on the Daily News, and probably a record for deadline spot news was established.

"The deadline on the News for the noon edition is 10:55. On the day in question at 10:56, just as the first page was being rolled, the police reporter jammed through a telephone call from police headquarters, 'Hold the noon. Miami cafe man's son just murdered.'

"Back came page one and way was cleared for an eight column 120 point streamer. The account of the murder was set in 'takes' and at 11:12 newsboys were selling papers containing a fairly complete account of the crime which had been committed 27 minutes before.

"There was a scramble for art and possible news of the capture of the so far unidentified slayer. The next edition was the home with the deadline at 1:40. It had been a hectic—with cap H spasm—but the shooting story was complete, the cuts were in and our gang was all but ready to wander out into the merry sunshine and lap up a lawful lemonade when the telephone rang.

"Sure enough it was the police reporter. 'Woman just shot and killed her husband on the postoffice corner.' Whatever corner she killed him on, it meant another sudden shift in makeup. Two streamers were quickly made to bloom where one had before.

"Again, the story of a sensational crime, committed amid the crowds of the city's busiest corner, was rushed into type and the paper poured out into the streets.

"It should have been enough and to spare for one day, but the police had to capture the slayer in the first shooting just as the final edition was ready to go to press.

"John Livingstone, formerly of the Chicago Tribune staff, was the police reporter covering both stories."

NOTHING REGISTERED

Going out to lunch, the department store advertising manager handed a copy of "Poor Bob's Almanak" to his office boy, and told him to fertilize his mind a bit.

When he returned he asked the kid what he thought of it, and got this:

"Aw, you think you're reading a darned good story, and the first thing you know you bust your nose up against the BROOKLYN STANDARD UNION.

"Naw, nothin' to it."

Poor Bob's Almanak

On and after September 6th, 1924

The New Orleans States

Will be represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

Every month, every year, The Cleveland PLAIN DEALER carries MORE National Advertising than both Cleveland evening newspapers COMBINED.

The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it

WOODWARD & KELLY
350 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Bldg., Detroit

J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St.,
New York

TRENTON N E W JERSEY

It serves an industrial city of 129,000, also prosperous suburban territory.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Four transcontinental railways, two with terminal shops in Tacoma; large and commodious harbor; thirty commercial docks; cheapest electric power in U. S.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and South west Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City — Ford, Parsons Co., 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois
R. J. Bidwell & Co.
San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL FIRST—by Merit

ILIES TO ADVERTISE FLORIDA

ociation Votes $5,000 Fund to Tell Merits of State

ssociated Dailies of Florida at a re- meeting at West Palm Beach voted 00 to be spent in advertising the state, the sum to be raised by member papers.

W. A. Elliott

The following officers were elected: President, W. A. Elliott, business manager, Jacksonville Times-Union; vice-president, Lew B. Brown, St. Petersburg Independent; secretary-treasurer, C. C. Coddington, De Land News; ctors, Herb Felkel, St. Augustine ord; Harry Brown, Lakeland Star-gram; D. H. Conklin, West Palm h Post; Ross Reeder, Miami Daily s; W. M. Glenn, Orlando Sentinel; G. Mullen, Tampa Times; F. P. es, West Palm Beach Times.

meeting of the Associated Press , embracing a membership of 31 ida papers, took place coincident the Associated Dailies gathering.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

Wallis Armstrong Company, 16th & Locust ts, Philadelphia. Will place account of Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, delphia, manufacturers of "Philco" bat- .

rge Batten Company, 383 Madison ave- New York. Placing orders wtih news- s for Julius Kayser & Company "Kayser s" New York, and Larus Bros. Co., eworth Smoking Tobacco," Richmond, Va.

ckman Company, 120 West 42nd street, York. Placing copy with some New nd newspapers for the Procter & Gamble any "Ivory Soap," Cincinnati.

mas M. Bowers Advertising Agency, 304 abash avenue, Chicago. Copy schedules sent to a general list of newspapers on nd Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

mpbell-Ewald Company, General Motors Detroit, Mich. Southern papers are re- g 6-time schedules on the Burroughs g Machine Company, Detroit, Mich.

tham Advertising Agency, 3 West 29th , New York. Again placing orders with apers in various sections for Wimel- r & Rice, "Wear Right Gloves," New .

lister Clark, 350 Madison avenue, New Has secured the account of the Brillo Company, Brooklyn.

over-Mooney Company, 111 W. Monroe , Chicago. Orders are going out to news- s in the southwest on the Cudahy Pack- ompany, Chicago.

iske-Everett, Inc., 19 West 44th street, York. Now handling account of Powell's late Mills, candy, New York.

rs, Watrous & Company, 360 N. Michi- avenue, Chicago. One time orders, 260 are being distributed to a selected list wns on Schleicher, Inc., (metal radiator ure).

rles H. Fuller Company, 629 S. Wabash e, Chicago. Placing the account of the Packing Company.

rles C. Green Advertising Agency, 450 venue, New York. Placing a campaign dison Mazda Lamps in newspapers in York City, New York State and New .

y H. Greene, Parsons Building, Buffalo. ecured the account of W. H. Comstock any "Dr. Morse" Indian pills, Morristown, Reported to be placing account of the n Mfg. Company "Kondon Catarrhal " Minneapolis.

ri, Hurst & McDonald, 58 East Washing- reet, Chicago. Has secured the account vid Adler & Sons Company, Milwaukee, acturers of men's and young men's over- and suits. Reported to be placing ac- of the Bradley Knitting Company, an, Wis.

ig-Hooper Company, 74 New Montgomery San Francisco. Placing orders with Western newspapers for the Silverton Pipe Company, Silverton, Ore.

os Advertising Company, Inc., 9 East street, Chicago. Handling account of aige-Detroit Motor Car Company, De- manufacturers of "Paige" and "Jewett" biles.

L. Jones Company, 38 S. Dearborn Chicago. A general list of newspapers robably be used on the advertising of rt H. Frost, Inc., Chicago.

Ralph H. Jones Company, First National Bank Building, Cincinnati. Placing account of the Estate Stove Company, Hamilton, Ohio, manufacturers "Estate" cooking and heating appliances.

Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, 417 Sycamore street, Milwaukee. Has secured the account of the L. J. Mueller Furnace Company of Milwaukee.

Kling-Gibson Company, 220 S. State street, Chicago. A list of metropolitan newspapers is being used on C. U. Williams & Son, Bloomington, Ill. (Oilomatic Heater).

LaPorte & Austin, 21 East 40th street, New York. Placing orders with some newspapers in lower New England for the White Oak Coal Company, New York.

Lennen & Mitchell, Inc., 366 Madison avenue, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in selected sections for P. Lorillard & Company, "Old Gold Tobacco," New York.

Alfred Levy, 171 Madison avesnue, New York. Placing orders with some New York newspapers for the Root Mfg. Company, "Root's" Tivoli underwear, Cohoes, N. Y.

Robert M. McMullen Company, 522 5th avenue, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in varicus sections for the American Cranberry Exchange, "Eatmor" cranberries, New York.

Maxwell, McLaughlin & Company, Inc., 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account for the Burson Knitting Company, Rockford, manufacturers "Burson" full fashioned hose.

Newell-Emmett Company, 120 West 32nd street, New York. Placing orders with Southern and Western newspapers for Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, "Granger Rough Cut," New York.

Daniel E. Paris, 80 Boylston street, Boston. Reported to have secured the account of the Samoset Chocolate Company, Boston.

Potts-Turnbull Advertising Company, 6 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Sending out copy generally on the Portland Cement Company, Chicago.

William H. Rankin Company, 1 West 37th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the American Tobacco Company, "Buckingham Smoking Tobacco," New York.

Joseph Richards Company, 247 Park avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers generally for the Gould Storage Battery Company, New York.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, 404 4th avenue, New York. Placing orders with some Ohio and New Jersey newspapers for the Indian Motor Cycle Company, Springfield, Mass.

R. E. Sandmeyer & Company, 153 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing account of the Pullman Couch Company, Chicago, manufacturers of couches.

Schl Advertising Agency, 360 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts and copy are being sent to a list of western newspapers on the D. B. Scully Company, Chicago. (Syrup).

Calvin Stanford Advertising Agency, Connally Building, Atlanta. Has secured the Dixie Metal Products Company, Birmingham, account.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 242 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with some Southern newspapers for Penick & Ford, Brer Rabbit Molasses, New Orleans and New York.

Wood, Putnam & Wood Company, Oliver Ditson Building, Boston. Has secured account of the Taunton Knitting Company, Madewell Union Suits, Taunton.

GOLF WRITERS FORM CLUB

Henry L. West, Washington Post, Elected President at Merion, Pa.

Henry L. West of the Washington Post was elected president of the National Association of Golf Writers, an association formed by representatives of more than 60 newspapers who covered the national amateur golf championship at the Merion Cricket Club at Merion, Pa., recently. O. B. Keeler, Atlanta Journal, was chosen vice-president, and Francis J. Powers, Cleveland News, secretary-treasurer.

An executive committee, consisting of the officers and Kerr N. Petrie, New York Herald-Tribune; Perry Lewis, Philadelphia Inquirer; L. B. Paton, Boston Herald, and A. T. Packard, Chicago Post, was also elected.

The association will co-operate with the United States Golf Association in obtaining proper facilities for reporting national tournaments and in advancing the interests of the game.

Newark Press Sale Denied

Former United States Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey in a statement to Editor & Publisher this week denied published reports that in company with a group of bankers he had purchased the Newark (N. J.) Press, evening tabloid, launched Sept. 23 with Joseph J. Fiske as publisher. Attempts to reach Mr. Fiske were unavailing.

This Fact Constitutes

West Virginia

A Great Food Market

West Virginia does not produce, and never has been able to produce, enough food to sustain her people. Her industrial centers are very largely reliant upon food imported from another state.

FOOD ADVERTISERS

Will do well to stop and consider West Virginia as a market.

It is a market that should be considered. The people of West Virginia have more money to spend than double their number in many of the more congested sections.

With 1,500,000 people, wholesalers and consumers are generally within the influence of the daily newspapers, so that they can be very economically addressed by newspaper advertising.

Tell these people in their daily newspapers, the merits and advantages of your goods. These dailies, listed below, will work with you and get your message over in West Virginia.

They Localize National Advertising

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
Telegraph	(M)	11,073	.05
Telegraph	(S)	14,259	.06
Charleston
Gazette	(M)	20,057	.07
Gazette	(S)	24,932	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
Herald-Dispatch	(M)	13,750	.04
Herald-Dispatch	(S)	13,637	.04
Martinsburg
Journal	(E)	4,542	.03
Morgantown
Post	(E)	5,085	.025
Parkersburg
News	(M)	7,185	.025
News	(S)	8,759	.025
Sentinel	(E)	7,641	.03

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

NEWSPAPER paragraphs have for many years been very popular. In the last few years the movies have done a great deal to increase the popularity of paragraphs and lately many business concerns have been employing "wise cracks" to attract attention either to their products or stores.

A very effective way of advertising these paragraphs and the newspapers which run them is to reprint them on cards which can easily be placed in newsstands, barber shops, pool rooms, restaurants, and other places.

The paragraphs selected should of course, have a laugh in them, be very short, and not refer to any controversial subject such as prohibition. They can be printed on small cards, six by ten or eleven and changed weekly. Small cards, because they take up little space, have a much better chance of getting and staying in windows.

We have been using such cards for more than a year with excellent results. Here is a typical card:

"ABOUT THE ONLY DISEASE NOT AFFLICTING POLITICS IS LOCKJAW"

A Paragraph from Your (Name Paper)

Get The ———— for Best Sport News

The paragraph should stand out. Next bring out the name of the paper. Carry in small type the last line.

We know storekeepers who have as many as a score of cards in different parts of their windows and stores. When we miss passing the signs around one week we get kicks. Compare this with the difficulty everyone has in getting the average advertising sign posted.

* * *

Want ads help circulation to such an extent that we believe circulation managers should include an ad on want ads in every piece of promotion literature. The want ad managers will be glad to reciprocate by including with transient bills envelope inserts advertising some feature.

* * *

We read a large number of exchanges and are struck often by the lack of office advertising. When we assume that readers know all about our features and departments we are giving them credit for more discernment than they have. We have known features to run in dailies for months without being noticed by intelligent readers.

One day at lunch I heard a big publisher say that his paper did not carry a comic which I knew his paper had been running for at least six months. Of course we don't expect publishers to read their own papers thoroughly but they might authorize some office advertising so their readers would get to know their papers better.

Often a person will read a feature and not like it. That may not be a disparagement of the feature; the reader might have dyspepsia. Then a forceful ad may attract that reader's attention to that feature he passed by and he may become a devotee of it.

We believe thoroughly in advertising features and departments. They should be exploited continually both for the benefit of the regular readers and the transient buyers. And the copy should give reasons why a feature is worth reading. The necessity of close attention to layout has been driven home so strongly by H. Frank Smith in his Editor & Publisher articles that we will not dwell on that subject, but refer you to his stuff. It's immense and has been very helpful to us.

* * *

Circulators are often repelled from doing single mail promotion because of the cost of getting names and addresses of prospects. This problem can be beaten, we believe, successfully by addressing circulars direct to box numbers. We have used this method with good results and we know many papers that employ it regularly.

To be sure a person who gets a piece of mail wants to see his name on it but a circular is a circular and all the pains of filling in names and addresses carefully cannot make it a personal message.

Sending matter direct to box numbers lessens the cost of a campaign greatly. First the expense of getting the names is eliminated. Then the cost of mailing is greatly reduced because the box numbers can be set up in galley form just as a mailing list and the envelopes addressed with a mailing machine.

To illustrate: If 50 pieces are sent to each route to as many boxes only one galley of type is needed from which as many sheets as are required can be printed. The set up should be: Box 1, Box 2, Box 3, etc. Space should be left at the bottom for a stenographer to fill in twice the names of the post offices; once for the last paper in the club and the second time for the wrapper. In this way labels for 10,000 boxes can be made very quickly and mailed just as easily.

Anyone not sure about the post office regulations governing the mailing of circulars direct to box numbers can get the information from the Post Office Department.

A good way to avoid having circulars lie around country post offices is to notify the postmasters a few days ahead that circulars are coming addressed to box numbers. Samples may be sent out in the same way.

* * *

A proverb contest at this time of the year usually pulls well.

* * *

House organs are multiplying almost as rapidly as picture papers. About every week we get a new paper put out especially for carriers and newsboys. Most of these papers we cannot praise very much. They seem to us to miss the mark entirely because they are too preachy. There are too many dont's in them and too many directions and too many articles by District Manager Sweeny on what a successful carrier should do.

We believe that a carrier's house organ should contain 90 per cent news and features in which boys are interested and about 10 per cent propaganda and that should be sugar coated. Furthermore, a carriers' paper should have a price on it and carriers should pay for it. The price need not be more than a quarter a year but there should be some charge so the boys will value the paper.

POET CHARGES PLAGIARISM

Brings Suit Against Los Angeles Oil Man and Publisher

John G. Neihardt, Missouri poet, has brought action in the U. S. District Court in Los Angeles, charging infringement of copyright of a poem which, according to Neihardt's bill, was reproduced in public print as purporting to have been written and signed by C. C. Julian, Los Angeles oil man. Mr. Julian is jointly accused with the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., the Illustrated Daily News Publishing Company, Inc., and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., as official of these companies.

The poem, according to Neihardt, was first printed under the title "Battle Cry" in a book of poems called "Man Song," published in 1909 by Mitchell Kennerly and copyrighted for 28 years. When published by Julian in an advertisement of the Julian Companies and appearing in the Illustrated Daily News of Jan. 11, last, it was entitled "Undismayed," Neihardt charges.

Neihardt is asking that the court award him $1 for every copy of the Illustrated Daily News which contained the advertisement, which would total $143,158, based on the newspaper's own statem of circulation, this sum to be sha jointly by the defendant companies persons.

To Discuss Price Increase

Newspaper proprietors in France again talking of raising the price of daily paper from 15 to 20 centimes; t is, nominally from three cents to four, cording to Comoedia, a Paris newspa It is the provincial newspapers which bringing the question of an increase fore the press of the country, it sta and the matter is to be discussed at early meeting of the newspaper owners France.

Hosiery Campaign for Canada

Julius Kayser & Co., manufacturers Italian silk underwear and hosiery, announced an extensive hosiery adver ing campaign in Canadian newspapers Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, berta and Manitoba.

again
ON THE
San Francisco Chronicl
Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle
HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-715 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

love and adventure in the woods of Louisana
A stirring romance of unusual type. The adventurous spirit of old France lives again in these modern descendants of early French settlers.
THE PAINTED WOODS
By Nevil Henshaw
Keep your readers guessing with this splendid serial—just ready.
Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

Los Angeles Time
The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.
World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

Our Features:
Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
Ed Hughes
O. O. McIntyre
Penrod and Sam
Nellie Revelle
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES
Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other
BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY
The Ullman Feature Service
Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager
The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write
CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

PUBLIC DEMANDING ADVERTISED GOODS

"THE public has reached a point where it actually rebels at purchasing non-advertised merchandise or service. People want a feeling of security, and if goods or service are not advertised, there is a lack of this feeling of guaranty."—Paul A. Anderson, before 41st Annual Convention, Laundry Owners' National Association.

* * *

PROSPERITY AT HAND

"I CAN'T see anything but prosperity. There was a real depression during the past year, but, strange as it may seem, our business has been the greatest of any year in the company's history, with the exception of one year during the war. This proves to me that business is on its feet again and is moving forward with confidence."—L. C. Walker, President, Shaw-Walker Company.

* * *

REFERENDUM AND RECALL

"NEWSPAPERS can be a very great power for good or ill, but they can't be much of a power for ill because they have to work openly. You have crooked politicians and judges and dog catchers, but every day you have the referendum and recall on your newspapers. What the public square was to Athens and Rome, the newspapers are to America. La Follette and Coolidge and Davis talk every day in the public square, which is the newspaper, just as the Romans talked in the Forum."—Arthur Brisbane.

* * *

JOURNALISTIC VIRILITY

"A PAPER may be carefully edited, cover its field broadly and be put together in an attractive manner, it may be able to instruct, and yet be lacking in authority and influence. It will then be a good paper, but not a great one. It will follow, not lead. . . . The publisher with ideals will not be satisfied with any routine success achieved at the expense of virility. He will exercise and insist on courage wherever courage is called for in preference to 'playing safe.'"—James H. McGraw, president, McGraw-Hill Company, Inc.

* * *

COPY DECIDES ADVERTISING SUCCESS

"ADVERTISING does not always bring direct results; in many cases it merely earns the consideration of the prospective buyer. If it does that it is worth every cent you paid for the space. Trick headings and clever headings in your copy do not succeed. You must head ads with the needs of the prospective customer. Don't decide how much space you will buy and then write an advertisement to fit that space. Write the ad and then decide on the space. You will get better results. If your copy is right, nothing can make your advertising campaign a failure, but if it is wrong, nothing can make it a success."—Carl Byoir, President, International Consolidated Chemical Company, New York, before Des Moines Ad Club.

* * *

THE PRESS UNDER INQUIRY

"THE press is now undergoing a careful scrutiny by the people. We have only recently had news of the inquiry into the conduct of our newspapers to be undertaken by several learned societies. In the magazines and weekly periodicals, and on the platform, the newspapers and their performance of their task are a constant topic. The press is being examined in the light of faithfulness to its trust. That is a healthy sign; it would be bad indeed if a public servant were to go unminded by the people. * * * The American people have shown that they approve newspapers which nail their policies to their mastheads and fearlessly and honestly support them with fair judgments openly arrived at. Criticism of professional subservience comes oftenest from radical writers; yet in no press is the rule of policy more dogmatic, is the regimentation of editorial writers more exacting and disciplined, than in the radical newspapers and weeklies."—Louis Wiley, Business Manager, New York Times, before New Jersey Press Institute.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

ADVERTISING agency business in Los Angeles, Cal., appears to be booming, according to the number of firms which have recently moved into larger quarters.

Smith & Ferris has moved into a new two-story brick home, which was especially constructed for them at 739 South Hope street. Reception days were held from Oct. 2 to 9.

The Earl R. Obern Company, advertising counsellors, moved into larger quarters in the Lincoln Building, 742 South Hill street, Oct. 1. Although but a month old, officials declared more space was found necessary to permit the segregation and enlargements of several departments.

Logan & Stebbins has also taken new and larger offices in the new Insurance Exchange Building, Los Angeles.

James A. Devine, formerly associated with W. Montague Pearsall, has announced the opening of his own offices at 1270 Broadway, New York, where he will conduct a general advertising agency.

William Prager has joined the copy writing staff of the Dakan Advertising Agency, Seattle, Wash., succeeding Allen Mades, who resigned to join the advertising department of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

The David Company, an advertising organization, has been incorporated in St. Paul by R. H. and Q. J. David and J. C. Fabbrini, president, secretary-treasurer and vice-president respectively.

Granvill C. Sewell has joined the staff of the Chambers Advertising Agency, of New Orleans, Louisville, and New York. He was formerly with the Adamars Agency of St. Louis, and with the Reddick Agency before the latter was taken over by the Dorland Agency.

C. C. Carr, president of the C. C. Carr Advertising Agency, St. Petersburg, Fla., visited New York recently, where he gave a luncheon to resort advertising managers of New York newspapers at the Advertising Club of New York.

What You Ought To Know
About Illinois

Now, more than ever before, the buyers of advertising space seek plain facts on the papers themselves and on the conditions in their circulating territory.

Below are facts and figures on conditions in Illinois which will be of real help to the general advertiser in planning and advertising campaign to cover this prosperous state.

Area—Illinois ranks 23rd in size.

Population—It is 3rd among the states with 6,485,280 individuals.

Density—Illinois has 115.7 persons per square mile.

Wealth—Its total wealth is over twenty-two billion which is exceeded by only two other states.

No. of Farms—Over 237,000 farms, whose value is over six and a half billion dollars, makes it rank second in the Union.

Value of Crops—Illinois' crop value is third with $864,000,000.

Livestock—Illinois ranks fifth in value of livestock with $142,000,000.

Manufacturing—As a manufacturing state, Illinois ranks near the top—having 18,595 factories employing over 805,000 people and producing over $5,400,000,000 worth of manufacturing goods.

Go after business in Illinois now. The papers listed here are leaders. They serve an immense intelligent family of buyers.

	Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News .....(E)	16,982	.06	.06
†††Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(M)	335,747	.55	.55
†††Chicago Herald & Examiner.....(S)	1,050,949	1.10	1.10
†Chicago Daily Journal.....(E)	123,026	.26	.24
La Salle Tribune .....(E)	3,162	.025	.025
Moline Dispatch .....(E)	10,569	.045	.045
Peoria Star—(E) 29,102 .....(S)	21,733	.075	.06
Rock Island Argus .....(E)	10,513	.045	.045
Sterling Gazette .....(E)	5,921	.04	.04

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

POLITICAL MEN DEPLOY AS CAMPAIGN WARMS

Washington Denuded of Correspondents Who Take Road With Presidential Candidates—"Situation" Writers Comb Doubtful States

By SAM BELL

(Washington Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Except for the period of the national conventions, when Washington newspaper men move en masse to the convention cities, Washington, at the present time, is shyer of reporters than ever before. The departure this week of the La Follette campaign train with nearly a dozen correspondents aboard had added to the denuding of the capital.

The newspaper men accompanying Senator La Follette are: Paul Haupert, Associated Press; Kenneth Clark, International News Service; Fraser Edwards, United Press; Winder Harris, Universal Service; George E. Authier, New York World; John W. Owens, Baltimore Sun; Henry M. Propper, New York Herald-Tribune; Louis Stark, New York Times, and James L. Wright, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Already a number of correspondents have been out on situation stories, some of them going as far as the Pacific Coast. David Lawrence, of the Consolidated Press; Mark Sullivan, of the New York Herald-Tribune, and Arthur Sears Henning, of the Chicago Tribune, led the first invasion of the west. Gould Lincoln, of the Washington Star, is now in California, after a swing through the states largely known as La Follette territory, and Carter Field, of the New York Herald-Tribune, is writing a series of articles on the California situation.

Four men, representing the Philadelphia Public Ledger and New York Evening Post, have divided the country and are furnishing a daily page of political news in the Ledger and the Post. Clinton W. Gilbert has been stationed in Chicago to write daily stories. Louis Seibold is covering New England and the middle Atlantic states and will go as far west as Illinois and Michigan. Robert Barry has the border states and the debatable southwest. Mr. Barry will go as far north as Iowa, while George Nox McCain has the northwest and on through to the coast.

James P. Hornaday, of the Indianapolis News, left Washington this week for Indianapolis and a hunt for middle-west political news. Gus Karger, of the Cincinnati Times-Star, who was in the far west recently, goes out again shortly to remain until election. Another correspondent who will follow La Follette and investigate the situation in the west, is Roy Roberts, of the Kansas City Star.

VANCOUVER STAR SOLD

New Daily Purchased by Gen. V. W. Odlum, Member of Parliament

Vancouver (B. C.) Star, 8-page evening daily founded about 3 months ago by Charles E. Campbell, has been sold by its founder to Gen. Victor W. Odlum, Liberal member-elect to Parliament.

General Odlum was for some years editor of the old Vancouver World, recently bought by the Vancouver Sun and made into the Vancouver Evening Sun. He has assumed personal direction of the Star and has associated with him as president of the publishing company and as a contributor to the Sar's columns his father, Prof. E. Odlum.

Canadian Publishers Entertained

The British Columbia Institute of Journalists entertained the proprietors of the Vancouver and New Westminster dailies at dinner in Vancouver on Oct. 1. The guests included F. N. and W. J. Southam, Ottawa, of the firm of Wm. Southam & Sons, publishers of the Vancouver Province; Senator J. D. Taylor, publisher of the New Westminster British Columbian; R. J. Cromie, Vancouver Sun; Brig.-General V. W. Odlum, Vancouver Star. Each addressed the gathering, which was presided over by C. A. Sutherland, president of the Institute.

Gould Heads Baseball Writers

James M. Gould of the St. Louis Star was elected president of the Baseball Writers Association at its annual meeting in New York, Oct. 7. Denman Thompson of the Washington Star was elected vice-president and Henry P. Edwards, Cleveland Plain Dealer, secretary and treasurer.

Idaho Daily Suspends

Coeur d'Alene (Idaho) American, morning paper, suspended publication recently. The American was purchased about six months ago by G. R. Scott, publisher of the Coeur d'Alene Press. The Press is the only daily in Coeur d'Alene now.

N. Y. Post Adds "Football Extra"

The New York Evening Post last Saturday announced that throughout the season it would publish a football extra each Saturday, giving final scores and details of important games.

Daily Offers Subscriber Insurance

The Crookston (Minn.) Daily Times offers, for $1 a year, to present and future subscribers a "special press accident policy" under which $1,000 will be paid for loss of life, amounts ranging from $500 to $1,000 for loss of limbs, etc., and $10 per week for three months in case of injury from any travel accident.

Scranton Printers Get $4 Increase

Newspaper printers in Scranton, Pa. have just been awarded an increase of $4 a week. The scale runs from Oct. 1, 1924 to Oct. 1, 1925.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.
Goss Junior Straight Line, printing 4-6-8-10-12-14-16 pages, at a speed of 20,000 per hour. With the press is a complete stereotype equipment. Can be seen in operation at any time. Daily Telegraph Printing Co., Bluefield, W. Va.

For Sale.
Three Hoe single-platen pneumatic steam tables, complete with aprons and gas-heated steam generators placed under each table. Can be used as separate units. In A-1 condition. Present day quotation $3,000 complete. Price reasonable. Immediate delivery. Syracuse Journal, Syracuse, N. Y.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Folding Cylinders for Scott Press: We have for disposal at $100.00 each f.o.b. Detroit, one cylinder complete for two cylinder folder and one cylinder complete for three cylinder folder. These were spare equipment and have never been used.

Auditor, Detroit News
Detroit, Mich.

For Sale.
Goss half-tone color press, prints four colors outside and two colors inside, suitable for newspaper supplements or comics. Send for sample of its work and details. Our No. 427. A very good equipment at a low price. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York. (Many other machines on our list; "used but good." Let us know your needs.)

Used Newspaper Presses

Scott 24-page press,
prints 4 to 12 pages 24000
and 16, 20 or 24 pages, collected 12000 per hour, length page 23 9/16, 8 columns to page.

Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press
with two tapeless folders, now printing Chattanooga Times, length page 22¾ inches, 8 columns to page.

Available for Early Delivery

Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO — 1457 Broadway, NEW YORK

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

The Goss Mat Roller rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Also supplied for wet mats only. Impressions accurate — both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Bed can be furnished long enough to roll a double page form. Write for complete catalog. The Goss Printing Press Company, Chicago.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE ERIE TIMES
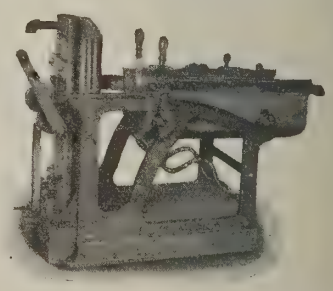
Erie, Pa.

We refer you to them for their opinion

QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE, Fisher Building, 343 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE, Marbridge Building, Broadway at 34th St., NEW YORK

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money



Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Hoe Patented Duo-Cooled Equipoise Curved Casting Mould

It is essential to Success to be the first out with the News—and Minutes count. This Hoe Curved Casting Mould is a time-saver, designed especially for Speed and Efficiency. Cold Water, circulating through the stationary Lid and the concave Side, gives quick-cooling for rapid Casting.

If It's a Hoe, It's The Best

R. HOE & CO.
504-520 Grand Street, New York, N. Y.
7 South Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. — 7 Water St., Boston, Mass.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Manager
seeks new connection; present position five years, over fifteen years' advertising experience. Can take entire charge, local, foreign; write convincing copy. Will go anywhere. Best references. Box B-892, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Not merely a high-class successful display manager, but also one of the best known in classified. Will take full responsibility of both. A grand investment for a paper that can afford a good manager. Try a change of pace on your advertisers. Now employed. Write Box B-858, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man
wants to affiliate with newspaper in city of 75,000 to 150,000. Newspaper experience seven years. Now doing promotion work. Married, age 29. Ability to direct staff, organize, promote special business and procure results. Best references as to character and ability. Box B-896, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Eleven years' experience as copywriter, salesman, executive. Successful, clean, conscientious, hard working. Wish to make connection in city preferably under 50,000 by November first or before. Minimum salary $60 a week. Age 31, family. Excellent recommendations. Address Box B-867, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
A two-fisted young fellow who believes that hard work achieves results is now open for a proposition. Age 37. Twelve years' experience in the field of hard knocks. Now employed without opportunity of advancement. A leader in the field and a real producer. Pleasing personality without the ruffles. If you appreciate ability here is an asset. Executive ability but not seeking titles. Apply B-888, Editor & Publisher.

All Round Newspaper Man
Desires to assist some publisher or business manager where there is opportunity to learn the business end of the newspaper. 25, aggressive, with 5 years' experience as solicitor and classified manager on paper of 23,000 circulation. Two and a half years' university training. I can help in your advertising department, but its the business experience I want. Best of references. Box B-890, Editor & Publisher.

Book Reviewer, Columnist.
Young man 23 years old wants change of atmosphere and work after spending two years on one of New England's leading small papers. Would welcome a position in any live city in the United States with an up-to-date newspaper. Desires to work into editorial, column, book reviewing or theatrical line. Graduate of leading Eastern college. So far has done plenty of reporting, copy reading, and sport work. Has been sporting editor of both morning and evening editions, state editor and telegraph editor. Frequently sent out through the state on assignments. Would be glad to go to any place in New England for interview that might lead to position. Box B-891, Editor & Publisher.

GETTING INTO PRINT

IF you build a new plant or put over a worth-while scheme you want everyone to know about it. So, you get it into print.

If you want a man to fill a vacancy; if you want a job; if you want capital or equipment; or if you want to sell your old equipment, why not

Get It Into Print

in

The Market Place of the Newspaper

Situations Wanted

Cartoonist
Desires position that can offer better future than the one he now holds. Experienced in all newspaper art. B-900, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Possessing ability to increase circulation on some newspaper solicits publishers' propositions immediately. Best of references to publisher in need of my services. Address Box B-893, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Now employed, wants to change. I have increased the circulation over 17,000 in less than 6 months of the paper I am now with. An able executive. A man with vision and full knowledge of his responsibilities. Will consider any part of the United States. At liberty after Oct. 10th. For full particulars write Box B-902, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Can produce, want salary and bonus proposition on Western newspaper under 15,000 circulation. Have best references, married man; now connected with large paper. B-889, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
General experienced, well-balanced executive, economical producer, circulation minimum cost, desires opportunity with publisher seeking permanent regular subscribers. B-885, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Energetic young man, unmarried, with seven years' of circulation experience on morning and evening papers. Capable of handling circulation in town of less than 60,000; open for position at once. Can give the best of references. Willing to accept salary according to results attained. B-887, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Thoroughly competent to manage large or small daily, desires immediate connection with daily in New York or metropolitan area. Experienced through over 25 years' executive connections in circulation work. Enjoys confidence of newsdealers in all parts of country. Available immediately. B-881, Editor & Publisher.

City Editor
Desires position with mid-western or eastern daily. Excellent all-around desk experience. Capable, dependable, ambitious. Young and married. Now employed. Box B-899, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Change of ownership necessitates change. 15 years' newspaper experience; 9 years' classified experience on prosperous eastern daily, 5 years as manager. 29 years old, married. Will go anywhere. Minimum salary $3500. Correspondence solicited. Address B-894, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
A man, thoroughly developed in this most vital form of advertising, seeks a change. He has the touch of life to give some big paper's classified department—the ideas and ability to carry them through to that paper's readers and advertisers. Builds business by contracts, not stunts; service, not promises. Strong papers write Box B-859, Editor & Publisher.

Composing Room Foreman
Open for position. Best references; 34 years old; married; twelve years head of some of the best newspapers in the South. Address Box B-871, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Daily newspaper editor wants situation as editor of western newspaper; strong editorial writer and news editor. Republican. Western experience. Box B-866, Editor & Publisher.

Editor and Editorial Writer.
College man, thoroughly experienced in desk work and feature writing, seeks position in New England or middle Eastern states. Box-872, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor, Editorial Writer or columnist. Former news executive now in magazine work wants connection on daily in East. Good reason for desiring change. Has strong record of accomplishment. Can submit samples. Best of references. B-897, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor for Small Daily.
Widely trained news executive, business and circulation builder available for Eastern paper where future and part ownership in addition to salary are assured. Columbia graduate; 14 years' experience, including 5 years N. Y. Times as well as small cities. Now Army officer, recently handling Plattsburg Camp publicity. B-884, Editor & Publisher.

New York Newspaperman.
15 years' editorial experience wants 6 hour a day job with trade journal or publicity bureau. B-901, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter
With three years' city editor experience, six on assignments and desk, desires position. Some eastern training. College journalism graduate. References, available immedaitely. Reasonable salary to start. Box B-895, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Sports Editor.
A sports editor who not only knows the sport game from top to bottom but who can write about them in an interesting manner is available to some newspaper in a live city anxious to put punch and color in its sports section. At present employed but desire change for personal reasons only. References will stand strict investigation. Box B-870, Editor & Publisher.

University Graduate
wants to learn journalism. Opportunity to train a steady, intelligent and alert man to your own methods. B-868, Editor & Publisher.

University Graduate.
Wis. journalism and advertising graduate desires position in Middlewest. Some experience. E. W. Neese, 140 W. Gilman street, Madison, Wis.

Washington Writer
Experienced on political and general subjects would like to associate with Democratic newspaper as contributing editor. Highest references and specimens of work furnished. Address B-898, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Manager.
For Ohio evening daily, college town 6,000; county-wide circulation, no opposition, ample plant, capable management. Permanent to man desiring to locate in desirable community. Some stock in company available to right man, if he feels he would like interest. Tell all about yourself first letter. Address "Ohio," care Editor & Publisher.

Wanted:
Advertising solicitor. Must know the game, be alive and a business getter. Position permanent. Fine field to work in. Evening Times, Sayre, Pa.

Wanted.
Experienced advertising man to solicit regular business and special features for evening paper in city of 25,000. Must be capable of writing copy and making layouts. Pleasing personality and willingness to work equally as essential. Unless you can produce do not answer this advertisement. Write, giving complete information and salary expected. Address P. O. Gorder, Advertisnig Manager, Palm Beach Times, West Palm Beach, Florida.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Daily Wanted.
Young executive, energetic, capable, wants interest in progressive eastern daily. Will invest up to $10,000. Connection with future investment considered. Address B-886, Editor & Publisher.

Daily Newspaper.
Owner of only daily newspaper in fine residential city with many thriving industries, located in New York State, will sell with or without real estate. Well equipped. Making profits $15,000 annually besides good salary to owner. $50,000 cash down, balance reasonable terms. Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer, 350 Madison Ave., New York.

Wanted.
Small daily or weekly in New Jersey; state price, full details first letter. Write Box B-883, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION BUILDERS

125% More Circulation for Another Daily.
The Alexandria Daily News, Alexandria, Ind., will gladly answer your letter of inquiry as to our service. Write the publisher, K. J. Sullivan, and inquire about the results of our circulation and advertising campaign for the News. Have us develop your territory for you this year. Don't delay; write today. Indiana Circulation and Advertising Co., Tosey E. Flack, Shelbyville, Indiana.

MAILING LISTS

National Newspaper Reading Service
compiles mailing lists of births, deaths, engagements or marriages from original press clippings. Four Terrace, Buffalo, N. Y.

NOTICE

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY
New York, September 26, 1924.

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%) on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable October 15th, 1924, to preferred stockholders of record at the close of business October 6th, 1924. Checks will be mailed. Transfer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, of EDITOR & PUBLISHER published weekly at New York, N. Y., for October 1, 1924.

State of New York, County of New York, ss.:

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and County aforesaid, personally appeared J. B. Keeney, who having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Business Manager of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, business manager, promotion manager and circulation manager are:

Publisher, James Wright Brown, 234 Valentine Lane, Yonkers, N. Y.
Editor, Marlen E. Pew, Wading River, L. I., N. Y.
Managing Editor, Arthur T. Robb, Jr., 175 Linden St., Rockville Centre, L. I., N. Y.
Business Manager, J. B. Keeney, 606 West 135th St., New York, N. Y.
Promotion Manager, Fenton Dowling, 51 Vreeland Ave., Rutherford, N. J.
Circulation Manager, George Strate, Y. M. C. A., 8 E. 3rd St., New York, N. Y.

2. That the owners are:

THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO., 63 Park Row, New York, N. Y.; James Wright Brown, 234 Valentine Lane, Yonkers, N. Y.

3. That the known bond holders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities, are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholders or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona-fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest, direct or indirect, in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

J. B. KEENEY,
Business Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 1st day of October, 1924.

HENRY F. REALANDER,
Notary Public.

(My commission expires March 30th, 1926.)

BRITISH CONVENTION URGED

Committee to Discuss Advertising Meeting for 1925 to Sustain Organization

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

The necessity for a continuance of the work of the excellent organization responsible for the Advertising Convention at Wembly, in July last, in the Direction of a British Convention for next year has already been urged in EDITOR & PUBLISER. The latest plea for this comes from Mr. Sydney Walton, C. B. E., who in an editorial in the Advertising World says that says that representative advertising men in London and the Provinces agree that it would be well to hold a British Advertising Convention each year.

"In our opinion," he continues, "steps ought swiftly to be taken towards this end. We suggest that Manchester or Leeds, Bristol or Newcastle, Glasgow or Aberdeen—it matters not which town—should through its local club invite the holding of an Advertising Congress within its borders during next year. The particular town or city would make itself responsible for the preparations. In this way a British Parliament of Publicity would pass in pilgrimage from city to city, and the organization and comradeship which the last Convention brought must not be allowed to fade."

The matter will come up for discussion at the meeting of the Committee in October—the first since the close of the Convention— and it is practically certain that there will be a unanimous vote for a British Convention in 1925 for District 14.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

"GEE! if I were in that man's place I'd make his business buzz."

"He is a good shopkeeper, but he doesn't know how to sell his service."

"This bird has a brilliant idea, but he keeps it to himself—if he would take space and say so-and-so, he would put it over big."

You hear men saying these things in every town. Such criticisms are usually true. This is where the advertising man steps in and develops new business. The advertising man who possesses a nose for news concerning business opportunities is an invaluable newspaper asset.

When you see a merchant struggling along because he does not knew how to attract the public eye—go in and give him your lecture. He may resent it at first, but you will set his thinking machine in motion and he will likely take more kindly to your talk the second time you call. Do not forget that the average business man is about totally devoid of any imagination, except for his specialty.

Imagination is the advertising man's stock in trade. Put your ideas to work for your clients, real or prospective. It is dangerous and wholly mistaken policy to attempt to tell a merchant "how" unless you have learned what his problems are and have studied them to find a solution, as a lawyer or doctor studies his case. Get his story, if his situation is unusual, and then go after him for space with a real selling programme behind it.

FARMERS have sold their crops and now have some cash on hand. Suggest to your implement dealer that he do some advertising and get the farmers to start payment on the implements they expect to buy next year. It is easier for them to pay now, and the dealer will boost his sales in an otherwise slow season. If you work up a campaign of about five or six ads, you stand a big chance of getting your implement dealer interested enough to tell you to go ahead and run them.—R. John Gibler, 2100 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

Now is the time of the year when fruit eating ought to be more general than it generally is because of the prophylactic effect of fruit on the digestive system. Advertising men can arm themselves with some facts along this line that would appeal to houswives and then go forth to secure ads from the larger fruit markets and stands. The wholesale fruit interests of New Orleans recently ran an attractive and spacious ad in the New Orleans States under the caption of "Eat More Fruit." Advertising men should be able to secure ads in some cities that would be scattered out over several weeks, making a real campaign out of the affair.—A. W. Roe, New Orleans, La.

"Play Safe—Deal with a Trustworthy Druggist" makes a good heading for a double column spread on druggists who advertise infrequently. The plan went big for a three months' run once a week in Ohio.—B. A. T.

Do the paperhangers in your town ever advertise? This is an ideal time for a small campaign urging people to have their houses papered and made bright for the winter months. School children should have a bright, cheerful room in which to play and study these dark days. A campaign of this kind ought to bring business to the paper hangers in their "off" season.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

The Halifax Morning Chronicle, is conducting a ten weeks' contest in which prizes amounting to ten dollars are offered each week for the three best photographs of the Beauty Spots of Nova Scotia. Linked up with the newspaper's advertisement are the advertisements of various firms in the city carrying kodaks and photo supplies.—V. G. Dawson, Halifax.

Which are the first stores in your city to open for business in the early morning? There are always some restaurants, tobacco stores, etc., that open for business early so as to get the patronage of the early morning workmen. Why not get ads from all of these stores and group them on a page under an appropriate heading in which all early morning workers would be urged to patronize them?—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

"THE BIG CHIEF" is the heading of a series of articles being run in the Indianapolis News. Each day one of the big men of the city is the subject of the story. His work, hobbies and civic activities are included. A picture of the man is carried under the heading. This will make you a good feature.—Lewis Hyman, Pharos-Tribune, Logansport, Indiana.

Both news and editorial material was furnished the Washington (D. C.) News recently in interview with a number of leading realtors. It was shown that the actual tendency in the city was lower rentals for dwellings. Much valuable data was furnished the average householder in the enumeration of the average rentals for various types of quarters, as it enabled him to make personal comparisons on a subject that hit him where he lives.—C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

Have you ever tried a series of articles on athletic games not commonly played? The stunt went big for one paper, as well as providing a novelty for the youngsters of the community who proceeded to try some of the games.—B. A. Tuters, Springfield, Ohio.

The Salt Lake City Tribune recently sent a reporter to get a story from prominent educational authorities on the teaching of grammar today. Professors at the university and heads of grade schools were both interviewed. A very interesting and useful report of what the school authorities thought about grammar and how the students acquired and used it was the result.—Fred Bennett.

Who are the consuls and vice consuls in your city? What countries do they represent? Why do these nations have consuls there when some others, possibly larger ones, do not? What type of cases do these consuls handle? What interesting experiences have they had? Many are not natives of the nation represented. How did they get the jobs?—T. E. Steward, Minneapolis, Minn.

Winfield, Kan., Daily Merged

E. P. Greer, founder of the Winfield (Kan.) Daily Courier in 1872, has sold the Courier to his competitor, W. G. Anderson, owner of the Winfield Daily Free Press. Winfield now becomes a one paper town. The Courier started as a weekly, and became a daily in 1884.

Nine-Page Ad for St. Paul Daily

The St. Paul Daily News, Oct. 3, carried a nine-page advertisement on the opening of a new department store. It was claimed to be the largest single advertisement ever published in the Northwest.

Barnbrook Resigns

H. J. Barnbrook, sales manager of the Basil L. Smith System, Inc., classified advertising specialists, has resigned, effective Oct. 1. He is not ready yet to announce his future plans.

Answering a Question:

Leacock is pronounced to rhyme with "peacock."

And we are proud as that gay bird over the steady growth of the Leacock list.

If his weekly fun isn't being printed in your territory, we'll be happy to take you on.

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.,
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK, N. Y.

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

NFA NFA

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

Write for samples and rates

NFA NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO NFA

Try the Sunday Anecdote Feature-
"With the Notables"
by
Robert D. Heinl
Washington D.C

All-Star Features

Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction

Send now for
THE GREEN CATALOG
of
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
M. Koenigsberg, President
NEW YORK CITY

The Immortal Stories
of
The Bible
Told in Simple Words
for Children

"The Children's Bible"
by
HENRY A. SHERMAN
and
CHARLES FOSTER KENT
is a
Daily Feature
That Means Home Circulation

Write for Samples.
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Over—
200,000
CIRCULATION
in less than 3 years.
—because Detroiters want it.
DETROIT TIMES

Red and Gold Are Creeping in Among the Foliage of the Northern Hills

THE chill winds are sweeping across lakes and in the cities people step along with more snap and ginger.

Here and there throughout the state, county fairs are attracting great crowds who marvel at the wonderful exhibits of vegetables and prize cattle.

All this means that the autumn, in all its glory and renewed energy, has its first grip on this mighty state of giant industries, wonderful farms and famous dairies.

It means that New York State—the greatest state in the Union—is welcoming an autumn of greater prosperity, greater health, greater accomplishments, and greater anticipations than ever before in history.

It means that it is time to start the fall campaign of advertising—and make it a big one.

Don't miss a single big city in this wonderful state. Don't miss even the most distant corner where there may be located a town or village.

The list of progressive New York State newspapers presented here gives you the opportunity to cover completely this wonderful state. Increased circulations indicate a greater desire on the part of everybody in New York State to be up to the minute in politics, business and social life.

Advertisers who realize and fully appreciate these conditions, will begin, at once, their fall campaigns in the daily newspapers of New York State, where the atmosphere of autumn has renewed energy in industry and just now is reaping the fruits of the farmer's effort —all of which spells wealth for New York State and its people.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
Albany Evening News (E)	18,746	.08	.08
Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	30,537	.10	.10
Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	52,354	.13	.13
†††Auburn Citizen (E)	6,429	.04	.035
Batavia Daily News (E)	8,728	.04	.04
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	77,839	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier and Enquirer (M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
Buffalo Courier (S)	118,603	.25	.22
††Buffalo Evening News (E)	125,618	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times (E)	100,236	.18	.18
Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	100,005	.18	.18
Buffalo Express (M)	48,019	.14	.12
Buffalo Express (S)	55,407	.18	.14
†††Corning Evening Leader (E)	8,307	.04	.04
Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	32,915	.11	.11
Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,537	.04	.04
Glens Falls Post-Star (M)	9,065	.035	.035
Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	6,877	.035	.035
Gloversville Morning Herald (M)	5,927	.03	.03
Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,308	.04	.04
Jamestown Morning Post (M)	10,515	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press (E)	6,714	.03	.03
Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	9,490	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News (E)	11,591	.05	.05
New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	7,000	.04	.04
†††The Sun, New York (E)	260,026	.60	.54
†New York Times (M)	352,100	.70	.686
†New York Times (S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune (M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune (S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World (M)	404,377	.595	.58
†New York World (S)	404,377	.595	.58
†New York Evening World (E)	314,489	.595	.58
Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	18,103	.055	.055
Port Chester Item (E)	4,426	.03	.03
Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,098	.05	.05
Rochester Times-Union (E)	66,574	.20	.18
†††Syracuse Journal (E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record (M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

The Road to FINANCIAL ADVERTISING

THE banks and investment houses of America are coming more and more to realize that the newspapers with the best financial pages not only attract the investors and, therefore, deserve financial advertising but give the best results to the advertiser.

Many recruits are being added daily to the army of investors and they can all be reached only by newspapers which aim to protect their readers from misinformation by giving them promptly the reliable news of the financial world.

The Consolidated Press Association's financia service is conceded to be in a class by itself both in completeness and integrity. And there is no better way to increase the volume of financial advertising than by making good financial pages.

With leased wires connecting fifty-five cities from coast to coast, the C. P. A. distributes daily, besides a financial service of high quality, a number of dispatches on business news, sports, international and national affairs together with general news features of gripping human interest—a well-balanced report for the newspaper that really wants to win the confidence of all classes of readers.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Bldg.	19 Rue d'Antin

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
...t to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—READ STUART H. PERRY ON CONTEMPT OF COURT!

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 21 NEW YORK, OCTOBER 18, 1924 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

Figures—or Failure?

Figures are "dry and uninteresting" only to those who can't count over ten—or under a million.

To most of us figures are daily bread, clothes and rent—we must "figger or fail." The more we study the figures bearing on our business, the better we understand that business.

To all who do business in the Chicago market, advertising figures are of interest and value. They are even vital to success. Therefore, the figures showing how the world's greatest merchants distribute their advertising among Chicago newspapers are important—very important—to all sagacious business men.

Distribution of Department Store Advertising among Chicago newspapers from January 1st to September 30, 1924:

	Agate lines	Comparison Agate lines
The Daily News	5,050,589	5,050,589
The American	2,232,231	2,232,231
The Daily Tribune	1,757,332
The Journal	1,307,874
The Daily Herald-Examiner	590,508
The Post	506,830
Sunday Papers
The Sunday Tribune	1,426,177
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	889,190
The Daily News' excess over the next highest score		2,818,358

From these figures, showing an increased margin of leadership on the part of The Daily News, it is evident that advertisers who "check up on results," as these merchants do, are placing more and more of their business in

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

FIRST IN CHICAGO

205,569

the largest circulation of any Cleveland daily newspaper exceeding Cleveland's second newspaper by more than 10,000 copies exceeding Cleveland's third newspaper by more than 40,000 copies

239,322

the largest circulation of any Cleveland Sunday newspaper

J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St.
New York

WOODWARD & KELLEY
350 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Building, Detroit

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
Times Building

Los Angeles, Cal.
742 Market St.
San Francisco, Cal.

The Plain Dealer
has the BUYERS!

The Plain Dealer

The Plain Dealer ALONE Will Sell It

Reprinted from The New York Herald Tribune, Oct. 11, 1924

The Most Successful of Newspaper Mergers

WHEN the New York Tribune purchased The New York Herald and combined the two papers, it took over a great name, a great tradition, and one of the most discriminating of reading publics.

What has been the result of the effort to weld these two great newspapers together and to unite their two reading publics? The answer is in the circulation figures.

The first six months, the critical period in every merger, are now past. The circulation statement of the New York Herald Tribune, filed with the Post Office Department for the six months ending September 30, 1924, shows a net paid circulation of more than 92 per cent. of the combined circulations of the New York Herald and New York Tribune as filed separately for the same six months of 1923.

The duplication between the two papers before the combination amounted to between 7 and 8 per cent. Therefore there has really been a 100 per cent. consolidation of the two reading publics.

No merger in the history of American journalism has approached this union of two entire circulations. It is a unique and extraordinary success.

We are glad to share this good news with our readers. Their advice, their criticism, their encouragement have aided profoundly in the making of the Herald Tribune, old in its traditions and distinction, new in its completeness, its varied interest, its broader news and public.

The New York Herald Tribune

The sworn statement of circulation, filed with the Post Office Department on October 1st, shows that the net average daily circulation of the New York Herald Tribune for the six months ending September 30th, 1924, was 276,755.

The net paid averages of the Daily and Sunday issues separately were:

Daily 270,159
Sunday 316,585

Holiday Buying in

Philadelphia

Philadelphians will have plenty of spending money for holiday buying of all kinds.

Where they spend it and what they spend it for is largely a matter of who influences them in favor of his goods.

The right kind of advertising started now and continued regularly will help any manufacturer who seeks sales for his merchandise in this market.

Automobiles, household equipment, electrical appliances, radio outfits, toilet articles, candies can be brought to the front in point of sales.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid circulation for the six months ending September 30, 1924—

516,609 copies a day

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in the United States.

NEW YORK—814 Park-Lexington Bldg. (46th St. & Park Ave.)
CHICAGO—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
DETROIT—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 117 Lafayette Blvd.
SAN FRANCISCO—Harry J. Wittschen, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1924—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, OCTOBER 18, 1924 | No. 21

Newspaper Members of A. B. C. Name Board to Advise Directors of Their Needs

Publicity Rules Unchanged By Dailies—Plum Renominated as Newspaper Director—950 Registered for Newspaper Meeting—Bell, Guest, and Prof. Bowman Banquet Speakers

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Maintenance of control of the Audit Bureau of Circulations in the hands of the advertiser members, and at the same time giving other branches a greater voice in its activities, appears to be the chief development of the eleventh convention of the A. B. C. today.

This solution of a chronic complaint was advanced by the board of directors in response to repeated agitations for greater representation on the board by publisher members. Typical of these requests was this one submitted to the Inland Daily Press Association's meeting this week by its special committee on A. B. C. relations:

"As a means toward meeting present needs, your committee strongly recommends the creation, by election from the newspaper members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations of a Committee of five to seven members, and the official recognition of such a committee by the A. B. C. as an advisory and a consulting committee authorized to bring to the attention of the directors of the A. B. C. suggestions, criticisms or claims from the newspaper members which, in the judgment of such committee, should be presented to the board; that such committee should review all by-laws and standards of practice affecting newspaper members, investigate complaints arising from newspaper members and report findings to the directors of the A. B. C. and that such committee should make a report of its activities to the annual meeting of the newspaper division of the A. B. C. membership. The final authority for decision and action, remaining in the board of directors of the A. B. C., would not be affected by such a committee, but it is believed that the effect of such a committee would be to simplify the work of the board and to improve relations between the Bureau and publishers, giving to publishers a more ready opportunity for a hearing on their suggestions or complaints."

Six divisional meetings were held Thursday afternoon at the La Salle Hotel following a luncheon by the A. A. A. A. They were: Advertisers: O. C. Harn, Chairman; Agents: Walter Hine, Chairman; Newspapers: Walter A. Strong, Chairman; Magazines: Stanley R. Latshaw, Chairman; Farm Papers: B. Kirk Rankin, Chairman; and Business Papers: C. R. Shaw, Chairman.

The newspaper departmental meeting was held in the Red Room with an attendance of 250 and a registration of 950.

A recommendation of the Board of Directors for election of a divisional committee was approved and five members were elected as follows:

Two representing evening papers, T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Press, and Galt Burns, Washington Star; representative of morning papers: E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; fifth member, owner of both morning and evening papers; Gardner Cowles, Des Moines Register and Tribune.

The newspaper men voted overwhelmingly in favor of the present publicity rules without amendment and it was voted on motion of John M. Schmid, Indianapolis News, to change the board rules to permit an opposition paper to have 100 copies of its competitor's reports instead of 30 as at present.

Question three: "Shall the bureau provide further penalties where Audit reports show variations between publishers, statements and audit reports?" was left to the discretion of the A. B. C. Board of directors.

The newspaper department favored calling a single subscription secured by club raiser as a premium subscription. Correspondence and service copies are not to be counted as paid circulation. The present ruling regarding predate editions of evening papers was sustained.

On the question "Should contest subscriptions paid for by contestants be recognized as paid circulation?" the vote was to count the first subscription as paid, all others as bulk sales.

On the question of returns, it was voted to leave the rules as they are.

Questions as to what is a morning paper and an evening paper were laid on the table.

David B. Plum, Troy Record, was nominated to succeed himself as the director representing newspapers; Walter A. Strong, Chicago Daily News, is the other newspaper director. It was the unanimous vote to take no action at this time in other matters proposed for consideration by board of directors.

Action of the departmentals will now be reported formally to the annual membership meeting on Friday and approved or disapproved by vote of the entire membership, meeting as EDITOR & PUBLISHER goes to press.

The joint annual dinner of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and American Association of Advertising Agencies Friday evening at the Drake Hotel was attended by more than 800 daily newspaper men. National advertisers, and agents, O. C. Harn, president of the A. B. C., and Stanley Resor president of the agencies, presided as joint toastmasters.

Speakers were Chancellor John E. Bowman, whose theme was "Spirit of Achievement"; Edward Price Bell, for many years on foreign service for the Chicago Daily News and dean of the London corps of foreign correspondents, on "Journalism and Statesmanship as Allies"; and Edgar A. Guest, Detroit Free Press, who expressed "Some Thoughts of a Newspaper Man."

"Ten years ago the three big divisions of advertising interests in this country united forces to lift an obstruction from the path of business progress, namely, unscientific purchase of advertising circulation," said President Harn in his annual message. "The large attendance at each of the annual meetings of this Audit Bureau testifies to the belief in and continued healthy interest in the success of the organization which was the result of this coalition of forces. Yet no matter how wholeheartedly we recognize our success, I doubt if any of us here realizes the degree in which the success of our movement has affected business. We have been too close to it. The changes that have come about have been so gradual that we take each day's situation as normal.

"This summer I had opportunity to compare our mature manhood with what we looked like ten years ago. The effect was startling. England, insofar as circulation statements are concerned, is where we were ten years ago, or even longer ago than that.

"One of the largest advertisers in England told me during the convention at Wembley that not an advertiser nor an agent could come within 50 per cent of guessing the real circulation figures of a majority of the publications of Great Britain. The newspapers and magazines are quite willing that this condition should continue. The equanimity of the circulation romancer is easily understood. But that of the good papers—those which under the conditions which we have developed in America would have the most to gain by an audit bureau such as ours—is not so easy to comprehend. They oppose or are luke-warm toward the movement for circulation verification because they feel that they enjoy a reputation for 'influence,' aside from all considerations of quantity of circulation and that any exposure of quantity would put them at a disadvantage.

"There is some opposition also from another source to an auditing organization on the plan of our A. B. C. Some of the advertising agents of Great Britain would like to have an auditing service but they want to keep it in their own hands. Our own agencies had this idea in the early days but so narrow a conception of agency service could not endure. It was only when the agencies recognized a broader mission that they began to develop into the splendid organizations we have today.

"In spite of the short vision which some of our British publisher and agency friends have today, there are some able men in both classes who are working hard for an Audit Bureau patterned after our own organization. Aided by them the advertisers of England organized a meeting at Wembley as a part of the advertising convention at which the subject was thoroughly discussed. With the exception of a masterly presentation of the subject from the standpoint of the British advertisers' needs by Stuart Hirst, of Leeds, the addresses were all by Americans, members of the A. B. C. Louis Wiley, of the New York Times, Stanley Resor, president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies and Bernard Lichtenberg of the Alexander Hamilton Institute, testified in convincing and detailed manner to the satisfaction

(Continued on page 6)

J. W. YOUNG, A. A. A. A. WESTERN COUNCIL CHAIRMAN, GREETED DELEGATES

WHEN members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies gathered in Chicago Oct. 16 and 17, for their national convention, they found greeting them, James W. Young, chairman of the western council of the A. A. A. A.

J. W. YOUNG

As Mr. Young is vice-president of the J. Walter Thompson Company, most of the advertising men will know him. They probably have known him for the capable man and the hard worker that he is, a man who has earned his position as a leading figure in the advertising realm through sheer ability and serious effort.

James W. Young began his career at the age of twelve, starting business as a mailing boy in the publication mailing room of the Western Methodist Book Concern in Cincinnati. He remained with this house for ten years, and at the end of that period has won the title of advisiting manager. In the period of transition from mailing boy to manager, he was successively make-up man on one of the publications, then secretary to the general manager, then assistant advertising manager and final' advertising manager.

In 1909, Young went to New York as mail sales manager of the Ronald Press Company. Three years later he joined the Cincinnati office of the J. Walter Thompson Company as a copy-writer. His ability gave him the managership of the office in 1914, which position he retained for two years.

He returned to New York following that, assuming the position of vice-president of the J. Walter Thompson Company, in charge of production. In 1917 he was sent to Chicago to help organize the western division of his company, and he has been a prominent figure in the Chicago advertising field since.

At the last meeting of the Western Council of the A. A. A. A. in October, 1923, Young was made its chairman.

He has the reputation among advertising men of being a man with vision and a planner. He is industrious and capable, a clever, high-powered man.

POSTAL COMMITTEES PLAN CAMPAIGN

Will Ask Post Office for Hearing Before Its Report to Congress—Keep Zones, Cut Rates, Is General Policy

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 15.—Postal committees of the several regional publishers' organizations met at a dinner conference Tuesday night as guests of the American Newspaper Publishers Association postal committee. Pending postal legislation and rates were exhaustively discussed.

L. B. Palmer

A resolution was adopted to the effect that efforts should be made to obtain relief from wartime rates and to oppose all increases by co-operating with other organizations, whenever possible.

Questions of postal administration, however, such as horizontal salaries, the resolution stated, are matters to be settled by Congress.

It is understood that the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association continues its allegiance to the American Publishers Conference, as will the National Editorial Association, but the A. N. P. A. and the Inland are not now so affiliated. The opinion of the newspaper people here favors retention of the zone system and reduction of wartime postal rates, and leaving to Congress such extraneous questions as salary increases to postal employes. The majority favor equalization of salaries, if necessary, rather than horizontal increases.

L. B. Palmer, manager of the A. N. P. A., presided. Those present included: A. N. P. A.—A. L. Miller, S. E. Thomason, J. D. Barnum, E. H. Baker, and Elisha Hanson, Washington representative; S. N. P. A.—A. G. Newmyer, Col. Robert Ewing, M. E. Foster, Wiley Morgan, Walter Johnson, Capt. Cranston Williams; Inland—C. J. Robb, Homer Gard, James Powell; National Editorial Association — George W. Marble.

TO MEET IN HOUSTON

Newspaper Executives Plan Addresses Before A.A.C.W. Groups

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Chicago, Oct. 16—Newspaper advertising is to have a more prominent part in the next convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, it was determined by the officers and directors of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives here today. The association will meet at Houston in conjunction with the A. A. C. W. next spring, the board decided. A tentative program outlined at the meeting, over which President Frank T. Carroll presided, calls for addresses on newspaper advertising at the various departmental sessions of the big convention.

NEW YORK TIMES' RECORDS

Largest Weekday Issue and Greatest Lineage Reached This Week

The New York Times this week hung up two new records.

For the first time in its history, the issue of the newspaper on Thursday, Oct. 16, ran to 52 pages, with 275 columns of advertising. This was the largest week-day number the Times has ever printed, according to B. T. Butterworth, advertising manager.

The record for volume of advertising, Butterworth said, was reached last Tuesday, Oct. 13, when 291 columns were printed in a 48-page paper. On this date, according to the advertising manager, 24 columns of advertising had to be omitted, because of lack of space. The Times was able to make this advertising record Tuesday, because, Monday being a holiday, there were no financial tables printed, and this space was turned over to advertisers.

La Prensa Sets Record

The Buenos Aires La Prensa on Oct. 14, published a 30-page edition, which the management claims breaks all advertising records for South America for a regular week-day edition. The newspaper published 60,000 separate advertisements, including 58 columns of classified.

Intertype Declares Dividend

The Intertype Corporation announced a 10 per cent stock dividend this week on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly cash dividend of 25 cents a share, both dividends being payable Nov. 17 to stockholders of record Nov. 1.

Florida Bi-Weekly Becomes Daily

M. M. Lee, editor and publisher of the Winterhaven (Fla.) Chief, has converted his bi-weekly newspaper into a daily, and has been elected to Associated Press membership. The Chief was established as a bi-weekly in 1911.

TO PROBE CLASSIFIED MISREPRESENTATION

Censorship of "Cure-All" Ads Also to Be Discussed at Southeastern Classified Meet Set for Atlanta, Oct. 20-21

Close investigation of misrepresentation in classified advertisements will feature the annual southeastern convention of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers to be held in Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 20 and 21.

John L. Irwin

Censorship of medical advertisements and so-called "cure-all" remedies will also be discussed.

Considerable misrepresentation, classified managers believe, occurs in classified advertisements sent southern newspapers, seeking to influence negro and unskilled labor to migrate to northern and eastern states in large numbers.

John L. Irwin, of the Des Moines Register-Tribune, president of the national association, will address the meeting.

Sessions will be called to order Monday morning by A. T. Miller, classified manager of the Nashville Banner, chairman of the southeastern convention, and national secretary. Howard Haire, Atlanta Constitution, will deliver the address of welcome.

Other speakers and their subjects will be: George B. Morgan, Nashville Tennessean, "Classified Advertising and the Small Newspaper"; Louis J. Fenkel, Atlanta Georgean, "Development of Voluntary Business," and J. W. Mann, Lexington Leader, "Ten Business-Building Ideas."

In addition to the opening address, Irwin is also scheduled to speak on the "A. N. C. A. M., What It Is," and "The Classified Journal." Miller will talk on "Sidelights of the Columbus Convention."

Entertainment features will include a banquet Oct. 20, at the Ansley Hotel, followed by a theater party, and an automobile trip to Stone Mountain and other points of interest.

AIR MAIL RUSHES AD

N. Y. Times Receives Proof of Copy from Coast in 3 Days

Air mail was put to important advertising use this week, when on Tuesday, Oct. 14, the New York Times received from its San Francisco representatives an order and a proof of a page advertisement of the Bank of Italy, San Francisco, to be inserted in the Friday issue.

Postmarks on the package, which contained the full page coated proof, indicated that it had been mailed in San Francisco late on the evening of Oct. 10. The layout included special hand-drawn type and a facsimile of the seal of the bank, so that it was necessary to send the proof to obtain identical reproduction. The package was three days in transit. Texts of advertisements have frequently been sent by telegraph, but so far as is known this is the first time that proofs of a special layout have been rushed across the country by airplane mail.

INDUSTRIAL AD GROUP ENDORSES A. B. C. RULE

Think Occupational Analysis of Trade Paper Circulation Good—Julius Hall, Belting Maker, Named President

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Some 600 men, representing more than a dozen local associations, attended the convention of the National Industrial Advertisers' Association at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Oct. 13 and 14. The convention was the first to be held separately from that of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and was called because few members were able to go to London.

E. T. Gundlach, of the Gundlach Advertising Agency, Chicago, explained the three processes in making copy effective: getting attention, developing an appeal and causing action. The successful industrial advertisement which merely attracts the attention of readers in general and fails to attract the prospective buyer, fails, Mr. Gundlach declared. He urged printing industrial advertisements in small type if the space gained were filled judiciously. Mr. Gundlach also declared that it had been found not necessary to advertise continuously, but that "splurging" at times and holding back at others had been found more profitable. He outlined a method of checking on the effectiveness of advertising by observing not only sales but the number of callers and the number of mail inquiries as well.

The association adopted a resolution endorsing a uniform A. B. C. statement on occupational analysis of business papers.

Among the principal speakers were E. St. Elmo Lewis, vice-president of Campbell-Ewald Company, Chicago, and lecturer in the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, on "My Viewpoint on Industrial Advertising of Today," and Bennett Chapple, of the American Rolling Mill Company, Middletown, Ohio, on "The Future of the National Industrial Advertisers' Association." A paper by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, on "Elimination of Waste in Distribution," was read in Mr. Hoover's absence.

The following officers were elected: President, Julius Hall, Link Belt Company, Chicago; vice-president, Bennett Chapple, American Rolling Mill Company, Middletown, Ohio; secretary, J. R. Hopkins, Chicago Belting Company, Chicago; treasurer, C. H. Connell, Weller Manufacturing Company, Chicago. Directors—George F. Chimo, Brown Hoisting Company, Cleveland; Keith J. Evans, Joseph T. Ryerson & Sons, Chicago; Ezra W. Clark, Clark Trucktractor Company, Buchanan, Mich.; F. R. Davis, General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

The exhibit committee appointed is: P. L. Thompson, Western Electric Company, chairman; G. D. Crain, Class Magazine; and Herman Groth, William H. Rankin Company.

McCLURE AGAIN HEADS NATIONAL COMMISSION

"Advertising Holiday" Planned as Part of Houston Convention to Demonstrate That Ads Cut H. C. L.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 14.—W. Frank McClure of Chicago was re-elected chairman of the National Advertising Commission at the annual meeting held at the Hamilton Club. Theodore G. Morgan of Montreal was elected vice-chairman to succeed George S. Fowler of New York and Charles F. Hatfield of St. Louis was re-elected secretary of the commission. The commission will hold its next meeting in Detroit, the tentative dates being Jan. 15-16.

W. Frank McClure

A. H. Melville of Conde Nast Company, Harry Tipper of the United Publishers Corporation and A. J. Crockett of Modern Priscilla have been appointed to represent the N. P. A. on the National Advertisers Commission.

John H. Logeman, chairman of the A. A. C. W. convention exhibit committee, announced that he was working with the Mayor of Houston for the establishment of an "advertising day" in connection with the convention of the A. A. C. of W. in Houston, May 10-14. On this day, Mr. Logeman stated, all city offices, public schools and all stores in Houston will be closed in order that the lesson that advertising lowers the cost to the consumer may be demonstrated.

AD BUREAU WANTS TO GROW

New Members Will Be Sought to Permit More Aggressive Work

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Committee in charge of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association met at the office of the Bureau here this week to consider important developments in a number of prospective national accounts. W. F. Rogers, Boston Transcript, chairman, presided. Others present included George M. Rodgers Cleveland Plain Dealer; John B. Woodward, Chicago Daily News; David B. Plum, Troy Record; Director William A. Thomson, Associate Director Thomas H. Moore and Chicago Manager Guy Davis.

W. A. Thomson

It is understood representatives of the Bureau were in conference here this week with the new advertising committee of the Investment Bankers Association, of which John MacGregor, Pittsburgh, is chairman.

The Bureau's work is now well organized, with offices in charge of competent newspaper representatives in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. The present budget tops $100,000 a year, but the necessity for more aggressive administration is so great that a drive for new members will shortly be inaugurated, it is said.

Armstrong New Chief

Andrew R. Armstrong of the New York World's pressroom was installed as president of New York Newspaper Web Pressmen's Union No. 2, which succeeds Local No. 25, disbanded as a result of the outlaw strike of newspaper pressmen a year ago.

RESEARCH PLAN IS CHIEF TOPIC OF AGENTS

National Advertising Now Totals $300,000,000 a Year, a 20 Per Cent Growth Over 1923, and New Project Aims to Increase That Sum and Its Productivity

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Oct. 16. — "Advertising agencies are facing the biggest step forward they ever have taken," James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, at the opening session of that organization's eighth annual convention Oct. 16, at the Drake Hotel.

"Total advertising appropriations for 1924 show an increase of 20 percent over last year," Mr. O'Shaughnessy declared. "The association has been instrumental in effecting enormous savings to national advertisers and in increasing the productive power of advertsing by standardizing and simplifying advertising methods and practices.

"Marketing research in its scientific and modern proportions has been developed by the members of the A. A. A. A. working with an interchange of experience and associational guidance. The present volume of advertising is accredited in a large measure to that scientific development of research," he said. "Now, the association is undertaking to carry on marketing research in national scope. It is undertaking big tasks which it would not be possible for a single agency to perform. Reports from various committees submitted to the convention show that there is closer and more sympathetic co-operation with the various groups of publishers than ever before in the history of advertising. The A. A. A. A. will extend this work of committee contact and studying of the advertising field."

Mr. O'Shaughnessy asserted that the capable manner in which agencies handle the problem of advertising is one of the greatest forces in American business, the cessation of advertising would have an effect upon business comparable to what would result from a breakdown of the country's railroads.

"In such an event business in the United States would be paralyzed within a short time," se said. "That is what advertising means to the production and increase of industries in this country."

Mr. O'Shaughnessy outlined in a statement the plans made during three days of closed sessions of the A. A. A. A. for making still more advertising in the national field a certainty.

William J. Boardman, of George Batten Company, New York, was another speaker at the session. He reported on the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, at London. English-speaking peoples, he declares, recognize that advertising has come to stay. The convention proved, he added, that the enormous amount of advertising that is being done is one of the greatest stabilizing factors in the world's business.

Charles W. Hoyt, of New York, spoke on the other aspects of the convention.

The convention was attended by some 200 agencies men from all parts of the country.

It joined the Audit Bureau of Circulations in its dinner at the Drake Hotel on Oct. 17.

American Association of Advertising Agencies entertained the official family of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and some nine hundred publishers and newspaper executives at luncheon here today at Lasalle Hotel.

Stanley Resor, president, presided, and at head table were seated: Urey Woodson, William McLoughlin, George D. Lindsay, Stanley Clague, W. F. McClure, Hon. E. T. Meredith, O. C. Harn, W. C. Young, Jesse F. Matteson, L. B. Palmer, Ernest Mitchell, Louis Wiley, E. W. Chandler and others.

"This is a day of large scale production," said President Resor. "Heretofore the agents have been dining on the publishers so we decided to get you all here together. It is a great pleasure, I assure you. We have not forgotten the days when we could meet you all face to face, days when we learned a good deal, but it is more difficult now. Business has grown so enormously, and complexities of life are so many we thought it would be a good plan to get you all together as our guests. That's all there is to it."

John Benson, former president, said he was going to cover a large subject in few minutes by telling guests some few things about the A. A. A. A.

"The 'Four A's' was organized seven years ago to improve the advertising agency business, before then in backward condition. We have standardized agency service. We have safeguarded the credit of our members through a functioning finance committee, maintaining a business-like ratio between liquid assets and liabilities. In seven years we have had only one member failure and he paid out 100 cents on the dollar. We have standardized forms and blanks, eliminating the old small-type jokers, thereby eliminating friction and establishing confidence. We are also considering the question of free publicity. Agency competition must be constructive, not destructive. We have promoted a fraternal spirit among agents. Compensation has been standardized as well, on the basis of 15 and 2 per cent, thereby eliminating the possibility of favoring one publisher over another for financial consideration. All in all, we have helped to harmonize the triangle of interests—publisher, advertiser and the agent. We believe that the successful advertiser is your best friend and our best friend, that he is a wise magazine publisher who gives credit to other media, and a wise newspaper publisher who does likewise. We hope the time will soon come when all publishing groups will proceed along this line of the advertiser first.

"We are hoping to establish some of the fundamentals of circulation and buying power and are devoting great deal of our energies along that line for sound practice."

O. C. Harn, president of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, said the bureau was started ten years ago and all advertising interests are debtors to it for the constructive policies it adopted and maintained.

Agents had to come to realize it was to their interest to be big and broad in their dealing with publishers. He spoke of the wonderful London convention and of activities and high standards maintained by leading American agents. He thought American agencies twenty-five years ahead of British agencies in service and conception of the high public service of their calling.

A. W. Erickson, former president of the A. A. A. A., spoke at the luncheon, saying, "The 'Four A's' is your side partner, who works for you every day and many nights. All the 'Four A's' want is intelligent co-operation. Maintain your rates and protect the agent. Service builds advertising, and that is the only sure way to make money. We have 5,000 clients who spend $300,000,000 a year. I hope you get your share."

RADIO "ADVERTISING" A LUSTY INFANT A. T. & T. OFFICIALS DECLARE

Broadcasting of News and Advertising Not a Menace to the Press, They Say, Pointing Out Recent Instances as Proof

THE demand for radio advertising is mounting sharply, officials of station WEAF New York, operated by the American Telephone and Telagraph Company told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week, although they object to calling radio publicity "advertising."

Requests from firms for "space on the air" are coming in so fast it is necessary to refuse a great number in order to leave space on the program for broadcasting news events, such as the World's Series, just finished, and football games.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover's statement that direct advertising will kill radio, made at the Third Annual Radio Conference at Washington last week, is supported by officials of WEAF.

"We have always fought direct advertising," they declared. "We have stringent rules prohibiting the mention of price, place of purchase, or any other form of direct advertising in program features broadcast from our station. Every speech placed on the air is carefully read in advance so that this objectionable feature can be blue-penciled.

"Our aim now is to boost the quality of indirect advertising. We are making a real effort to improve the programs presented by buyers of radio time."

WEAF objects to the term "radio advertising" becaues it suggests the type of advertising printed in newspapers and magazines.

WEAF station employs four salesmen to sell "space on the air." The technique of radio advertising is well known to all radio fans.

From the loud speaker the announcer's voice says:

"Now you will be entertained by the Happiness Boys, broadcast by courtesy of the Happiness Candy Stores, New York City.

For advertising of the above type WEAF charges $200 for 10 minutes. A musical program is alloted a half hour's time for the same price. The price for morning broadcasting is half of the evening charge for the same time.

Just as with newspaper advertising contracts, radio advertisers are allowed a discount for several "insertions." A discount of 10 per cent is given for a contract of 10 talks or more. Firms broadcasting musical programs get the discount on 13 or more appearances.

The "good will" aspect is stressed in the sale of space on the air. More than 250 firms have purchased radio advertising in New York, among them the American Chicle Company, Bank of America, Gold Dust Corporation, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, National Carbon Company and the United States Sugar Association.

The immediate interest of radio fans recently was centered on the broadcasting of the World's Series by stations WEAF and WJZ, New York. Hooked up with WJZ were stations WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

New York circulation managers declared they had no statistics showing that broadcasting of the games either aided or hampered street sales.

J. C. Willever, vice-president of the Western Union Telegraph Company in charge of the commercial department said it is his opinion newspapers are wrong in taking the attitude that broadcasting of news events hurts circulation.

"Personally I am convinced newspapers are on the wrong track in opposing the broadcasting of news, or a synopsis of the news he said. I am sure radio will stimulate newspaper reading, instead of restricting it. Take the recent Ohio tornado. A short account broadcast to hundreds of thousands of listeners would only have whetted their interest. From the newspapers the complete account of the disaster would have been obtained. And likewise with virtually every big news story."

Mr. Willever's contention that broadcasting of news by radio is not a menace to the future of journalism parallels that of other officials in the radio industry.

Dr. W. H. Easton of the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company, New York, which operates stations in Pittsburgh, Chicago and Boston, told EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week that placing news on the air is bound to increase circulations.

"No one will ever touch newspapers in gathering news or selling advertising," he said. "Broadcasting will inevitably help newspaper sales.

"It has been said that newspapers are not purchased when big sports contests are reported by radio. I do not agree. Radio creates interest in events hitherto regarded as stupid by thousands of newspaper readers, such as prize fights and national conventions. Before radio became prominent how many women were interested in news stories of a national political convention? How many followed the speeches of the various candidates? How many were interested in prize fights?

"I have personally observed the awakening of interest in these subjects because of broadcasting. Members of my own family read with interest accounts of the Wills-Firpo fight in the newspapers after hearing it by radio. A few years ago the event would have been ignored.

"Another instance. One night over the radio I heard that an automobile had plunged from a bridge in New York, and that several persons had been killed. I knew the bridge. I had driven over it frequently. I bought a paper immediately the next morning to get the complete account. I wondered exactly why the car had climbed the curb and crashed through the railing. The newspaper story satisfied my interest in the accident. That is an example of the interest radio arouses in the news.

"Suppose a radio flash would annouce the sinking of the Berengaria some night, or an earthquake in California. Would that arouse interest which would culminate in large newspaper sales? You know the newsstands would be bare the next morning.

The Westinghouse Company, Dr. Easton said, was the first to tie-up with newspapers in broadcasting. Its three stations, KDKA, Pittsburgh, KYW, Chicago, and WBZ, Boston, are cooperating with the Pittsburgh Post, Chicago Herald and Examiner, and the Boston Traveler respectively.

Dr. Easton said his company has no definite program for expansion in connection with newspapers. The 3 stations now operated by the company are sufficient for present purposes. He explained that the Westinghouse Company is the manufacturing organization of the Radio Corporation of America, while the latter is the selling agency for receiving sets.

To Keep Subscribers Paying

Holden (Mo.) Progress prints the following as a 2-column box to remind the reader his subscription is about to expire:

"Stops at expiration of subscription.

"If you find this paragraph marked, you will know that your subscription is about to expire. The rule among the best country papers is to stop at expiration of subscription. We have observed this rule for four years and found it satisfactory to our subscribers."

NEWSPAPER MEMBERS OF A. B. C. ELECT DIVISION ADVISORY BOARD which our Audit Bureau is giving the publisher, the agency and the advertiser respectively.

(Continued from page 3)

"In some introductory remarks I told the audience that Mr. Clague and I and the A. B. C. men who would address them, came at their request and not because we had anything to ask of them or the convention. This was true and yet I learned while in England that American publishers and agencies should be vitally concerned in seeing an efficient circulation verification system established abroad.

"I found that there were British advertisers who are being deterred from entering the American market through advertising because they were afraid. They know how much of a gamble it is at home to get the right medium at the right price and, knowing the great size of our country and Canada, they shrink from taking the gamble here. They figure that they would waste in bad guesses more money than they can afford. One large advertiser told me this was exactly the case with his concern and that he knew of others who were in the same boat. Now that he had learned so much about the exactness with which the cards are laid on the table through the A. B. C. he would lose no time in starting a campaign here.

"Doubtless our visit to London and the publicity given our meetings will do much to educate advertisers in Great Britain and the continent in regard to the way American publishers give out audited information, but the greatest good to American publishers will come only when similar conditions exist abroad and the advertisers there become thoroughly used to being able to buy advertising circulation with just as much confidence as they buy thermal units or kilowatts.

"Responsibility is generally a sobering burden even to the former radical. The advertiser assumes responsibility when he begins to influence the minds of millions. We must see to it that he realizes it. We who have built this strong Audit Bureau have done much to bring home to sellers and buyers of advertising service the fact that advertising is no plaything to be used irresponsibly, but a great force which should be used and directed with cool calculation, without waste and with a high sense of regard for the rights and best interests of all concerned, the men who invest their money in media, the men who use those media and the great public who put their faith in the message."

Ten years of successful operation warrant the belief that the principles on which the Audit Bureau of Circulations was established were sound and that no changes should be made in the fundamentals of its organization, the directors' report stated. This report, which was signed by Messrs. Harn, Strong, Shaw, and Clague, outlines the achievements since the last convention, of which the following is a summary:

1. Recognition of the Bureau by the London convention of the A. A. C. W. as a world source of information on circulation of periodicals.
2. Consideration of suggested changes in the Bureau's publicity rules action on which was referred to the divisional meetings.
3. Increase in the financial balance available to cover membership liability. The latter is estimated at $181,597.16, and the balance available totals $179,985.74.
4. Increase in the number of field investigations aimed at elimination of circulation-padding.
5. Publication of the A. B. C. Blue Book of periodical publishers' statements as of June 30, 1924, and approval of two similar volumes to include daily newspaper publishers' statements as of Sept. 30, 1924.
6. Progress in the enrollment of foreign language newspapers as A. B. C. members.
7. Net increase of membership during the year of 8, bringing the total membership to 1,849, as of Oct. 6, 1924.

After ten years' work, achievement of the Bureau's primary object is signalized by the statement that 95 per cent of the United States and Canadian publications necessary to a national advertising campaign, are members of the Bureau, and that more than two-thirds of the money spent in newspaper and periodical advertising is placed with A. B. C. members.

"Certified circulation means certified demand of the public for a type of journalism which meets popular appeal," the report continues. "If that circulation is secured by forced methods or by methods calculated to exercise a destructive influence on public welfare, a study of A. B. C. reports and the study of a copy of the publication will develop these facts. The result will be a withdrawal of advertising support, thereby reducing the power for evil of undesirable mediums.

"It is in this respect that the work of the A. B. C. is not confined to 'figures and figuring.' If it were, if the A. B. C. were a mere adding machine, then the many thousands of hours collectively devoted by the board of directors each year to the advancement of publishing and advertising ideals would be wasted.

"That this greater service to publishers and advertisers is being recognized throughout the world is evidenced by the following resolution—one of the very few passed at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held in London in July of this year:

WHEREAS, Inquiries have been made by several countries represented in the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for information relative to methods of circulation verification, and

WHEREAS, The Audit Bureau of Circulations of the United States and Canada celebrates this year the tenth anniversary of its organization and of its remarkable success; and

WHEREAS, There have been many spontaneous testimonials in various meetings of the convention from publishers, advertisers and advertising agents to the effect that the Bureau has given marked assistance not only in verifying circulation information, but in reducing costs of advertising service to publishers, agents, advertisers, and consumers; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That we refer the inquiries from those countries which have not established a method of co-operative circulation verification to the Audit Bureau of Circulations of the United States and Canada with confidence that every assistance will be cordially extended.

"It is because of the steady progress the bureau has made that the board of directors advise the holding fast to those principles upon which the bureau was founded and which have made the success of the past decade possible.

"As previously pointed out by your board, periodically there have been presented to the bureau suggestions for changes in the fundamental principles on which the bureau was founded. These suggestions have been made conscientiously and in most instances with only constructive impulses behind them. But, usually, they have been made without a clear conception of the danger involved in changing the basic principles established by the founders.

"The bureau was established after an experience of twenty years had demonstrated that an advertisers' organization alone could not reach the goal of circulation verification. And it was acknowledged by the advertising agents that they were not prepared to undertake the great work and expense involved.

"Publishers, on the other hand, recognized that an organization controlled by them could not command any greater confidence than an organization of bank examiners selected by banks alone.

"The fortuitous solution was reached in the platform of the A. B. C., whereby, while the advertisers retained control in reaching final decisions, the publishers as well as the advertising agents had a voice in these conclusions.

"Ten years of experience has proven this platform to be correct. Disturbance of the equilibrium established would, in the opinion of your board, not only be destructive of the work accomplished, but would bring about a condition of chaos, involving irreparable loss.

"During the past year your board has considered carefully several suggestions regarding changes in these fundamental principles. The result of these deliberations is that it recommends to you that no change be made. It does recommend, however, that we revert to a policy which in the earlier history of the bureau was established, but discontinued through apparent lack of interest. To that end the following resolution was passed at the September meeting of the board:

RESOLVED, That the Managing Director be requested to suggest to each division of the Bureau the election by the division of a divisional committee of five each, whose duty it shall be to bring before the Board, either in writing or in person, any suggestions which they may consider desirable for the welfare of their division or any member thereof; such divisional committees to be elected for a period of one year.

"Another matter which has been carefully considered by your board is the question of the so-called 'liberalization of the publicity rules.' In the early years of the bureau a great deal of thought was given to this subject and it was the consensus of opinion at that time that no publicity of the bureau's figures and findings be allowed except the full reports (both publisher's statements and auditor's reports) on the theory that only through a study of all the facts as shown in these reports could an intelligent analysis of the merits of each publication be made.

"Illustrations were given at an annual meeting of the Bureau, showing how excerpts from the Bureau's reports could be distorted to the advantage of competitors, resulting in serious damage to publications when the name and authority of the Bureau was used.

"At this convention the rules were 'liberalized' to the extent of allowing the use by a publisher of 'total net paid' figures on his own publication only and permitting the use of a condensed form which it was thought would preserve the intent of the original rulings.

"During the past two years there have been recommendations that the publicity rules be further modified. These have been passed on to the divisional meetings of this convention and final decision for recommendation to the board of directors will be reached by you at this meeting.

"Your board presents herewith the report of Arthur Young & Co., showing a continued satisfactory increase in the balance available to cover membership liability.

"The obligation to membership as established by the auditors as of Aug. 31, is $181,597.16. The balance available to cover this liability as shown in the report is $179,985.74.

"The increase of liability to members is due (paradoxical as it may seem) to increase in membership. Almost all publications of large circulation, necessary for use by national advertisers, are now members of the Bureau. Further additions to membership must come from publications of small circulation, the dues from which will not cover the cost of service rendered. There must also be taken into consideration the increased cost of auditing due to increasing demands for 'outside investigations.' These 'outside investigations,' not only on the part of our regular auditors but through the service of special investigators, are becoming more and more in demand.

"As has been stated heretofore, the forced 'eating' of papers or periodicals by vendors of publications has been one of the great difficulties encountered in the determination of 'net paid circulation.' The mere payment of money to a publisher for copies received by a dealer does not always insure reader reception of the advertiser's message. While there can be no objection to legitimate high-pressure sales methods, there must be a safeguard against such abuses as improper bonuses for increased orders, expense accounts sufficiently large to cover unsold copies, threats of withdrawal of an agency if padded orders are not given, and a hundred other devices which result in unsold copies finding their resting-place in the junk dealer's warehouse. These devices must be guarded against in order not only to determine for the advertiser 'net paid circulation,' but also to protect the publisher who is building his property on an honest and firm foundation.

"One of the most notable achievements of the Bureau in the past year has been the publication of the Blue Book of A. B. C. Statements.

"For many months a committee of your board has had under advisement the solution of the problem: 'How can we make the service of the A. B. C. more valuable to advertisers and advertising agents, and, therefore, more valuable to the publisher members of the Bureau?' A beginning of the answer to this problem has been the issuance of what is known as the 'A. B. C. Blue Book.'

"The 'A. B. C. Blue Book' was begun as an experiment by the publication of a bound volume of all periodical publisher's statements for the period ending June 30, 1924. This volume was furnished free to all advertiser and advertising agent members of the Bureau. Its enthusiastic reception by advertisers and advertising agents was expressed in the hundreds of letters received by the Bureau.

"As a result of this enthusiastic reception, your board has decided that this shall become a permanent part of the service of the Bureau, and two volumes of newspaper publisher's statements will be issued for the period ending September 30, 1924. Hereafter on every space buyer's desk there will be available for ready reference three bound volumes giving all the current information concerning circulation covering every important newspaper and periodical in the United States and Canada.

"While this added service will necessarily mean increased cost, it is believed that this added cost can be absorbed without increased dues to any member of the Bureau.

"Steady progress has been made in the movement to secure a larger representation of the foreign language press in the A. B. C. There is now a substantial nucleus of such publications, who are either members or applicants for membership. This nucleus, however, is very small in comparison with the total number of publications printed in foreign languages, and it is the hope of the Bureau that during the coming year there will be substantial additions to this branch of the Bureau's membership.

"There are about 1,200 foreign language publications printed in the United States, in about 40 different languages. It has been asserted by an authority in this field that a real service would be rendered, not only to the publishers of foreign language papers and to advertisers and advertising agents, but also to the American people, if the light of circulation truth extended to this branch of journalism, thereby making possible the success of worthwhile publications printed in foreign languages, which would inevitably result in the spreading of true American principles among our people of foreign birth.

"During the year the Bureau has added to its membership 108 advertisers, advertising agents and publishers. As against this there were cancelled 13 memberships of publications of free distribution; 15 publications were discontinued; 19 publications were consolidated and two advertising agencies were consolidated; 14 publications were dropped from membership; there were 37 resignations, 20 of which were local advertisers.

"The net result shows a total membership and applicants for membership in the Bureau as of October 6, 1924, of 1,849.

"We have released during the 12 months which this report covers 1,392 audits, or an average of 116 audits per month, compared with an average of 110 audits per month for the previous 12-month period."

Columbus Making Houston Plans

The Columbus, O., Advertising Club, with a view of developing the commercial prestige of the Buckeye State's capital city in southern cities, is planning a special train load of business men to attend the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in Houston, Tex., in May, 1925.

INLAND FATHERS REGIONAL PRESS COUNCIL

October Meeting at Chicago Approves Call to Southern, New England and Others for Joint Spring Convention at West Baden Springs, Ind.—Gov. Lowden a Luncheon Speaker

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—A program for federation of all regional press associations in the United States and Canada was formulated at the October meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association, at the Morrison Hotel here, which in large attendance and intense interest was the most successful gathering in the history of this old organization.

Social activities included golf and entertainment at Olympia Fields as the guests of Robert B. Harbison, Western sales manager of the International Paper Company; inspection of the new Chicago Tribune tower and plant as guests of Col. R. R. McCormick and Capt. J. M. Patterson and the Tribune's executive personnel; and a visit to the Adelphia Theatre on Wednesday night as guests of S. E. Thomason, president of the A. N. P. A., and other Chicago publishers.

Addresses of public interest were delivered by Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, on the farm problem, and by Col. Arthur Johnson of the War Department on plans adopted by Congress for national preparedness, now embodied in the National Defense Act.

Gov. Lowden spoke at the joint luncheon of the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Inland Daily Press Association in the presence of 400 people. Homer J. Buckley and George D. Lindsay presided as joint chairmen.

Col. McCormack, introducing Gov. Lowden, referred to him as America's greatest war governor, the man who had the courage at a most critical time to suppress a pacifist meeting engineered by German secret operatives; the man who organized the state government so that it functioned in larger measure for the public interest.

Gov. Lowden told of the problems confronting the farmers, of his own experience in trying to market his farm products, and said that the only way out for the farmer is to organize as other great commercial and industrial organizations have. He was glad to find the newspaper people with open minds on this all-important subject, and he urged the newspaper editors to give sympathetic consideration to the farmers' efforts to better conditions and to use devices that have made possible efficiency and economy of operation and just and reasonable profits in the iron and steel business as well as others. He pointed out that the business structure is so complex and so interwoven that if one factor suffers sooner or later all suffer.

Col. Johnson told of the genius of former Secretary Elihu Root in making available to Congress the world-wide researches of the late Col. Upton, who had studied the military structures of all nations. The principal difficulty the past hundred years in the adoption of proper defense measures has been the old bogy of "States' rights." The present national defense act provides immediate mobilization of man and industrial power of the nation, so that 57 army divisions comprising a million men, with other millions in supporting units, would be quickly available.

The Inland meeting opened Tuesday morning with 150 present. George D. Lindsay, Marion Chronicle, president, and Wil V. Tufford, secretary, conducted the meeting. Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram, and a director of the Associated Press, read an able paper on contempt of court abuses, which is given at length the next page. George H. Purcell, Vincennes (Ind.) Sun, discussed "First Newspapers in Inland States." His research disclosed the following pioneer newspapers in States east of the original Thirteen:

Kentucky—Kentucky Gazette, published by John Bradford at Lexington, April 11, 1787.

Ohio—The Centinel of the Northwest Territory, published by William Maxwell at Cincinnati, Nov. 9, 1793.

Indiana—Indiana Gazette, published by Elihu Stout at Vincennes, July 31, 1804.

Missouri—Missouri Gazette, published by Joseph Charles at St. Louis, July 12, 1808.

Michigan—A paper the name of which was not given, published by James Miller at Detroit, Aug. 31, 1809.

Illinois—Illinois Herald, first published by Matthew Duncan at Kaskaskia, between July 24 and Sept. 6, 1814.

Wisconsin—Green Bay Intelligencer, published by John V. Suydams and Albert G. Ellis, Green Bay, Dec. 11, 1833.

Iowa—Dubuque Lead Mines, published by John King at Dubuque, May 11, 1836.

Minnesota—The Minnesota Pioneer, published by James M. Goodhue at St. Paul, April 28, 1849.

Nebraska—Nebraska Palladium, published by one Reed, July 15, 1854.

Kansas—Kansas Weekly Herald, published at Leavenworth, Sept. 10, 1854.

South Dakota—Dakota Democrat, published by Samuel J. Albright at Sioux Falls, July 2, 1859.

North Dakota—Bismark Tribune, published by Col. Clement A. Lounsbury, at Bismarck, July 6, 1873.

The Scioto Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio, which gives the date of its foundings as April 25, 1800, is the oldest paper west of the Alleghenies in point of continuous publication, Mr. Purcell said. The first daily newspaper north of St. Louis and West of the Mississippi was the Miner's Express, which appeared at Dubuque in 1851.

Mr. Purcell told of the difficulties of producing the first newspaper published West of the Alleghenies. John Bradford, a Virginia planter, was induced to launch the Kentucky Gazette by the gift of a town lot at Lexington. The materials were transported from Philadelphia by flatboat. The first number complained that a part of the type had been pied in being carried from what is now Maryville.

Mr. Purcell recounted numerous characteristics of the early Central West journals. The papers were usually of four pages, with three or four columns to a page. The subscription rates of many were about $2 a year and most subscriptions were obtained by solicitation by friends of the editor. The first number of the Kentucky Gazette announced that it would print "Advertisements of Modern Length" at 3 shillings.

Dr. W. G. Bleyer discussed "The Importance of Maintaining Higher Editorial Standards." Excerpts from his address appear on Page 8.

Mrs. E. O. Susong, Greenville (Tenn.) Democrat-Sun, gave a woman's experience as a newspaper publisher. Susong fell heir to a weekly newspaper with 900 circulation published in a cellar, and $3,000 in debt. Within one year she bought out one of her rivals for $5,000 on credit. At times she set the paper by hand though she had no previous experience. She printed, wrapped, and addressed wrappers, wrote advertising and collected bills. Then she learned of the Linotype machine. Next she bought out the only daily in Greenville, paying for it $16,500, also on credit. Now she is in her own building with three Linotypes and printing the only paper in the county. She is nearly out of debt now, with a circulation of forty-two hundred.

Jesse F. Matteson, Chicago, member of the American Association of Advertising Agencies said three per cent profit on the turnover represented the experience of members of that organization. Foreign advertising represented about 25 per cent of total newspaper volume. The present differential between local and foreign rates made it difficult for agent to use the newspaper he said. This policy seemed to him like "Soaking the Stranger." The feeling between newspaper and agencies is more friendly at present than ever before but there are still many points of disagreement that should be thought out.

Jason Rogers in an executive session, discussed "How to Double Volume National Advertising in Newspapers."

Rogers' program covered five points:

FIRST, eliminate all free publicity.

SECOND, do away with all preferential positions to favorites.

THIRD, encourage small card advertisers as does the Philadelphia Bulletin, giving such advertisers positions on pages two, three, four and five.

FOURTH, eliminate differential between local and national rates.

FIVE, draw lines more closely between agents who serve magazines and other media and those who actually promote the cause of the newspaper.

Arnold E. Guesmer, Minneapolis attorney, reported for the Federal tax committee. He told of one member of the Inland who had received more than $40,000 he had overpaid the government and cited the case of another newspaper which fought the government's demand for $50,000 additional taxes and received back nearly $100,000 it had overpaid. He spoke of present procedure in the Treasury Department and observed that many newspapers could no doubt receive refunds on the years 1917 to 1921 inclusive. It is stated that government now permits setting up circulation cost structure, something that was denied in the early days of excess profits.

E. P. Adler, Davenport Times reported on newsprint, saying that present situation is comfortable, with domestic prices determined months ahead of the contract period. January 1 domestic newsprint is selling at $70 per ton and foreign newsprint at $68 per ton. Prices may go lower, he said. In the near future publishers will be obliged to make effort to equalize freight rates. Manufacturers are now striving to have Congress enact a tariff on overseas paper.

Frank T. Carroll, Indianapolis News, told of work newspaper department is doing with local dealers and jobbers.

Joe Carmichael, Des Moines, discussed "Public Utilities and the Press."

Basile Smith, Philadelphia classified expert, read a very informative paper on "Standardized Classified Advertising."

E. H. Harris, Richmond Palladium, reported for the cost finding committee urging more uniform records and a greater degree of co-operation. He was supported by A. L. Miller, Battle Creek.

Secretary Tufford reported that the Association is in strong financial position, with 241 members.

The annual meeting for election of officers will be held at the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, in February, and the spring meeting will be held in May or June at West Baden Springs Hotel, Ind.

President Lindsay plans that the State vice-presidents are to organize the Daily Press of their respective states with a view of coordinating the newspapers of their states as subsidiaries of the Inland Daily Press Association.

Next spring at the meeting in West Baden Springs, there will be organized a "Federated Council of all Regional Press Associations." This meeting will be participated in by the Southern, New England, and other Associations. The object is to form an agency through which the daily newspapers of the nation can find expression and function as an influence in moulding and shaping national sentiment in matters making for stability of government and the well-being of American people.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

ENVY.

I wish I had written that story! . . .
Somehow, when I read it I stood
At the place where it happened and saw the whole thing! . . .
By golly, that story was good!
They tell me a cub with a nose for the news
And nothing much else worth a darn
Just happened to be there, and grabbed it off hot! . . .
I wish I had written that yarn!

He was only a cub, but he had it—
That inborn, intangible sense
That could swing you right into the thing that he saw—
And the story it made was immense!
It wasn't his style—he can't write worth a whoop!—
His spelling's a scream, but at that
I wish I had written the story he wrote
When he caught it red-hot off the bat!

Fine phrases and words without meaning
Set down with an erudite pen . . .
They could never have handled a story like that,
For it had to be written for men!
That yarn had a grip leaping straight from the heart,
That caught you and hugged you so tight
You just held your breath while the Cub wrote it down
As never a master could write!

I wish I had written that story! . . .
The Cub? . . . Oh, I guess he'll hang on Till he gets the swelled head and attacks for a raise;
Then another fresh Cub will be gone!
But whether he sticks it, or whether he goes
With his dream of Success to the shelf,
He has written one story that made 'em sit up,
And I wish I had done it myself!

UPHOLDS CONTEMPT OF COURT SYSTEM

Michigan Publishers' Remarkable Address Defines Status of Press—Cites Magee Case as Exceptional—Stuart H. Perry Says Existing Laws Safeguard Society and Press

STUART H. PERRY, editor and publisher of The Adrian Daily Telegram, Adrian, Mich., dealt in a remarkable and exhaustive manner with the vital subject of "contempt of court," in an address before the Inland Daily Press Association at Chicago this week.

STUART H. PERRY

He spoke of popular criticism of the courts, and the causes of unrest, and said:

"My subject is not the merits or demerits in general of our laws, procedure, courts, judges and lawyers; it is the law of contempt as applied to newspapers—what the law is, whether it is on the whole clearly defined and consistently applied, and whether it ought to be changed.

"That the power to punish for contempt is inherent in the courts themselves is elementary law. A similar inherent power to punish for contempt resides in Congress and the state legislatures. Courts cannot deprive the legislative branch of that right, and various supreme courts, including that of my own state, have held that the legislature cannot curtail the jurisdiction of the courts in contempt cases. The obvious purpose of this fundamental rule of law is to enable courts and legislatures to perform their constitutional functions and to prevent individuals from coercing them in any irregular manner, or from bringing them into public contempt.

"This has always been self-evident as regards ordinary disorder, threats, or attempted corruption. The application of the rule to publications in newspapers was a later development, though the rule in that respect also has long been clearly established. As stated succinctly by a late text writer:

> 'The rule is now firmly settled that it is contempt to issue publications which are calculated to prejudice or prevent fair and impartial action in a cause of julicial investigation then pending, including those which seek to influence judicial action by threats or other forms of intimidation, which reflect on the court, counsel, parties or witnesses, respecting the cause, or which tend to corrupt or embarrass the due administration of justice.'
> 13 Corpus Juris 34.

"The intent of the writer or publisher is immaterial, and the truth or falsity of his statements is also immaterial, if they actually are calculated to influence the decision and thereby tend to interfere with the due administration of justice. The people, through their constitutions and laws, intend that cases should be heard and determined by the judges and juries in a certain regular manner, on the testimony of witnesses and the arguments of counsel, and any extraneous assistance, however well meant, becomes an abuse and offense if it is active enough to exert an influence on the proceeding. This is the uniform trend of judicial decisions, and for more than a hundred years no state except Pennsylvania and Kentucky has attempted by statute to confer upon the press any privilege to the administration of justice in any case.

"Even in a pending case, because in most jurisdictions this strict rule does not apply after a case is finally decided. In some states it is held that publishing a court with unfairness are contemptuous even though the case in question is out of my own state [illegible] apparently in Arkansas, Georgia, Vermont, Virginia and a few others; but he thinks state courts is that critcism after the case is ended is not an act of contempt, however malicious it may be.

"Even in jurisdictions where the old common law rule still holds, and where criticism after a case is ended may be punishable, not all criticism is contempt. The line is drawn plainly between fair comment and allegations of judicial misconduct.

"The general theory of the law of contempt is so clear and logical, and it has been so uniformly and consistently applied by the courts, that the publisher ordinarily should have no difficulty in keeping within the law. In all jurisdictions he may, during the pendency of a case, publish a fair and truthful account of the proceedings. In all jurisdictions during the pendency of a case he must refrain from publishing other matter, whether news or comment, of a character calculated to prejudice the rights of either side, to discredit the court, or to influence its decisions.

"As to how freely he may criticise the court after the case is ended, he must ascertain what the law is in his own particular state. If his state happens to be one of the half dozen adhering to the old common law rule, he still may freely criticise the court's reasoning and the soundness or justice of its decision, as long as he does not impugn its motives; but he will be in contempt if he charges the court with deliberate unfairness, corruption, or other official misconduct. In the rest of the states, and in dealing with the federal courts, he may go to any length after the case is ended, not being answerable in contempt proceedings even if his comments are false and malicious, but only to the judge personally in a libel proceeding.

"Contempts are punished summarily without a trial by jury. This term 'summarily' is often misunderstood. It does not mean that the defendant is punished immediately and without hearing. That may be done in cases of contempt committed in the judge's presence, but in all cases of so-called indirect contempt (which include all newspaper contempts) he has his day in court. The defendant is brought in on a rule to show cause, an attachment or similar process, he is informed of the allegations against him and the affidavits in support of them, a day of hearing is set giving him reasonable opportunity to prepare his defense, the case is heard, and if he is found to be in contempt he is sentenced to a fine or imprisonment.

"The fact that the case is heard without a jury is the ground of much criticism of courts in contempt cases, but this procedure is consistent with the nature of the offense. * * * The only purposes of a jury trial would be either to establish the facts or to determine their legal effect. There can never be any serious question of fact in the case of a newspaper contempt, because the fact of the publication is conspicuously evident and the individuals concerned are easily identified. If a jury trial were granted, therefore, the only purpose would be to allow the jury to pass on the question of whether the publication tended to impair the administration of justice. In some cases the jury's verdict might be fair and wise, but in other cases it would be a travesty. * * *

"Contempt is not an offense against the judge, but against the court as an institution, and against the people who created that institution. * * * In some cases, no doubt, judges have been overzealous in protecting the dignity of their courts; but if that be an evil, their inability to do so would be a vastly greater evil In the former case only an occasional individual suffers; in the latter the injury would be to the public and to the framework of our social fabric.

"There is an impression that the party adjudged guilty of contempt has no recourse but to accept his punishment. The number of cases that have found their way to appellate courts negatives that assumption. It is true that under the common law contempt proceedings were not reviewable, but at present there are few, if any, jurisdictions in which provisions for reivew are not found. Such proceedings raise only questions of law. In contempt cases—certainly in cases of newspaper contempt—the defendant's rights are substantially protected. * * * If a defendant in contempt proceedings happens to be punished unjustly and is forced to spend money to get a final vindication from an appellate court, it is unfortunate; but his case is no worse than that of any other litigant who has to go to a higher court to get an erroneous judgment reversed.

"One other point deserves mention—the power of an executive to pardon a contemnor. In practice this has rarely arisen, but it is of especial interest just at this time because of the case of Carl C. Magee of the Albuquerque (N. M.) State Tribune, in which the sheriff refused to honor a pardon by the governor, and the Grossman case in Chicago in which the federal circuit court of appeals held that a President has no power to pardon a person from a sentence of contempt imposed by a federal court.

"The law on this point is not settled, probably because of the infrequency of such cases. The pardoning power has been sustained by the courts of three states: Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee; and it has been denied by the courts of three others: Illinois, Texas and Wisconsin. Certain attorneys-general, in four or five opinions all rendered within a decade about seventy years ago, upheld the President's power to pardon; but I understand the more recent practice of the Department of Justice is not to recommend pardons in such cases. * * * I do not regard the question as of vital importance in practice, and on the whole perhaps the more convincing line of reasoning would be in favor of the view that contempt of

(Continued on page 32)

BLEYER SAYS JOURNALISM IS ONLY UNORGANIZED PROFESSION

IN an address which commanded the strict attention of the Inland Daily Press Association, William Grosvenor Bleyer, director of the course of journalism at the University of Wisconsin, declared that newspaper work today merits recognition as a profession, deplored low salaries for reporters as a discouragement to talent and called for a greater feeling of solidarity among writers and editors.

PROF. W. G. BLEYER

In the course of his remarks the following points were made.

"Criticism of newspapers, it has been said, is the great American indoor sport. In reply to frequent strictures on their work, newspaper men often quote the saying that everybody knows how to run a newspaper better than the editor. Criticism is as old as newspaper work. I think that it is a mistake for newspaper men to put all critics in the same class and wave aside all of the criticism leveled at the profession. Earnest, serious students of our society and government are calling attention to the vital part that newspapers should play in our scheme of life. All criticism does not come from those outside newspaper offices. Thoughtful editors and publishers, from time to time, are pointing out some of the weaknesses of present-day journalism and are suggesting remedies.

"In the September issue of the Century Magazine a journalist who has had experience on both the news and business sides of journalism—discusses the question, 'Can Journalism be a Profession?' This may seem strange.

"Is journalism today a business, a trade, or a profession, or is it a 'game', as some call it? Some newspaper men still seem to regard their calling as a trade. The distinguished business manager of a New York newspaper, himself the author of several books on American biography and literature, published a book a few years ago entitled "Training for the Newspaper Trade." Newspaper men in several large cities have organized themselves into trade unions chartered by the International Typographical Union, and thus affiliated with other trades in the American Federation of Labor. There are still other newspaper men who still insist that the only way to learn journalism is in a newspaper office, that is, by the apprenticeship method by which all trades are learned.

"As a matter of fact up to fifteen years, ago, the only way that any one could learn journalism was to go into a newspaper office and practice under the direction of practical newspaper workers, for previous to that time there were no universities that offered systematic instruction in preparation for journalism. In the last fifteen years, there has been a gradual but marked change in the attitude of most newspaper men toward schools of journalism. As the graduates of these schools went out into newspaper offices and as editors found that these young men and young women were better prepared for journalism than were grammar school or high school graduates, or even than college graduates who had no instruction in journalistic technique, practical newspaper men, seeing, believed, and finaly were convinced that journalism could be taught in college. Today, I think it may fairly be said that the majority of newspaper men believe that schools of journalism are practicable.

"So we may say that journalism is just emerging from the apprenticeship method into the professional school method of training its recruits. This evolution is exactly like that which has taken place in the preparation for other professions.

"We will all agree that every member

(Continued on page 33)

WOMAN EXECUTIVE DISCUSSES IDEAL DAILY

Miss Janet H. Stewart, Assistant Managing Editor of the Philadelphia North American Is a "Regular Newspaper Man," According to Her Chief—Hates the "Woman's Angle," Sob Stories, and Women's Pages

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

JANET H. STEWART, assistant managing editor of the Philadelphia North American, this week made up for me her ideal of a newspaper's first page.

Miss Stewart, enthusiastic as a cub reporter, now a tall, slender, dignified executive with slightly graying hair, is one of the cleverest newspaper men I have ever met.

Fitted for her work by early environment, education, and natural ability, she has risen in eight years from reporter to next to the highest editorial executive position on the oldest daily newspaper in America, now under the direction of the distinguished E. A. Van Valkenburg. She has frequently taken full editorial control of this newspaper of 250,000 circulation.

No one is prouder of her than her immediate "boss," Frederick F. Forbes, managing editor, who has been her teacher in newspapering.

"She is not a mere newspaper woman," he will explain. "She is a regular newspaper man; and she knows her work as few men do."

That was demonstrated to me as fact, when we talked together in the North American's editorial council room, and as I watched her, during absences of her chief, carry out various important duties of a veteran M. E.

Before us on the long table lay a copy of the day's paper. With one hand the assistant managing editor indicated dif ferent columns as she discussed them. With the other, she often gesticulated slightly to impress a point.

The motion was entirely feminine. To suit it she was not wearing stiff mannish clothes. A lace collar on a smart blue crepe de chine dress, softened her neck and throat.

"First," she began, "you must know my ideal of a newspaper before we can consider its first page.

"My ideal news paper must be always interesting. There is no excuse for a dull newspaper. News in itself is extremely interesting, if correctly played.

"Secondly it must be clean. Crime stories need not be kept out, but no newspaper, of responsibility ought to print unnecessary details of horrible crime.

"Details that add to the mystery or legal interest should of course be retained. But no decent newspaper will print salacious detail. Such things should be simply stated as a matter of record and then dismissed. A good crime story can be clean.

"Thirdly my ideal newspaper is honest and high principled; not only when it won't hurt the business office, but all the time. I am firmly convinced that honesty pays. Advertisers, I believe, have far more respect for the paper they do not control than for one to which they can dictate.

"Then finally it should have enterprise. It should get all the news and never let a competitor beat it."

Now attention turned to making up her ideal front page.

"Of course, this ideal front page doesn't take into consideration the exigencies of each day, or the hamstrings of editorial policies," Miss Stewart said. "And I prefer to make-up only the seven more important columns in this game we are playing.

"For the right hand columns I would consider first those occurences of the day which might have important and lasting influence on current events, either of the city, state, nation, or world. I would weigh the stories carefully. The first four columns I would give over to this form of news.

"In the next two columns I would put the most unusual stories. I might choose a startling crime, such as the Mount Vernon, Ill., case for one column, and put a mystery story beside it.

"Then on the last column I would place the best human interest story of the day.

JANET STEWART—She Wants to Do a Man's Work.

"I place the human interest story last, because to my mind this kind of newspaper reporting is often no higher than so-called sob stuff.

"My definition of a good human interest story is something strange or out of the ordinary, which never could happen to the average reader, but, nevertheless, is actually happening to a person, who in every other respect is like the reader.

"An excellent example of good human interest were the stories of the Prince of Wales visit to Syosset, L. I.

"Santa Claus myths are human interest stories, as are also the gods of Wagner operas, who have enchanted the world."

But the ordinary human interest writing which goes under the name of sob-stuff, Miss Stewart would have none of.

She does not care for the usual run of woman reporting. She is not a feminist, however. She is too intelligent to take this title to herself.

Yet she would ban the woman's page from every newspaper in the country, even though she admits it must be a circulation builder. To her, the "woman's angle" is a senseless phrase.

"There are far too many 'woman's pages' in this country," Miss Stewart believes.

"Women will never have any intellect so long as they are herded off, as it were, on to women's pages. They will be forever kept at the same grade of intelligence.

"There is no more reason for this feature than there is for a men's page. News belongs to the people, not to a sex."

The interview was interrupted here, while an editorial man came in with a headline for approval. One of Miss Stewart's duties is to pass on important headlines. She goes over all the proofs and reads thirty exchanges daily to learn their editorial policies.

She can do any work on a newspaper, one is told.

"I like to make up the newspaper best of all," Miss Stewart said. And when the make-up editor is away she does take over his duties.

When the managing editor is away she takes complete charge. The men on the staff are all extremely loyal to her, giving her every kind of co-operation. She is a natural executive. There is never any friction or unpleasantness, because of her command.

For six years she never took a vacation; and each day now she is at work from 2 p. m. until midnight.

When she was free again, I asked her what she considered the best training for a newspaper man or woman.

"Whatever you study, whatever information you obtain, you can put it to use in newspaper work at some time," she replied.

"Of abstract subjects, I found psychology most helpful. It is an aid especially in interviewing, because it gives one a knowledge of characters, and helps one to include in the story significant sidelines and side-lights."

What opportunities are there for women in newspaper work?

To women of Miss Stewart's caliber, the opportunities seem limitless. To many women, she believes, newspaper work offers itself as an excellent profession for adoption.

"Most women are born gossips; they love to talk; they are quick on the trigger in making decisions. How could they be better fitted than that for newspaper work," she declared.

Miss Stewart, unlike the majority of women who have taken up newspapering, has had a most remarkable newspaper career. Coming into the profession older than the usual cub, she brought with her far more than the average intelligence.

Her father was Judge John Stewart, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Returned from the Civil War wounded, he was mayor of Chambersburg, when it was burned by Confederates. In fact it was Judge Stewart's Princeton diploma torn from his wall and set afire by Early's men that started the township burning.

Judge Stewart was one of the early leaders in Pennsylvania against the Quay-Cameron political machine, which at one time ruled the state.

Miss Stewart was brought up in surroundings, which compelled her to take interest in public affairs and politics. Yet during her school days and afterwards she had no thought of going into business or a profession.

Following graduation from Wilson College, she went to France, where she spent several years at French universities, learning the language and concentrating chiefly on the study of human thought.

In 1916 war came. Her father was ill in Philadelphia. Miss Stewart rushed home to be near him.

Once home, she found she must keep busy. Narrow streets of Philadelphia were as dull as their asphalt compared with the boulevards. What to do? She had returned from France and its 4 and 8-page dailies a scoffer at the encyclopedic American newspaper. But strangely, the only work she found to her liking was a place as reporter on the North American, at $12 a week.

Immediately, she showed natural aptitude for her suddenly selected profession. She had acquired an International viewpoint. She was well equipped intellectually.

From covering routine news, she advanced in short time to special assignments. All big celebrities who came to this country during and following the war were interviewed by Miss Stewart. But such work could not keep her busy all the time. She was given a try on the administrative side, and from the start showed marked ability. Within two years she was promoted through merit to her present position.

Mr. Van Valkenberg sent her to Washington to meet and talk to Marshal Joffre. At the capital, Miss Stewart obtained the only exclusive personal interview granted by that great Frenchman during his entire American visit. She was able to interview him in his native language.

Her best descriptive story, fellow workers say, was the Roosevelt funeral. Next to that they place her account of the burial of the Unknown Soldier. And she did very notable work covering the Washington Disarmament Conference.

She writes in clear concise style. Her special ability is to tell a story adequately in one column when another reporter would require two.

One manner in which she has always refused to set down her thoughts is from the "woman's angle."

As she sat at her desk in her private office, just before I turned to leave, she reminded me of this.

"I wanted to do a man's work," she said simply. "And I believe I always have."

"You have," came as echo from her chief.

$4,178 Raised for Tornado Victims

The Cleveland News and Sunday News-Leader management has turned over to the committee for the aid of Lorain, O., sufferers of the June 28, tornado, $4,178, raised by the newspapers.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN-41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER - ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Mr. Bennett Makes His Son Manager of the Herald—Founding of the Evening Telegram—The Herald Threatens to Leave the Associated Press

IN 1865 Mr. Bennett's health grew delicate; he was troubled with a bronchial affection, while his system had become enfeebled, due to the strenuous life he had led during the long years of struggle against enemies and untoward circumstances in the building up of his great newspaper property. So it was that in 1866 he began an intensive training of his son, then 25 years old, to become his successor in fact as well as name.

The junior Bennett was an apt scholar, and in reality had already developed those energetic, impulsive and fearless traits of character that strongly manifested themselves throughout his subsequent career.

Bennett, Sr., justly proud of his handsome, manly and talented son, who had returned from Europe with a liberal education, and the polished manners and address of an old world gentleman; with his brilliant yachting record and social recognition by the nobility and crowned heads of the Old World, made him manager of the Herald on April 23, 1867.

Mr. Bennett, Jr.'s spirit of enterprise infused new life into every department of the paper, and at heavy cost he fitted out two steam yachts in 1867 to collect ship news off Sandy Hook. One of these, the "Jeannette" was a powerful, seaworthy craft, that ventured out in all weathers to board incoming vessels and pilotboats to gather the news, and always carried a quantity of copies of the Herald, which were distributed gratuitously to officers and passengers. The Herald justly boasted of its achievement, comparing its steam yachts with the old rowboat system of boarding incoming vessels.

"Two oars and a stretcher can't compete with steam," said the junior Bennett. "The shipping merchants of this city have learned the fact and appreciate the Herald's enterprise. In one day our yachts reported 42 more arrivals than our contemporaries did by rowboat service."

Founding of the Evening Telegram

In 1867, Mr. Bennett and his son after mature deliberation agreed that the time had come to start an evening newspaper; the field at that period was not adequately filled, while the senior Bennett, still in harness, and at his desk every day, thought that the management and entire control of a newspaper of his own, would give his son, "Jim", as he was known to his intimate friends, a larger opportunity in the business in which his father had made such a conspicuous success.

Consequently the Evening Telegram, christened by the son, (said the late Mr. Townshend), made its first appearance on July 1, 1867. The big Herald gave its little evening sister no editorial recognition whatever at its birth. A one column advertisement, giving a wearisome repetition of its good qualities, served to usher it in to the cold, heartless journalistic world.

"The Evening Telegram out to day," said the advertisement, "with three editions—at 12 noon, 3 P.M. and 5 P.M. Will have the latest news from all parts of the world—the cheapest paper in the world—Price one cent; for sale everywhere."

On July 3, another column advertisement in the Herald announced that "The Evening Telegram is a marvel of journalistic enterprise. The cheapest, completest and ablest of the evening newspapers."

On the 5th it was stated that it received "Telegrams from all parts of the world"; had "All the news of the day, and the very latest market reports. The best and cheapest newspaper—all the newsboys sell it."

The office of publication was first at 97 Nassau street, in the old Herald Building, and here the "fledgling" had its home for some time. It had a creditable editorial page; gave special attention to local politics; its news columns carried much of the matter left over on the galleys by the Herald the night previous, while a few cables and some fresh local items enlivened its last edition.

As the half-starved companion of the opulent Herald, it continued to lead a precarious existence, and its office was finally removed to No. 2 Ann street, where in one small room the late Major Hall presided as business manager. Its editorial head was later enlivened with a picture of a fat cherub amid the telegraph wires, and this decorative engraving was carried thereafter for many years.

With the advent of the Telegram, the junior Bennett's name (except for a short interval) came down from the Herald's editorial signboard. From that date he became editor and sole proprietor of the "Tele," in those days dubbed "Jim's pocket piece!"

In September, 1867, Mr. Bennett gave notice that he would separate entirely from the Associated Press, declaring that "during the last 12 or 14 years we have been associated with a number of other city papers in the collection of telegraphic and ship news. In that time we have paid out some $500,000 for domestic intelligence for the Herald outside the Association. Under the absurd and unjust rules forced upon us we have been compelled to furnish all this special news, gathered by our forethought and at our own expense to the other papers in the Association, who have not paid for them more than five per cent of their actual cost to us. In addition we have paid for special cable dispatches in one year some $70,000, all of which the other papers in the Association had the full benefit, and for which they paid seven per cent of the actual cost to us. The rules of the Association compelled us to give the same advantage at our expense to all the other members on these absurdly unjust terms.

He then announced the coming formation of a new association for the collection and sale of news. It would do business in a regular, straightforward manner, and, in fact, he had in mind a scheme similar to the present elaborate system of syndicating news and features to journals throughout the entire country.

The other members of the Associated Press, alarmed at Mr. Bennett's precipitate action, privately implored him to continue a member, and finally in October, 1867, he reconsidered his hasty act and consented to remain a member on condition that the Association rescinded the following obnoxious rule:

"No member of the Association, and no party receiving news from the Association, will be permitted to receive regular telegraphic dispatches from his own private correspondents. Nor can he make arrangements to receive any special news by telegraph, without first informing the other members of the Association, and tendering a participancy in it to them."

Six members voted for its suspension; the proprietor of the World alone supporting it. He had been formally expelled some months before, and was only reinstated by courtesy, and his personal dislike for Mr. Bennett was the only reason assigned for his opposition.

Mr. Bennett said he had long struggled to have this unfair rule rescinded as repressing newspaper enterprise by attaching a penalty to individual effort, adding:

"We shall, while members of the Association, avail ourselves of all the freedom that the suspension of this rule gives, especially in regard to European dispatches, using the ocean cable liberally as the progress of great events may require."

An article in Wilkes' Spirit of the Times for August 14, 1869, blamed Mr. Simonton, the Associated Press Agent, and Mr. Orton, the president of the Western Union Telegraph Company for the monopolistic tendencies of the Associated Press. It referred as follows to some of its members:

"The Sun merely wants the news dispatch—the briefer the better. Its space is limited. So long as the great dailies collect news enough to make Mr. Dana's paper interesting he is content. He has no room for 'enterprise,' and the rule which prevented competition put the great dailies at his mercy. So long as they collect the news and permit him to sell it at half price, he will not complain. The Herald was unjustly curbed by 'enforcement of the rules.' The Evening Express lives by grubbing, and fills the same position in the press of New York as the King of the Chiffoniers, or garbage collector does in Paris." The World was spoken of as the trustworthy Democratic organ, and as "one of the most brilliant and scholarly newspapers in the United States." Further on in the lengthy article it was said that "the reader of the Herald will find the special news dispatch and as much other news as 'the rules' will permit it to gather. He sees a great newspaper curbed, bridled and strapped by its rivals." The Sun was condemned as "a canker worm fostered by the large dailies 'under the rules.'"

The friction between the managers of the Associated Press and many of the papers kept increasing, with the result that in February, 1870, "The American Press Association" was formed with the eminent journalist, John Russell Young as chairman; with G. I. Bartholomew of the News, Robert Johnson of the Mail, Joe Howard, Jr., of the Star, and other prominent editors as members of its executive committee.

(To be continued next week)

FINANCIAL "LINGO" TABOO WITH THIS EDITOR

Franz Schneider, Jr., N. Y. Evening Post Financial Editor Aims to Avoid Trick Phrases of Market Reporting—Calls Acquaintance of Prominent Men Best Library

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

ALL important things may be traced back to the infinitesimally small. This philosophical truth is proved and reproved a million times by the daily experiences of mankind.

Thus, although it may be only a matter of modesty, it is not altogether surprising that Franz Schneider, Jr., when asked once to what he attributed his success as financial editor of the New York Evening Post, should go back to an extremely small incident, a conversation he had had with friends and relatives a few days after he had accepted his present position.

"It may be all right—this financial stuff you are writing," these friends told Schneider, "But we can't understand a word of it."

"Something wrong here," was Schneider's reaction.

In these first financial stories of his, he had tried his best to follow the technical diction, approved by all financial writers everywhere. He had written glibly of "short interests," "liquidations," of "running to cover" and "the rails held firm."

"I want to reach the average man, however," he reasoned, and straightway began to strive for readability, in addition to integrity, accuracy, speed, and comprehensiveness, all requisites, he believes, of a good financial section.

Consequently, within three years, Schneider gained such a reputation in his field that Cyrus H. K. Curtis, as disclosed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER recently when he wanted an excellent financial writer early this year, did not hesitate to purchase a New York newspaper to obtain his services.

And Schneider this week paused from his work to pass along to others of his craft his ideas on the making of a financial section as interesting to the small investor as the Bigwigs of Wall Street and the Stock Exchange.

He is a young man, only 37. Dark, thinning hair is parted in the middle. His features are regular and well proportioned. His forehead is high. A small dark mustache lends him distinction fitting to his conservative, tailored clothes, English brogues, and brown spats. He seems like the sort of gentleman seen before blackboards in brokerage offices, playing with father's money, and rather out of place before the untidy desk of a working newspaper man, editing badly typed copy.

As a matter of fact, he was derricked into the profession in sudden fashion. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Class of 1909, he was prepared by a scientific education to be a biologist. Four years ago, however, fortune found him well up in the banking business, assistant to the late Charles D. Norton of the First National Bank of New York. At this time, Alexander Noyes, after 29 years service, resigned from the New York Evening Post to go to the New York Times as financial editor.

Mr. Norton was then a director of the Evening Post, and, at his suggestion, Schneider was made financial editor, stepping into Noyes' shoes. Schneider's long training outside of newspapering, gave him a different view of the profession than that usually held by old-timers.

"A scientific training, perhaps," he believes, "is good for any man, no matter what he intends to do. It helps him to take not merely quantitative, but qualitative views. One acquires a habit of carefully weighing and measuring, whatever subject one approaches.

"From the outside, I had often wondered at the ineffective English so common in our American newspapers.

"Newspaper writers, dramatic critics, sports writers and financial men easily and quickly form the habit of using a sort of lingo peculiar to their subjects.

"When one is dealing with technical questions, especially financial news, it is particularly easy, I think, to drop into what is like a sort of shorthand system, understandable to those who constantly read and follow it, but mere lines and scratches to the uninitiated. It all sounds good, but to the average person it is precisely sound, signifying nothing.

FRANZ SCHNEIDER, JR.—His Financial Column's for the Average Man.

"Consequently, because I want a wider audience, I try always to write financial news in a plain, simple, lucid style. I like to cast off technicalities as much as I can and work for readability.

"Readability is, I think, one of Mr. Curtis' hobbies. He prefers his writers to throw off stilted dignity and tell what they have to tell in a plain interesting manner."

The Evening Post is traditionally a financial newspaper. It has always aimed to give all the financial news first and to give it accurately. This tradition it is Schneider's business to maintain.

Tables of the Stock Exchange, the curb, and bond market quotations are, of course, the fundamentals of a financial section. One of the hardest jobs of a financial editor is to keep down the percentage of errors.

"Our system of checking and rechecking results in an amazingly small number of errors," Schneider said. "We average about 475 active stocks in our daily lists. On each line of the 475 there are 4 chances of error, making a total of 2,000. Out of the 2,000 opportunities for mistakes, we only make about 12 a day.

"We check up the stock tables, compare them with those of competitors, and, after each edition, proofs are brought back to the ticker men to be corrected."

He showed me the system in operation. In imagination, I heard bids made on the floor of the Exchange. Ticker services of Dow-Jones and the New York News Bureau brought news and changes of the quotations to the desks of five ticker men, who sat before the rounded glass topped telegraphic machines in the Evening Post's office on Vesey street.

Between their fingers the long strings of paper tape marking the prices of stocks and bonds continually passed. Before them on tables were big sheets of paper on which the names of the stocks were listed alphabetically. Each one of the five ticker men were allotted different stocks, the variations in the prices of which they carefully watched, making changes in pencil on the sheets before them.

Opposite these five ticker men, five printers sat before fonts of type, composing sticks in hand. The men following the changes recorded on the ticker tape called out these changes to the printers, who set up the type by hand and made corrections as rapidly as quotations varied on the floor of the Exchange.

It was three o'clock now, the hour when financial trading stops on the New York Exchange for the day. Three minutes later, so rapidly does the system operate, the type recording the day's dealings was completely set ready for the presses.

So it is with the bond markets and with curb quotations.

"And there is a growing interest today in the unlisted field," Schneider continued in explanation. "The public, for instance, is now tremendously excited over public utilities and very few of these securities are listed.

"Quotations on these unlisted securities must be obtained from different and scattered houses. One house will specialize in one security; a second broker will have more active trade in another.

"It is important to watch this field all the time, to be sure we are obtaining real active quotations and fresh prices.

"The same carefulness and watchfulness applies also to foreign exchange quotations and the big commodity markets. It is necessary to find out which banks are the best sources of foreign exchange information, which have the best markets in the different currencies. One bank, for instance, may have active trading in Far Eastern money, while another may handle Scandinavian exchanges almost exclusively."

A financial editor must keep in touch with all these news sources and be ready to open up new ones, when the old get stale. He runs a small newspaper of his own within the larger newspaper.

Schneider, for example, besides ticker men, printers, and ordinary office help, has under him a man to write daily Wall street paragraphs; a reporter to visit banks and report banking news; a railroad reporter; a reporter to cover investment matters; a reporter who follows the bond market; a special writer who has a sort of roving commission; specialists in cotton, grain and sugar; a copy reader; and an artist to draw up analytical charts. He himself, besides editing, writes a daily column headed "Business Today."

The desk at which Schneider sits is surrounded with shelves of books on financial subjects. Just before leaving, I asked him to outline the best books for a financial editor.

"Financial news is always a matter of the moment," he suggested. "It is hard to keep up with changes through books. I think it is a mistake to sit back in your shop, with reading your only method of adding to your information. Instead, I go out all the time and call on the prominent men of the financial world. In this way I try to find out what they are thinking about.

"This is the very best library I know of for a financial editor."

ARTIST TELLS SECRETS TO RADIO AUDIENCE

Nelson Harding of Brooklyn Eagle Directs Cartoon Lesson—Eagle to Give Prize for Best Sketch Resulting

A new tie-up between newspapers and radio, with circulation-building possibilities on a small scale, is suggested by the radio talk given by Nelson Harding, Brooklyn Eagle cartoonist, as a part of the Eagle's weekly program Oct. 15, broadcast by Station WAHG, Richmond Hill, N. Y.

NELSON HARDING

Mr. Harding's hearers were requested by the announcer to provide themselves with a pencil and a sheet of paper and to draw lines as Mr. Harding directed, the resulting picture to be sent to the Eagle, which would publish the best drawing next Sunday and reward the artist with a cash prize of $15. The subject of the picture was not to be announced until publication.

"First, draw the outline of an egg," Mr. Harding directed his audience. "Now, at the center of the egg, draw two heavy horizontal lines. Draw a short vertical line between the horizontal lines. There you have the eye-brows and a frown. Now below the eye-brows draw two vertical lines, bringing them together in a sharp point. Draw two diagonal lines away from this point. Connect their lower ends with a horizontal line, turning it down at the corners, saying nothing. Now on that high forehead that we left when we drew the eye-brows at the middle of the egg, draw some sandy lines for hair. If you have'nt got a sandy pencil, draw some light lines, parting the hair at the left.

"Next, under each eye-brow place the correct initial of this eminent character, and if you guess right, these initials will perform the function of vision.

"Put the drawing away in a cool place tonight and in the morning send it to me at the Eagle, in Brooklyn. The best drawing will be published next Sunday and win $15. The worst gets my job."

Indiana Editor Sued

George H. Voight, editor and publisher of the Jeffersonville (Ind.) Evening News, recently was made defendant in a $30,000 suit filed by C. C. McBride, a local attorney, based on an article in the News concerning the attorney and the Ku Klux Klan.

Usually it is safe to maintain your right of way if the fellow coming has a shiny new car.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

NEW YORK CIRCULATORS WILL FIGHT POSTAL RATE INCREASES

Frank A. Roberts, Rochester Times-Union, New President of State Body, Which Plans a Joint Meeting with New Englanders Next Spring

NEW YORK STATE circulation managers, meeting in their association's convention at Hudson, Oct. 14 and 15, expressed formal opposition to the increase in present second-class postage rates proposed to cover the expense of raising postal employes' pay. They also resolved to keep the matter alive before their respective editors and publishers during the approaching session of Congress.

This action and election of new officers concluded two well-attended sessions, which adjourned to meet next Spring at Albany in conjunction with the New England Association of Circulation Managers.

Frank A. Roberts, circulation manager of the Rochester Times-Union, was elected president, and will have as associates the following officers and directors:

First vice-president, Charles E. Blewer, Binghamton Press; second vice-president, R. D. M. Decker, Rochester Democrat & Chronicle; secretary-treasurer (re-elected), Alfred W. Cockerill, Utica Press; directors, Louis Weinstock, Metropolitan News Company, New York; George Erb, Jr., Buffalo News; D. W. Tanner, Utica Observer-Dispatch; and Albert W. Fell, Hudson Star.

Mr. Weinstock, who distributes 200,000 English language papers daily, as well as the bulk of the foreign language papers in Manhattan Borough, advised the members on how to attract readers in foreign language sections. He said that the experiment of printing a column or two a day of news in one or more foreign languages had brought no worthwhile results, as readers did not care for a mixed language diet. He advised the employment by English language papers of solicitors versed in foreign languages to carry the English language daily into its new field, and suggested pictures as an obvious editorial appeal to unlettered people.

James McKernan, for many years circulation manager of the New York World and now head of a distributing firm in Brooklyn, told from his experience how competing circulating managers can co-operate to mutual advantage. He suggested frequent luncheons among the circulation men competing in a city, as the personal acquaintance and understanding thus developed helped toward solution of common problems by joint efforts rather than by expensive personal fights.

Automobile trucking of newspapers to out-of-town dealers is more expensive than other transportation, said H. H. Irish, circulation manager of the Rochester Journal & Post-Express, but its advantages often offset the extra cost.

"When you dispatch papers via beggage express, mail or electric trains, they are handled by three sets of irregular men, as against the truck driver who is regular every day. This reduces the chance of poor service 3 to 1," Mr. Irish said.

"The effect of sending a truck direct to an outside town is very good. Subscribers soon grow to appreciate how much is being done to rush their paper.

"In many cases the drivers can also do duty as road men and save both time and expense.

"Combination runs with other businesses have worked out very well. Laundries, bakeries, and ice cream factories are most apt to listen to this arrangement.

"There is a point where you can get enough circulation on one trip and within a radius of 25 miles where you can say that it is cheap transportation."

Travel-Accident insurance, as a general thing, is a good circulation builder, declared J. J. Allardice, Albany Knickerbocker Press, but it is not a cheap method.

"Insurance increased the circulation of the Albany Evening News," he said. "We gave the policies free, and only asked readers to agree to subscribe for a first class newspaper for one year. Many subscriptions did not stick more than four or five weeks, and we could claim only a small refund from the insurance company on policies that were in effect more than a month. This was one of the most expensive items.

"It was necessary to train an intelligent crew of solicitors. Misrepresentation of what the policy covers is bad. We always endeavored to impress upon our canvassers the importance of selling the News, and not to discuss the policy to any extent.

"Insurance would be more successful as a circulation builder, if there were no accidents. Persons who have policies, as a rule, do not read all provisions, and when they cut their finger, are struck by a bicycle, or fall off the door step, they claim indemnity. When the insurance company notifies the claimant that there is no coverage for that particular kind of an accident, the subscriber not only stops his own paper but induces his friends to do likewise. In such cases, it is necessary to send a high class representative into the neighborhood to iron out the difficulties. This, too, is an expensive item the newspaper has to pay.

"The following procedure is essential in using insurance;

"See that the canvasser gets the name of the applicant spelled correctly, with his correct address and age on the application.

"See that each application is attended to at once. Delay in getting out the insurance often brings a cancelled subscription.

"If a subscriber is injured see that his claim is attended to at once. If it is not attended to promptly you may lose not only his subscription, but those of his friends.

"Do not be afraid to impress upon the insurance company that you expect it to attend to all claims promptly and make settlements whenever and wherever they are due.

"Insurance is a good circulation builder if used rightly but if it is half-handled, half-issued, half-paid and over estimated to the subscriber in selling, it will act as a boomerang."

R. D. M. Decker, Rochester Democrat & Chronicle, discussed getting R. F. D. subscriptions for a morning newspaper, which, as a rule, he said, was the only class which can give satisfactory R. F. D. service.

"I have tried all the methods I have heard of securing R. F. D. subscribers, from sampling, clubbing, cut-rates, bargain offers and extra inducements in the form of premiums, down to the personal solicitation," he said, "and I believe that the only satisfactory way to secure permanently this class of subscribers is the personal call of an office representative.

"It is true that your sampling, clubbing and circularizing secure a limited direct return, but I believe the real value of the sample and circular letter is in educating the prospect and making it easier for the rural representative to obtain his order the next time he calls.

"We have our territory divided into several districts, usually a county to a district, and a representative covering each district, who not only solicits new business, but collects from present subscribers as their terms expire. These men form the acquaintance of the people in their territory, as they cover it usually once in about three or five months; know the conditions under which the prospect is living and working, and can make a more intelligent sales effort than any one sitting at a desk several miles removed.

"The most satisfactory way of keeping the cost down is the commission plan, whereby the rural man is given a reasonable percentage, say, from 15 to 30 percent, according to local conditions, with a bonus added for a certain number of new subscribers per week, or a small salary or expense allowance, and a smaller commission and bonus for new subscribers in excess of the number agreed upon."

"Old ways are best," was the opinion given by Glen S. England, Gloversville & Johnstown Leader-Republican, on the circulation manager's job.

"Sample a section for a certain time and taking the numbers where you are leaving samples," he said. "Then follow up with your canvassers. I think you must have your own canvassers, employed on a regular salary. They will have more interest in the paper and work harder for it. Good house-to-house canvassers are the best advertisers you can get.

"Your route boys come under the same head as your canvassers. You can give them the same numbers that you covered with samples. Pay your route boys cash or give them good prizes for getting new subscribers. Just make a note of the subscribers that your canvassers and route boys bring in and see what a difference there is in a subscriber who is satisfied.

"You can not get all the circulation there is to get. Some people will not take a morning paper or they will not take an evening paper. To try and hold the circulation that you have, requires these certain simple things to think about:

"Get the news first.
"Give the facts.
"Don't write too long articles.
"Good classified pages.
"Good radio and sports pages.
"Good comic strips.
"Good straight editorials on up-to-the minute subjects.
"Courtesy, politeness to the public, especially to the people on the telephone.
"Try to hold a regular press time, good delivery service and keep route boys from having very many complaints."

Entertainment was provided by the Hudson Daily Star and the local Rotary, Kiwanis, Masons, K. of C. and Elks. A. W. Fell, publisher of the Star, entertained the circulation men at luncheon Wednesday, following which the Albany Chamber of Commerce took charge of them in an inspection of a local Portland cement company. A visit to the plant of the Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., near Hudson, featured Wednesday morning's entertainment.

BERRY PLANTS CONSOLIDATED

Large British Publishing Concern Now Housed in One Building

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

Two of the big publishing enterprises under the control of Sir William and Gomer Berry are now housed under one roof. For some time past preparations have been made for the removal of the Allied Newspapers, which include the newspapers acquired from E. Hulton & Co., Ltd. (the Manchester Daily Despatch, Evening Chronicle, Sporting Chronicle, Athletic News, Ideas, etc.), from their Shoe Lane offices to the buildings in Tallis street, on the other side of Fleet street, which already house the Graphic Publications. The transfer has now been effected, the completion of the removal being rushed into a week-end.

The new premises, which have involved considerable extensions of the Graphic Buildings, have been equipped with the most up-to-date telegraph apparatus, operating two private wires between London and Manchester. It will be possible throughout the 24 hours to maintain a service of nearly 600 words a minute by means of the Creed transmitters.

Dealers do Cooperate with Advertisers in Cincinnati

No matter where located, the retailer is fairly swamped with proofs of advertisements to be pasted on his front window, electros and mats for use in his local papers, inserts, stuffers and form letters to be sent to his mailing list. Competition has put a high price on his windows for special displays and on his floor space for demonstrations. No wonder he balks and demands a voice in the program of which he is to play so important a part.

In Cincinnati, however, there is one form of advertising that seldom fails to secure genuine cooperation, hearty and enthusiastic, from the retailer. This is display advertising in the Times-Star.

The "hard-boiled" merchant who fails to respond to a "long distance campaign," registers attention, interest and desire when assured of display advertising in the Times-Star. He backs his initial order with window displays and he links up his advertising with that in the Times-Star because he knows that the Times-Star reaches every native, white, literate family in this market with a selling influence that has no rival. He knows that the Times-Star has a larger circulation in Cincinnati than any other publication, monthly, weekly, daily or Sunday, and that for sixteen consecutive years it has carried more display advertising than any other medium in this market.

Give him the Times-Star advertising to cooperate with and you will find the Cincinnati dealer to be a first rate cooperator.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

The Economy of Advertising in Washington Through Concentration

Assuredly no city in the country presents a more attractive advertising proposition than does the National Capital.

Here, concentration cuts costs—for you will cover the entire field THOROUGHLY with ONE paper — THE STAR — and its rate of 22c. per agate line is notably low —compared with the efficiency and sufficiency of its circulation. The use of more than The Star in Washington is duplication of circulation and multiplication of expense.

If we can be of service in connection with your advertising campaign in Washington call upon us for such detailed information as you may need.

The Evening Star.
WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION
WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEW YORK OFFICE
Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42d Street

CHICAGO OFFICE
J. E. Lutz
Tower Building

NEWSPAPERS CALLED BEST MEDIUM BY FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS

Richmond Meeting Goes on Record as Favoring Newspaper Space for Drawing Savings Account Patrons— E. H. Kittredge Named President

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 16.—Newspaper advertising as a medium for drawing that class of people desired as savings account patrons by the banks of the country is the best possible advertising that can be designed, the ninth annual convention of the Financial Advertisers Association declared, in the three day session held here this week.

Billboard and other mediums, particularly the bank-lobby poster, were favored by many of the delegates, and much interest was shown by the entire delegation in the lobby display at the Jefferson Hotel, where the convention was held. Much of the display dealt with foreign-born depositors, particularly among the New England states, and others emphasized "industrial mail matter."

That newspaper advertisements during the coming year would be featured by the association was evidenced by the election of Edward H. Kittredge, publicity director for Hornblower & Weeks, Boston, as president of the association to succeed Gaylord S. Morse of Chicago. Mr. Kittredge is at present a member of the committee recently appointed by the Investment Bankers Association to raise a fund of $250,000 among the bankers of the country for institutional educational advertising aimed solely at trust fund departments of the banks. He was also a member of the American Bankers Association which organized the work of creating trust fund departments in all banks of the country several years ago.

Mr. Kittredge declined to commit himself regarding the policy of the association during the coming year. Accepting the nomination, he said that should the Dawes reparation plan be continued, and if a conservative administration have charge of the United States government, there was in store for this country one of the greatest years in the history of this nation.

The election of officers was the last work on the program. The only change was the election of Mr. Kittredge to succeed Mr. Morse. Following the convention adjournment, the new board of directors went into session, but other than announcing that the next convention would be held in Columbus, O., at a date to be announced later, they would make no deliberations public.

The three day convention was one of the most successful in the history of the association, the delegates agreed. More than 200 attended, chiefly from Chicago and mid-western states. The New York delegation was surprisingly low, although Philadelphia and other larger cities were well represented. Monday being partly a holiday, the convention as a whole visited the battlefields about Richmond and enjoyed other entertainments which had been planned for them.

Discussions during the convention were led by Dr. Daniel Starch, of Harvard University; President Gaylord S. Morse, Chicago; H. E. Hotze, Jr., Richmond; R. D. Mathias, Chicago; C. H. Henderson, Cleveland; J. J. Quinn, Perth Amboy, and others. Four minute talks on new advertising projects that had proved valuable and also short talks that dealt with advertising stunts that had "flivvered" were featured both days.

The convention voted to give the "lemon" prize to Williard C. Wheeler, G. L. Miller and Company, New York, who told of his activities in publishing a "certified" check which many people in isolated sections filled out and returned for collection. He said that several actually passed the clearing house, and that it caused no end of embarrassment before they ended the affair.

New directors elected for the coming year were Clinton F. Berry, Detroit; C. E. Bourne, Montreal; Frank Fuchs, St. Louis; F. W. Gehle, New York; Robert J. Izant, Cleveland; W. K. Kommers, Spokane; Gaylord S. Morse, Chicago; W. B. Patton, Houston, Tex.; Kline Roberts, Columbus; Ethel B. Scully, Milwaukee; Wells M. Sawyer, New York; Marjorie Scoeffel, Plainfield, N. J.; Fred M. Stalker, Kansas City; John H. Wells, Providence; C. H. Wattereau, Nashville; R. E. Wright, Milwaukee.

Guy W. Cooke, Chicago, was elected a member of the National Commission for a period of three years. There were no other changes.

U. T. A. MEETING TALKS OF NEW COST SYSTEM

Uniform Plan for Lithographers and Printers Presented—Selling a Part of Production Cost in New Scheme

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Report of the cost-finding committee of the United Typothetæ of America was declared by members to be the most important business of the annual convention at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Oct. 13-18. The principal recommendations of the report were that selling costs be included in hour costs and that calculations of production cost include charges for selling and handling. The committee also worked out a uniform system of cost-finding for lithographers and printers, who have heretofore used separate systems.

Approximately 1,000 men and 400 women, representing 80 local associations and branches of the industry, registered. Visitors included 12 printers from Germany, two from Great Britain, one from Sweden, and one from Mexico.

George K. Hebb, of Evans, Winter, Hebb Co., Detroit, today was proposed by the nominating committee for the presidency. Mr. Hebb was first vice-president and chairman of the executive council this year. Other nominations were: E. F. Eilert, Eilert Printing Company, New York, first vice-president; Theodore Hawkins, Hawkins-Loomis Company, Chicago; A. L. Lewis, Southam Press, Ltd., Toronto, and Fletcher Ford, Fletcher Ford Company, Los Angeles, for the three other vice-presidents, and Fred W. Gage, of Battle-Creek, Michigan, for secretary.

Presidents of local branches of the U. T. A. organized the Typothetæ Council of presidents with Frank L. Thresher, of Minneapolis as president. G. L. Garand, of The Detroit Type-setting Company, Detroit, was re-elected president of the International Trade Composition Association which is affiliated with the U. T. A.

Howard Wedemper, Louisville, Ky., was re-elected president of the Employing Printers' Association of America, Oct. 13. Other officers, also re-elected, are: Vice-president, Thomas E. Donnelley, Chicago; secretary, J. M. Vollmer; treasurer, O. A. Koss, Chicago. A. W. Finlay, Boston; Samuel Reese, Omaha, and E. W. Foster, Nashville, were elected to the board of governors.

A program of great interest to the members was that of Thursday afternoon. It included the following addresses:

"Making a Profit Through Industrial Engineering," by Col. B. A. Franklin, Strathmore Paper Company; "Standardization of Paper Sizes and Grades," by George H. Carter, Public Printer of the United States, and Dr. E. O. Reed, chief of tests, Government Printing Office; and "Job Analysis and Personnel Selection as Fundamental to a Broader Application of Engineering in the Printing Industry," by L. B. Hopkins, director of personnel, Northwestern University, Chicago.

IT IS NEWS, INDEED

Herbert Empke, for the last year office boy with the Cleveland Times, has been promoted to a reporter on the sports staff.—Editor & Publisher, N. Y.

FUNNY, says the reader to himself, that a national publication should publish that. Well, Mr. Reader, it is news, the best sort of news, at that. An office boy has won his way to the editorial staff in a year.

Our worthy local financier, John Smith, has accepted a directorship in the Sixth National Bank. Observe the big heading and Mr. Smith's picture on the front page. Yet, Mr. Smith has been director in five banks for years past and has been written up a dozen times. Nothing at all remarkable in his new directorship. Hardly news at all.

Mrs. Jones, our illustrious poetess, has written a sonnet of 38 verses. Observe her picture, her ancestor's pictures, even her husband's picture, spread throughout a whole page, with everybody knowing that Mrs. Jones has written miles of sonnets. News that few would miss.

But an office boy, by loyalty, industry, efficiency, has jumped to the editorial staff in one year. A great thing in a life. Real news is made up of the great things in lives. This office boy's promotion is a great big news item for all boys, young and old, who would win by giving the best that's in them.

We salute ex-Office Boy Empke. If he is now, as sports writer, entering ball parks, boxing matches, racetracks and such, free of charge, he's in heaven, or we don't know the office boy, and by the elegant beard of the prophet, we once were just that!—Editorial in Payne Service, San Francisco.

Most of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Association
Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

We are now again in a position to take on a few new accounts in any part of the United States and Canada

When The Occasion Really Justifies a Feature Edition

Such as, Anniversary Editions, Christmas Editions, House Warming Editions, Industrial Expansion Editions and other occasions of real interest to the public.

ROBERT W. BINGHAM, Editor & Publisher — EMANUEL LEVI, Vice-President & Business Manager

The Courier-Journal
THE LOUISVILLE TIMES

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
M. F. ARONHIME, Manager

June 23rd, 1924

Thomas W. Briggs Co.,
52 Goodbar Building,
Memphis, Tenn.

Gentlemen:

We are well pleased with results obtained by your organization which put on the Kentucky "Home Coming" edition of the Courier-Journal published on Tuesday, June 17th.

It is particularly gratifying to us to note absence of complaints from the many advertisers appearing therein.

The volume represented in the issue came from firms and other organizations classed by the Courier-Journal as non-users of space.

The uniformly high standard of solicitation employed by your men was most commendable. It is a pleasure to recommend your organization to newspapers desiring a special edition crew.

With sincere best wishes, we are

Yours very truly,
M. F. Aronhime
M. F. Aronhime,
ADVERTISING MANAGER.

MFA:GJ

We have recently completed feature editions for The Louisville Courier-Journal and The Memphis Commercial Appeal,—feature editions that are a credit to them and to us.

We Can Handle It in a Manner That Will Make It a Credit to You

MORE than twenty years experience in this field has taught us the necessity of limiting feature editions to occasions of importance. There must be a good reason for it; a mere excuse will not suffice and we decline to handle that kind of work.

Our twenty years qualifies us to know how a feature edition should be produced if it is to reflect to the publisher's credit. And where we are given adequate co-operation by the publisher we never fail to please.

BRIGGS WEEKLY

Business Review Page

We also sell for our clients weekly feature pages in addition to our very successful Business Review. The list includes "Buyers' Guide," "Builders' Page," "Church Page," and prize contest pages.

B

A LARGE ORGANIZATION

Clean Cut Methods

We operate anywhere and go anywhere for business and are right now able to take on several new accounts. Write for folder "Local Display From a New Source."

Thomas W. Briggs Co.

Home Office: Columbian Mutual Tower, Memphis, Tennessee

Ask Dun or Bradstreet about our responsibility

Ask any Newspaper Publisher about our Service

WORLD STAFF HONORS FRANK McCABE

Classified Manager Tendered Surprise Dinner on 40th Anniversary With Daily—600 Attend—Broun Toastmaster

Frank McCabe, classified advertising manager of the New York World, who 40 years ago joined that newspaper as Joseph Pulitzer's office boy, was tendered a surprise 40th anniversary dinner at the Pennsylvania Hotel, Wednesday, Oct. 15, by his associates, celebrating his long connection with the World.

FRANK McCABE

Mr. McCabe, just 13 when he joined the World, progressed steadily, becoming cashier, branch manager, and finally classified manager, a position he has held for many years.

Heywood Broun, columnist and dramatic critic for the World, acting as toastmaster, presented a list of speakers, including former United States Senator William M. Calder; former Secretary of State John J. Lyons; Justice Stephen Callaghan; Ralph Pulitzer, president and editor of the World; Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor; Walter Lippmann, editor of the editorial page; Florence D. White, general manager; Isaac D. White, director of the World Bureau of Accuracy and Fair Play; J. F. Bresnahan, business manager; Don C. Seitz, of the Evening World; and John T. Rafferty. More than 600 of Mr. McCabe's friends attended.

Stars of "Kid Boots" and the B. F. Keith vaudeville circuit entertained. Among the performers were: Eddie Cantor, Ann Pennington, Harland Dixon, Marie Callahan, Horton Spurr and George Oleson and his orchestra, all of "Kid Boots"; Frances White, Clark and McCullough, Marga Waldron and Beban & Mack, of the Keith circuit; Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, by courtesy of the Hotel Pennsylvania, and the "Greenwich Village Follies"; and Joseph Dunninger, magician, who recently entertained the Prince of Wales.

McCabe's co-workers in the department over which he presides met just before the dinner and adopted resolutions in "tribute to our chief, F. M., for his devotion to the World, for his altruism in his conduct toward others, for his sense of justice, for his inspiration of fair play and loyalty, and for his development of our department to an undisputed position of supremacy in its field in American journalism."

Isaac D. White, president of the World's Quarter Century Association, said:

"Speaking for the members of the World's Quarter Century Association, many of whom are here with us, I want to say that we all love Frank McCabe like a brother.

"We who have worked with him, learned long ago to respect and admire him for his ability, his untiring energy, and his conscientious devotion to duty."

Others of the World and Evening World who attended the dinner included John H. Gavin, James Robbins, Joseph Butler, John Headwin, F. Darius Benham, Marc McGrath, J. M. Rainey, Sidney Greene, Stuart West, F. D. Curruthers, Joseph Milton, Frank Haverty, Harry T. Cook, L. E. Owens, Joseph P. Crynes, James J. Taft, Cressy Monroe and M. J. Klein.

Two New A. P. Members

The Woodland (Cal.) Mail and the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star have been elected members of the Associated Press.

McCABE'S ADVERTISING PANORAMA

By Courtesy New York Evening World

New York Advertising Women to Meet

The League of Advertising Women, New York, will entertain Mrs. Thomas Slack, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, as guest of honor at its monthly dinner meeting to be held at the Advertising Club of New York, Oct. 21. Speakers will be Anne Lewis Pierce, advertising consultant for Foods and Home Appliances; Eugene Forker, business manager, Harper's Bazaar, and Theodore E. Damm, advertising manager of Devoe & Raynolds Company, Inc.

Massachusetts Daily Buys Home

S. H. Robie, editor and proprietor of the Chelsea (Mass.) Evening Record, has bought the two-story brick building in which the plant is located. Four years ago the Record bought land adjoining this property and erected thereon a pressroom, connecting it with the main building now acquired by purchase. Improvements and additions are planned with a view to making a permanent home for the Evening Record.

EVENING [illegible]
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
[illegible], Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

INTERTYPE
Standardized and interchangeable typesetting machines for all composition, from 5-point text up to full width 36-point bold, and 60-point bold condensed, on slugs up to 42 ems wide. See our full page next week.
INTERTYPE CORPORATION
General Offices: 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

TO DISCUSS PACIFIC COAST AD MARKET

Newspaper Executives' Meeting in San Francisco Nov. 20, Under Auspices of A. N. P. A.—Program Lists Important Speakers

Developing more newspaper space will be the theme of the second annual meeting of the Pacific Coast and Inter-Mountain Newspaper Executives to be held in San Francisco, Nov. 20.

The sessions are being conducted under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Office Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Chief speakers and their subjects will be: Ramsey Oppenheim, publisher, Western Advertising, on "The Development of Pacific Coast Advertising"; John J. Cuddy, director of advertising, Standard Oil Company of California," "What Should the Western Advertiser Expect from the Western Newspaper"; Dr. B. M. Rastall, manager of Californians, Inc., "The Newspaper as a Community Builder"; Thomas L. Emory, manager, Pacific Coast Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A., "Developing More Newspaper Advertising"; W. J. Hofmann, Portland Oregonian, "The Importance and Possibilities of the Pacific Coast Territory as a Market," and R. F. Haegelin, district sales manager, Kellogg Sales Company, "The Profitable Cultivation of the Pacific Coast Market Through Newspaper Advertising."

Discussions from the floor will center around the following topics: "Should Newspapers Sell Tie-up Advertising to Magazine Campaigns"; "Arousing Interest of District Sales Managers in Newspaper Advertising"; "Practical Rules Determining the Classification of Advertising as National or Local"; "General Problems of Business Management"; and "How the Smaller-town Dailies Can Get More Foreign Business Merchandising Service."

246,043
was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening) for the
Six-Month Period Ending Sept. 30
The average net Sunday circulation of The Sunday Sun for the same period was 177,548.
Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around
THE SUN
Morning Evening Sunday

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

Building owned and occupied by The Daily Argus, Mount Vernon

Twin Cities of Westchester County New York

Building owned and occupied by the Standard-Star, New Rochelle, Occupied Oct. 1, 1924

Covered by the Twin City Daily Newspapers

THE DAILY ARGUS
Mount Vernon
Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

THE STANDARD-STAR
New Rochelle
Member Audit Bureau of Circulations

2 Complete Plants
The Finest in Eastern New York

40 Page Press
12 Typesetting Machines

24 Page Press
10 Typesetting Machines

These Newspapers are near to a 100 per cent coverage in this field, which extends from the east line of Yonkers to the east line of Mamaroneck including the following towns:

Mount Vernon
Sherwood Park
North Pelham

135,000 Population

New Rochelle
Larchmont
Mamaroneck

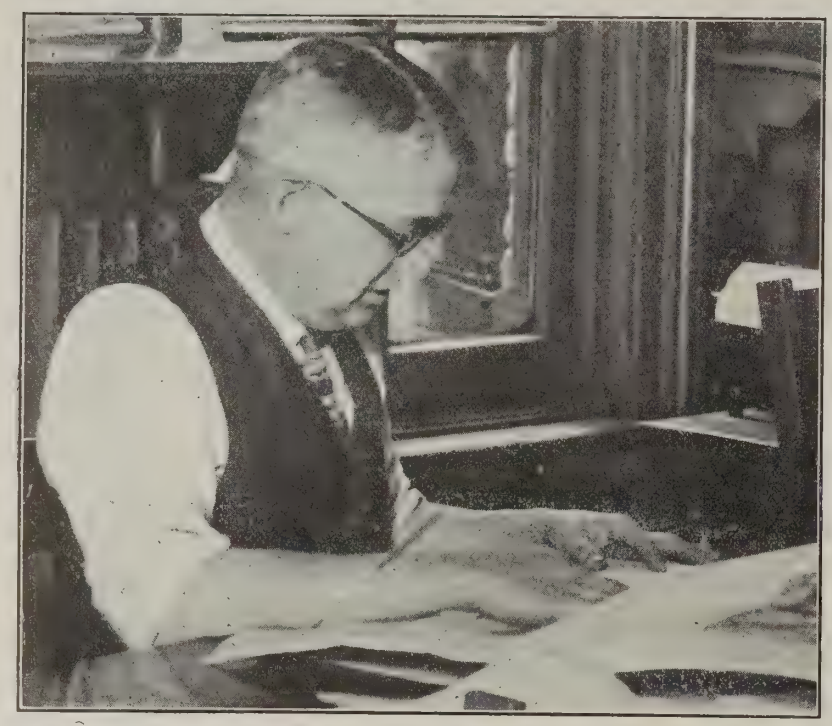
Pelham Heights — Pelham Manor — Bronxville
Tuckahoe — Scarsdale — Crestwood — Waverly

The Only Newspapers Published and Printed in Their Respective Cities—Leaders in Advertising Patronage, Attesting Their Power and Popularity. The largest newspaper circulation in Westchester County under one ownership.

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.

FRANKLIN A. MERRIAM, President

Mount Vernon, N. Y.



Foreign Representatives:
GEORGE B. DAVID CO.
110 East 42nd St.
New York City

New Rochelle, N. Y.

GEO. B. DAVID CO.
A. R. KEATOR, Manager
1411 Hartford Building
Chicago, Ill.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

BROOKS H. BEITLER—Chicago News His Favorite Literature.

AROUND the editorial rooms of the Chicago Daily News the saying is common that "no one ever resigns." But a short time ago there was a resignation from the staff and as a consequence, the desk of the news editor had no occupant. The publishers of the News decided they wanted a capable, hard working and deserving man to fill that position, and so, naturally, they chose the logical person by advancing Brooks H. Beitler, then city editor.

Zeitler began his work for the Chicago Daily News as a reporter, and his service for that paper has covered a period of 16 years. During that time he has covered a "beat," sat in at the copy desk, taken the assignment desk, done a turn as assistant city editor, and for the last few years, he has been 'chief" of the city room.

When Henry Justin Smith left the employ of Victor Lawson to become publicity director for the University of Chicago, Beitler's opportunity arrived once again, and he was chosen news editor.

Beitler began his career as a reporter on a newspaper in his home town of Findley, O. It was there he had his schooling also, graduating from the local high school. After he had acquired a little experience in Findley, Beitler went to Toledo. Later, he departed for Kalamazoo, Mich., where he continued his reportorial work until 1908. In that year, he became attached to the staff of the Daily News, still a reporter, and since that time, with the exception of one year when he was city editor of the New York Herald, Beitler's newspaper experience has been confined entirely to the Daily News.

Distinctive of his methods, it is said, is the quiet and unassuming manner in which he goes about and gets things done. And he gets them done. He is a master of detail, and a man who stands for accuracy. He is intolerant of the erratic, and mistakes are nigh unto unpardonable with him.

Despite the demands he makes on his men in this regard, he is nevertheless liked and highly respected by every member of his staff. They are all aware of his ability, and are anxious to work for him. He seems to be able to judge the ability of every man in his organization, and he permits each one to shoulder a full measure of responsibility.

Politics are a favorite with Beitler. He covered both major political conventions this year himself. He enjoys mapping out a political campaign, and knows just how to proceed in covering every detail and in giving both sides every bit of a square deal. The entirety of a campaign is a pleasure to Beitler, in all of its intriguing angles.

His chief diversion away from his newspaper work is a rubber or two of bridge at his club after a day's work, and then a drive in his car.

His interest in his work is attested to by his wife, who declares that it is his whole life, and he never seems to be reading anything but a copy of the News.

Duluth Reporters Interview H.R.H.

Where the Prince of Wales goes, reporters follow. Newspaper men who greeted him at Duluth, Oct. 11, as he passed through on his way to Chicago, included George Langley and Bernie Campbell, Duluth News-Tribune; A. B. Kaplan, Duluth Herald; Wallace Hankins, Associated Press; Robert Ellis, Minneapolis Journal, and George Gunther, Chicago News.

Newark Call Adopts Comics

The Newark (N. J.) Sunday Call, which for years has declined to publish comic strips or pages, beginning Sunday, Nov. 9, will print a comic section carrying Windsor McCay's "In the Land of Wonderful Dreams"; Walter Noban's "Jerry on the Job"; Jack Callahan's "Freddie the Sheik," and Tom McNamara's "On Our Block."

Dallas Editor Indicted

Lewis W. Bailey, editor of the Dallas (Tex.) Dispatch, was indicted by the Dallas County Grand Jury on a charge of libel recently, based on an article published Sept. 3, concerning Mrs. J. T. Bloodworth, National Democratic Committeewoman from Texas, and the Ku Klux Klan. Bailey was arrested and released on bond of $1,000 pending trial.

IT'S A KNOCKOUT!
For your next serial—
The Dark Chapter
by E. J. RATH
The celebrated author of
"The Nervous Wreck"
SERVICE FOR AUTHORS, INC.
Dept. F. 33 West 42nd St.
New York City

WEEKLY EDITORS LAUD PRIZE CONTESTS

"They're Costly But Worth It" Is Opinion Expressed at Central N. Y. Press Association Meet—Large Subscription Gains Cited

Prize contests which have boosted circulation of country weeklies were defended at the fall meeting of the Central New York Press Association in the Department of Journalism, Syracuse University, Oct. 11. President Hugh Parker of the Oneida Post presided at the session which followed luncheon served by College of Home Economics students.

Gerry Willard, editor and publisher of the Boonville Herald, told of his contest in which two automobiles and other prizes were given in a subscription campaign at the regular $2 a year rate. At the end of four weeks he said his circulation of 3,500 was increased by more than 1,000. At the end of the fifth week he expects 1,500 new subscribers on his books. Mr. Willard says the campaign will cost about $3,500 and that it will bring in only $8,000, but that the expenditure will be more than justified due to the increased influence and circulation of the paper and the consequent increase in revenue from a higher advertising rate. His circulation will be above 5,000.

H. H. Hawkins, editor of the Hamilton Republican, told of the campaign his paper is finishing up as a result of a contest for $1,000 in prizes. He has added 643 new subscribers, ranging from two to five and ten year periods, and boosting his circulation to more than 1,800.

"The campaign was costly, but it was worth it," said Mr. Hawkins. "even though it costs as much as the subscription money brings in. It not only means more revenue from advertising, but a circulation more than 2,000 adds prestige to the paper and more self-respect for the editor. The campaign gives the paper publicity; shows it is alive and doing something. It shows what practically every paper can do if the editor resolves to build up his publication."

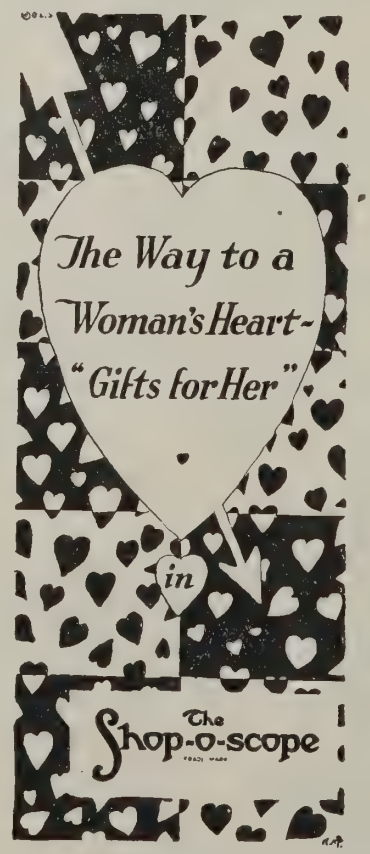
M. V. Atwood, managing editor of the Utica Observer-Dispatch, and president of the association last year, gave an address on the country editor's job. He maintained every community paper should have a constructive program and that weeklies should have more backbone in their editorials and management. He also stated every weekly should advertise itself just as much as the city paper does.

Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, candidate on the Republican ticket for secretary of state and head of the College of Home Economics at Syracuse University, spoke.

Gerrit S. Hyde, acting secretary and editor of the Waterville Times, spoke briefly about newspaper problems and explained some of the features which are spelling progress for his newspaper.

The next meeting will be held the second week in January, the meeting place to be announced later.

Syracuse Journal Editor Resigns



Wilbur C. Miller, editor-in-chief of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal, has resigned to engage in the management of the Fancher Machine Company, which he has directed for a number of years. Mr. Fancher has been in the newspaper business about 25 years. For many years he was one of the best known Washington correspondents.

Cooper Visiting A.P. Offices

Kent Cooper, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, this week started on a tour of inspection of A. P. offices which will carry him as far west as Denver and as far south as El Paso, Tex. He will return to New York just before Election Day, Nov. 4.

No man is entitled to free speech until he can listen patiently while the opposition talks.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

The Shop-o-scope
TRADE MARK

We know now that our belief in the new 1924 Shop-o-scope is justified.

Already the response from the newspapers of the country has been greater than we dared hope. And we are glad that we have a better Christmas classified advertising campaign for them than ever before.

We want you to see it, too — write for your sample portfolio today!

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.
Otis Building Philadelphia

Advertising Can Cost a Lot of Money

Intelligently done it can make your fortune. Unintelligently done it may break you.

A large circulation may be too expensive. A small circulation may be profitable. When you can get both quantity and quality, you have a certainty of profitable investment, provided the thing advertised is worth advertising and the copy is intelligent.

The character of the newspaper has as much — perhaps more—to do with the success of your advertising as the quantity of circulation. Users of space are not always discriminating. Too many, in making up a list of out-of-town newspapers, take the line of least resistance, copying from a newspaper directory the newspaper having the largest circulation figures, and without knowledge of the real value of the medium as a selling force.

In Philadelphia the Public Ledger has a circulation of 300,000 copies daily—that's quantity. As to quality, it has always been known as the Philadelphia bible since 1836. It sticks in the same families generation after generation, and no competitor has ever been able to dislodge it, no matter what he does or offers. Solely on its merits as a superior newspaper, it holds its place with no premium, cut rate or other inducement.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis

- PUBLISHER

PUBLIC LEDGER

Morning--Evening--Sunday

OFFICES:

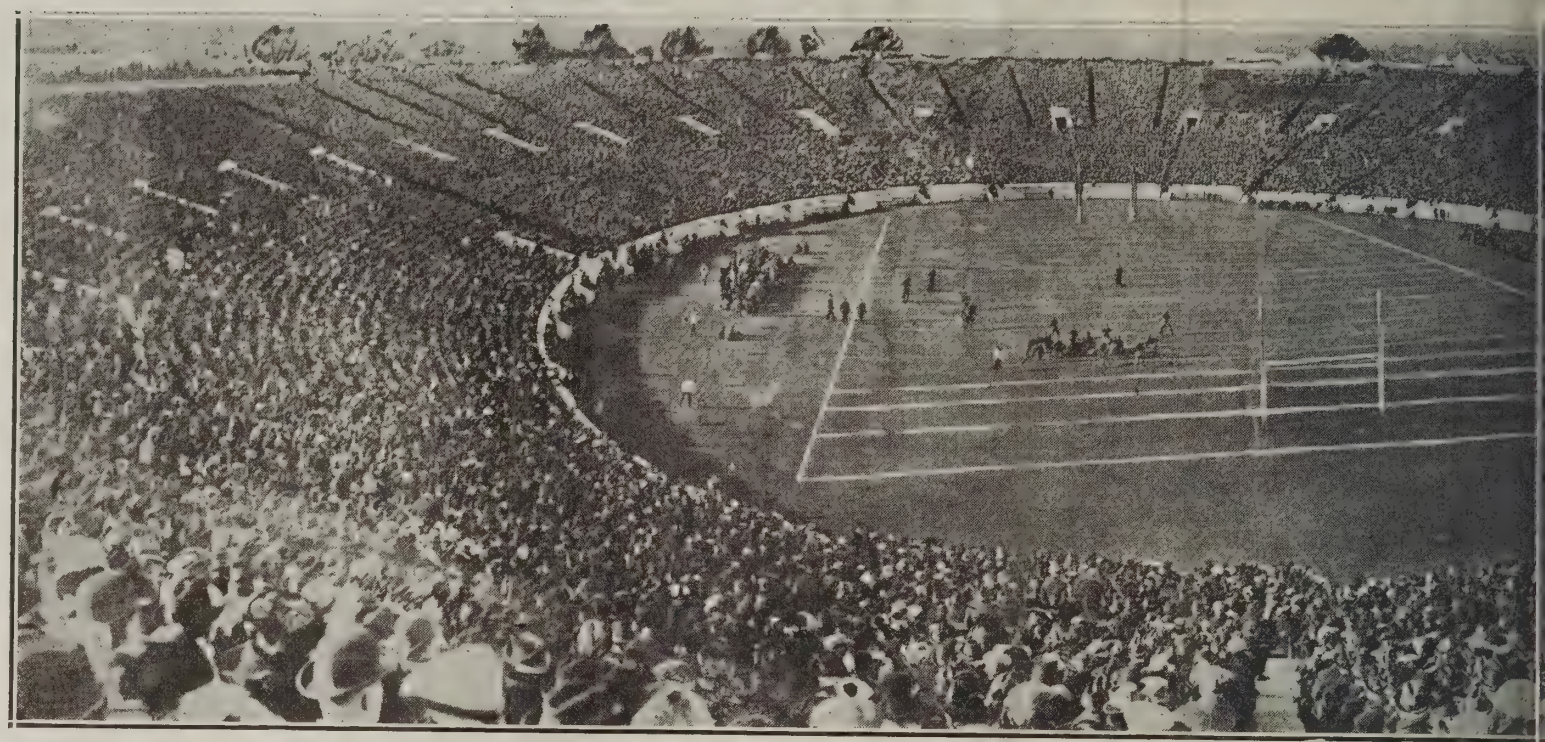
NEW YORK
Hugh Burke
366 Madison Ave.

SAN FRANCISCO
M. C. Mogenson & Co.
Hearst Bldg.

CHICAGO
Guy S. Osborn
360 N. Michigan Ave.

SEATTLE
M. C. Mogenson & Co.
Securities Bldg.

DETROIT
Joseph R. Scolaro
703-04 Ford Bldg.



LOS ANGELES
M. C. Mogenson & Co.
Title Insurance Bldg.

ST. LOUIS
C. A. Cour
613 Globe-Democrat Bldg.

LONDON, S. W.
The Dorland Special Agency
16 Regent Street

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE EVENING

EVENING JOURNAL GA

ONE-TENTH OF A BIG FAMILY

This shows the "Yale watching a football game. eleven times this crowd to net paid circulation of th the past six months.

This football crowd o

The sworn statement to the Government of James C. Dayton, business manager of this newspaper, shows that the average net paid circulation of the Evening Journal during the last six months was

666,886

Included in that total is the net paid increase of 65,049 per day as compared with our circulation during the same period last year.

THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY EVENING NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES.

Newspapers come and newspapers go. The Evening Journal goes on supreme, to-day, as it has been for the last 26 years.

Some of the old newspapers Frank Munsey buys, giving them decent burial. Others just simply die in their tracks.

The Evening Journal, selling for three cents a copy, five days in the week, and for five cents a copy on Saturday, goes triumphantly forward.

♠ ♠ ♠

This circulation growth is important news for the Evening Journal's family of readers. They constitute the greatest united force in the public life of the world's greatest city.

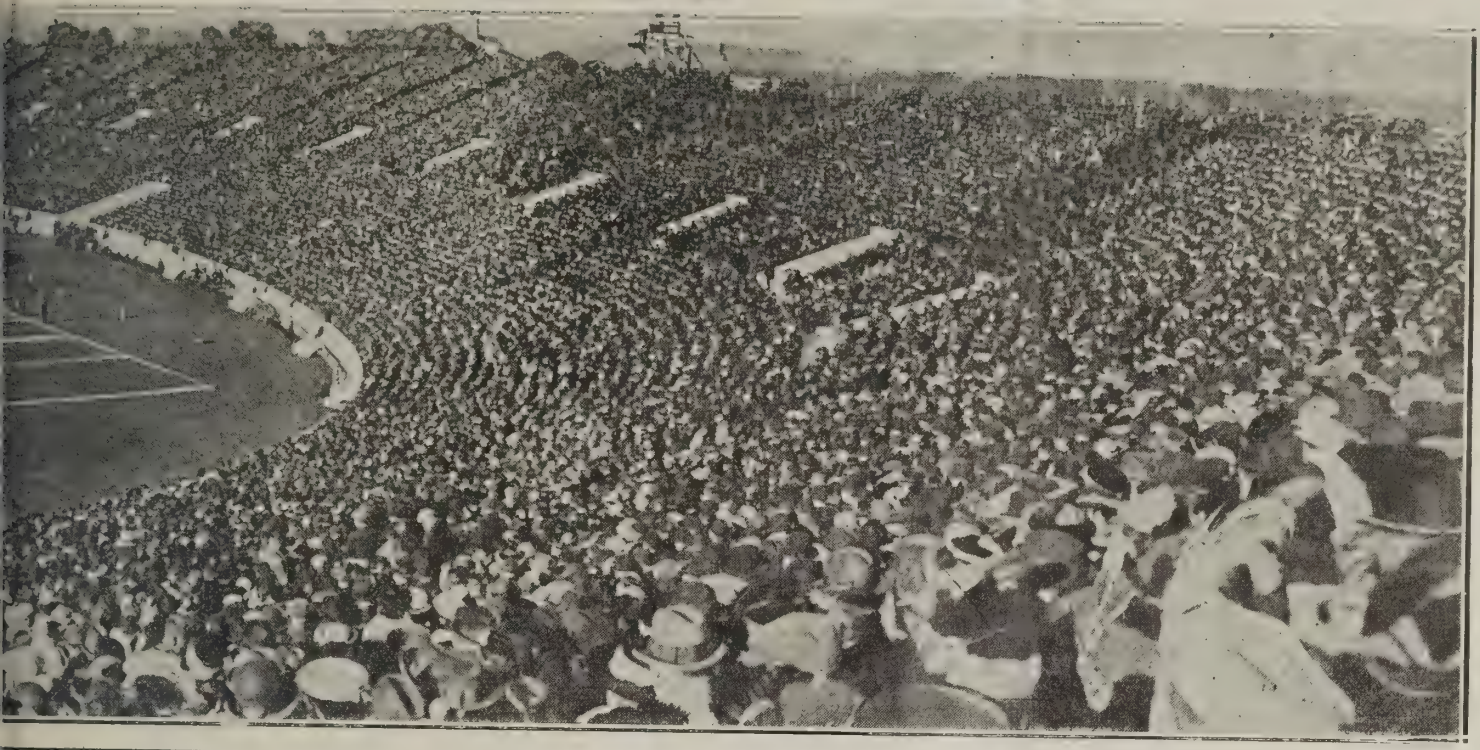
The circulation of 666,886 daily means that the Evening Journal goes into more than half a million families, IS CARRIED HOME, WHERE IT IS READ AT HOME BY ALL THE FAMILY. This newspaper is seen and read daily by not fewer than TWO AND A HALF MILLIONS OF PEOPLE.

The Evening Journal's en also to business men. To say tha are sufficient in number to pacl ting it mildly.

There are enough Evening avenue, Seventh avenue, Madis Lexington avenue, half a dozen streets, and leave enough to keep Harlem, in Brooklyn, which is "New York" of to-day.

The Evening Journal's cir friendship and approval of its r limit of their ability, the editors of the Evening Journal serve fa Evening Journal, represented in

The crowd of 65,049 buyers family, in the past six months a a year ago, represent in themsel



♠ ♠

Please bear in mind that the the Evening Journal at three ce past six months, bought THE EV else. No "schemes" are used t circulation, no premiums, no gift

The Evening Journal seeks REPRESENT, TO DEFEND TH the NEWS, and to discuss with the day.

OURNAL NEW YORK OCTOBER 3, 1924

NS 65,049 PER DAY

" with 60,000 persons would take more than l the average DAILY
ening Journal during

00 is FEWER by five thousand than the INCREASE IN THE EVENING JOURNAL'S CIRCULATION during the past six months, as compared with a year ago.

This crowd in the picture, in size, is less than one-tenth the number of the family to which YOU belong, THE FAMILY OF EVENING JOURNAL READERS.

s circulation is important ers of the Evening Journal tores of New York is putıal readers to pack Sixth nue, Fifty-seventh street,

e other principal business ants busy in The Bronx, in ed to outgrow in size the n is built on the loyalty,

, which means that to the ness managers and writers
y the buying public of the ge circulation of 666,886.
D to the Evening Journal's ared with the same period enormous buying power.

3 New Yorkers that bought opy, every day during the G JOURNAL and nothing up the Evening Journal uessing contests.

TEREST its readers, to NTERESTS, to tell them intelligently, questions of

The Evening Journal represents UNITED MANAGEMENT.

The Government report includes the statement that the SOLE STOCKHOLDER and owner of the Evening Journal is W. R. Hearst.

He doesn't have to consult any board of directors, in his own office, and, as everybody in New York knows, he doesn't consult any of the boards of directors down in the Wall Street neighborhood that have so much to say about certain publications. What Mr. Hearst owns, he owns 100 PER CENT.

The Evening Journal is run by W R. Hearst for the benefit of the people that buy and read the Evening Journal, for hundreds of thousands of readers that include all classes of the population.

UNITY of OWNERSHIP, unity of CONTROL, unity of PURPOSE, the desire faithfully to represent its readers, is back of the Evening Journal's circulation, which has been the biggest evening circulation in the United States for more than 26 years, practically from the very beginning of its publication.

♣ ♣ ♣

We publish here a picture of the famous "Yale Bowl" showing a great crowd of 60,000 people gathered to watch a football game.

How many stores would it take to hold this crowd, which represents less than one-eleventh the number of people that buy the Evening Journal every day, a crowd smaller than THE EVENING JOURNAL INCREASE IN CIRCULATION DURING THE PAST SIX MONTHS?

Honesty of purpose, plus hard work, brings circulation, and circulation brings success.

EDITORIAL

UNNATURAL WRITING

AN editorial in the New York World complains of "suggestive phrases" which news writers have used in reporting the case of the violent criminal Gerald Chapman, such as, "master mind," "bad man," "old-time desperado," "dead or alive," "fusillade of steel-jacketed bullets."

It is not argued that crime news should be suppressed, but it is argued that news writers often cast a specious glamour over crime, creating in the minds of weak and wayward youth a "melodramatic dream-world, which has no corresponding existence in reality." The editorial holds that reporters should not, while pretending to be horrified at criminal acts, actually make them seem attractive.

Newspaper writers, particularly copy-desk editors, have built up a daily press vocabulary which has become as standard as the type in which it is set. Nearly every newspaper in the country uses it. Many words have been invented to fit head-line spaces, only to be adopted into the text. Stories are written up to meet preconceived head-line requirements. For some newspapers the reader needs a glossary.

The phrases which the World has cited are but a few of the stock of descriptives employed by police reporters, on almost any occasion. But seek in any department of the newspaper and you will find similar sets of stock words and phrases. Financial writers have a choice collection of exaggerations which they have long used to the confusion of the ordinary mortal who reads newspapers. Sport writers are often unintelligible to any save the most sophisticated followers of games. Editorial writers themselves are not without little pet expressions which create phantoms rather than realistic pictures.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER agrees with the World that if newspaper publication of crime is to be justified as a public service, the truth must be told. Sordid crime must be described as such, rather than as heroic adventures.

Simplicity in news writing is the most desirable form, yet strangely is most difficult to obtain. The simple fact is what the reader wants and is what justifies the existence of the newspaper. Writing cheap fiction around news serves no good purpose. If you want to publish fiction, why not buy it from a thousand sources which are better able to supply well-balanced readable literature than is the average police reporter?

The business of news writers is to tell what they see and hear—not dreams which rattle well on a typewriter, but do not fool intelligent readers and, in the department of crime, certainly tend to make waywardness attractive to weak-minded persons.

"The genuinely sincere person can be detected as such by the average reader."—ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.

STATE ASSOCIATIONS

WE hear that there is a concerted movement in Pennsylvania to consolidate three existing organizations of newspaper men. The plan is to create a highly representative state body, which through force of numbers would provide ample funds to support and encourage worthy enterprises.

One feature that is being discussed is maintenance of an "educational lobby" at the state capitol to "protect the people's interests."

President H. W. Page of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association; President John L. Stewart of the Pennsylvania State Associated Dailies, President Charles B. Spatz of the Pennsylvania Associated Weeklies, and George J. Campbell, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the legal journals of the state, are expected to meet in the near future to work out a plan of consolidation.

Some of the best work that is being done for the press in this country is coming from sectional organizations. There are several state-wide organizations that are leaders of thought and action. Hence there are excellent precedents for the Pennsylvania movement. It is axiomatic that if three minor associations are found to be of value, one major organization which combines the strength and purposes of three, should be of great benefit.

ST. JOHN

Chapter III—20-21

For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.

TEN YEARS OF A. B. C.

A DECADE of systematic, responsible, co-operative auditing of circulations has this week been concluded. For twenty years previously newspaper publishers talked of this idea and then put it into force. It is one of the finest successes in journalism. It has brought order out of chaos. It has given to publishing a higher and better plane and has put integrity behind all service rendered to advertisers.

It is interesting to note from the annual report of the A. B. C. directors that more than two-thirds of all newspaper and periodical advertising appropriations are placed in member papers, indicating public confidence in media which are willing to submit accounts to the rigid rules of this system of audit. The Bureau is unquestionably to be credited with many accomplishments of inestimable benefit to newspapers, but nothing so much as its de-bunking of circulation claims. When A. B. C. came in by the front door the Barnums began to leap the backyard fence.

Smaller spaces at higher rates, is tomorrow's certain ration.

HERE'S A PROSPECT

A PENNSYLVANIA publisher asks EDITOR & PUBLISHER how long "fool newspaper men are going to continue to give free publicity that makes millionaires of baseball magnates," but we think baseball a legitimate news subject, and only wish advertising men would sell the magnates some legitimate space in which to announce when and where games are to be played, so we would not have to ask policemen or search through the sport pages.

There are many slants on "merchandising service," some good and some bad, but everyone agrees that advertising is not the mere sale of white space, but is service to the advertiser, and the question is—How much service are you willing to give for value received?

October 18, 1924 Volume 57, No. 21

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher,
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: Sam Bell, 26 Jackson Place.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout; Special Commissioner, H. Rea Fitch, Hastings House, 10 Norfolk Street, Strand, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulonge-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

"JOHNNY" O'BRIEN

JOHNNY O'BRIEN, good reporter, died the other day at San Francisco. His paper, the Examiner, gave his memory a black-boxed head on the editorial page, and in the lead position of the first page the public was told of his 25 years' career in their behalf, telling them what they had a right to know of the underside of their great city.

For more than a quarter of a century this reporter had energetically, unassumingly gone about the business of answering the calls that policemen, firemen and ambulance drivers respond to. He knew every man of the uniformed force and had many times demonstrated his courage, ability and honor. News flowed to him from all directions and he became indispensable to his newspaper.

In commenting upon his character the editor of the Examiner said: "He studied that grim spectacle of crime and human wreckage and punishment and plotting and tragedy—seeing it all with unblinking clearness, yet never growing cynical, never shaken from his poise or that Stevensonian brightness and sweetness that was his. Amid continual temptations, his integrity became proverbial; he never broke a confidence and his friends were legion."

The information is added that after Johnny finished his "day," from six of the evening until three, he would often be found at home playing Chopin and Mozart by the hour.

There are many great reporters, known only to local fame, and Johnny O'Brien was typical of the best blood in newspaper service.

If you do not believe in promotion, you do not believe in advertising. If you do not believe in advertising, you should not try to sell it.

WAITS ON HUMANITY

A BITTERLY critical view of the press is given in The Nation, by W. G. Clugston, who calls this the "propaganda age." The writer tells some facts, some half-facts and considerable nonsense. He condemns newspaper editors who encourage reporters to play side press-agent games, in order to hold good men at low pay.

The writer declares the average labor-union representative is so hostile to reporters that he has himself to blame if he does not get "breaks" in the news, for the representatives of capital take reporters into camp, if they can, and it is only human to lean to the side of friendly interest.

"On the whole," says Mr. Clugston, "when I compare American journalism with other American institutions I am not so sure there is anything so very wrong with the way it functions among the other mechanical contraptions of our civilization. . . . All in all, I believe that American journalism is on a higher plane than many other American institutions. . . . The only way I know to improve American journalism is to improve humanity."

If the story is too long or too dull for the regular week-day issue, be sure to keep it out of the Sunday "bull-dog"!

NEWS BY RADIO

NOTHING is more absurd than the contention that commercial radio is not a news competitor—it is today making the big scheduled news announcements to vast numbers of people, long before newspapers can be circulated. This is a newspaper problem. Radio cannot be checked or held—it is a world force, with a legitimate place in the scheme of life.

If the business of a newspaper is to conduct the lines of news communication to the people, radio is a natural press auxiliary. A number of far-sighted publishers have not lost their local fields to outsiders. Radio is a part of their equipment. It is expensive. Sometimes it may seem to be a doubtful investment. What good purpose it may serve tomorrow is a point to be considered. This science is advancing with leaps and bounds. No newspaper in America has ever failed because of enterprise in behalf of its local public.

PERSONAL

JOSEPHUS DANIELS, former Secretary of the Navy, and editor and publisher of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, is now on a speaking tour of the country for the Democratic National Committee.

H. V. Jones, publisher of the Minneapolis Journal, is visiting in New York. He plans to return to Minneapolis late next week.

B. F. Christmann, of the Chicago American, spent several days in New York and Washington this week.

C. B. Blethen, publisher, Seattle (Wash.) Times, recently was a luncheon guest at the White House.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

J. ARCHIE WILLIS for the past three years advertising manager of the Greenville (S. C.) News, has resigned. He has not announced his plans.

Kenneth Howard, of the advertising staff of the Minneapolis Journal, has taken charge of the display advertising department of the Austin (Minn.) Daily Herald succeeding Wallace Tollifson.

H. C. Schmell, formerly with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is now with the Easton (Pa.) Express as a display advertising salesman.

M. Robert Harrigan, connected with the Bangor (Me.) Commercial for nearly half a century, much of the time as business manager, has resigned. He was also a director for several years.

A. M. Umholtz has been appointed advertising manager of the Easton (Pa.) Express, succeeding L. N. Wagner.

R. S. McMichael was appointed manager of the Chicago advertising office of the New York World and the Evening World, October 15.

Jerome Hass, advertising man, has been added to the staff of the Cleveland Jewish Daily Independent.

H. B. Granlee was recently appointed comptroller of Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., publisher of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News and the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald.

H. A. Morris and G. Stubblebine have joined the advertising staff of the Easton (Pa.) Express.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

FREDERICK B. MOORE, has resigned as city editor of the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald to become city editor of the San Francisco Bulletin.

Floyd B. Rigdon of Denver University is now managing editor of the Newkirk (Okla.) Republican News-Journal, succeeding Edward Hodges, resigned.

Mrs. Clara Ogden Davis, correspondent for the Dallas (Texas) News and the Galveston News at Houston, has returned from a trip abroad.

Ross T. Fitzgerald has resigned from the San Antonio Evening News Express radio news department to enter the University of Texas at Austin.

Daniel Markell, formerly on Minneapolis and Oklahoma City papers, has joined the news staff of the Portland Oregonian.

Jack Clark, financial editor and Earl L. Almquist, city hall reporter, have resigned from the Duluth News-Tribune staff and left for Miami, Florida to enter promotion work.

Cecelia Shively has joined the reportorial staff of the Cleveland Press.

J. A. Parham, managing editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer has been appointed a member of the State Prison Board.

Samuel W. Nichols, 80, for many years editor of the Jacksonville (Ill.) Journal, was recently tendered a municipal celebration in appreciation of his life-long work in behalf of the city.

John Wagner, sports editor, has resigned from the Duluth News-Tribune to supervise his school of ballet dancing.

Bernard M. Stone has resigned as managing editor, Anchorage (Alas.) Daily Alaskan.

Miss Olive Strong of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican office force has shifted over into the editorial room where she is now a full fledged reporter.

Bernard Campbell, Minneapolis and St. Paul newspaper man is now telegraph editor of the Duluth News Tribune.

Christopher Messerschmidt, formerly State House correspondent for a number of New Jersey papers, is now State House reporter for the Trenton Times.

Max Murray of the Melbourne (Australia) Herald staff has left on a trip around the world.

Alton H. Blackinton, official staff photographer of the Boston Herald, has been engaged to conduct an evening class in photography at the Boston Young Men's Christian Union.

Miss Grace McDonald, society Editor, Duluth Herald is taking the special course in secretarial work at Columbia University. She is succeeded by Miss Charlotte Marvin.

Hjalmar Nordale has resigned as city editor, Fairbanks (Alaska) News-Miner, and is making arrangements for the establishment of a new newspaper in Fairbanks.

Fayette Copeland, Jr., recently assistant to the Sunday editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, has returned to the University of Oklahoma, to become publicity director for the university and assistant professor in journalism.

Charles Eugene Banks, formerly a member of the editorial staff, Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer, and more recently, editor, Hilo (H. T.) Tribune-Herald, has returned to Seattle to make his home.

Eddie Brietz, sports editor, Charlotte (N. C.) News, and Mrs. Brietz are parents of a daughter, Marjorie Morrow Brietz.

Arthur West, until recently sports editor of the China Press of Shanghai, has become sports editor of the Shanghai Times.

James L. Butts, formerly of the Chicago Daily News, but lately of the staff of the China Press of Shanghai, has joined the staff of the North China Daily News.

F C. Wade (Felix Penne), columnist, Vancouver (B. C.) Sun, has been elected president of the Dickens Fellowship of Vancouver, B. C., for the fourth consecutive time.

J. James Floyd, city hall reporter for the New London (Conn.) Day, recently won the Republican nomination for Representative to the General Assembly from the town of Waterford.

Henry McBride has resumed writing art criticism for the New York Sun.

Harlan S. Miller, of the New York Evening Post, who has been covering Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.'s, campaign tour for governor through New York state, returned in time to cover the arrival of the ZR-3 at Lakehurst this week.

Charles P. Sweeney has rejoined the reportorial staff of the New York World. During the summer he operated a press bureau at Atlantic City.

Don Marquis, conductor of "The Lantern" in the New York Herald Tribune, is running a comedy entitled "A Friend to Dinner" serially in his column.

MARRIED

DONALD BEDELL WOOTTON, caricaturist for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, to Miss Ruth Ormsby Ellison, at Windsor, Ont., recently.

John J. Mahoney of the editorial staff, Boston Traveler to Miss Margaret C. Reardon of Wakefield, Oct. 12.

Floyd C. Westerfield, associate publisher of the Springfield (Ore.) News to Velma Rupert, society editor of the Eugene (Ore.) Daily Guard.

Robert Poisall, sports editor, Peoria (Ill.) Journal-Transcript, to Miss Alice McCullough in Freeport, Ill.

Melvin John Mecherle, of the Chicago Tribune staff to Miss Emily Denton of Urbana, Ill., in Urbana, Oct. 9.

Stanley Boyles, Moline (Ill.) Dispatch printer, to Miss Violet Peterson, proofreader in the Moline Plow printing department, Oct. 5.

Merwin E. Brown, Wheaton, Ill., member of the Chitchfield Advertising Company, Chicago, to Miss Marjorie Stephens Batavia, Ill., Oct. 4.

William E. Cox, advertising manager for the Danville (Ill.) Morning Press, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Jenkins, Danville, Oct. 4.

Eldo Lancaster, advertising department Peoria (Ill.) Star, to Miss Gladys Long, Oct. 5.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

FOSTER GILROY was this week appointed advertising manager of the New York World and Evening World.

FOSTER GILROY

He had been acting in this capacity since the first of this year, during the illness and since the death of Hal Fink, late advertising manager. Gilroy has been with the World four years.

A graduate in 1903 from Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, where he studied banking, Gilroy entered newspaper work in 1904 as a reporter on the staff of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. The next year he transferred to the Philadelphia North American, where he remained as reporter three years.

His first advertising experience was on the Philadelphia Record, from which he went to the Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency. He came to New York in 1908 to be connected with the Frank Munsey Company, as promotion manager for all the Munsey magazines and newspapers.

After five years with Munsey, Gilroy was appointed general manager of Puck, when that magazine was purchased by Nathan Straus in 1913. He continued as general manager and was also made editor-in-chief during the time Puck was owned by William Randolph Hearst.

In 1918, the year Puck was discontinued, Gilroy started organization of the chain of Old Colony clubs and was publisher of the Old Colony Magazine. He went to Europe, establishing clubs in London and Paris.

He became connected with the World in 1920 and was made assistant advertising manager, Jan. 1, 1924.

HOLDING NEW POST

W. C. FORMAN, from copy desk, Duluth News-Tribune, to rewrite man, Duluth Herald.

W. B. Ragsdale and Osborne Zuber, from staff, Charlotte (N. C.) Observer to staff, Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Gabe Caffery, from Duluth News Tribune, to Davenport (Ia.) Times.

Miss Sarah F. Halliburton, from staff, Independence (Mo.) Examiner, to editor, Neosho (Mo.) Times.

Ralph C. Edgar, from telegraph editor of the Trenton State Gazette, to Trenton Times staff.

Harry Coady Lindop from sports writer, Trenton (N. J.) Times, to staff, Trenton State Gazette.

Morris J. Harris from staff, Tokyo Japan Advertiser, to Manila (P. I.) Bulletin.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

CHATTANOOGA TIMES has installed a Scott multilunit sextuple press. Composing, sterotype and editorial rooms have been removed to the annex, rooms formerly occupied being converted into offices.

Danville (Va.) Register and Bee are now located in their new building, erected and dedicated as a memorial to a former publisher, Rorer A. James.

Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Southeast Missourian celebrated its 20th anniversary October 3, by breaking ground for its new building, which will be fireproof and embody the latest developments in newspaper plant construction.

Forest City (N. C.) Courier has installed a new model 14 linotype.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

QUINCY (Mass.) JOURNAL, a weekly, has been sold by Simon Swig, former Boston banker, to Perley Barbour and Everett Prout, Quincy businessman.

W. E. Phipps, publisher of the Medford (Ore.) Clarion, has sold that newspaper to L. B. Tuttle, recently editor of the Ashland Tidings, and James W. Young of Medford.

A. W. McBride has acquired the half interest in the Iowa Falls (Ia.) Sentinel, held by F. M. O'Furey, who bought into the paper five months ago.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

CHESTER H. HUTCHINGS, linotype operator on the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram News, has been appointed mechanical superintendent of the Bangor (Me.) Daily Commercial.

The entire lower part of this building is occupied by one of the greatest educational institutions in the world—the free information service maintained by a large group of American newspapers for the free use of the public. Any editor who wants to share in this service should address Frederic J. Haskin, Washington, D. C.

ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

SAN FRANCISCO PRESS CLUB recently elected J. L. Cauthorn, business manager of the Daily News president, succeeding Leon J. Pinkston. Other new officers are: James Hatlo, vice-president; Frank Connolly, treasurer; Thomas Bellew, librarian, and Frank Fisher, Ralph Cromwell and Abe Kemp, directors.

Scranton (Pa.) Times Twenty-Five Year Club held its annual banquet Oct. 10. J. E. Bradley, business manager of the Times, was named president, John D. Keator, managing editor, was host at this year's banquet. Edward Cullen, circulation manager, was admitted to membership.

Greenville (Tex.) Press Club, recently elected Fred Horton, business manager of the Greenville Evening Banner, president, and J. F. Bland, proprietor of the Bland Printing Company of Greenville, vice-president.

Detroit Adcraft School, under the auspices of the Detroit Adcraft Club, opened its winter sessions Oct. 13, with a lecture by B. C. Forbes. The course is provided at cost, the club making no profit. Included among the faculty are Verne E. Burnett, secretary of the General Motors Advertising Committee, and Robert R. Thien of MacManus, Inc.

Minnesota Associated Press Editorial Association held its semi-annual meeting at St. Cloud recently. Frank A. Day, publisher of the Fairmont Daily Sentinel, president, presided. Fred Schilplin, editor of the St. Cloud Times, gave a dinner to the members.

Massachusetts Press Association members will visit the town of Weymouth, Mass., on Oct 20 and inspect the plant of the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript as the guests of Carl F. Prescott, secretary of the Association.

San Francisco Women's Press Club will give a benefit performance Oct. 25, the proceeds of which will be used to furnish club headquarters in the downtown district.

Business Editors' Association of Chicago discussed "Contributions, How to Get Them and When and How Much to Pay for Them," at a luncheon meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 14, at the Great Northern Hotel. Eugene Whitmore of Sales Management, C. B. Partridge of the Dry Goods Reporter, and Ralph E. Turner of Power Plant Engineering led the discussion.

Catholic Writers' Guild of America held a reception Oct. 15, at the Guild House, New York, in honor of Cardinal Hayes. Thomas F. Woodlock, president, in welcoming the Cardinal, declared the organization had progressed rapidly along the constructive lines suggested by the Cardinal when the guild was established several years ago. His Eminence deplored the present tendency to play up the power of money in articles written for publication.

New York Advertising Club on Thursday night began its annual course in advertising and selling. H. H. Duete, general manager of the Borden Sales Company, spoke on "Can Your Product Be Advertised?"

Association of Foreign Press Correspondents will hold a dinner at the City Club, New York, Oct. 30, at 7 p. m. P. W. Wilson is president.

SCHOOLS

RESIGNATIONS among the U. of Missouri Journalism faculty have brought about the following changes: Assistant Professor E. K. Johnston, formerly an instructor in the University of Wisconsin, taking the place of Don D. Paterson, now with the Curtis Publishing Company at Chicago. Instructor E. W. Sharp, formerly on the staffs of several Oklahoma newspapers, taking the place of Francis Misselwitz, now on the staff of the Tokio (Japan) Advertiser; Instructor T. C. Morelock taking the place of Miss Marian Babb, who has recently become Mrs. Frank Beard of Warrenton, Mo.

H. H. Herbert, director of the University of Oklahoma School of Journalism, has returned to the university after a year's leave of absence spent at the University of Wisconsin, studying for a doctor's degree in journalism.

Under the direction of William H. McLeod, advertising manager of William Filene's Sons Co., Boston, a course in retail store advertising has been inaugurated at Boston University.

Eighteen Holy Cross college seniors have enrolled in the course of journalism which has been established at the college this year.

Paul Fung, part owner of the Canton (China) Times and formerly with the Kansas City Star, has entered the School of Journalism, University of Missouri.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

AT the second annual convention of the State Press Field Manager's Association, at Salt Lake City, recently Edwin A. Bemis, editor and publisher of the Littleton (Col.) Independent, was re-elected president of the organization.

EDWIN A. BEMIS

Six years ago Mr. Bemis entered the newspaper field practically unknown. Although as a boy he had worked as "devil" in the office of the newspaper which he now owns, yet there was an interval of several years between that time and when he actually entered the newspaper game.

He early realized the value of newspaper organization, and immediately threw his energies toward building a better editorial association for Colorado. Ideas which he advanced were soon adopted by the state association, and the job of organizing district newspaper associations was delegated to him.

The Central District Editorial Association is a result of his initial step in this direction. This organization meets regularly every month with a constantly increasing membership.

Bemis' success in this undertaking, and his enthusiasm for association work was responsible for his election as president of the Colorado Editorial Association in 1923.

Being cognizant of the value of a field manager, Bemis made the establishment of such an office his aim for the year. He was not aware, however, that his success in handling association affairs would make the editors insist that he be the man to fill such a position. But in 1923 a delegation of association members surprised him in his office and delegated him to fill the place of press manager.

Knowing that an early exchange of ideas among field men would also be of great value, Mr. Bemis issued a call to all state press managers to meet in Denver. This first meeting was held in September, 1923, and Bemis was elected president of the newly made national organization.

In addition to acting as president of this National Press Manager's Association, and serving as field man for his own state editors, he is carrying the responsibility of operating his own newspaper. To say the least Bemis is a busy man.

WITH THE SPECIALS

F. WILLIAM GRUMMAN the son of Fred Grumman of the Merganthaler Linotype Company has joined the New York office of the George B. David Company newspaper representatives. Mr. Grumman will cover a division of the New York agencies.

New Jersey Newspapers, Inc., has been appointed national representatives for the Ventnor (N. J.) News.

Benjamin & Kentnor Company, publishers' representative, has been appointed to represent the Clarksville (Tenn.) Leaf-Chronicle.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

HERBERT REED, known as "Right Wing", formerly on the sporting staff of the New York Evening Post, has joined the staff of Universal Service, and will have a roving assignment this fall covering as many important football games as possible. Reed, who was graduated from Cornell, Class of 1899, where he played with the football scrubs, has been in close touch with the gridiron game for a quarter of a century.

Gus Robbins, formerly of the United Press bureau at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is temporarily relieving Ed Sweeney, manager of the Buffalo, N. Y., bureau. Robbins will report to the New York office shortly.

Robert L. Getty, for the last 18 months city editor of the Monmouth (Ill.) Atlas, has joined the Associated Press in Denver, Col.

Obituary

EDWARD J. MAHER, for many years a printer on the New York Evening Journal, and for 20 years a delegate of the New York Web Printing Pressmen's Union, died recently.

THOMAS J. SILK, 47, for 20 years connected with the circulation and job printing departments of the Brooklyn Eagle, died recently at his home in Brooklyn.

ALFRED NOYES AMBROSE, publisher of the Norwood (Mass.) Messenger, which he founded, and for many years Norwood correspondent of the Boston Globe, died at his home in that town recently.

JAMES BAYLES, formerly managing editor of the Lowell (Mass.) Courier-Citizen and in newspaper work more than 30 years, died recently at his home in Tyngsboro, Mass.

DR. GEORGE GIFFORD, for many years editor of the old Portland (Me.) Press, and recently in the United States consular service abroad, died at Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 6, as the result of injuries sustained in a fall last April.

EDWIN WILSON MORSE, 69, editor and writer, for the last few years literary advisor of Charles Scribner's Sons, died in New York, Oct. 11. He had been on the staff of the New York Tribune five years. Later he was editorial correspondent of the Boston Transcript, and music editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser.

CHARLES L. MORRIS, 64, for more than 20 years a member of the Boston Globe staff, located in the New York office of that paper, died on Monday evening last at the home of his sister in Geneva, Ga. Morris was a native of Georgia and held a number of positions in the South before coming to New York. For a number of years he worked as a telegrapher for the Associated Press in this city, later joining the staff of the Boston Globe.

A Dependable Organization

Mr. Wm. V. Jones, General Manager of the Utica, N. Y. DAILY PRESS has this to say:

"It seems strange to us that more newspapers do not use your service. It has proved very satisfactory to us. We think you should without much effort be able to get many more papers to use your service. The more it is used the more it will be appreciated."

You will appreciate these remarks more, after you have joined our service. Why not—at once?

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE

Why Queens County News Likes Its Ludlow

MR. Eugene E. Early, publisher of The Queens County News, writes: "We have just published our annual automobile show number consisting of sixty-four pages. This edition is the largest ever published by any newspaper in the history of Queens County—'New York's Fastest-growing Borough.'

"Such an achievement would have been utterly impossible without the Ludlow, and in fairness to you we feel that it is only right that we should tell you what invaluable assistance the Ludlow has provided."

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue CHICAGO

San Francisco Hearst Bldg. — World Bldg. New York

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

THE Guaranty Development Company of New Orleans, La., operating the Hotel Roosevelt, the Hotel Bienville and West End, have appointed Bauerlein, Incorporated, New Orleans advertising agency, to handle their advertising.

A newspaper campaign in selected cities and a special magazine campaign will be released Nov. 1.

Charles B. Cory, Jr., and Harry E. Caylor have organized an advertising agency under the name of Cory & Caylor, Inc., with offices at 360 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago, and will furnish a complete advertising service to corporations, associated manufacturers and distributors. Mr. Cory was formerly vice-president of a Chicago advertising agency specializing in industrial association advertising, and Mr. Caylor has been in advertising and public relations work since resigning as manager of the Central Division of the United Press Associations in Chicago.

Charles V. Duggan, formerly with Collins-Kirk, Inc., Chicago, now is associated with Brennan-Eley Company, Chicago.

F. A. Baker, formerly with Guenther-Bradford Company, Chicago, has joined Charles H. Fuller Company, Chicago.

W. R. Townsend and G. A. Cummings, who conducted separate advertising agencies in Oakland, Cal., have formed a partnership under the name of United Advertising Service. An office has been opened in the Lyon Building, Oakland.

C. C. Younggreen, vice-president and general manager of Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc., Milwaukee, was recently unanimously elected president for the second term of the Milwaukee Advertising Club.

Eugene D. Barr, formerly editor of Southwest Magazine, San Antonio, and later of the Houston Dispatch reportorial staff, has taken charge of the service department of the Beek Advertising Agency at Houston.

John Raphael Riley, formerly head of the industrial department of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, has gone to Houston to join the organization of S. Dean Wasson, advertising counsellor.

E. F. Jessen has purchased the interests of Fred Wilson in the Wilson-Jessen Advertising Syndicate of Anchorage, Alaska. This company handles all coach yard advertising on the Alaska Railroad and also the McKinley National Park News Agency on that line: Hereafter the company will be known as the E. F. Jessen Advertising Company.

August L. Kissel has joined the Ethridge Company, New York, as a member of their art staff.

A. J. McElhone has been appointed vice-president of the Nichols-Evens Company, Cleveland Discount Bldg., Cleveland, in which capacity he will still direct the advertising of the Eaton Axle & Spring Company, Cleveland, of which he has been advertising manager.

Granville C. Sewell has joined the staff of the Chambers Agency, Inc., advertising, New Orleans, New York, and Louisville. He was formerly connected with the Adamars Agency, St. Louis, and with the Reddick Agency, before it was absorbed by the Dorland Agency.

F. F. Frothingham, Oct. 1, joined the executive staff of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., advertising, New York, and will be located at the Boston office. Frothingham was formerly general sales manager of the American Felt Company, and until recently was president of the Boston Belting Sales Company. At one time he was publication manager of the Ladies' Home Journal in New England.

Ray Woltz, formerly with Critchfield & Co., Chicago, is now connected with the Brandt Advertising Agency, Chicago.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Local vs. Telegraph News

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Underestimating the value of local news and overestimating the importance of telegraph news is a mistake many editors of small daily papers make. They seem to have a special reverence for any story that comes over the wire and little appreciation for the things that take place in the home town.

One reason for it of course is that on most small dailies the editor, who superintendents the makeup, is also telegraph editor. And just as the police reporter often gets the idea that police news is the only thing and the society reporter becomes obsessed with the idea that society news is the most important part of the paper, so the man handling the telegraph copy comes to feel that telegraph news is the big news. But often it is not and should not be given front-page preference over local stories.

If you do not believe that many editors make this mistake, watch three or four small dailies for a few days. You will find telegraph and local news of similar events; and in many cases the telegraph story will be given the position of preference.

Not long ago, one Southern California daily, which has been publishing for more than 30 years, got the first story of a mysterious murder committed a short distance from the city, where the newspaper was located. The man murdered was a white man, a respected citizen of the community. But the newspaper placed the story on page four, although the reporter had his copy in at 9 a. m., and the paper did not go to press until 2:30 p. m. This of course is an unusual example of an editor's failure to appreciate local news value. But many small dailies make the same mistake in a smaller degree every day.

The editor, who failed to appreciate the local murder story just mentioned, has been known to place on the front page telegraph stories of some slightly known Mexican being shot or stabbed.

Both reporters and readers resent having local news under-estimated. Featuring worthwhile local news encourages the reporter, who gets it, and attracts readers, who read the home paper primarily for local news. Besides it is good journalism. Judged by news interest, local stories should always be given first choice, although it seems that some editors hold the opposite theory.

They should heed the advice of Ralph Waldo Emerson in his essay "Self Reliance," in which he mentions the importance of properly appreciating the value of one's own message, instead of overestimating the importance of the messages of others.

W. L. ROPER,
Ontario (Cal.) Daily Report.

Denison's Flash Beat Frisco, Too

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I have just read the interesting article on how Lindsay Denison's flash gave the New York World a beat on the Caverly decision. It might interest you to know that the Illustrated Daily Herald was able to beat San Francisco apparently by the same flash.

I had three wires, one of which was the Western Union. I had the same plates as the World had ready and had the "14-year-to Life" in addition. The W. U. flash beat service wires by two minutes and we were able to hit all parts of San Francisco ahead of competitors.

I had been puzzled about the wire beat, but your story clears it up. Very truly yours,

MORT J. DONOGHUE,
Managing Editor.

Lincoln Daily Has "Junior Stadium"

The Lincoln (Neb.) State Journal has provided a "junior stadium" in an open space across from the newspaper building where sport and election parties are held. Bench seats accommodating several hundred have been erected. World Series reports were heard here by large crowds. The paper plans to megaphone also football and election returns.

Sunday Edition Dropped

E. Roland N. Harriman and his brother W. Averill Harriman, who recently bought the Middletown (N. Y.) Daily Herald, which was sold at bankruptcy sale, have discontinued the publication of a Sunday edition which has been issued since the Herald was published.

Special Edition

Anderson (S. C.) Daily Mail, a 24-page 25th anniversary edition, Oct. 6th.

Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.

33 West 42nd Street New York City

Telephone Penn. 7443

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

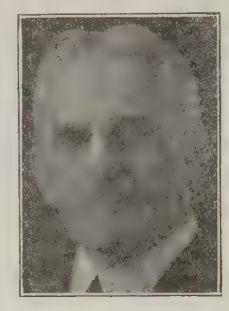
Linotype Split Magazines

A change of face in less time than it would take a hand compositor to get out a case of type.



MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY
Brooklyn, New York

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

THE STANDARD-STAR IN SPLENDID HOME

New Rochelle Building Opened This Week—Thousands Attend Reception and Inspect Plant—Merriam's Vision Realized

THE successful merger a year ago of the Standard and the Star, of New Rochelle, N. Y., under the ownership and management of Westchester Newspapers, Inc., was celebrated this week by the opening of a handsome and extraordinarily efficient new building.

FRANKLIN A. MERRIAM

The people of the city were invited to inspect the new home of the Standard-Star on Wednesday evening and thousands responded being received by Franklin A. Merriam, president, and his associate officers Mark D. Stiles, T. Harold Forbes and Maurine S. Porter.

There were many evidences of the affection the residents of a suburban city hold for a worthy home newspaper and the gaiety of the occasion was suggestive more of a popular wedding than the opening of a commercial institution.

Many compliments were paid Mr. Merriam for his vision and confidence in consolidating two newspapers that had previously rendered only ordinary service and from that merger giving to the thriving city of New Rochelle, which is only 16 miles from the heart of New York City, a newspaper of metropolitan character, which stresses local news but is remarkably complete in its treatment of general news and standard evening newspaper features.

This is the second big success Mr. Merriam and his associates have made in Westchester, the first being the now thoroughly established and widely known Mount Vernon Daily Argus, which also occupies a new building that is a local show-place and the particular pride of the citizens of Mount Vernon. These two plants are considered unexcelled in this country for plan and completeness of equipment, consistent with size of paper and city. Many publishers have visited the Mount Vernon Daily Argus plant for patterns for plants to be erected in cities of similar size.

The Standard-Star structure is done in cast stone and face brick in an Italian Renaissance design. There is beauty in it, but efficiency is not cramped merely for ornamental effects. The interior is as neat as wax, good-looking, but made for practical newspaper purposes. The mechanical departments are light and airy, and convenience is everywhere sought as a means of gaining speed. Composing room, stereotype department and press rooms adjoin, on the ground floor. Business offices are at the street entrance and the second floor is used by editorial departments. The offices are handsomely furnished and mechanical equipment is generally of the very latest design.

Mr. Merriam and Mr. Stiles have been associated in business for 25 years. Stiles is president of the Mount Vernon Trust Co. They are leading figures in Westchester's business and social life. Mr. Forbes, who is publisher of the Standard-Star was formerly editor and publisher of The Daily Star. Mr. Porter, secretary of the company, has long been the active editor of the Mount Vernon Daily Argus. Norris A. Huse, who recently resigned from United Features Syndicate, is business manager.

The first number of the Standard-Star published in the new plant was 24 pages in size, handsomely illustrated and remarkably well edited. It was overflowing with high-class advertising. In this number the editor made the following statement:

卐

Interesting facade of the new home of New Rochelle Standard-Star, in cast stone and face brick in an Italian Renaissance design. One of the most impressive and well-equipped new newspaper plants, for size of city, in the United States. This is the fruit of last year's merger of two papers.

卐

"We want to have New Rochelleans feel that in The Standard-Star they have their chief and always to be depended upon public forum, and the messenger of communication with the people. For after all, such is the mission of the true newspaper and that is what we propose to be in every respect."

AGRICULTURAL PRESS ELECTS

C. A. Taylor, of Spencer, Ind., Named President at Chicago Meet

C. A. Taylor of Spencer, Ind., was elected president of the National Association of Agricultural Publishers at the semi-annual convention held Oct. 15, at the Hotel Lasalle, Chicago.

The session was taken up entirely with technical affairs the only diversion from the routine being the reading of a paper by Paul F. Faust of the American Association of Advertising Agencies. He recommended that advertisers cultivate the farm market of buyers by advertising in the farm trade papers.

Other officers elected include F. J. Merian of Atlanta, vice-president; C. E. Burgess of Springfield, Ill., treasurer; former Governor S. L. McKelire of Nebraska, president of the board of directors.

The association will hold their next convention in Chicago in March of 1925.

Fraudulent Ad Reaps $100 Fine

In Boston Superior Court, Oct. 10, Harry Plotkin paid a $100 fine on an indictment charging violation of the "fraudulent advertising law" of Massachusetts. He was found guilty last November of causing to be published in the Boston Sunday Herald, May 6, 1923, an advertisement of a marvella cape as valued at $115 and as offered for sale at $15.

New Saskatchewan Paper

The Big River (Sask.) Saskatchewan Sun has been established by the Viking Company, with L. C. Klitteng, president, and C. McDonald, editor and manager. It is the most northerly newspaper in Saskatchewan.

The best education is said to be acquired in the school of experience. The main trouble is that the tuition fee is so high.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

NEW ART CRITIC

Miss Esther Singleton Succeeds Peyton Boswell on N. Y. American

Miss Esther Singleton, authoress and noted art authority, has been appointed art editor of the New York American, succeeding Peyton Boswell, resigned. Mr. Boswell continues as editor and publisher of Art News and editor of International Studio.

Miss Singleton in 1923 became editor of the Antiquarian. Previously she had written and published many books relating to the arts. Among them are "Towers and Temples," "Great Portraits," "Historic Buildings of America," "Famous Cathedrals," "The Art of the Belgian Galleries," "Famous Sculptures," and "Modern Pictures."

N. Y. World Men Writing New Play

Laurence Stallings, literary editor, and Maxwell Anderson, editorial writer of the New York World, co-authors of the successful play "What Price Glory" now running on Broadway are completing a second play to be produced within a few months simultaneously in New York and London and to be called "Morgan." It is written around a Sir Henry Morgan, pirate.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER classified ads do big business.

FLASHES

We note a great many paragraphers, but no one else, taking a crack at Jack Dempsey's new nose.—Cleveland Times and Commercial.

The papers are so full of the presidential campaign news it is hard to find anything to read.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

A Chicago judge in straightening out a marital tangle limited the husband to three cross-word puzzles a day. True fame, however, awaits the judicial Solomon who can eliminate cross words from the home altogether.—New York World.

Former page who has bought a seat on the Stock Exchange for $81,000 at the age of 22 should be able to afford a seat to the world series when he is a little older.—New York Sun.

A cat has only nine lives, but the fur she wears is sold after her death under at least eighteen different names.—J. J. Montague in New York Herald Tribune.

In a few years a hard guy will be one who likes his iced tea so strong you can't see the lemon.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

The canning season doesn't come often enough in politics.—Cleveland Times and Commercial.

Personally we do not crave great wealth, but we would like to be rich enough to attract envy and hatred.—Dallas News.

It is hard to sing "Home, Sweet Home," when the rent is past due.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

If people must gamble with death, why not load cars like dice to land right side up?—San Francisco Chronicle.

Everybody works hard in the next world, says Conan Doyle. This may reconcile you to losing your job in this.—Boston Transcript.

It seems almost superfluous to bring a big windbag like the ZR-3 over here during the campaign.—New York Herald-Tribune.

The world will be a grand old place to live in when we are all organized against each other.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
Unexcelled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y.

General Features

A SMALL-TOWN-PAPER SYNDICATE
Unique—Inexpensive—Complete
Decker's Caricatures — Home Features — Daily Column—Comic Jingles—Other Specialties
Tri Feature, 110 West 40th Street, New York
Write for Complete Catalog with Service Rates

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman.
Washington Radio News Service,
Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

~~73"~~ ~~72"~~ 68" ~~71"~~ ~~70"~~

The most economical and readable size for the newspaper page is 8 columns—12 ems—6 point rules.

This can be comfortably printed on 68" rolls by using WOOD DRY MATS.

No other dry mats shrink sufficiently to permit of the use of 68" paper and their shrinkage is not uniform.

To print 8-12 ems columns when using wet mats and steam tables requires rolls 70" wide. The saving in newsprint by using WOOD DRY MATS instead of the antiquated steam table process is, therefore, nearly 3%. To save 3% of your annual bill for print paper (as well as 3% of freight costs) is 100% profit. Figure it out for yourself.

Better printing, the saving of precious time, and easier labor for your men are other well worth while advantages of the WOOD DRY MAT process.

The print paper saved by WOOD DRY MATS, without narrowing margins, cannot be effected by any other means, and dozens of prominent dailies are now printing 8 cols. 12 ems. on 68" rolls.

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, famous provider of "Advice to the Lovelorn" is married.

Her real name was once Lillian Lauferty; now, since the ceremony was performed Oct. 15, at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Straus at Mamaroneck, N. Y., she is Mrs. James Wolf. Her husband is a basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mr. and Mrs. Wolf have planned a honeymoon trip for next spring, during which they will visit the singer's parents in Riga on the Baltic.

"Beatrice Fairfax," as played by Mrs. Wolf, was born in Fort Wayne, Ind. She was educated in Fort Wayne public schools and then graduated from Smith College. When she was about 7 years old, she had a pamphlet of rhymes published.

Mr. and Mrs. Straus, at whose home she was married this week, were partly responsible for her entering newspaper work. After she had completed her college education, and was wondering just what she would do, she visited the Straus home at Clayton, N. Y., in the Thousand Islands. There she was introduced to Arthur Brisbane, who offered her a position on the New York Evening Journal.

But her mother, Mrs. Wolf says, was the one who helped her most, when she first undertook the Fairfax assignment.

"Because you're young enough to be close to the problem of youth and mature enough to look forward to the problems of age, you can stand off, out of the cyclone of other folks' emotions and help them find solution," her mother said.

"And that is what I have tried to do," Mrs. Wolf declares today.

AMERICAN newspaper enterprise was graphically demonstrated this week by the manner in which features were obtained by syndicates on the historic transatlantic flight of the ZR-3.

Credit belongs to the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, the King Features Syndicate, Inc., the Ledger Syndicate, and the North American Newspaper Alliance. All obtained exclusive stories.

But for ingenuity at least the feat of the last named, the N. A. N. A., was perhaps the most striking.

Their story was written by Hans Von Schiller, one of the navigating officers on board the Zeppelin and direct descendant of the poet, Schiller. Dropped by parachute from a ZR-3 gondola, as the airship passed over the Statue of Liberty, the document was picked up by a fast motor launch chartered by the N. A. N. A., rushed in 16 minutes to the office of the New York World, where, before the landing at Lakehurst, it was translated into English from German and was set in type.

James B. Wharton, Berlin correspondent of N. A. N. A., negotiated with Von Schiller before start of the flight. John R. Colter, assistant to the general manager, had charge of carrying out the stunt in this country.

Colter, early Wednesday morning, sailed down New York harbor on a chartered launch, decorated with an 8 by 10 panel of yellow muslin to distinguish it from other craft.

As the ZR-3 soared above, Von Schiller dropped his story overboard. It landed within 50 yards of Colter's launch. It was protected from the water by being sealed within a bottle, placed inside a rubber bag.

Because of the speedy delivery, the N. A. N. A. had an exclusive story on the wire and most of it in the offices of its 69 members before the Zeppelin came to earth at Lakehurst.

Smith Service has moved its offices from 1233 Gates avenue to 409 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. The syndicate has added four new features: "Little Stories of Famous Folks," contributed by New York newspaper men; "Pen Points," by Cliff Thorn; "Pet Aversions," two-column comic, by Al Smith, and "The Random Reader," contributed by New York newspaper men.

The S. N. L. Technical Syndicate, which specializes in automobile and radio features, has taken new offices at 166 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago. R. C. O'Hair is general manager.

The International Syndicate, Baltimore, has added a daily cross word puzzle feature to its list.

"Making Presidents," a feature written by H. I. King for the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, has been made a required study in one of Chicago's leading high schools.

Sidney S. Loeb, formerly of the San Francisco Examiner editorial staff, has joined the promotion department of King Features Syndicate, New York.

The Children's Bible, by Henry A. Sherman and Charles Foster Kent, has been arranged in daily feature form for newspapers by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

A new form of fiction service has been developed by Service for Authors, Inc., New York, providing short novels taking only two weeks to run in serial form. It is listed as "Fortnightly Fiction Features."

Walter B. Gibson is drawing up a new daily cross-word puzzle for the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia.

H. L. Mencken, of the Baltimore Sun and co-editor of the American Mercury, is now contributing a series of weekly articles on literary subjects to newspapers through the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

A. L. Brandt, formerly with the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, and more recently with the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, has joined the sales staff of the Readers Syndicate, Inc., New York.

Ed Howe, of the Atchison (Kan.) Globe, the "Sage of Potato Hill," is now writing a series of weekly articles for the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, under the caption, "Howe About Everything?"

Dr. Stephen S. Wise is preparing a series of weekly articles commenting on vital questions of the day for the Federal Feature Syndicate, New York.

Reporters Are "Friendly Enemies"

A case of "friendly enemy" occurred in Pittsburgh recently, when Lawrence Sarsfield McDonald, feature writer on the Pittsburgh Press, "wrote up" Clarence E. Grundish, reporter on the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, opposition newspaper. McDonald wrote a 2-column article on some poetry written by Grundish, a World War veteran.

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in New Jersey's Fastest Growing City
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

ED HOWE ON ADVERTISING

"ADVERTISING is the most interesting reading in the newspapers. You Advertising men have a lot to say about appealing to women—that they are the buyers. They to do the buying—too much sometimes. If you know how much trouble you cause us farm people with that appeal to the women you'd go easier."—Ed Howe.

* * *

"THAT'S NEWSPAPER BUNK"

"YOU hear the newspapers derided—such expressions as 'I don't believe anything I see in a newspaper,' and 'That's newspaper bunk,' but the truth is that most that you believe about current affairs comes out of the newspapers; they are the sources of nearly all you know about what is taking place in the world, in the nation, in your state and in your city. Unconsciously, your opinions are the reflections from published news, and the newspapers are distributors of perhaps 90 per cent. of all the information of events you gain."—W. W. Ball, Dean of Journalism, University of South Carolina.

* * *

TRANSIT COMPANIES SHOULD USE DAILIES

"NO electric railway company can afford not to advertise in its local newspapers. In fact, no business that I know of catering to a local general public can afford not to advertise in local newspapers. We ask to be treated like other businesses. We, therefore, must conduct ourselves like other businesses and advertise in the local newspapers. Effective publicity has caused electric railway companies to be born anew."—W. H. Sawyer, Chairman of Advertising, American Electric Railway Association.

* * *

BANK ADVERTISING

"ADVERTISING is what it is today largely because of the power and success of the daily paper. Nevertheless, it is true that the daily paper is as successful as it is today because of advertising. The banking business has been benefited largely by advertising within the last dozen or fifteen years. Banks have installed advertising departments which acquaint their communities with facts formerly regarded in the light of institutional secrets. The banker publishes facts which build up confidence in his institution * * * Newspaper advertising has done more for American banks in the last dozen years than any other single agency."—Co W. G. Edens of the Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association.

* * *

ADVERTISING REDUCES SELLING COSTS

"ADVERTISING reduces the cost of selling because it reduces the time taken to make the sale. It reduces the time taken by the retailer to make the sale to the consumer; it reduces the time taken by the wholesaler to make the sale to the retailer; and it reduces the time taken by the manufacturer to make the sale to the wholesaler. It is oil on the wheels of distribution. It breaks down the barriers that are always built up by natural prejudices. It is the little spark of confidence that brings together buyer and seller in a friendly relationship."—Ralph S. Butler United States Rubber Company.

Scott Straight Unit Double Sextuple Press

SCOTT "Straight Unit" and "Multi" Unit
NEWSPAPER PRINTING PRESSES

are of extremely substantial construction with our comparatively simple design so that they are very reliable, easy to work on, and thoroughly practical. Our printing cylinders are solid forged steel .50 to .60 carbon, running in large diameter high-grade roller bearings and the printing cylinder gear train is steel and fabroil alternating. All our main driving gears are of bronze running into steel. The folding blade gearing is of chrome nickel steel and throughout the very best and most suitable materials are used.

THE SCOTT PRESS NEVER FAILS YOU

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.
CHICAGO
1441 Monadnock Block
NEW YORK
1457 Broadway, at 42d Street

PENNSYLVANIA

THE NATION'S KEYSTONE

THE Commonwealth of Pennsylvania received its name through the geographical and historical relation to the original thirteen states, in these later years Pennsylvania has proven itself the keystone in industry, manufacturing and agriculture.

In more ways than one, Pennsylvania has proven itself the real Keystone State. This is especially true in regard to National Advertising. Many somewhat weak and uncertain campaigns of advertising have been "held together," thanks to the good judgment of space buyers and advertising managers who have realized the wonderful opportunities for successful marketing in this territory.

The iron industries, the steel industries, the coal mines and the great farms of Pennsylvania have combined to make this state a "fountain of wealth" from which many campaigns have secured the necessary nourishment to carry them through trying periods.

Merchandise of all kinds is in demand in Pennsylvania; put it there and tell Pennsylvanians that it is there. Tell them what store has your goods. Tell them in their daily newspapers and tell them regularly.

Don't pick your papers at random. Choose these papers which herewith submit their circulation figures and rates.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call .....(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call .....(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,702	.025	.025
†Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,189	.029	.029
†Carbondale Leader .....(E)	5,664	.025	.025
*Chester Times .....(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,529	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,302	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	20,815	.07	.07
††Easton Free Press .....(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times .....(E)	26,258	.08	.08
Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	38,546	.095	.095
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,765	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
†††Scranton Republican .....(M)	28,492	.12	.10
*Scranton Times .....(E)	41,414	.12	.11
Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,287	.0285	.0285
*Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	9,090	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News.....(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	23,775	.08	.05
*Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch .....(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†††York Gazette and Daily .....(M)	17,435	.05	.05

††Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

MAINE EDITORS ELECT EVANS PRESIDENT

Portland Again Chosen as Next Meeting Place—Treasurer's Annual Report Shows Flourishing Financial Condition

Liston P. Evans, of Dover-Foxcroft, was chosen president at the annual meeting of the Maine Press Association, held in Portland, Oct. 10. Portland was again selected as the next meeting place.

The election of officers was completed with the choice of C. F. Mann, of Lisbon Falls, as vice-president, and H. W. Saunders, of Brunswick, as secretary-treasurer. The executive committee consists of Albert K. Stetson, Houlton; Nathan H. Small, Belfast, and Ora L. Evans, Dover-Foxcroft.

The association adopted a resolution on the death of Colonel Charles H. Prescott, founder of the Biddeford Journal, and a member of the association from 1908 until his death a few months ago, expressing a deep sense of the loss to the association.

A flourishing financial condition was shown by the report of Secretary-Treasurer Saunders. The organization now has 81 members.

Closer co-operation between the Maine Typothetæ and the owners and managers of the Maine daily and weekly newspapers was urged by Edward A. Harris, secretary of the Maine Typothetæ.

One of the features was an address by Samuel T. Dana, former Forest Commissioner of Maine, now director of the experiment station of the northeast at Amherst, Mass., for the United States Deparment of Agriculture, on "The Forestry Problem of the Northeast."

Mr. Dana said the situation is particularly acute in the pulp and paper industry, which is centered in this region. With a steadily increasing consumption, he said, and the probability of decreasing imports, the problem of supplying the necessary raw material for the industry is becoming more and more acute.

Arthur G. Staples, editor of the Lewiston Evening Journal, presided as toastmaster at the dinner Friday night. The other speakers were Morris McDonald, president of the Maine Central Railroad Company, and Capt. Donald B. MacMillan, who recently returned from his Arctic explorations and scientific work.

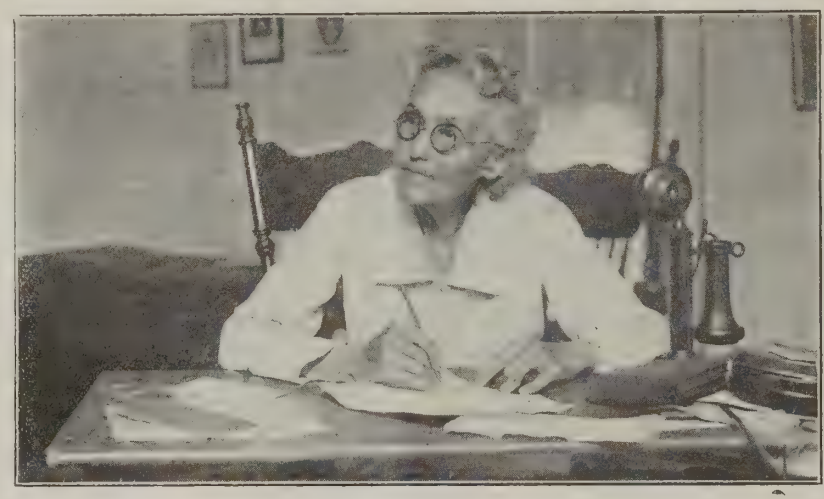
Daily Stages Classified Drive

Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News printed three full pages of classified advertising Thursday, Oct. 9, during that paper's semi-annual classified week. Thirty young women solicitors canvassed all parts of the city. Each carried a card, "ANN AD, Want Ad Girl from the Commercial-News."

News Men in Plane Crash

H. H. Steeley, Associated Press correspondent at Tulsa, Okla., and J. H. Dameron, of the Tulsa World, had a narrow escape from death when a plane in which they were leaving for Nowata, Okla., on an assignment, crashed from a height of 300 feet. Steeley was pilot of the plane.

Pennsylvania Daily Chartered



The Monongahela Publishing Company of Monongahela, Pa., has been granted a Pennsylvania charter with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are Claude E. Tower, Robert H. Robinson, and J. S. Skelly, all of Monongahela. They will publish the Monongahela Daily Republican and conduct a general job printing business.

Savage Heads Canadian Group

Hugh Savage, editor of the Duncan Cowichan Leader, was re-elected president of the British Columbia and Yukon Press Association at the annual convention held in Vancouver recently. Ben Hughes, Courtenay Comox Argus, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

MRS. SARAH PATTERSON, 84, LOOKS BACK ON 50 YEARS OF REPORTING

By Bab Vickrey

SARAH FRANCES PATTERSON—She guides 'em right.

NOT a soul has gone to hell from Saline county, Missouri, during the past 50 years.

Sarah Frances Patterson has seen to that. Mrs. Patterson is a reporter on the Marshall (Mo.) News-Democrat. She has filled this same role, written her columns with scratchy pens, in the same room on the same shaky desk for the last half century. And now at 84 years of age, is still on the job, getting news, writing "features," and seeing to it that any one of her fellow Saliners that dies gets a straight ticket to heaven by way of the News-Democrat.

Mrs. Patterson, the first woman to enter newspaper work west of the Mississippi, had the pioneer spirit. For 50 years ago, "nice" women did not work except in their homes. To start in working on a newspaper in a terrible place where you saw and heard things that nice women ought not to know existed—for a woman to do that was indeed unheard of.

Mrs. Patterson's husband was a printer. Her son's great ambition was to own a little paper and to run it himself.

With her husband and son, she founded the News Democrat 50 years ago, and today she sits in her little room and writes just as she did then, for she has never learned to use the typewriter. Three generations of Saline people have read her stories and they still look forward daily to her wise and tolerant accounts of the doings of "just folks."

"I don't do very much active work any more," she will tell you with her gentle smile, "I have let the young people take that part of the work. But I sit here in my office and people all around me telephone stories to me about what they are doing. I generally get a story as quickly as anyone, even if I am 84 years old and not quite as active as I used to be."

One principle Mrs. Patterson has always upheld. She will not write unpleasant things. "Any story that is to be broadcast through a newspaper should never be ugly," she declares and no amount of pressure has ever changed her attitude.

"I realize, of course, that modern editors do not agree with me. They call it a small town idea, and I suppose it is, still I think it but none the less true."

Mrs. Patterson is a disciple of the common people. In all of her half century of service, she has never interviewed a president or any other celebrity, and never once has she written under her own name, never with any sort of a "by-line."

"The people all know me. What difference would my name make?" she asks. "I am not looking for other work, bigger jobs, and never have been. I've been happy right here. And as for 'big men,' when you have lived as long as I have, you will realize that they are just people, whether president or laborer, and a president is no more interesting, intrinsically, than is my humblest neighbor. In fact I like to think of my work as being glorified by the commonplace."

The Pattersons are a newspaper family. The old Jefferson City (Mo.) Express, the first paper west of the Mississippi, was founded by J. C. Patterson, the father of our Mrs. Patterson's husband.

HELPING Dallas to grow from a small town into a fine city has been The News' great privilege. Helping to build a finer city, of far more splendid ideals and attainments will be The News' supreme destiny.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

On and after September 6th, 1924

The New Orleans States

Will be represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

35,434
Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of
47% in 7 Years.
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE
TACOMA
Population, 112,000 People

Four transcontinental railways, two with terminal shops in Tacoma; large and commodious harbor; thirty commercial docks; cheapest electric power in U. S.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and South west Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave. New York City
Ford, Parsons Co. 360 N. Michigan Ave. Chicago, Illinois
R. J. Bidwell & Co.
San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

UTILITY CREDITS IMPROVED DEALER RELATIONS TO NEWSPAPER SPACE

Pacific Gas & Electric Company Reached All Consumers in Its Territory and 5,000 Retailers Through Ad Drive—69 Dailies, 140 Weeklies Used

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith presents the fourth of a series of nine articles dealing with public utilities and advertising prepared, in response to many requests, by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The purpose is to help public utility companies build business through newspaper advertising. The articles are built upon facts rather than theories.

THE Pacific Gas & Electric Company, one of the foremost electric power and light organizations in the world, tells an interesting story in support of its belief in newspaper advertising as the best medium for building sales and public good will.

A company official says of the advertising:

"There is no question but that the daily and weekly newspaper is the medium through which we can reach the greatest number of people at the lowest cost.

"During 1923 all of our advertising was created, prepared and handled under the direction of our publicity department.

"An extensive display campaign was carried out in all of the daily and weekly newspapers of general circulation, this type of medium being selected as one through which our messages would reach the greatest at the lowest cost. These advertisements, which were original and of outstanding character have been favorably commented on from many sources.

"In this part of the program sixty-nine daily, 140 weekly, eight farm and six foreign language publications were used to convey the messages to our consumers and the public. More than 150,000 column inches of space were used in these publications, which have a combined circulation of approximately 1,275,000 or about the equivalent of one copy for each person in the territory served.

"The newspaper advertising was divided into three classes: Institutional, gas sales and electric sales. In all, 112 pieces of institutional, seventy-eight pieces of gas sales, and seventy-eight pieces of electric sales copy were prepared and published.

"Tying in with our newspaper advertising, we used posters, films, lecturing and a service manual.

"Our objective on the institutional copy was to familiarize the public with the terms used in our business and the convenience and low cost of the commodity. Through these advertisements we also aimed to better acquaint the public with our personnel and methods of doing business.

"On our gas and electric sales work, as we aren't in the merchandising business, our object was to sell the idea of service rendered by the commodity and the appliance, rather than the appliance itself.

"Our campaign cost approximately $125,000. The schedules ran throughout the year and called for not less than one piece of copy each week in the list of papers used.

"The results have been very satisfactory.

"On the institutional plan, there is a closer relationship and better understanding on the part of the public as to the aims and purposes of our company.

"On the sales work, there is a substantial increase in the sale of our commodities and marked improvement in the relationship with dealers, resulting in increased sales of appliances. This has been brought out forcibly by an outstanding and most successful 'Gas Appliance Equipment Campaign' which has just been completed and in which over 5,000 dealers actively participated. During this campaign, which lasted one week, it is conservatively estimated that 400 full newspaper pages were used for advertising of gas equipment."

The copy plan has been excellent. Carefully worded advertisements; well balanced lay-out and story telling illustrations have been used. Simple language has been subsitiuted for technical terminology in presenting the story of "Pacific Service" in a territory which numbers more than half a million customers.

An excellent piece of copy from the appliance series, tying in with California Appliance Week.

AGENCE HAVAS CHIEF HONORED

Advanced to Commander of the Legion of Honor by France

M. Léon Rénier, managing director of the Agence Havas, the chief news distributing and advertising agency in France, has been advanced by the French government from the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honor to that of Commander of the Legion of Honor.

Commenting on the distinction conferred upon M. Rénier, the Paris Petit Parisien says: "During a long and brilliant career devoted entirely to the interests of the press, M. Rénier has earned the friendship of everyone by his tact and his intelligent activity. The news of the order just conferred upon him will be received with great satisfaction by all those who in the press of Paris and the provinces have learned to appreciate his clear-sighted advice and the sureness of his friendship."

New Rate Book Issued

In conjunction with the national advertising campaign launched by the Washington Press Association some months ago, a new rate book is being issued. It will contain the national rate with agency discount, city and county circulation, city and county population, and other necessary information.

Ad Drive Planned for "Purolator"

Newspapers will be used in an advertising campaign to start before Jan. 1, by Motor Improvements, Inc., New York, promoting "PurOlator," a device which purifies oil used in motor cars. MacManus, Inc., advertising agency, Detroit, is handling the account.

Two Baseball Scribes Tour Europe

Sam Crane, of the New York Evening Journal, and Harry Cross, of the New York Evening Post, were the only baseball writers who sailed this week with the Giants and the White Sox to report the six weeks' European exhibition tour of the teams.

CLOSE-UPS OF EUROPE

One Hundred Days in the New Old World

By HERMAN BERNSTEIN

A striking New Daily Feature by the distinguished foreign correspondent, HERMAN BERNSTEIN, who has achieved many notable beats during his fifteen years' service with the New York Times, Herald, Sun and American, including the world-famous WILLY-NICKY TELEGRAMS, hailed by Lord Northcliffe as "the biggest journalistic scoop of the war."

Herman Bernstein will spend four months traveling through the old new countries of Europe and the Near East, under exclusive contract with the Federal Feature Syndicate, writing a series of

One Hundred News Letters

Telling What Is Going On Behind the Scenes in Europe and the Near East—

Colorful, Human Interest Stories of the day-by-day life in these countries—

Illuminating Interviews with the high and the low, with every sort of person who can throw light on what these countries are thinking and doing.

Herman Bernstein's Close-Ups

Will not interfere with your regular foreign service. They will augment it, for they will be something new and different. Herman Bernstein will ferret out the striking human side of Europe and the Near East that regular correspondents of necessity do not handle in their daily routine.

THE FIRST RELEASE, CLOSE-UPS OF ENGLAND, will be ready January fifth.

Write or Wire Now for Rates and Exclusive Territory

The Federal Feature Syndicate

160 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK

HOE MERGER DENIED BY PRESIDENT

Purchase and Consolidation of Other Companies Not Contemplated R. Kelly Declares—Stock Issue Oversold

Richard Kelly, president of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., this week officially denied a merger with any other printing press manufacturing concern was under contemplation.

Mr. Kelly was sought out by EDITOR & PUBLISHER on the matter, because rumors persisted an important printing press combine was being engineered by the syndicate of banks headed by the Guaranty Company of New York, which has just purchased the controlling interest in R. Hoe & Co., forming a new corporation.

Unofficial denial of the rumored consolidation plans was also forthcoming from the Guaranty Company of New York. Boudinot Atterbury, assistant vice-president, the only person authorized to speak officially regarding the bankers' plans, could not be reached at his office on Broadway.

Brokers handling stocks and bonds of the new corporation this week reported the securities were all sold, and were now being offered at a slight premium on the exchange.

According to a preliminary analysis, an official of the Guaranty Company of New York, said that a "fair amount" of the issue of both Class A stocks and the 6½ per cent gold bonds offered were taken up by newspaper publishers. The bonds, he said, were sold in small amounts. averaging in lots b etween $1,000 and $5,000, and were well distributed throughout the east.

UPHOLDS CONTEMPT OF COURT SYSTEM

(Continued from page 8)

court should be pardonable the same as a crime. * * *

"One further application of the law of contempt, of infrequent occurrence but of interest to newspaper workers, is the punishment of an editor or reporter for refusing on the witness stand to disclose the source of his information on the ground that it was given him in confidence. The witness's motive in such cases may be commendable, but unfortunately the law does not recognize the ground for his refusal. * * * I am aware of no case in which any court has held that a newspaper man may be excused from revealing facts or statements on the stand because they were given to him in confidence.

"Therefore if a newspaper man, admitting that he has such information, still refuses to divulge it before a court or grand jury, he is clearly in contempt and liable to punishment the same as any other contumacious witness. The law on that point is clear, and as far as I can learn it is uniform everywhere. If it is desirable to change the law, it can be done only by legislation. Meanwhile no criticism can lie against courts for enforcng the law as it stands. * * *

"As to the impression that there is an invasion of the liberty of the press, I am unable to see wherein either the rights of the public or the proper practice of journalism have been, or can be, prejudiced by a reasonable and proper application of the existing law of contempt. The answer might immediately be made that the law is not always reasonably and properly applied; that some courts have arbitrarily imposed punishment in pique or anger, or from an exaggerated sense of their own dignity, and that some publishers have been victims of gross injustice. That may be true. It is also true that some judges have been crooks or drunkards, that some juries have been venal, that the guilty sometimes escape and the innocent sometimes hang. Individual instances of the abuse of judicial power, however flagrant, do not argue convincingly for a change in the system itself, unless they are so numerous and frequent as to reflect a chronic tendency to such abuse. If publishers were being haled before judges daily all over the country, and punished severely on trivial or unjust grounds, it would reflect such a chronic and determined attitude on the part of the courts as would logically demand a curtailment of their power in such matters. * * *

"In some of the states an editor cannot expose a judge's infamy without incurring the risk of punishment for contempt. In other words, suppose a bad judge takes refuge behind a rule of law designed for the public benefit and uses it unfairly for his own benefit and against the public. In such case the editor who attacks him simply becomes a crusader for the right, and must suffer the same as any other crusader who wages war against forces of evil that are temporarily entrenched behind the ramparts of official authority. He is like a subordinate officer in the army or navy who defies discipline and invites demotion and punishment in order to expose the unworthiness of a superior. His guilt becomes a virtue, his offense a public service, his punishment a martyrdom. Such cases have arisen, and will arise; there is no way to prevent them. And when they do arise, the editor or the officer, conscious of the righteousness of his cause and willing to perform a public service to his personal detriment, can only go ahead bravely, make his fight, take his punishment, and await the public vindication which surely will come to him.

"The case of Carl Magee apparently is of that kind. Judged from this distance, he seems to be in the right, and to be making an admirable and heroic fight in behalf of the public welfare. The history of his case, as it is reported, naturally arouses the indignation of newspaper men and of good citizens. But it would be a great mistake to let the current of that indignation sweep us toward radical changes not demanded nor justified by the relations of courts and newspapers, viewed as a whole.

"Such cases are rare. They are essentially abnormal or revolutionary in character, and they cannot be taken care of by any change in the law without inviting worse evils from the opposite direction. Enlarged freedom for the press in dealing with the courts and with matters pending before them might occasionally enable an editor to expose an unworthy judge or an unfair trial, but it would open wide the door to an evil that would be greater and much more frequent—the trial of cases by the newspapers and the public, instead of by judges and juries. The mobilization of emotion, prejudice or partisanship during court trials, and the hounding of unpopular litigants and witnesses, are evils that unfortunately already exist, despite the law of contempt. With that restraint removed, or even impaired, we can only imagine to what lengths the evil of 'trial by newspapers' might go.

"There are certain particulars in which the law of contempt, at least as regards procedure, might well be modified in certain jurisdictions. The most important would be a provision that charges of contempt committed outside the presence of the judge should be heard before another judge. * * *

"Another proper regulation, in states where it may be needed, would be to expedite and simplify the procedure for review of a judgment of contempt, and also to insure in all cases a brief delay in the execution of the sentence, to enable the defendant to take proper steps for a review of his case. * * *

"I hope no one will interpret my words as a surrender, in the slightest degree, of any part of the legitimate liberties of the press. Not only would pride in my profession, and confidence in its essential integrity, forbid such a concession, but also the realization that a free press is at once a sacred heritage from the past and an indispensable safeguard for the future, something to be preserved at all effort and defended at all risk and cost. I am fully mindful of the shortcomings of our legal system in general, which I have pointed out and denounced repeatedly over many years. And on the other hand I have scant patience with the shallow and intemperate denunciations of the press as a promoter of crime and disrespect for law. I believe no force in our public life works more strongly in favor of the reign of law and the sound administration of justice.

"But while we strive to maintain freedom in our action, let us aim not to segregate journalism as a separate interest, but to appreciate more fully its intimate identity with the body politic which it serves. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, for the press as well as for the individual; but let us not overlook the fact that without the protection of individual rights there can be no safety for the press, and that the free and efficient operation of the courts is the foundation upon which rest all our constitutional guaranties, including that of a free speech and a free press."

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency

Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

1893 SERVICE 1924

as visualized by

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

KNOWING HOW IS one thing, and knowing WHO is quite another matter. We, in this organization, after thirty years, know both how and who.

This means that we can cover a lot of ground, cover it effectively and cover it quickly.

It is merely another link in the SERVICE chain which links this office to results.

Always willing to talk representation with the right kind of newspapers.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

Advertising Representatives of Newspapers

2 W. 45th St. New York — 900 Mallers Bldg Chicago

401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles

Help Local Churches With Their Copy

Denominational advertising departments are urging local churches to have experienced advertising men help with display copy for churches. Perhaps your staff can assist in this educational work. Churches can well afford to say something more in their display space than announce merely the topic of the sermon.

Prepared illustrated advertisements for local churches, designed for one or two column use, are now obtainable from Standard Advertising Service, issued by Church Systems Company, York, Pa. Proofs will be sent on request. Show these to local churches.

Series No. 6, issued by this department, is general copy designed to help all the churches in town. Such copy is used by scores of papers over the country.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising 383 Madison Ave.

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS OF THE WORLD — TRUTH

Clubs of the World New York City

BANKERS TRY TO PICK THE RIGHT PAPERS

Newspaper Competition in Some Cities Is Making Task Difficult for Group Planning Ad Campaign

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—The reorganized publicity committee of the Investment Bankers Association held its first meeting here this week under the chairmanship of John W. MacGregor. Plans and media for the proposed advertising campaign were under consideration. The committee is finding it difficult, it is said, to apply ordinary business rules to selection of newspapers owing to highly competitive conditions in many cities.

Members of the committee are: J. W. MacGregor, Glover & MacGregor, Pittsburgh, chairman; Robert Stevenson, Stevenson, Perry, Stacey & Co., Chicago; Fred W. Ellsworth, Hibernia Securities Company, New Orleans; Arthur D. Walton, Continental & Commercial Bank, Chicago; George Dock, Jr., W. R. Compton & Co., St. Louis; Mathew Pierce, Harris Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago; Martin Egan, J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, G. C. Stephens, Stephens & Co., St. Louis; H. B. Mathews, S. W. Straus & Co., New York; A. E. Bryson, Halsey, Stuart & Co., Chicago, and George B. Caldwell, Caldwell, Masser & Williams.

JOURNALISM IS ONLY UNORGANIZED PROFESSION

(Continued from page 8)

of a newspaper staff, from the youngest "cub" reporter to the editor-in-chief, is daily furnishing the food of opinion for thousands of citizens, and thus is helping to form public opinion on the hundred and one issues of the day, issues—local, state, national, and international—that will be voted on at the ballot-box largely on the basis of the news and editorials that the average citizen has read in his daily newspaper.

"Should we not, both as newspaper publishers and patriotic Americans interested in the welfare of our country, be concerned about the qualifications of those who are gathering, writing, editing, and commenting editorially on the news of the day, the food of opinion?

"Today, as you all know, there are no definite requirements for admission to the practice of journalism. Any one may become a reporter. No matter how careful and intelligent copy-readers and rewrite men may be, they cannot correct all of the inaccurate work of incompetent reporters and correspondents.

"Mr. Melville E. Stone, drove this point home when after his long newspaper experience, he declared.

"'To be a good reporter requires a great education. There is nothing more pitiable than the attempt of an ignoramus to write an abstract of an intelligent man's ideas in an interview.'

"The constantly changing staffs of reporters on many newspapers is one of the greatest weaknesses of present-day journalism. The so-called 'labor turnover', which efficiency experts find to be one of the biggest sources of waste in industry, is no less wasteful in journalism. The result is that newspaper reporting has come to be regarded, not as a permanent occupation, but rather as a stepping stone to better paid vocations such as publicity work, advertising, and business.

"If we want to keep competent, experienced reporters as reporters, we must expect to pay them salaries comparable to those they can get in other positions. The discrepancy between the salaries paid men on the business staff of newspapers and those on the news staff is a potent source of dissatisfaction on the part of reporters and editors in many newspaper offices. Although advertising and circulation are important to the financial success of every paper, circulation and the value of advertising space depend on the way in which reporters and editors do their work.

"The reporters are the only representatives of the paper that come in contact with any considerable part of the public. By these human contacts they create good-will or ill-will for their paper. Nevertheless, after he has come to know the sources of news and has gained confidence, we too often let him go because some one else offers him $5 more a week. A jobbing house that let valuable travelling salesmen who had won confidence of the trade, go because some other jobber offered $5 a week more, would be the laughing stock of the trade.

"E. C. Hopwood, managing editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, recently said that 'cheap reportorial help has cost newspapers infinitely more in respect and good-will in their communities, if not actual damage suits, than it would cost to pay adequate salaries to keep high-class, able, accurate men on the pay roll.'

"Hasn't the time come for newspaper publishers to establish tests and standards of efficiency in the news department similar to those that they have developed so admirably in the advertising and the circulation departments? Hasn't the time come to recognize the money value to the paper of intelligent, competent, accurate reporting, and to consider the advisability of abandoning the salary limit of $35 or $40 a week for good, experienced reporters, and that of $40 or $50 a week for experienced and able desk-men? Should we not ask ourselves whether we are practising real economy and business efficiency when, as Mr. Hopwood says, 'every newspaper has had the sad experience of seeing men whom it has trained to a high point of efficiency, men who gave promise of attaining standards of reportorial proficiency, turn away to other lines of employment for a wage which the newspaper for some reason or other usually could not see its way clear to meet'?

"I believe that requirements for admission to the practice of journalism can be established, as they have been for other professions. Educational qualifications can be established. By tests, you can find out every qualification necessary to a good reporter or copy-reader.

"It has even been seriously proposed in several states to license journalists. Newspaper men generally have opposed such proposed legislation. If we are to have intelligent, competent, reliable journalists, we must establish and maintain standards for admission and standards of practice, not unlike those of the older professions of law and medicine. William Allen White believes that a system of licensing is not only feasible but is necessary.

"Today there are no generally accepted standards of practice in journalism, no established code of ethics, like the codes and standards adopted by the medical and legal professions, by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and recently by Rotary Clubs and various organizations of business men. Some state organizations of editors and publishers have adopted codes of ethics and a year ago a group of some 125 editors of newspapers in cities of over 100,000, constituting the newly organized American Society of Newspaper Editors, adopted Canons of Journalism. None of these organizations, however, is representative of the profession of journalism as a whole.

"Journalism today is the only unorganized profession.

"What newspaper work needs most today is to be given a more definite professional status. It needs a greater feeling of solidarity among all newspaper writers and editors, from the 'cub' reporter to the editor-in-chief. It needs a salary scale for reporters, desk-men, city editors, and managing editors equal to that offered to these men and to men of like ability and training in publicity, advertising, and business. It needs local, state, sectional, and national organizations of newspaper writers and editors, comparable to organizations engaged on the business side of newspapers and to similar organizations in other professions such as law and medicine. It needs generally accepted standards of admission and standards of practice like those of other professions. It needs more general recognition by the public at large of the fact that competent, intelligent newspaper writers and editors, as purveyors of the food of opinion, are absolutely essential factors in the success of our republic, its government and society."

Fort Wayne
Adds Two For Imperial

THESE two well-edited Fort Wayne papers have joined the ranks of hundreds of other newspapers using the Imperial Plus Metal Plan. In so doing their publishers have selected means to assure dependability in publishing.

We feel satisfied that the Plus Metal Plan can be used to a real advantage in your shop. It will add many years of life to your type metal as well as increase its efficiency. As a publisher you will be quick to see its advantages from the standpoint of reliability and economy.

Can We Send You This Plus Plan?

Will you take five minutes to read a plan that is being used by hundreds of leading American newspapers? Would five to ten years more usefulness from your type metal be worth the time it takes to read the Plan? If so, send for it today.

Imperial METAL
LINOTYPE-MONOTYPE-INTERTYPE-STEREOTYPE

Imperial Type Metal Co.
New York—Philadelphia — Cleveland — Detroit

Night Leased Wire
covering fully business, industrial, financial and commercial news reports by a staff of specialists is ready every night at 6 o'clock for transmission to your paper for publication in morning editions. Our complete Service by

Night Leased Wire
averages 12,000 words, and is written in a fashion so that the lay newspaper reader fully comprehends what the various markets, industries and commodities are doing.
In our reports we cover all of the stock, bond, curb and commodity markets of the country, in addition to carrying nightly various other business, commercial, financial, and industrial news reports and specialties.
Write or wire for samples and rates on this complete service—sold to only one newspaper in each city.

INTERSTATE COMMERCIAL NEWS SERVICE
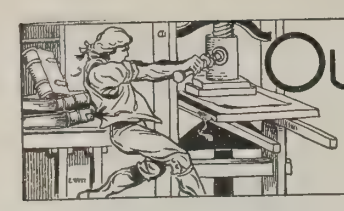
38 Park Row, New York

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years



first!
—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results
The Indianapolis NEWS

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent, live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

THE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta
Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles San Francisco

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO. have issued in book form "Religio Journalistici" by Christopher Morley. When this charming essay first appeared in the Century Magazine it was so favorably noticed in these columns that no follow-up is necessary.

Mr. Morley, after retiring from the editorial rooms to his quiet study, sends forth this interesting observation:

> The newspaper man who has pride in his honorable tradition may well feel grim to see the things he has sweat for trafficked across counters like bundles of merchandise; yes, and to see the transaction applauded by eminent statesmen and divines who feel the need of a front page quote. A little pride is desirable now and then: yes, in God's name, a little pride, gentlemen . . . are we to be hired to and fro by the genial hucksters who know the art of print chiefly as a rapid factory for gaily tinted palaver?

In book form "Religio Journalistici" has an insert in which C. E. Montague, author of that satire of newspaper life, "A Hind Let Loose," thus describes the origin of his novel:

> It arose from much study—in the course of my daily work—of the editorial articles of the best—reputed English papers. I found that they consisted, to a wonderfully large percentage, of certain stock expressions of positiveness, dislike and contempt. These, I noticed, were so general that they constantly recurred in all sorts of discussions on various subjects, and the fancy took me that their use could be carried further and further until all reference to any particular topic vanished and nothing but quite general positiveness remained, the Olympian mentality and temper just going on asserting themselves for assertion's sake.

"Religio Journalistici" has caused considerable comment at the New York Newspaper Club. A book that can start something at such a club does not need any quote to get it a reading among the members of the working press.

* * *

BRUCE BLIVEN, who at one time was managing editor of the New York Globe, reviews "Cobb of the World: a Leader in Liberalism" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) in the New Republic for Oct. 15. In this review Mr. Bliven makes the following comment about the decline of the editorial page:

> Most editorial writers who regard their occupation as more than a mere form of livelihood suffer somewhat from a sense of futility, of perpetually shadow boxing, never fighting in the ring. It is hard to believe that Frank Cobb ever had it; and there was certainly better reason than usual why he should not. While everyone in the country was noting "the decline of the editorial page," the World's did not decline. It has wielded an extraordinary power, partly the result of 20 years of Cobb's ability, partly because of the known and evident freedom to tell the truth as they see it which World writers have always enjoyed. To an extraordinary degree it has influenced the opinions of other newspapers—in late years, particularly in the South. In fact, Cobb's two decades on the World demonstrated over again that a man with a strong enough personality can always defy all existing rules, and make up new ones for himself as he goes along.

* * *

LEON R. WHIPPLE of the Department of Journalism at New York University begins in the midmonthly issue of the Survey for October a book review department described by the editor of the Survey as "distinctive as it is engaging and serviceable." Writers on political topics may be interested in the books which Mr. Whipple lists as "First Aid for Voters."

* * *

ROBERT NEAL is contributing to the Writer's Monthly, Springfield, Mass., a series of articles about news and news writing. This series contains so much practical stuff that it ought to be gathered together and published in book form—as it doubtless will be.

* * *

JAPAN has made wonderful progress, no small part of which is due to the development of its local press. This close association between newspapers and the political development of modern Japan is well brought out in "The Press and Politics in Japan" by Kisabure Kawabe (University of Chicago Press).

The story of the newspaper in Japan is the same as other countries. Before the printed newspaper there were songs and ballads, the written news letters and the private news sheets. These precursors of the press have a separate chapter.

The distinctive contribution of the volume, however, is the chapter dealing with commercial journals. In it the author lets run the story of the development of a journalistic style, the introduction of the rotary press, the increase in advertising, the make-up of Japanese newspapers, the censorship of the press, along with the decline of editorials and the increase in the space devoted to news.

Possibly the most interesting chapter is the concluding one, in which the political awakening of the masses is outlined. As in America, this political awakening of the masses came when newspapers began to be circulated among the lower classes. This last chapter is extremely helpful in interpreting editorial comments printed in Japan newspapers. It ought to be read by every political editor.

* * *

THOSE who want to know how the news of the voyages made by Christopher Columbus was published in Europe should write for a copy of the current issue of The Bulletin of New York Library and read the opening article by Wilberforce Eames, the bibliographer of that library. The trick was turned by a Latin translation from the Spanish of the letter in which Columbus described what he had found. This Latin letter closely resembled a news sheet folded twice, and made a small pamphlet of 8 pages. In speaking of these letters Mr. Eames says:

> These forerunners of the modern newspapers have always been esteemed as the choicest and most valuable of all publications relating to America.

The Latin letter describing the first voyage in 1492 had nine different editions. Of these the New York Public Library is fortunate enough to possess five. A reprint of edition No. 7 with an English translation was published in 1892. Copies of this edition in cloth binding may be obtained for 50 cents from the New York Public Library, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, New York City.

* * *

THAT picturesque portrait of Joseph Pulitzer sketched by his intimate friend and business associate, Don Seitz, for the Atlantic Monthly has been issued in pamphlet form by Simon and Schuster under the title "The Portrait of an Editor." It gives a dramatic picture of "a giant checked in a swift journey by a darkened road." But blindness did not prevent Pulitzer from directing, in a very active way, his newspapers as he cruised from sea to sea in his yacht.

As I have pointed out, "The Portrait of an Editor" is simply one of the chapters of the long-awaited biography of Joseph Pulitzer, the publication date of which has been advanced from Oct. 6 to Nov. 15, 1924. This volume will contain more than 500 pages and will be illustrated with 23 portraits, including a reproduction of the famous John Singer Sargent painting of Joseph Pulitzer. The title of the volume will be "Joseph Pulitzer—His Life and Letters" and the book will be published by Simon and Schuster. The request for a copy of the pamphlet should be addressed to that firm, 37 West 57th street, New York City.

* * *

EDNA FERBER, a former Chicago newspaper woman but better known as a writer of short stories, speaks with a woman's frankness about "The Best Short Story Bunk" in the current issue of The Authors' League Bulletin. What she says about best short story bunk has some bearing on the selection of the best news story of the year, the best editorial, the best sermon, the best cartoon or what-not of the year.

W. G. CLUGSTON, the Kansas correspondent of the Kansas City Journal, in his contribution of "A Reporter's Mirror" to The Nation for Oct. 8, divides reporters into the two following classes:

> With few exceptions the ranks of reporters are made up of two classes: those who stay wtih their jobs of reporting because these jobs give them a chance to associate with successful business men without being successful; and those who having failed to become literary successes stay with reporting because writing news is the next best thing they can do when unable to earn their "ham and" by writing and selling literature.
>
> The best reporters of the first class usually are leeches or grafters; those of the second class usually are sourheads and cynics. Most generally it is the reporter of the first class who "gets on" and becomes a "star" writer. The cynics usually drift into desk jobs and socialism, becoming copyreaders, rewrite men, or headline writers.

In spite of his criticism of American newspapers Mr. Clugston believes that the American people get "stung" on a lot of things worse than they do on the newspapers they buy.

ONE out of every THREE Homes in Milwaukee receive

THE MILWAUKEE LEADER

"Unawed by Influence and Unbribed by Gain."

Advertising Representatives

FRALICK & BATES

Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory. A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?

Because

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

AND

The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.

Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation 118,000
Sunday Circulation 175,000

Member A. B. C.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago — General Motors Bldg. Detroit

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by

THE

Salt Lake Tribune

No other section of the country offers the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using one newspaper.

FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Louis—Kansas City—Atlanta.

PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE

M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.

Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

Over—

200,000

CIRCULATION

in less than 3 years.

—because Detroiters want it.

DETROIT TIMES

100 REPORTERS COVER ZR-3 ARRIVAL

Special Telegraph and Telephone Accommodations Provided at Lakehurst for News Men—Press Room Established Near Hangar

By Lee Trenholm

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 16.—The clearing in the Jersey pines which is the Lakehurst Naval Air Station was the mecca this week of newspaper men assigned to cover the arrival of the Zeppelin ZR-3 from Friederichshafen, Germany. Nearly a hundred reporters, correspondents, photographers and telegraphers trekked through the sand dunes of the government reservation to the mammoth hanger which, while they watched, became the home of the greatest dreadnought of the air ever constructed.

Before the arrival of the reportorial vanguard on Monday, the Western Union had detailed two additional operators to its regular office in the Lakehurst railroad station to handle the voluminous wire copy. The Bell System had prepared for a quadrupled demand for telephone service with extra trunks from Lakewood.

Through the courtesy of Commander Maurice R. Pierce, acting commandant of the station, press quarters were established in an office letting out onto the floor of the hangar and arrangements were perfected to permit the use by the news men of additional telephone extensions.

It was in this room that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, put in and maintained leased wires for the Associated Press and for the International News Service. Installation of the instruments entailed the special stringing of more than ten miles of outside wire. The Standard News Association used leased telephone lines.

The main body of the reporters reached Lakehurst Tuesday, although perhaps a dozen got in Monday, and more than a score arrived at the hangar only a few hours before the ZR-3 put in an appearance skyward on Wednesday. Many found living quarters at Lakewood, others at Toms River, while a handful accepted the accommodations offered by the local hostelries.

William Kuhns, United Press, assigned to Mitchell Field, was a passenger in one of the convoy planes which went out to greet the arriving Zeppelin.

Charles B. Parmer of Universal Service was also permitted to ride in one of the convoy army airplanes.

Among those reporting the ZR-3's arrival were: A. D. Allen, Newark Evening News; B. C. Allen, New York World; John L. Burdge, Philadelphia Inquirer; Austin J. Carson, Associated Press; John Carter, New York Times; Walter Chambers, New York Telegram and Evening Mail; Daniel Content, International News Service; George Coran, Kinograms; Karl M. Elish, International News Service; W. C. Farson, Philadelphia Inquirer; George B. Fife, New York Evening World; Oliver H. P. Garrett, New York World; Frank Getty, United Press; Dr. Adolf Halfeld, Hamburger Fremdenblatt; August W. Halfeld, Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger. J. C. Hardy, Associated Press; Thomas Hogan, Kinograms; Max Hollander, Kinograms; Warren Irvin, New York Times; Ferdinand C. M. Jahn, United Press; Dr. Max Jordan, Berliner Tageblatt; John W. Kempson, Newark Evening News; J. L. Kilgallen, International News Service; Harold A. Littledale, New York Times; Norman Nevins, Philadelphia North American; Harlan Miller, New York Evening Post; Charles F. Newman and Patrick J. O'Brien, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin; J. C. Oestreicher, International News Service; John Painter, Fox News Reel; L. F. Parton, North American Newspaper Alliance; Robert W. Potter, New York Evening Post; Jack Price, New York World; Willis Rhodes, New York Evening Post; Garner P. Roney, New York Herald-Tribune; James Seeback, Fox News Reel; David Sentner, International News Service; Daniel Shoemaker, Associated Press; "Doc" Skinner, New York American; Thomas Steep, New York Herald-Tribune; John Stuart, New York Sun; Louis M. Toughill, Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger; Lee Trenholm, Standard News Association; Louis R. Winter, Jr., Philadelphia North American.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Oct. 20—Lancastria Reunion Dinner, Advertising Club of New York.
Oct. 21—New England Daily Newspaper Assn., fall meeting, Boston.
Oct. 27-28—Insurance Advertising Conferences, annual convention, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Oct. 29-31—Direct Mail Advertising Assn., annual convention, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Nov. 3-8—Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Assn., annual meeting, Toronto.
Nov. 16—New England Advertising Clubs, annual convention, Hartford, Conn.
Nov. 17-19—Sigma Delta Chi, national convention, University of Indiana, Bloomington, Ind.
Nov. 19-20—National Forestry Conference, Washington, D. C.
Nov. 20-22—Michigan University Press Assn., annual fall session, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Nov. 20—Pacific Coast and Inter-Mountain Newspaper Executives, second annual meeting, San Francisco.

Former Newsboy Now Reporter

"East Side, West Side, All Around the Town" was sung with special significance Oct. 12, at Beethoven Hall, when Nathan Zalinsky, 20, was given a banquet by the New York City Newsboys' Protective Association, celebrating his rise from newsboy to reporter on the New York Evening Graphic, covering the East Side District. Addresses were made by Bernarr Macfadden, publisher of the Graphic; William Preston Beazell, assistant managing editor, New York World; and Louis Weitzenkorn, editor of Radio News. Guests included Samuel Ornitz, author of "Haunch, Paunch, and Jowl"; Col. Harry M. Friend, F. Darius Benham, and Ned Brown, of the World. Zalinsky was presented a loving cup by the association.

A New Stunt in Political Ads

Foreign language newspapers this week were asked to insert advertisements in their editions soliciting funds for the La Follette-Wheeler campaign, with the promise that they receive one-half of all the money which might be thus collected to cover cost of the space.

Unusually High Grade Inquiries

October, 1924

The New York Times:

Through our advertising in the Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times, we have regularly received a satisfactory number of inquiries regarding Pelmanism. The New York Times is one of the first three publications on our list. The character of the replies from The Times is of unusually high grade. Within the past year we have enrolled 452 students through The Times Magazine Section.

The Pelman Institute of America, Inc.

B. C. McCulloch, Vice President
2575 Broadway, New York

Indiana Is a Business State presenting trade advantages which are particularly attractive.

It has unequaled transportation facilities. All leading trans-continental railroads cross its borders, with branches reaching to every corner of the State. Besides steam railroads, Indiana has over 2,000 miles of electric railroads. Natural resources, such as timber, oil and coal, have greatly contributed to the buying power of the people.

Indiana Is an Agricultural State

Indiana's security is farm lands, the best farm lands in the world, where Indiana's great agricultural wealth originates. Millions of cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are produced annually, together with about five per cent of the national crop—corn.

Indiana Is a Manufacturing State

Its manufactured products are worth over $1,901,000,000. Manufacturing comprehends practically all standard products, steel, machinery, tinplate, motor cars, flour, glass, oil refining and meat packing. Many Indianians divide their time between farm and factory.

Indiana Leading Daily Newspapers

listed below have enormous influence and result producing power. The National Advertiser who links his merchandise to the local merchant through this list of daily newspapers will cash in.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat (E)		3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal (M)	27,839	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal (E)	11,230
*Evansville Courier and Journal (S)		32,840	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (M)		31,274	.07
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (S)		34,657	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel (E)		41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune (E)		13,370	.055
Hammond Times (E)		15,436	.05
Huntington Press (M&S)		3,563	.025
Indianapolis News (E)		131,818	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier (M)	7,605	20,505	.06
*Lafayette Journal & Courier (E)	12,900
†††La Porte Herald (E)		4,091	.025
Newcastle Courier (E)		4,603	.025
South Bend News-Times (M)	10.155	23,039	.06
South Bend News-Times (E)	12,884
South Bend News-Times (S)		21,440	.06
†South Bend Tribune (S) 19,388 (E)		20,627	.06
Terre Haute Tribune (E&S)		23,608	.06

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

AFTER every World Series we kick ourself around the office and vow that we will never again go wild over another series. Then when October rolls around and the winners of the Major League pennants get ready for the big games we prepare to sell a million papers and get stung. This year we loaded up everywhere and got burnt again. So did everybody else; as far as we can find out. We should have known better and have no one to blame but ourself for the bath of returns we got.

* * *

For several years base ball news has been very little help in selling papers. About the only towns where this doesn't hold true are those where the teams have won pennants or have been close to the top. But in cities where the teams hang around the second division, sales due to baseball news have been practically nil. And World Series get flatter every year.

* * *

We really do not believe the game is worth the space and effort given it. There are still plenty of fans in the country who do not seem to get enough baseball news, but extra circulation cannot be made on the strength of this so called sport unless the home team is a winner. Baseball extras are rapidly disappearing and they should because they outlived their circulation-making possibilities long ago. The quicker baseball news is run more along the lines of theatrical news and the effort now spent on the national game by both the editorial and circulation departments devoted to other channels the more circulation will papers make.

* * *

Just to be sure that next year we will not forget our promise to ourself we are going to cut out the above and stick it in our date ahead file.

* * *

The election this year promises to be a bigger circulation stimulant than any other since 1916. The latter part of this month sales will surely go away up everywhere and the sales following the election should be even greater especially if neither candidate gets a majority and the election is thrown into Congress. The 96-hour vigil of 1916 when California seemed to take a year to get its vote counted will look tame compared to what is in store for us this year.

* * *

A good way to get publicity election night is to give out returns by means of a bulletin board, stereopticon slides, or radio. A combination of radio and bulletin board that would show the standing of the national, state, and local candidates is probably the best method.

* * *

Bulletin extras in this day of radio fall flat. There is still plenty of demand and probably always will be for complete extras but not for those that merely give flashes. Readers now want and expect to get in their extra details of results, interpretative stories, forecasts, and comment. To give them this and leave to radio the flashing of bulletins seems to us to be the best policy.

* * *

We have little use for publishers, editors and business managers excepting of course, those we are working for now. But there is one ex-publisher to whom we want to pay our respects and he is General Pershing. His retirement brings to mind the Stars and Stripes, the official newspaper of the A. E. F. which we helped to circulate in France during the war. This great newspaper was established with the consent of the Comamnder-in-Chief. He could have dictated its policy, used it as his own or the army's propaganda organ, and interfered with its operation. He did neither and left the paper in the hands of the staff, which was in many respects, the best we have ever seen. As a result the paper was a powerful influence in keeping up the morale of the men, became their bible, and when the armistice was signed the press run exceeded a half million.

* * *

We have always felt kindly toward the General for the way in which he cut red tape in order to permit the Stars and Stripes to function efficiently and for the protection he gave several members of the staff in their tilts with pygmy officers who were swelled up with temporary power. We don't know what he is going to do with his time and energy but if he starts a newspaper we make our application for a job right now.

* * *

Here's a letter we received from a reader who prefers to buy his paper on the street:

"I bought a paper from a boy on the corner this morning and he had six or seven pennies, two or three nickels, and several dimes right in his hand. He made change so fast that I was able to get my car in a hurry. I'll buy a paper from him again."

Very few corner boys know the value of having plenty of change. A little coaching of sellers so that they will realize the importance of always being ready and willing to make change quickly will go a long way toward increasing the good will of any paper.

* * *

Page one boxes and liners are very effective in advertising features and departments. Yet out of 23 exchanges which we looked through today only two had page one boxes and one had a couple of liners. And these boxes were mere announcements. The best type of box we believe is the one that tells readers why they should read a certain feature. A box that says,

"Read Craig's cartoons everyday" is not nearly as effective as one that tells something about the cartoons. Of course, if the editor gets a great story by a well known writer a mere announcement is sufficient and is often the best way to advertise such a story. Usually, however, "reason-why" copy is the kind to use in calling attention to regular and new features. The same applies to liners.

* * *

Rules are odious to most of us but one good one to follow is to have a page one box in every issue that will stimulate reading of features by old and new readers.

* * *

What we should like to know:

Where make-up editors get their alibis for late starts?

Why mailers insist on stamping labels on reading matter?

Whether, when the publisher travels, he does anything else besides check on our out-of-town news stand coverage?

Who invented cross word puzzles?

Why the editorial department thinks it has a monopoly on brains?

What would happen to baseball if newspapers stopped advertising it?

If comic artists are ever going to get a new idea?

Newspaper Foreman Celebrates Jubilee

Vaiden B. Sweeney, mechanical superintendent and foreman of the composing room of the New York Journal of Commerce, on Oct. 11 celebrated completion of 50 years' continuous service with that publication. His associates in all departments, including the management and ownership, joined in presenting Sweeney with a Howard watch and chain, and other gifts of gold, significant of the golden jubilee. No less than four of the present composing room staff of the Journal of Commerce have completed half a century of service and are still on duty, while several connected actively with the paper in other departments have more than 40 years to their credit.

Testimonial to M. E. Foster

Marcellus E. Foster, publisher of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle, recently received a testimonial letter signed by 142 leading citizens of Victoria, Tex., thanking the Chronicle and "Mero," nomdeplume of Mr. Foster, for what they called "the magnificent fight which you have made for constitutional government and freedom."

Thomas Weds Actress in Paris

Edward R. Thomas, vice-president of the New York Morning Telegraph, married Leslie Cotten, an actress, in Paris on Oct. 10. The couple returned to New York this week.

New Trans-Continental Wire

The Postal Telegraph-Cable Company has just completed an additional transcontinental wire route from New York to San Francisco which will facilitate the handling of telegrams from the Coast and cablegrams from the Far East.

WHAT DO YOU DO FOR THE BUSINESS MEN OF YOUR TOWN?

A Financial Page which consists solely of stock and bond tables and Wall Street gossip is not enough. John T. Flynn's Daily Business Reviews deal with fundamental business conditions of vital interest to every merchant and every other business man in your community. They are backed by the greatest business news collecting organization in America, The United Publishers Corporation, publishers of Iron Age, Dry Goods Economist and a score of other nationally known business publications.

Write for Particulars to

Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Director

U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC.

243 West 39th Street, N. Y. C.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

even if you don't play golf

You'll get pure joy from this new humorous series at the expense of golf friends.

"Wearin' Out the Green"

By WALTER TRUMBLE
and
RALPH BARTON

Mr. Trumble's irresistible copy is ably illustrated by Mr. Barton's irresistible drawings. A combination you can't beat!

Send for this weekly feature at once.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

again
ON THE
San Francisco Chronicle

Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

COCA-COLA GOODWILL BROUGHT $30,000,000

Bankers Who Paid Fortune for Name Almost Lost It in Year by Stopping Long-Continued Avertising

"The Coca Cola Company started about 25 or 30 years ago. A chemist down in the South made a drink of the cola nut and the cocoa bean and everybody liked it. So he called it 'Coca-Cola' and copyrighted the name. He didn't know then what he was copyrighting. But the Government made him stop selling the drink because it had too much kick in it. Yet everybody liked it, so he said, 'I can make the same thing out of tea and sugar, and they can't stop me from selling that.' So he did it," Charles W. Duncan of San Francisco told the recent convention of the Oregon State Editorial Association. "And the recipe is on file in every drug store in the Union. Anyone can make it and use it; but you cannot call it Coca-Cola. And others did make it—the same thing—and called it everything they could think of—Nola-Nola—and such imitations, but people didn't fall for it. They wanted Coca-Cola—'Delicious and Refreshing.' So when Mr. Candler got a little extra money, he began to do some advertising—in a newspaper here, a magazine there, and a drug-store window—with a pretty poster. He used a pretty girl (that's the stuff that gets everybody). He always kept the same script—even in the newspaper advertising. And his business grew and soon was known all over the country.

"Finally some bankers in New York took notice of it and decided they wanted those profits for themselves. So a group of men formed a syndicate and went down to Georgia to see Mr. Candler. They argued with him that he was getting old and had better quit.

"But the more he pushed them away, the more they pressed him. Finally he said, 'Come and see me in the morning.' Then he went home. He said to himself, 'I'll fix them. I'll just put the price so high they'll forget all about wanting to buy this company.'

"In the morning they came back.

"'Well, Mr. Candler, what have you decided?' 'I will sell you the Coca-Cola Company for $25,000,000.' And they said 'Sold' before he fairly had the words out of his mouth.

"And they took it to New York and sold it for $30,000,000, clearing $5,000,000 for themselves, and it paid $11,000,000 in dividends on a business whose net assets were $480,000. Now what did they buy?—these bankers who don't believe in advertising. I'll tell you what they did. They bought the name and the good will fore."

that extended all over the United States, of an article that anybody could make and use under any other name but Coca-Cola.

"Then what did they do? They cancelled every advertising contract just as soon as possible and squeezed it down so that they lost 2,500,000 gallons the first year in sales, and they spent in the following year more than twice as much money in advertising to re-establish their business as they would have had to carry out their advertising as it had been before their change of policy.

TIPS TO AD MANAGERS

Ankrum Advertising Agency, 20 W. Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Copy on the Chalmers Oil Burner Company, Chicago, is being sent to a general list of papers.

George Batten Company, McCormick Building, Chicago. Will handle account of the Vollrath Company, Sheboygan, Wis., manufacturers of "Vollrath" enameled ware.

Bauerlein, Inc., Hibernia Bank Building, New Orleans. Will handle account for the New Orleans Retail Lumber Dealers Association, Inc.

Blackman Company, Inc., 120 West 42nd street, New York. Has obtained the Lehigh Portland Cement Company account.

Brandt Advertising Company, 7 S. Dearborn street, Chicago. The account of the John Puhl Products Company, Chicago, formerly handled by Critchfield & Company, Chicago, has been secured.

Robert H. Brooks, 802 Boyle Building, Little Rock, Ark. Has secured the accounts of the Chamber of Commerce, Hot Springs National Park, Arkansas, the new Arlington Hotel, the Eastman and Majestic hotels, and the Superior Oak Flooring Company, Helena, Ark.

Chambers Agency, Inc., Starks Building, Louisville. Will handle the winter resort account of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Erwin, Wasey Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. Orders on the Northern Paper Mills Company, Green Bay, Wis., are being sent out to newspapers in the middle west.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Has secured the following accounts: Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Montreal; Continental Tobacco Company, New York, "Dunhill" cigarettes and "Barking Dog" tobacco; Nestle's Food Company, New York "Nestle's Milk-Food"; Park & Tilford Company, New York, toilet requisites and candy; A. Santaelia & Company, New York, "Optimo" cigars and A. Schulte Cigar Stores, New York.

Industrial Advertising Company, 615 Wayne street, Detroit. Placing account of the Mutual Electric & Machine Company.

Jacques Manufacturing Company, 1603 S. Canal street, Chicago. Direct advertising on K. C. Baking Powder is being sent out to a number of new towns added to the present list.

John L. Jones, Chicago. Copy on Herbert Frost, Inc., Chicago, is being distributed for the radio sections of a general list of papers.

J. Roland Kay Company, 163 E. Erie street, Chicago. About half a dozen smaller towns adjacent to Chicago will be tested out on a new dye and shine product for shoes, manufactured by the Sunbeam Chemical Company, Chicago. Copy on the Vitamine Food Corporation is also being distributed to a general list of papers in the southwestern territory.

Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, 417 Sycamore street, Milwaukee. Handling account for the Wisconsin Manufacturers' Association.

Lake & Dunham Advertising Agency, Exchange Building, Memphis. Handling account of the Continental Piston Ring Company, Memphis, manufacturers of piston rings.

Lord & Thomas, 400 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. A special list of newspapers is being prepared for the Quaker Oats Company, Chicago, on Mother's Oats. Now handling account of the Autopoint Manufacturing Company, Chicago, manufacturers of "Autopoint" and "Realite" pencils.

McJunkin Advertising Company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Has secured account of the O-Cedar Corporation, manufacturers of O-Cedar mops and polishes and wax.

Frank Presbrey Company, 247 Park avenue, New York. Has secured the account of the Auto Pneumatic Action Company, one of the Welte Kohler Industries, manufacturers of the Mignon Reproducing Piano Action.

William H. Rankin Company, 1 West 37th street, New York. Will handle account of the Depollier Watch Company and the Dubois Watch Case Company of New York.

Roberts & MacAvinche, 30 N. Dearborn street, Chicago. New territory in the west is being added on Tarkroot, for the Dearborn Supply Company, Chicago.

Sehl Advertising Agency, 139 N. Clark street Chicago. Newspapers generally are receiving orders on the Calumet Baking Powder Company, Chicago.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured the account of the Welch Grape Juice Company, Westfield, N. Y.

United States Advertising Corporation, 30 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. Contracts are being sent out to a general list of newspapers on the Willys-Overland Company, Toledo, O.

FANCY DRESS FOR CODE

A.N.A.E. Supplying Copies of Their Ethical Standards for Framing

Copies of the code of ethics adopted by the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives at their 1924 meeting have been artistically printed on fine paper and are being sent to newspapers generally in suitable form for framing and display in executive offices. This code, standardizing methods of selling and handling newspaper advertising, was approved by the London convention of the A. A. C. W. Frank T. Carroll, advertising manager of the Indianapolis News, and president of the A. N. A. E., informs EDITOR & PUBLISHER that he will supply additional copies to newspapers as long as the supply lasts.

Newspaper Ads Cut Gas Rates

Newspaper advertising, properly applied, brought about a voluntary reduction in rates by many gas companies during the past year, a special committee reported to the board of directors of the Public Utilities Advertising Association in convention this week at Atlantic City with the American Gas Association. Gas companies have spent about $11,000,000 for advertising, so far this year, the report says.

IOWA

Its 213,439 farms, with farm property valued at over $8,525,000,000, rank first of all states.

The income from crops amounts to nearly a billion a year, and this income is spent in town.

Iowa is greater in area than Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, Maryland and New Jersey combined and there are more families and people living in Iowa than there are in all of the following states combined: Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Delaware.

A territory with farmland valued at over eight billion and an income from crops at nearly a billion per year is some territory.

The diffusion of prosperity is indicated by the $391,505,000 deposits in savings banks by 905,970 persons, averaging $432.14 per account or almost one account for each two and a half persons.

It is a territory any advertiser needs.

In order to reach Iowa buyers often and regularly, you must advertise in these daily newspapers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Gazette	(E)	10,535	.04
*Cedar Rapids Gazette	(E)	21,481	.07
Council Bluffs Nonpareil	(E&S)	16,132	.05
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times	(E)	24,676	.07
*Des Moines Capital	(E)	57,945	.14
*Des Moines Sunday Capital	(S)	24,662	.14
*Iowa City Press-Citizen	(E)	6,387	.035
Keokuk Gate City	(E)	5,899	.03
†††Mason City Globe Gazette	(E)	13,405	.04
Muscatine Journal	(E)	7,980	.035
*Ottumwa Courier	(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier	(E)	17,071	.06

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

NEWSPAPER MAN SAVES YOUTH FROM HANGING

O'Donnell of N. Y. Times and Friends Win 4-Year Fight for Life of Chinese Valet — Supreme Court Grants New Trial

A New York newspaper man was responsible for the successful termination of the four-year fight, Oct. 11, resulting in the United States Supreme Court decision, barring a murder confession made under duress.

HUGH A. O'DONNELL

The court held that the confession of the Chinese student, Ziang Sung Wan, convicted of a triple murder, was inadmissible, because after Wan was arrested in New York and taken to Washington, where the crime was committed, he was "third-degreed" for 11 days. A new trial was ordered.

Wan had been the valet of Hugh A. O'Donnell, assistant business manager of the New York Times.

The triple murder, for which Wan was found guilty and sentenced to hang, was committed in 1919. O'Donnell believed his former valet innocent. With Warren Nolan, now with the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, then with the Times, he obtained the services of James A. Nolan, a lawyer, and later successfully appealed to John W. Davis to interest himself in the young Chinese boy's behalf.

Wan confessed to having killed Dr. Ben Sen Wu, Under Secretary of the Chinese Educational Mission, and his two secretaries, Dr. C. H. Hsie and Dr. Theodore T. Wong, who were found shot to death in the cellar of the mission in Washington on Jan. 21, 1919.

Efforts in Wan's behalf, conducted by O'Donnell and his friends, never ceased in all the years he was in jail, although he was penniless and no material sum was ever raised to help him. The Chinese government is said to have spent a considerable sum to aid in prosecuting him, because the murder victims were members of its official government family.

Five times, during the four years, O'Donnell, through his own efforts, saved Wan from execution. He enlisted the aid of priests, and missionairies, who, working in China, assisted in the fight.

Intertype Income Slightly Off

For the three months ended Sept. 30, the report of the Intertype Corporation, announced this week, shows a net income of $197,659 after depreciation and reserve for taxes, equivalent after allowing for first and second preferred dividends to 98 cents a share earned on the 181,031 share of no-par common stock. This compares with $210,521, or $1.04 a share, in the preceding quarter and $262,271, or $1.32 a share, earned on 152,672 shares outstanding in the third quarter of 1923. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1924, the net income amounted to $615,239, equal, after preferred requirements, to $3.04 a share, compared with $727,517, or $3.66 a share, in the same period of 1923.

Publishers Purchase Art Works

Three newspaper publishers won the right to purchase art works at the drawing of paintings and sculpture held Oct. 14, at the Grand Central Art Galleries, New York. Albert Snook, publisher of the Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News, obtained John Singer Sargent's painting, "The Chess Game." Mr. Snook's name was the first drawn, his priority entitling him to first choice from more than 150 examples of the work of America's leading artists. Van Lear Black, chairman of the board of directors of the Baltimore Sun, selected a portrait by Cecelia Beaux, and Ralph Booth, of the Booth Newspapers, Michigan, a portrait by Jean McLane Wendell Herbruck, of Canton, and a portrait by John C. Johansen.

Traction Lines to Advertise Locally

Through local sources, members of the American Electric Railway Association will expend $3,000,000 for advertising next year, according to a survey made public this week, following the association's annual convention which closed at Atlantic City, Oct. 10. There will be no national campaign, but the association's headquarters will furnish members with a new series of advertisements to be run in local newspapers. At the convention it was recommended that companies use 1 per cent of gross receipts for local advertising. Some are now spending 2 per cent.

Attleboro Paper Incorporated

A charter of incorporation was granted last week to the Sun Publishing Company, publishers of the Attleboro (Mass.) Sun, for a newspaper and general publishing business. The capital is given as $200,000. The incorporators are John H. Vallette, of Attleboro, publisher and general manager; Charles C. Cain, Jr., of Taunton, editor and Albert A. Penney, of North Attloboro, superintendent of the mechanical department.

Daily Loses Libel Suit

The Fredericton (N. B.) Gleaner was ordered by the York Circuit Court to pay $100 damages to R. B. Hanson, M. P., when an award was made on Oct. 6, in a libel action for $25,000, on the grounds that Mr. Hanson had been charged by the Gleaner with "dishonorable and unprofessional conduct." Five cases were involved, on four of which the verdict was for the plaintiff.

Seattle Newspaper Cashier Robbed

Armed bandits recently robbed Luther A. Bernheisel, cashier, Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer, of $5,697.52 as he left the Post-Intelligencer building on his way to make his daily deposit of the newspaper's funds at a local bank. The bandits escaped.

N. Y. Jewish Daily Forward Robbed

Three armed hold-up men entered the office of the New York Jewish Daily Forward, Oct. 10, and took the weekly payroll of $11,358 from the cashier's cage. All escaped.

U. S. News Writer Missing in China

Talbot Patrick, of the Shanghai China Press, has been reported missing at the war front near Shanghai. He is an American newspaper man. He went to the battle sector Oct. 7 and has not returned.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

Wanted.

Hoe Matrix Roller, Hoe Pneumatic Steam Tables, circular saw, router. Must be A-1 condition and reasonable. Nu Method Matrix Co., 233 W. 35th St., New York City.

For Sale.

Hoe Octuple. Modern design. Fine condition. Page dimensions 22¾" over all, 8 columns wide. A very desirable press. Complete newspaper plant with 20-page press and 4 linotypes. Other bargains in presses from 8 pages to sextuple capacity. Griffiths Publishers Exchange, 154 Nassau Street, New York City.

For Sale.

Three Hoe single-platen pneumatic steam tables, complete with aprons and gas-heated steam generators placed under each table. Can be used as separate units. In A-1 condition. Present day quotation $3,000 complete. Price reasonable. Immediate delivery. Syracuse Journal, Syracuse, N. Y.

For Sale.

Goss Junior Straight Line, printing 4-6-8-10-12-14-16 pages, at a speed of 20,000 per hour. With the press is a complete stereotype equipment. Can be seen in operation at any time. Daily Telegraph Printing Co., Bluefield, W. Va.

For Sale.

Goss half-tone color press, prints four colors outside and two colors inside, suitable for newspaper supplements or comics. Send for sample of its work and details. Our No. 427. A very good equipment at a low price. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York. (Many other machines on our list; "used but good." Let us know your needs.)

Printers' Outfitters

Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE
LOS ANGELES TIMES
Los Angeles, Calif.

We refer you to them for their opinion

QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

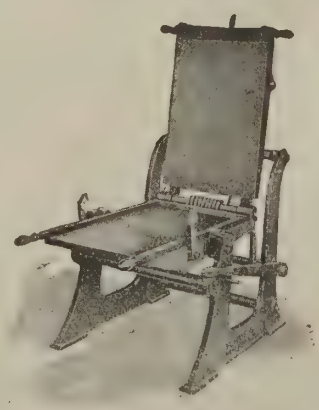
MAIN OFFICE
Fisher Building
343 S. Dearborn St.
CHICAGO

EASTERN OFFICE
Marbridge Building
Broadway at 34th St.
NEW YORK

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

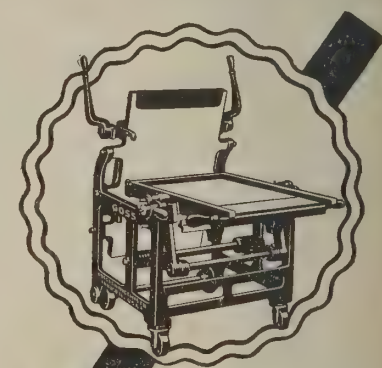
We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.



BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Hoe Quick-Lock-Up Flat Casting Mould



The throwing of a single Lever locks this Hoe Flat Casting Mould which is carefully designed and constructed for perfect Balance as well as Quality and Durability.

Made in three sizes, five seven and eight columns.

If It's a Hoe, It's The Best.

R. HOE & CO., INC.
504-520 Grand Street, New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

The easiest operated, fastest, most accurate and durable flat casting box is the Goss. Self-balanced. Positive, quick, lockup at four points on box with one lever movement. Casts, shells, bases and type high. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping machinery. The Goss Printing Press Co., Chicago

GOSS

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man,
special edition work, special pages, promotional work. Can organize special edition men on commission or salary basis. Commission or salary. Box B-916, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager, Business Manager,
33, married, 15 years morning and evening fields; capable salesman, able executive; college graduate but experience gained in school of long hours and hard knocks; considered expert campaigns and layouts. Just sold to partner interest in thriving Ohio weekly reason for seeking daily connection. Desire immediate, permanent position. Protestant. member Shrine. This same copy, run previously, failed to find satisfactory proposition. Particulars first communication please. Address Box B-904, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor, experienced; open for position on Daily Newspaper. Specialty, special edition, business pages and special pages or cooperative advertising. Salary and commission or commission with guaranteed weekly drawing account for quick action. Address Box B-918, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
A two-fisted young fellow who believes that hard work achieves results is now open for a proposition. Age 37. Twelve years' experience in the field of hard knocks. Now employed without opportunity of advancement. A leader in the field and a real producer. Pleasing personality without the ruffles. If you appreciate ability here is an asset. Executive ability but not seeking titles. Apply B-888, Editor & Publisher.

Agricultural Editor.
Young man is seeking place as farm editor on daily paper. Can get out the right kind of daily department or weekly page that will attract and hold country readers. Five years' experience on editorial staff of a leading agricultural weekly. In touch with developments and people who count in this field. Very best of references. Prefer Middle West, but will go wherever there is a good opportunity. Box B-906. Editor & Publisher.

Capable and Experienced Woman
30, desires connection with daily anywhere. Five years' experience on small western daily of 2500 circulation, A. B. C. Now handle all circulation, bookkeeping and general office. Have stock in Company, but desire change. References. B-908, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist
Desires position that can offer better future than the one he now holds. Experienced in all newspaper art. B-900, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Thoroughly competent to manage large or small daily, desires immediate connection with daily in New York or metropolitan area. Experienced through over 25 years' executive connections in circulation work. Enjoys confidence of newsdealers in all parts of country. Available immediately. B-881, Editor & Publisher.

"MONEY MAGNETS"

THAT'S another name for Business Opportunities advertisements. If you need capital a "Money Magnet" will locate it for you. It will attract the men with capital to your proposition.

Put it over with a "Money Magnet"

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager.
Can produce, want salary and bonus proposition on Western newspaper under 15,000 circulation. Have best references, married man; now connected with large paper. B-889, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
I want to connect with an evening newspaper where there is an opening for a high-grade circulation manager and capable executive. My years of experience in circulation and circulation promotion work, my understanding in every department of a newspaper is bound to be of value to publisher. Highest references. Also available at once. B-913, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation and Promotion Man
Desires opening as manager or assistant on Eastern daily of 25,000 or less. Five years' experience with same papers—still employed but opportunities for advancement now closed. Present salary $40. Single, age 23. Best references. Address Box B-911, care Editor & Publisher.

City Editor
Desires position with mid-western or eastern daily. Excellent all-around desk experience. Capable, dependable, ambitious. Young and married. Now employed. Box B-899, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
Years of experience will come to your newspaper for 4 to 8 weeks or longer. Suggest methods, train your help, increase your business. In 13 weeks increased business 800 per cent for eastern city newspaper third in field. Doubled the business of New Jersey daily in 4 weeks. Increased business 400 per cent for Ohio city daily. Make weekly charge for services for stated time. Good references. especially good for papers from 10,000 to 25,000 circulation, second or third in city. For details address Box B-919, care of Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Daily newspaper editor wants situation as editor of western newspaper; strong editorial writer and news editor. Republican. Western experience. Box B-866, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer
Desires connection. Highly identified. Now with large nationally-known publishers. Clean record as writer and executive. Address Box B-914. Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor.
Thoroughly experienced editorial department executive, having accomplished in a remarkably short time the results for which he was employed in a field of 50,000, desires return to larger undertaking. Metropolitan and small city training in every responsible news post, with knack for getting out economically a bright, up-to-the-minute newspaper, both as to contents and typographical appearance, make me at home in any office where a result getter and not a "lickspittle" or "yesser" is desired. Constructive co-operation with all departments, loyalty to newspaper's policies and ideals and a willingness to put heart and soul and hard work into the job are my pledges to the publisher looking for a real managing editor. Age 35, married and temperate. Sixteen years' experience. Box B-917, Editor & Publisher.

Telegraph Editor.
Mid-West dailies. Nine years' experience desires immediate permanent connection. Fast, accurate worker. Keen news judgment. B-907, Editor & Publisher.

Sport Writer.
14 years' experience, university graduate and letter man wants position on evening paper. Great Lakes region preferred. Best references. B-912, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman-copywriter.
Develops accounts and sells non-advertisers. Broad experience. Makes attractive lay-outs and prepares real selling copy. Available seven days' notice. Box B-920, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Solicitor.
Nationally known daily newspaper has opening for experienced advertising solicitor on special work in each of the following cities: New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis. In answer give age experience at least five references regarding character and ability, likewise enclose photograph of yourself with your application. Party who secures this position in each of these cities must have lived in such city for at least six months. Box B-903, Editor & Publisher.

Display Advertising Solicitor, $50.00.
Classified Advertising Manager—salary open; Plant Superintendent, large salary; Salesmen, $250.00 per month and expenses. Other openings. Publishers' Placement Service, 401-403 Seitz Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

Help Wanted

Wanted.
Man who has thorough knowledge and can take charge of New York City suburb (large weekly) newspaper contests. Only one who can build up newsstand circulation need apply. State age, experience, salary, etc. Box B-915, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Advertising man experienced in small-town field to work two or three months signing up contracts and organizing the advertising department of a recently established daily in northeastern Ohio. State qualifications, salary expected, etc., in letter. B-910, care Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
A classified manager in a city of over 100,000. No wandering pilgrim need apply. Some good aggressive second-string man on a big paper which has given him modern experience is preferred. Industry, enthusiasm and results achieved, will be rewarded. Box B-905, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Circulation Manager or Assistant who is now holding position paying about the limit that his company can give him and who is ready and able to take up bigger propositions. Such man must be capable of handling force of house to house salesmen. Position is permanent with good chance for advancement in salary and position. State age, experience, if at present employed, whether married or not. Replies confidential. B-909, Editor & Publisher

CIRCULATION BUILDERS

125% More Circulation for Another Daily.
The Alexandria Daily News, Alexandria, Ind., will gladly answer your letter of inquiry as to our service. Write the publisher, K. J. Sullivan, and inquire about the results of our circulation and advertising campaign for the News. Have us develop your territory for you this year. Don't delay; write today. Indiana Circulation and Advertising Co., Toney E. Flack, Shelbyville, Indiana.

MAILING LISTS

National Newspaper Reading Service
compiles mailing lists of births, deaths, engagements or marriages from original press clippings. Four Terrace, Buffalo, N. Y.

NO HEARING ON NAME SUIT

Absence of Federal Judge Indefinitely Postpones Post-Dispatch Case

Hearing of the motion for a temporary injunction sought by the Pulitzer Publishing Company, publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, to restrain the Houston Printing Company from using "Post-Dispatch" as a name for its newspaper, was not held at Houston on October 11, the date on which it had been set.

Federal Judge Hutcheson, of the Houston Division of the Southern District of Texas, is absent from the district, and Federal Judge Benjamin C. Dawkins, of the Western Division of Louisiana, who was sitting in Judge Hutcheson's absence, declined to hear the case. Although John F. Green, of Judson Henry & Green, St. Louis, counsel for the Pulitzer Publishing Company, went from St. Louis to attend the hearing, the case is not now set for any date. In the meantime, the Houston Post-Dispatch continues to use that name.

N. J. News Men Tour Times Plant

A delegation of 35 executives and employes of the Passaic (N. J.) Daily News, visited the New York Times, Oct. 14, and inspected the newspaper's plant.

Oklahoma Editor Retires

R. C. Nash, formerly editor and publisher of the Osage (Okla.) Chief, has retired after passing his 70th birthday. Mr. Nash had owned and published 13 newspapers during his career. He began newspaper work in Michigan 30 years ago.

WOULD REVIVE POWER OF EDITORIAL PAGE

Illinois Press Organizes Group to Promote Editorial Writing—Gravenhorst Elected President at Annual Meet, Oct. 9-11

Members of the Illinois Press association at their annual meeting at the University of Illinois, Urbana, which closed Oct. 11, indorsed the organization of an auxiliary society which will have as its chief function the restoration of the editorial page to the place it occupied in the early days of American journalism.

B. H. Gravenhorst, of the Effingham (Ill.) County Review, was elected president for the ensuing year. Other officers are: W. U. Smith, Waukegan Sun; A. L. Bowen, Springfield Journal, and Miss Catherine McLain, LaSalle Post, vice-presidents; H. L. Williamson, Illinois state printer, Springfield, secretary; E. H. Childress, Fairfield Press, treasurer. The only change of the executive board was the election of J. H. Harrison, Danville Commercial-News, retiring president, to succeed Charles Meade, of Geneva.

After registration Thursday morning the gathering divided into two sections, one under President Harrison discussing the problems of the daily papers, the other under E. P. Preston, of the Gillespie (Ill.) News, devoting itself to the weekly press.

Mr. Harrison struck the keynote for the rehabilitation of the editorial page when he declared that "the paper that makes a football of its editorial page, and does not maintain a courageous, thoughtful editorial page, not only fails to make the most of its opportunity to gain and hold subscribers, but it lacks stability and the confidence of its readers. No paper is complete if it is content to fill the space that should be filled with editorial, with advertising or frivolous material."

As a result of this talk, the auxiliary was launched with A. L. Bowen, of the Springfield Illinois State Journal, as chairman to arrange a program for the meeting next year. John Harrison and W. F. Hardy, of Decatur, will assist him in the work. Mr. Hardy, too, made a more direct appeal for the restoration of "personal writing."

Ernest Gruening, former managing editor of the New York Tribune, in a talk said: "Journalism is one of the most important, worthwhile and honorable of professions and I am convinced by approaching the professional ideal, that soon it will be firmly established as a profession. The press is more important today than ever before, and I feel assured despite the fact that radio is of great importance, that it will never take the place of the press."

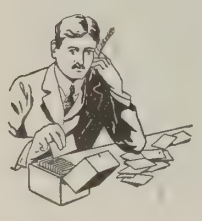
Lee A. White, of the Detroit News, urged the value of a well kept and up-to-the-minute morgue in every newspaper office.

A feature of the meeting was the unusually complete display of front pages and daily and weekly publications. Fifty dailies submitted typical first pages for the judges' selection. The Bloomington Pantagraph won first honors, the Sterling Gazette ranked second, with the Belvidere Daily Republican and the Moline Daily Dispatch receiving honorable mention. More than 100 weekly papers entered the contest in their division, first prize going to the Aledo Times-Record.

F. A. Curtis, Detroit Ad Man, Dies

Fred A. Curtis, 57, president of the Curtis Advertising Service of Detroit, Mich., died Wednesday, Oct. 8, following an illness of several months. He is survived by the widow, one son and one daughter. The son, F. A. Curtis, is head of the Windsor (Ont.) branch.

Curtis Music Institute Opens



The Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, established by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of magazines and the Philadelphia Morning and Evening Ledger and the New York Evening Post, began its first season Oct. 13.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

HALLOWE'EN is coming Friday, Oct. 31, and many stores in your city will want to pay tribute to the witches, spooks, and other nocturnal creatures which delight the children at pumpkin and lantern time.

Candy stores, stationers, fruit markets, and dry goods shops might boost the slogan "Have a Hallowe'en Party" in advertising columns of their local newspapers.

One splendid copy we noticed used by a Los Angeles store last year, shows an old witch riding a broom stick with an invitation to "meet her at Witchville" written backwards to be translated by using a mirror.

All this is advertising "down to the children."

The Yuletide season is also making its debut now with the same appeal. Toy shops are telling people to come early and avoid the Christmas crush.

THE Rockford (Ill.) Gazette recently ran a full page of barber and beauty shop ads featuring bobbed hair. "Goodbye old-fashioned troublesome tresses. Hello 'Bob'! Bobbed hair is here to stay! Fashion long ago placed her stamp of approval on the bob. Leading stars of the stage and screen have bobbed their hair because they must look their feminine best," was the introduction. Then followed the full page of ads. It was a good stunt for the paper.—J. L. Jellison, Dubuque, Ia.

You can get a little extra space from the plumbers in your town during this season of the year if you go after them, armed with a layout and a suggestion for copy that reads: "Is your plumbing o. k. for the winter? When cold weather comes, we all want hot water. We don't want frozen pipes." Just a reminder to have our plumbing inspected will make us call in the plumber—that means profitable advertising for him, and a little more advertising is sold for you. Try it.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

American Education Week will be observed from November 17 to 23, 1924. Cooperation may be secured in a substantial manner from private schools and colleges, correspondence institutions and book stores, in support of this event.—C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

The greatest drudgery of winter is in firing the old furnace which keeps the house warm. And, of course, everyone who has a furnace is interested in anything which promises to do away with this drudgery. So it would be a splendid stunt for the paper to get up a page or double page of ads of local concerns dealing in oil stoves, gas heaters and other appliances designed to heat homes without the use of coal furnaces. The heading over the ads should urge people to get away from the bother and dirt of a coal furnace. It shouldn't be very difficult to get up a group of ads of this sort.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

A little bonus for the classified advertising branch office that produces the greatest number of new orders each week serves to stimulate more interest, and business through getting the branch offices to push classified actively. We tried it out and the plan went big for a gross increase of about 30 per cent over preceding months.—B. A. T.

Offer a prize for the best solution of the problem of getting out the vote in the coming election and go after political advertising to run on the same page, offering at the same time a certain number of lines in which candidates may explain their reasons on why they should be elected, barring any appeal to the people to vote for them.—Chas. H. Cowles, Poteau, Okla.

A publication in Northwestern Iowa recently carried a "Truth in Advertising" ad for ten weeks, paid for by the foremost advertisers in the town. It tended to create faith in advertising. It made a fine feature for light days. Donald O. Ross, Washington, Ia.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

ARE there historic spots in your city? Why was that memorial tower in the center of City Park given to the city? Did you know that these chimes in Grace Church were put there to commemorate Admiral Perry's victory? Does the present generation realize there was a ten years' legislative fight before the Main street bridge was built? Sketches of these objects, which your readers know but do not know about, with a brief exposition of their significance, make a good semi-weekly feature.—H. M. Haffard, Providence, R. I.

Here's a clever box that Lee N. Merriman published, on the first page of the Marshall (Tex.) Messenger, to suggest to his readers the speed of printing and delivery of his newspaper:

> "Be careful—this ink is wet. Ten minutes after presses started this paper is on sale at the Fair Grounds."—M. E. P.

Hallowe'en comes this month. Don't forget to start features about games for parties, special menus, recipes, decorations, etc. Your readers are on the lookout for these things, and they will make your paper more popular. Your society editor can write these features along with her regular work.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

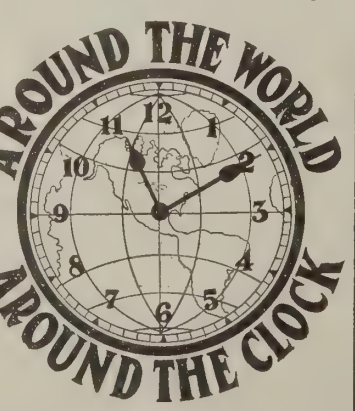
An Illinois newspaper found it produced good results to publish a more enlarged time table than is customary, once each month. The time table not only gives the arrival and departure of trains, but also shows from where the trains come and go, and indicates whether each train carries mail.—B. A. T.

If you have ever been away to school or college—or anywhere else, for that matter—you know how much you miss the home town paper. And right here is a way to swell your subscription list. In your paper every day tell the fathers and mothers of those homesick youngsters who went away to school a few days ago just how much they would like to know what's going on "back home." Be sure to mention that newspapers beat letters all hollow—they don't have to be answered and they cover the field more thoroughly. Parents will see the point and you will benefit by it.—R. C. Bolton, Jr., Jamaica Queens County News.

We have found it a good idea to save copies of the EDITOR & PUBLISHER. The Dollar Pullers and Hunches of a year ago often seem better with age and one can often use them to good advantage after thinking over them awhile. This is an especially good plan for holidays and seasonable ideas.—Donald O'Ross, Washington, Iowa.

"What do you prefer in daily fiction stories?" was the question put to readers by one newspaper with awards for the best five letters. The replies were unique and offered a guide to future policy as well as making a good feature in the publication of the letters themselves.—B. A. T.

Is the size of the human foot changing, or are people just becoming more sensible about the kind of shoes that they wear? It used to be that nearly everyone wore uniform lasts, but today there is an ever increasing demand for combinations. Why doesn't someone interview some well known foot specialist, and get up a write-up? The result would not only be interesting—for everybody wears shoes—but a live ad man could get up a special page of footwear ads.—Howard W. Townsend, Seward, Neb.



Syracuse University has nearly 100 journalism students.

Try the Sunday Anecdote Feature—
"With the Notables"
by
Robert D. Heinl
Washington D.C.

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

All-Star Features
Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction
Send now for
THE GREEN CATALOG
of
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
M. Koenigsberg, President
NEW YORK CITY

The Immortal Stories
of
The Bible
Told in Simple Words for Children
"The Children's Bible"
by
HENRY A. SHERMAN
and
CHARLES FOSTER KENT
is a
Daily Feature
That Means Home Circulation
Write for Samples.
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

A Reader Demand For You To Meet
Every Reader Everywhere
A Present or Potential Fan
Daily or Weekly
Crossword Puzzles
As now used by
St. Louis Post-Dispatch
Baltimore American
Washington Post
Cleveland Plain Dealer
Boston Traveller
Oregon Journal
Birmingham News
and others across the country
"Official" Puzzles
From the Second and Third Crossword Puzzle Books.
Edited by the Experts Who Started the Craze WIRE TO
METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.,
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK CITY

NFA NFA
The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
Write for samples and rates
NFA NEA SERVICE INC. NFA
1200 W. 3RD STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Treasures of the Sea

INCREASE

New England's Wealth

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356
*Attleboro Sun ....(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
Boston Globe ....(M&E)	278,616	.50	.50
Boston Globe ....(S)	332,083	.55	.55
Boston Post ....(M)	362,520	.60	.60
Boston Post ....(S)	367,600	.55	.55
Fall River Herald....(E)	15,271	.05	.05
Fitchburg Sentinel ....(E)	11,410	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette ....(E)	15,400	.055	.04
†Lynn Item ....(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader ....(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
New Bedford Standard-Mercury (M&E)	32,565	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	27,334	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript...(E)	9,604	.04	.035
†††Pittsfield Eagle ....(E)	17,073	.04	.035
*Salem News ....(E)	20,784	.08	.07
Taunton Gazette ....(E)	8,551	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	49,849	.18	.15
MAINE—Population, 768,014
†Bangor Daily Commercial..(E)	14,750	.055	.05
Portland Press Herald..(M&S)	31,115(A)	.09	.08
*Portland Express ....(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram ....(S) (Sunday Edition Express)	29,992	.10	.07
†Waterville Sentinel ....(M)	6,134	.035	.025
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683
*Concord Monitor-Patriot...(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel ....(E)	3,609	.03	.034
Manchester Union Leader (M&E)	28,846	.10	.07
RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397
†Newport Daily News....(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times ....(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin ....(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal ....(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal ....(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News ....(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune ....(E)	23,603	.10	.09
Westerly Sun ....(E&S)	4,499	.025	.025
†Woonsocket Call ....(E)	13,666	.05	.05
VERMONT—Population, 352,428
*Barre Times ....(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner ....(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press....(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald ....(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record (E)	4,024	.0214	.015
CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post ....(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant ....(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant ....(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times ....(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record ....(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press ....(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register....(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
*New London Day ....(E)	11,925	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin ....(M)	12,494	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour ....(E)	5,624	.03	.03
†††South Norwalk Sentinel....(E)	3,771	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate ....(E)	9,305	.05	.04
Waterbury Republican American (M&E)	21,951	.08	.07
Waterbury Republican ....(S)	15,181	.06	.05

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
(A) Circulation daily edition only.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

The fishing industry of New England cannot be overlooked when considering this territory as a market to promote meritorious merchandise.

New England produces annually one-half billion pounds of fresh fish which return to the fishermen over $20,000,000. Over 30,000 persons and 1,000 vessels are directly engaged in this industry. It represents an investment of $40,000,000.

In other words, New England produces about 20 per cent in pounds and about 25 per cent in value of the entire American production.

This great business of New England of turning into wealth the resources of the sea is an almost unappreciated asset.

There is only one sure way to get to a New Englander. That is through his local daily newspaper.

There are two million people reading the daily newspapers of New England every day and only through this list of representative dailies can you be assured of getting a fair share of New England's business.

A Mighty Swing Upward

DURING the 9 months of 1924 The Sun published 9,330,752 lines of advertising—a gain of more than two million lines over the corresponding months of 1923.

Local merchants know newspaper values. They must seek out the most productive circulation and they have found this in The Sun, which has carried over seven million lines of local display advertising in the 9 months of 1924—a tremendous gain of more than one million and-a-half lines over the same months of 1923.

National advertisers, during the 9 months of 1924, have preferred The Sun to any other New York evening newspaper and have used over two million lines—a gain of almost a half million lines over the corresponding period of 1923 and 327,732 lines more than the next evening newspaper.

The Sun has a unique reader confidence among its high-class clientele, making it an outstanding factor for successful advertising campaigns in the New York market.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

Average Daily Net Paid Circulation More Than 250,000

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
...to be taken from this...

THIS ISSUE:—THE INSIDE OF THE INCOME TAX MUDDLE.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING. NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 23 | NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 1, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

Happy Radio "New Year"!

The Chicago Daily News wishes dealers and manufacturers of radio renewed and increasing prosperity in the "new year" now dawning. It "points with pride" to the achievements of the industry in Chicago in past months, and the resulting harvest now awaiting radio manufacturers and dealers who heed the call to "come and get it." The Daily News is, and was from the very beginning, an ardent patron of radio in Chicago. "The fun of it," as well as the potentialities of the industry, have led it to extend every assistance to fans and the trade in Chicago. The Daily News was the first newspaper in Chicago to erect a broadcasting station, and is today the only paper in Chicago that owns and operates its own station —WMAQ. For the coming season it has planned a radio program—editorial and broadcasting—that will meet the growing needs of the fans and the trade in Chicago. Radio advertisers will accordingly find in The Daily News a medium holding the keen interest of the fans—a medium in which their advertising will influence the buying interest of the great majority of radio enthusiasts and prospects in Chicago.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

FIRST IN CHICAGO

No State Can Offer More or Better Opportunities for Successful Advertising than Can this Great Keystone State

Pennsylvania leads all states in mineral and industrial production. Its mineral riches are very great. Anthracite and bituminous coal produced are worth together about $900,000,000. The coke output alone is $160,000,000. The natural wealth in iron ore, oil and quarries is very large.

INDUSTRIES OF STATE BUILT ON BASIC ELEMENTS

Pennsylvania produces nearly half the steel of the country, shipping it to all parts of the world. Its production in pig iron is about 14,000,000 gross tons.

PRODUCTION VARIED IN ALL PARTS OF THE STATE

The state leads all Midwest States in cotton goods, is second in silk and wool goods, ranks first in leather output, glazed kid being the most important. There are more than 27,000 industrial plants, paying $1,864,000,000 in wages to 1,523,000 employes.

PROSPERITY IS PERMANENTLY PLANTED

This great commonwealth offers an excellent territory to any advertiser who seeks to test the appeal of his commodity to Americans of the substantial, discerning kind.

Cultivate This Market With These Newspapers

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call .....(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call .....(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,702	.025	.025
†Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,189	.029	.029
†Carbondale Leader .....(E)	5,664	.025	.025
*Chester Times .....(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,529	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,302	.02	.02
*Easton Express .....(E)	21,439	.07	.07
††Easton Free Press .....(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times .....(E)	26,258	.08	.08
Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	38,546	.095	.095
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,765	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times .....(E)	41,414	.12	.11
Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,287	.0285	.0285
*Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	9,090	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News.....(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	23,775	.08	.05
*Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch .....(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†††York Gazette and Daily .....(M)	17,435	.05	.05

††Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

The World — NEW YORK — The Evening World

The Maximum of Concentration in the World's Greatest Market

ACCORDING to the statements filed with the United States Government covering the six months' period ending September 30, 1924, THE WORLD and THE EVENING WORLD have together maintained an average circulation during this period in excess of 700,000 copies daily. Their actual net average for the month of September was 741,199. This represents an increase of 28,986 in the circulation of THE WORLD over October a year ago, and a corresponding increase in THE EVENING WORLD of 57,139.

More than 90% of this huge distribution is confined to the shopping district of which New York is the center. This localized circulation represents the most powerful concentration of newspaper distribution purchasable in Greater New York.

The following comparison of circulation clearly indicates the steady, consistent growth of THE WORLD and THE EVENING WORLD during the past year:

	Government Statement
	6 Months Ending October 1, 1923	6 Months Ending April 1, 1924	6 Months Ending October 1, 1924	Increase Over Preceding Period	Net Average September, 1924	Increase Over October, 1923
The World	382,739	391,421	404,377	12,956	411,725	28,986
The Evening World	272,335	271,114	314,489	43,375	329,474	57,139

Within the boundaries of the Metropolitan Shopping Area is sold the vast bulk of merchandise consumed by upwards of 7,000,000 people. From this area the local merchant draws his daily trade; here the national advertiser has his saturated distribution. In other words, this is where the goods are sold; is this where you are advertising?

For a proper understanding of Greater New York's advertising problems, send for an interesting booklet, "Charting America's Greatest Market". It is sent free on request.

The World

PULITZER BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

Mullers Building, Chicago — Title Insurance Building, Los Angeles — General Motors Building, Detroit

Chancery Building, San Francisco — Securities Building, Seattle

Since it is true, that—

"In Philadelphia

nearly everybody reads

The BULLETIN"

There can be no escape from the conclusion that the advertiser can reach nearly everybody in Philadelphia through The Bulletin.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid circulation for the six months ending September 30, 1924—

516,609 copies a day

The circulation of the Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in the United States.

NEW YORK—814 Park-Lexington Bldg. (46th St. & Park Ave.)
CHICAGO—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
DETROIT—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 117 Lafayette Blvd.
SAN FRANCISCO—Harry J. Wittschen, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1924—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 1, 1924 No. 23

Whole Press Confused By Treasury Officials' Startling Conflict of Tax Orders

Editor & Publisher Herewith Presents the Mischievous Official Documents—Question of Legality of Publicity May Reach Highest Court—Editorial Opinion Everywhere Divided and Hot Controversy Ensues

WIDESPREAD confusion over the legal right of newspapers to publish income tax returns under certain provisions of the Revenue Act of 1924 has apparently not been abated.

Conflicting opinion as to the intent of Congress when it provided publicity for income tax lists in enacting the law is expected to continue among lawyers until the entire question is threshed out in the courts.

There are legal experts who agree with the opinion expressed by Attorney General Stone that newspapers continuing to publish income tax returns "will do so at their peril."

There are other legal experts who obviously do not share the opinion.

The "best minds" of the bench and bar will probably differ on the subject even after Mr. Stone has carried out his intention of making a test case of the law in the courts.

It is predicted in some quarters the United States Supreme Court may be reached before such a test case is determined finally. It is also thought even a decision by the highest legal tribunal of the country may not quite still what has already developed into one of the strangest controversies ever provoked by an act of Congress.

Among the first to be faced with the conflict of laws, legal opinions, sense of news and idea of the proprieties were the press associations. The Associated Press announced that it would not carry the lists made public by the several tax offices.

The United Press and the Hearst services, the I. N. S. and Universal, on the other hand, determined that the lists were news and supplied them to their clients.

Metropolitan newspapers generally published the local lists and some carried long columns of names and tax payments from other centres. In New York the Evening Post on Thursday night stated that it would not publish the names furnished reporters by the revenue office, not only for legal reasons, but because it considered such publication an unwarranted prying into the private affairs of the people. A similar stand was announced by the Philadelphia Public Ledger and the Baltimore Sun.

The New York Times daily since October 24 has published lists of taxpayers obtained in cities all over the country. Other New York papers have concentrated largely on the metropolitan district of New York. The Hera'd Tribune printed no lists on October 25, stating that the second treasury ruling that publication violated the law guided its action, but on Saturday and daily since then, it has published the information "under protest."

To even those Washington correspondents long experienced in unravelling the legal tangles often incident to national legislation the peculiar situation created is proving more and more puzzling.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon originally expressed himself definitely of the opinion that publication by newspapers of income tax returns was unlawful. But a series of statements issued by the Treasury Department on how such returns should be thrown open for "public inspection" under the present revenue law appeared to leave some room for "reasonable doubt."

The entire subject assumed such national importance by Tuesday it was discussed by President Coolidge with his Cabinet. Upon leaving the White House following the Cabinet meeting, the Attorney General stated he and Mr. Mellon were in thorough accord.

Mr. Stone called the newspaper correspondents into his office at the Department of Justice later in the day and distributed among them a statement he was careful to explain was not an "opinion."

The statement is herewith presented by EDITOR & PUBLISHER in full for comparison with those issued several days previously by the Treasury Department which are reproduced in their entirety later on:

"Section 257, Subdivision (a) of the Revenue Act of 1924 provides, among other things, that Income Tax Returns 'shall constitute public records; but they shall be open to inspection only upon order of the President and under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary and approved by the President.' Subdivision (b) of the same Section makes it the duty of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue 'as soon as practicable in each year' to cause to be prepared and 'made available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine, in the office of the Collector in each Internal Revenue district and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the name and the post office address of each person making an Income Tax Return in such district, together with the amount of the Income Tax paid by such person.'

"Section 1018 of the same Act re-enacts Section 3167 of the Revised Statutes as amended, which provides among other things 'It shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any Income Return, or any part thereof or source of income, profits, losses or expenditures appearing in any Income Return; and any offense against the foregoing provision shall be a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.'

"The effect of these provisions is to allow general inspection of income tax returns only under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President. Subdivision (b) above referred to, however, makes it the duty of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to make available to inspection in such manner as he shall determine in the office of the Collector and such other places as he may determine, lists containing only the post office address of the person making a return and 'the amount of income tax paid by such person.'

"We are informed that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has authorized the inspection of such lists only in the office of the Collector in each Internal Revenue district. He has authorized no publication of such lists in the newspapers or otherwise. Publication of this information in newspapers is nowhere specifically provided for by the law and appears not to have been authorized under the provision of Section 257 (b). Section 3167 of the Revised Statues reenacted in the Revenue Act of 1924 makes it a criminal offense to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law, 'any part' of an Income Tax Return. Just what purpose Congress had in mind in reenacting this provision after it had made it the duty of the Commissioner to make available for public inspection the amount of Income Tax paid by each taxpayer can only be surmised. The provision, however, is expressly made a part of the present tax law, and it appears clearly to be the duty of the Department of Justice to have an appropriate case presented in the courts so that the full force and effect of this provision may be judicially determined. This will be done at an early convenient date."

The first of the Treasury statements, issued October 20, was apparently intended as a notice to the newspapers of the country income tax returns were to be made public property in compliance with the law.

Treasury officials insisted later the instructions issued to collectors of internal revenue embodied in the statement had been formulated merely as a part of regular departmental routine.

Mr. Mellon himself later denied there was any "partisan purpose in the compliance by the Treasury with the mandatory provisions of an Act of Congress."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER believes its readers will desire to have the full text of the statement identified as "Document A" before them for their guidance. It follows:

(Continued on page 32)

HOW INCOME TAX STORY BROKE

HOW did this income tax story happen to break? How did the newspapers learn that the information might be available for use at local collectors' offices? These are two points that the welter of buck-passing, recrimination, and conflicting legal opinions during the past week have left unrevealed.

Picking up the threads of the available information and unravelling from them all elements of partisanship and doubt, EDITOR & PUBLISHER gives its readers an insight into the mechanics of this story, one of the most important and puzzling breaking in Washington since the war.

It is stated at the Treasury Department that the original instructions issued by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair to collectors on Oct. 20 (see Document A in accompanying story) were not originally "intended for newspaper use," but merely for the collectors themselves.

The real "tip-off" to newspapers that income tax returns were accessible came from a canned statement issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington on Oct. 23, three days after the original instructions were sent out. (See Document B.)

On the same night, the following confidential telegram was sent by Mr. Blair to all Collectors of Internal Revenue:

"With reference to Mimeograph 3249 (Document A), the law does not authorize preparation of copies of the income tax list by public. To permit persons to prepare duplicate lists of income taxpayers would seriously obstruct the efficient management of your office. Post conspicuously and call to attention of all who wish to examine income tax lists the provisions of Section 3167, Revised Statutes. particularly that provision making it unlawful to print or publish any income tax return or any part thereof under penalty of a fine of $1,000, or imprisonment for one year or both.

"BLAIR, Commissioner."

The storm had broken.

It was suggested at the Treasury Department on Wednesday of this week that the first intimation newspapers had that the income tax returns were available for "public inspection" was the release above referred to as "Document B." Mr. Blair's instructions of three days before had gone forth without notice to the newspaper corps.

Newspaper correspondents on requesting copies of the latter from the publicity division of the Treasury Department were furnished with copies of Mimeograph 3249 (Document A).

Wires were kept busy Oct. 24, as newspaper men covering the Treasury Department sought to clarify the situation. Statements were forthcoming frequently. It was suggested that newspaper reporters sent to ask local collectors as to the meaning of the canned statement of Oct. 23 have their attention directed to Mr. Blair's first instructions.

Responsibility for the mix-up is apparently being shifted from shoulder to shoulder in the Treasury Department. Treasury officials insist that the whole matter is purely routine. Meanwhile newspaper men are kept running in circles to obtain for their newspapers copies of Mimeograph 3249, which was never carried in full from Washington by the news services.

NEWSPAPERS ARE RAPIDLY DESTROYING TRIAL BY JURY, SAYS DARROW

Dailies Guilty of Contempt of Court Day After Day in Important Cases But Judges Afraid to Act, Asserts Noted Lawyer

By WARREN BASSETT

TRIAL by jury is rapidly being destroyed in America by the manner in which the newspapers handle sensational cases, Clarence Darrow, noted Chicago attorney told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week in an exclusive interview.

There is no important tribunal case in which newspapers are not guilty of contempt of court day after day, but judges and lawyers are afraid to act, he declared.

Mr. Darrow's opinion on the subject of so-called "trial by newspaper" was asked because of the statement he made during the Leopold-Loeb trial in Chicago that the whole effort of the defense was being exerted to counteract the poison in the mind of the public placed there by the newspapers.

"In all cases that attract any attention the newspapers with their publicity and their eagerness to get special stories destroy the real right of trial by jury," he stated. "And not only do the newspapers publish all the facts but they spend time and money working with detectives to hunt up every weird tale possible that may prejudice the jury and the court.

"Everybody knows the effect of these continuous publications both in the news columns and in editorials. Everyone knows that it deprives the defendant of a fair and impartial trial if the case is made sufficiently public.

'Trial by jury is being rapidly destroyed in America by the manner in which the newspapers handle all sensational cases. Of course it could not happen in England, as far as I know, or in other European countries. It is a species of mob law more insidious and dangerous than the ordinary mob law.

"I don't know what should be done about it. The truth is the courts and the lawyers don't like to proceed against newspapers. They are too powerful. As the law stands today there is no important tribunal case where the newspapers are not guilty of contempt of court day after day. All lawyers know it, all judges know it, and all newspapers know it. But nothing is done about it.

"With the present attitude toward the newspapers I see no way to prevent this growing evil.

"No new laws are necessary. The court has full jurisdiction to see that no one influences a verdict or a decision. But everyone is afraid to act!"

A kindly cynic, the veteran Chicago attorney does not concede that the activities of newspapers in exposing injustices in the courts and in running down criminals is in a sense compensatory or laudable.

"What does it amount to?" he asked with a trace of weariness in his voice. "Do they think the troubles of the world are solved by the imprisonment or execution of one man?"

Mr. Darrow did not appear to be particularly impressed with the fight of Carl C. Magee, editor of the Albuquerque (N. M.) State Tribune against Judge D. J. Leahy of Las Vegas, N. M.

"I understand he was pardoned by the governor from the original sentences," Darrow said. "If he had been a little fellow he would probably not have been pardoned."

Mr. Darrow was in New York Oct. 26, to debate capital punishment with Judge A. J. Talley of General Sessions.

Millerand Buys Paris Daily

Alexandre Millerand, former President of France, has acquired control of the Paris Aventor, a morning newspaper, according to cable advices reaching this country.

In next week's EDITOR & PUBLISHER will be printed a Supplementary Directory of Syndicate Features to take care of omissions which may have occurred in the Annual Directory, which appeared in the issue of Oct. 25.

CHURCHES DISCUSS PUBLICITY

Chicago Federation Holds 6th Annual Conference—McCormick Speaks

A better understanding and a greater co-operation between the pulpit and the press was the keynote emphasized at the sixth conference on church publicity, held under the auspices of the Chicago Church Federation at the Hotel Morrison on Oct. 27. Addressing the 300 persons present at the session, Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith, chairman of the Chicago Church Federation publicity commission, declared that "a closer cooperation between the pulpit and the press will be for the uplift and the betterment of both the pulpit and the press and also the nation."

Among the other speakers were Col. R. R. McCormick, editor of the Chicago Tribune, Edward R. Mahoney, city editor of the Chicago Evening American, J. B. Wootan of Chicago, formerly head of the publicity department of the Presbyterian Church, Homer J. Buckley of the advertising council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Maude Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, ex-Governor Carl E. Milliken of Maine and several leading local pastors.

Walton Joins A. A. C. W. Staff

G. O. Walton, formerly with the United States Lines, has joined the sales staff of the extension division of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, New York.

HITS PRESS MONOPOLY

Strachey Says English Press Combinations Harmful and Demoralizing

J. St. Loe Strachey, the editor of The Spectator, told Guildford Rotarians last week that all sensible people could not help thinking that since several newspapers had been in the hands of a syndicate, the independent newspapers found their problems more difficult than ever. Newspapers were too much in the hands of one man, who called the tune. It would be all right if that man only called the tune in one paper, but the trouble was that the same thing was said by the same man in several newspapers, and people, seeing it in more than one paper, conclude that it must be so. The way out was to get back to the more independent Press as it once existed.

The provincial newspapers were representative of that idea—independence. He thanked heaven that the great paw of syndication had not reached out to the provincial Press to any great extent. There was no doubt, he said, that one of the factors working for the machine-made mass production syndicate was the cost of production.

AGENCY MEN EAT WHITE HOUSE BREAKFAST

SUCCESSFUL administration of the nation's business is dependent upon the support and co-operation of all interests, among which advertising is highly important, President Coolidge told more than 40 advertising men, representing the Coolidge and Dawes Advertising League Club, who breakfasted at the White House Wednesday.

"Advertising is now properly recognized as a great constructive force," said the President, "The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World with 20,000 and more members, and their expenditure of millions of dollars anually, is undoubtedly a potent factor in industrial and social development.

"It is a great pleasure to have you gentlemen as my guests, I fully realize the sacrifices all of you have made by laying aside your private affairs to journey to Washington to tell me of your appreciation of my efforts and to pledge your support in my campaign.

"The government is a great business, the successful administration of the nation's business is largely dependent upon the support and co-operation of all interests, among which advertising is highly important. The government, besides being a business, has a great humanitarian interest in the welfare of all the people and the means of advertising has been of great assistance in making this possible. You gentlemen know this and you appreciate it, and I am happy and fortunate to be able to count on your support."

"One of the great consolations I have," the President continued, "is to know that I have the approbation and approval of men of business like yourselves and who have expressed your genuine sympathy and have given me your support. In return I can only say I am grateful and in return I give you my pledge that I shall continue those policies that have brought peace and prosperity to this nation.

"I wish to convey to you my hearty sympathy with their efforts for the continuing of betterment of business through the enforcement of the best ethical standards in advertising. To the extent that this shall be accomplished, they will contribute to the extension of prosperity and the elevation of all the ideals of the business world."

The delegation, which came under the auspices of the Coolidge-Dawes Non-Partisan League, arrived at the White House at 8 o'clock and after a welcome from the President and Mrs. Coolidge sat down to an old-fashioned New England breakfast of cereal, bacon and eggs, buckwheat cakes, Vermont maple syrup and coffee. Later the advertising men were photographed with the President on the south lawn of the White House, and several spokesmen for the delegation explained why the delegation came to Washington.

Frank Presbrey, of New York, president of the Coolidge-Dawes Advertising League, asserted that the 20,000 advertisers and agencies represented by the delegation wanted the present prosperity of the country continued.

Edward Gibbs, member of the Advisory Board of the A. A. C. W. said the advertisers and advertising agencies of the country are interested in the election of President Coolidge because prosperity has a direct bearing on advertising.

"Advertising," said Mr. Gibbs, "has become one of the powerful forces of the world. The chicanery, the deceit, the untruthfulness with which, I regret to say, it was formerly invested, have practically been eliminated. We stand on the threshhold of a new era—advertising has come into its own."

He went on to relate the aid given the government by advertising men during the war.

Others who spoke were Lynn Summers of Scranton, vice-president of Association of National Advertisers; George L. Kleiser of San Francisco and Edward Noble of Chicago.

Presbrey headed the delegation. The complete list of names will be found on page 26 of this issue.

CAN WOMEN SUCCEED IN MODERN JOURNALISM?

Mrs. Winifred Black, "Star" Woman Writer of the Hearst Organization Says Only One of Every 500 Get Ahead—Remarkable Story of Her Own Career as Reporter and Syndicate Writer—Called "Jane Addams of the Profession"

By TRUMAN HANDY

ONLY about one of 500 women applicants for newspaper work ever succeeds today.

Somehow the modern girl with her dash and diablerie and over-abundance of self doesn't fit the journalistic pattern. . . .

"Because," said Winifred Black, "star" woman of the entire Hearst service, "they are entirely too pleased with themselves to take the program. They all have a 'message' to deliver nowadays . . . and nobody wants a 'message.' What people want is news—lots of it and interestingly written."

The white-haired, keen-eyed Mrs. Black is the striking example of what every journalist in his mind's eye would like to be. Calm, poised,—efficient. Arrived at a point in her career when she can sit in the sunlit studio of her home atop a hill that overlooks entire San Francisco and write what she pleases, when and how she pleases with such aplomb that no mere editor would dream of blue-pencilling her copy.

The seasoned legionnaire of a thousand combats of woman's wit against the world-at-large in the struggle for news, she has dedicated her life to getting the news in such a fashion as to have become an almost world-wide figure journalistically in a career dating back some 30 years.

In her own profession she is as distinctive as Jane Addams or Ethel Barrymore and at an age when a majority of women would be content to ruminate on the laurels of a well-ordered life she is still actively in the newspaper harness,—a producer whose prolific copy output is a by-word.

She speaks of newspapering not as a "game" or a "profession" but as a "business" and, throughout a career in which she has been closely associated with such newspaper nabobs as the late Sam Chamberlain, Ambrose Bierce, Charles Dryden, Julian Hawthorne, Homer Davenport, Arthur McEwen, and hosts of others whom out of regard for space we will not mention, Mrs. Black has held every post an editorial room can offer including news editor, copy reader, Sunday editor, assistant managing editor, acting managing editor and editorial editor as well as a reporter and special writer.

Reporter! That's the essence of her. A nose for news and no obstacle too great to be overcome to get the news.

But her own expression—as she dictated it to her secretary—is the most graphic.

"Every newspaper office in the country is besieged by women who want to get into it—old women and young women, bright women and dull women, heartless women and scheming women,—out of every 500 of whom there ought to be at least one good 'prospect.'

"Very few of them succeed and when they get the job not more than one of the 500 makes good at it.

"There's no mystery about that at either end of the story. Newspaper work is the most fascinating and the hardest work in the world.

"To be a successful newspaper woman you have to act like a woman and think like a man.

"You must be courageous, resourceful, quick-witted, determined, energetic, obstinate, dogged, hopeful, enthusiastic, light-hearted, easily moved to tears, sympathetic, in love with life and deeply interested in human beings of all grades and both sexes.

"And you must wear as a mask over these qualities an exterior of some sort of feminine appeal, for the male editor hates a masculine woman no matter how clever she is or what good stories she can write,—and he is in a way partially right.

Mrs. Winifred Black

"To be a successful newspaper woman you must think like a man and be

"Courageous
"Quick-witted
"Determined
"Energetic
"Enthusiastic
"Sympathetic."

"Be feminine—the male editor hates a masculine woman no matter how clever she is or what good stories she can write and he is, in a way, partially right."

"Newspaper work is the most fascinating and hardest work in the world."

"A newspaper woman can get a lot of stories that a man can't touch just because she is a woman.

"Half her value to her paper is not only her feminine appearance and appeal but her feminine point of view.

"She must be first of all a human being and after that a woman and after that a newspaper reporter!

"And no woman can do real newspaper work unless she starts in as a reporter and keeps on reporting in one way or the other until she dies—or quits the game.

"That's the trouble with a lot of the girls who want to go into the business. They like to meet distinguished people. They want to see their own names in print and they are crazy to give their opinions to the world before they're old or experienced enough to have any opinions to give. They all want to write editorials and signed stuff from the day they walk into the office and ask for a job.

"Newspaper editors make a great mistake when they allow a woman to do either of these things until she's been in the game long enough to know something about newspapers and what newspapers are really trying to do."

Mrs. Black's first "break" into the game came when, as a young girl, some letters she had written her sister were published in the Chicago Tribune. That gave her the newspaper idea. Later, her family sending her to San Francisco, she applied for a berth with the Examiner, claiming she had had years of experience.

"The city editor gave me a chance and sent me to write the opening of a big flower show. I didn't know what to do or how to do it but I never said a word. I wrote the story on the steps of a step-ladder in the hall where the flower show was, turned it in to the office and went home with a raging sick headache. I was up before daylight in the morning and there was my story on the front page. I nearly died of heart failure.

"When the mist cleared from before my eyes, I observed, however, that somebody had written three paragraphs to start my story and in those three paragraphs was everything of the least importance in the article. I had forgotten to tell where the flower show was, who was conducting it, who won the prizes, how long the show would be open and what the prizes were."

But, for her first big story, she went out onto the street, fainted and was taken to the receiving hospital so she could investigate conditions there.

The feature was the means of an entire rebuilding of the city hospital system of San Francisco, the purchase of ambulances and the employment of matrons in both police stations and hospitals.

Her next "beat" was her visit to the leper settlement on the Island of Molokai.

By that time she was fairly launched in the newspaper world and did police reporting, murder trials, breach of promise cases, church quarrels, elopement stories, deserted mother "sob" stories, club activities, society; was dramatic critic for two years and supplemented this with book reviewing.

She was the first "foreign" newspaper correspondent—man or woman—to get into Galveston and send out the story of the great flood.

She interviewed Governor Taylor of Kentucky when he was hidden in the state house at Frankfort with militia surrounding the capital building and all the newspapers in the country trying to get a look-in.

When President Harrison made his celebrated tour of Western America and refused to be interviewed she "scooped" the world by hiding under the dining table in his private car until she'd gotten an edge on his conversation.

But what she is chiefly beloved for in the West is her newspaper work in behalf of incurable children. Under her signature of Annie Laurie, which she uses today in the San Francisco Examiner she sponsored a movement in behalf of—and was largely responsible for—the building of special hospital wards for incurable children, eye-and-ear cases and for tubercular children.

When William Randolph Hearst bought the New York American she went to it from San Francisco with Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, and Charles Dryden, the baseball writer.

But the the following is illustrative of one of her "stunts." She went to Denver for a six weeks' leave of absence with Julian Hawthorne, Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Homer Davenport, married a Denver newspaper man and stayed there for 12 years, going to Kansas City to help her husband build up the Kansas City Post. In a year that daily's circulation was raised from 20,000 to 125,000.

"We woke up Kansas City," she reminisced, "with a series of performances calculated to stir even the most sluggish blood, which included getting up the first Fourth of July procession ever held there since the War of the Rebellion."

During a subsequent Independence-Day celebration there several children were badly hurt by firecrackers, and the next year Mrs. Black and her husband put over an ordinance prohibiting the use of dangerous fireworks by publishing the names and telephone numbers of the entire board of aldermen on the front page and telling the women of Kansas City to let the "city fathers" know how they felt about the matter.

On the third day of this personal exploitation the aldermen visited the newspaper office in a body and begged Mrs. Black to call the women off, by promising to pass the ordinance.

Again, in Kansas City, Mrs. Black was instrumental in getting out the first extra of a murder verdict ever published in that intrepid city and sold 10,000 copies on the steps of her rival paper's office within ten minutes after the edition was out!

In all this time, however, she never lost her connection with the Hearst newspapers, with her details including the Thaw case, the San Francisco earthquake-fire and the St. Louis cyclone, and making an investigation of Lloyd George's old-age pension.

On her return to Denver from the scene of the 'Frisco fire disaster, she was instrumental in ferreting out various unreliable insurance companies that refused payment of policies during the fire, by publishing a classified list of the firms together with the degree in which they were or were not co-operating with their stricken policy-holders.

"I got my information first-hand from San Francisco by confidential telegrams," she remarked, "and kept up with the situation day by day. Other newspapers in the country saw what we were doing and followed suit."

Twelve years ago she returned to San Francisco,—her "home office,"—where she at once became one of the most potential influences of the Examiner, and where everybody knows her as Annie Laurie through her featured editorials.

In addition to these, however, she is one of the drawing cards of the Newspaper Feature Service, and receives unlimited correspondence from women in all parts of the globe asking her counsel and opinions in diverse matters.

She is a woman with a heart in her and a brain that is true as steel. Evidence of this is the powerful influence she exerted two years ago when she visited every paper in the Hearst group in what she calls a "stirring-up" campaign against the narcotic evil.

She is a known friend of the struggling newspaper man or girl who can show bona fide talent, yet she hates a work slacker.

"City editors," she said, "are always complaining they can't get good newspaper women any more. Part of it is the woman's fault,—and part of it, the editor's.

"Some city editors fall in love with every girl who comes into the office and when the city editor falls in love with a girl—she will either have to show him 'where to get off' as she would probably say, or she might as well give up the business. Everybody in the office will hate her, the city editor will 'shield her' from hard work and unpleasant ex-

(Continued on page 37)

A. N. P. A. MOVING UPTOWN AFTER 20 YEARS IN WORLD BUILDING

History of 37 Year Old Association of Publishers Told—Began with 51 Members, 500 Now Enrolled—Present Committees Named

AFTER 20 years of continuous operation from the World Building, 63 Park Row, New York, the American Newspaper Publishers Association this week completed arrangements to move November 2, to new offices in up-town New York at 270 Madison avenue, where it will occupy the fifteenth floor.

This represents the third change of headquarters in the association's 37 years of history.

Prior to accupying offices in the World Building the A. N. P. A. was first located at Temple Court and then in the Potter Building, New York.

The move up-town is in line with the general newspaper migration and in order to be in a more central location for the convenience of out-of-town members visiting New York.

Continuous and steady growth has characterized A. N. P. A. history since its organization in 1887 under the direction W. H. Brearley, Detroit Evening News; J. Ambrose Butler, Buffalo News, and J. C. Briggs, Columbus (O.) State Journal. The first president was W. M. Singerly, of the Philadelphia Record.

From a membership of 51 newspapers, the association now numbers in excess of 500. S. E. Thomason, Chicago Tribune, is the present president. L. B. Palmer is in his 20th year as general manager.

In 1912 the association boasted of handling 6,000 claims of members annually. During 1923, 13,000 claims were received for collection. In 1923 also 15,000 reports were supplied to members.

An important highlight in the association's history is the establishment in 1913 of the Bureau of Advertising. The Bureau is the result of a consolidation in that year of the Daily Newspaper Association, United Newspapers, Inc., and the National Newspapers Association. The Bureau of Advertising's first committee consisted of J. F. MacKay, Toronto Globe; H. F. Gunnison, Brooklyn Eagle; Hilton U. Brown, Indianapolis News; Fleming Newbold, Washington Star; Jason Rogers, then of the New York Globe, and the late John R. Rathom, of the Providence Journal and Bulletin.

The Bureau has grown considerably since its formation in 1923. Now it has offices in Chicago and San Francisco, in addition to headquarters in New York.

William A. Thomson, is director of the Bureau of Advertising; Thomas H. Moore, associate director; F. Guy Davis, western manager; and Thomas L. Emory, Pacific Coast Manager.

The present committee in charge of the Bureau has as chairman, William F. Rogers, Boston Transcript, and Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times, vice-chairman.

Other members are J. M. Cleary, Chicago Tribune; Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune; W. C. R. Harris, Toronto Star; William I. Hofmann, Portland Oregonian; D. D. Moore, Fort Worth Record; Fleming Newbold, Washington Star; David B. Plum, Troy Record; George M. Rogers, Cleveland Plain Dealer; Allison Stone, Providence Journal; Louis Wiley, New York Times, and John B. Woodward, Chicago Daily News.

The work of both the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and its Bureau of Advertising, is efficient and continuous, rather than sensational.

A list of A. N. P. A. committees, with the names of the various chairmen, perhaps best of all sums up the association's annual work. Such a list, the committees of 1924, are herewith published for the first time:

Special Standing Committee: H. N. Kellogg, chairman.

Paper Committee: E. P. Adler, Davenport (Ia.) Times, chairman.

Postal Committee: J. D. Barnum, Syracuse (N. Y.) Post-Standard, chairman.

Committee on Federal Laws: A. L. Miller, Battle Creek (Mich.) Enquirer-News, chairman.

Committee on Arbitration Contracts: Victor F. Lawson, Chicago Daily News, chairman.

Committee on Open Shop: D. D. Moore, Fort Worth Record, chairman.

Committee on National Forest Resources: E. H. Baker, Cleveland Plain Dealer, chairman.

Committee on Circulation Audits: Hilton U. Brown, Indianapolis News, chairman.

Committee on Printing Trade Schools: W. J. Pattison, Scranton Republican, chairman.

Committee on Traffic: E. M. Antrim, Chicago Tribune; Jos. A. Blondell, Baltimore Sun, and James P. Considine, Philadelphia North American, members, no chairman.

Topics Committee: H. C. Adler, Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, chairman.

Committee on Radio: W. A. Strong, Chicago Daily News, chairman.

Budget Committee: Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune, chairman.

Sells Lebanon Pioneer

Ben F. McKey, editor and owner of the Lebanon (Ind.) Pioneer, has sold the newspaper to Alva H. Wyncoop and J. Ralph Cunningham, of the Lebanon Daily Reporter.

ADVERTISE PEACE

Gov. W. R. Farrington Thus Urges Advertising Men

Advertising is the best pathway to peace, in the opinion of Gov. Wallace R. Farrington, of Hawaii, organizer of the Honolulu Advertising Club, who, recently addressing the San Francisco Advertising Club, spoke a message to all advertising men everywhere.

W. R. Farrington

"The advertising of peace," he said, "is one of the most powerful weapons we have against future wars.

"The most important duty of an advertising club, I believe, should be to sell the idea of the responsibilities of citizenship to our people.

"The principles of good advertising are based on truth with an honest product behind the advertisement. We should apply that same principle of truth and honest goods to our civic and community affairs.

"Let us sell our own country to our own people."

With this plea Governor Farrington told how advertising had benefited the Hawaiian Islands.

He cited the wide publicity given to the idea that Hawaii is the key to the Pacific ocean in time of war or peace as the main factor in influencing the American people to accept Hawaii's plea for annexation in 1898.

NEWARK PAPER STARTS PROFIT-SHARING PLAN

L. T. Russell, Publisher Newark Ledger, Will Give Stock Equal to 5 Per Cent of Yearly Wages to Employes

L. T. Russell, owner of the Newark (N. J.) Ledger, has announced a profit-sharing plan for employes of the newspaper by which each employe who saves 5 per cent of his yearly salary is given a share of 7 per cent preferred stock in the company equal to 5 per cent of his salary.

Each participant in this co-operative plan must carry $1,000 life insurance for each member of his or her family, if acceptable as an insurance risk, in case he or she has dependents.

Well-known bankers will be trustees of the profit-sharing arrangement and men will be elected from each of the various departments to carry on the work.

The equivalent of 5 per cent of each worker's wages will be presented on the following conditions:

That each worker to share in this co-operative plan signify his or her intention within 10 days; that the 5 per cent stock bonus is contingent upon the worker making a like saving out of his wages, as will be evidenced by savings bank account, Building & Loan, or other approved security, resulting in the worker having at the end of the year a net saving account of 10 per cent of the full year's wages.

The only other condition is that the employes' attitude toward the institution is such as to satisfy his or her associates that they are in good faith living up to the spirit of the co-operative ownership as though it were their own property and the responsibility personal.

BUTLER (PA.) EAGLE OCCUPIES NEW $250,000 PLANT

THE Butler (Pa.) Eagle, now in its 55th year, last week celebrated the opening of its handsome, new $250,000 newspaper plant, when in one evening more than 12,000 persons inspected the various departments.

The new building has a frontage on Diamond street of 60 feet, and extends a distance of 108 feet on Jackson street. It was constructed of Indiana limestone, brick, cement and steel, thoroughly fireproof throughout. There are 18,444 square feet of floor space.

A New Home Edition of 40 pages was issued recently in which the plant was described by word and pictures.

Business offices are located on the main floor in a large lobby with U-shaped marble counters. This office is 60 x 35 feet, the woodwork being of mahogany. The composing room at the rear is 60 x 50 feet, containing a battery of five Linotypes.

The editorial rooms are on the second floor, occupying the front of the building, while a job printing department is at the rear of this floor.

The pressroom is located in the basement, lighted on two sides by large windows. The Eagle recently installed a 32-page Hoe press. When the newspaper moved into its new home, the plant was equipped with all new, modern machinery for printing an evening edition of approximately 13,000 circulation.

It is published in the county seat of Butler county, Pennsylvania, and is the only daily newspaper in the county, distributing more Eagles daily than there are homes in the section.

Levi M. Wise is president of the Eagle Printing Company; B. L. Wise is business manager; John Laing Wise, managing editor; and Vernon L. Wise, advertising manager. The Eagle Printery, commercial printers, is a separate organization, of which Gerald L. Wise is the proprietor.

PUSHCART CRADLED CIRCULATOR'S FORTUNE

Louis Weinstock, Immigrant Boy Who Began Vending Foreign Language Dailies on New York's East Side Now General Manager of Company Which Distributes More Than Half a Million Newspapers Daily

By WARREN BASSETT

O. HENRY would have liked Louis Weinstock.

The gifted weaver of stories about "Bagdad-On-the-Subway" would have recognized in him the hero of an East Side romance.

It is a business romance, of course, minus the dramatic twist, the startling denouement, but inextricably woven with the pulse of life in that curious teeming section of New York which lies east of Third avenue.

Twenty-nine years ago Louis Weinstock was an immigrant boy selling newspapers from a pushcart on Orchard, Rivington, Forsyth and Chrystie streets in the heart of the Ghetto.

Today he is part owner and general manager of the Metropolitan News Company, the largest independent company in the world specializing in newspaper delivery.

Every day a fleet of 60 motor trucks from the Metropolitan News places more than half a million newspapers on 4,200 dealers' stands. These stands are dotted over an area more than 12 miles long and several miles wide from Park Row to the distant fringes of the Bronx.

Nearly half of these newspapers are English dailies, the remainder foreign papers printed in a half-dozen different languages. The company handles 22 foreign and 12 English papers.

Regarded merely as a remarkably efficient newspaper delivery system, the Metropolitan News Company is interesting, for efficient distribution is one of the most important keys to newspaper success in New York where carrier systems are unknown and circulation depends entirely upon newstand sales.

But a more interesting angle is the part the news company has played in promoting the sales of English newspapers in sections where they hardly penetrated. Today the company delivers approximately 200,000 English morning dailies. It also delivers more than 300,000 foreign language papers. It takes orders from the 4,200 dealers for the 34 newspapers on its list and buys wholesale from the publishers. It is an intricate business. The prices of the papers vary, the size of the individual orders vary. Forty bookkeepers are employed to keep accounts straight.

With its fleet of motor trucks, its carefully planned routes, and dealer contacts, the company is in a strategic position either to aid or neglect a publisher. But it has always aided, and for that reason has grown to its present proportions. It maintains a sliding scale of delivery charges to the dealers ranging from $1.50 to as low as 10 cents per week. For a dime a week the small dealer in an outlying section gets his stock of papers as regularly as the subway station dealer whose order runs well into the hundreds. He is encouraged to stay in business, and it helps newspaper sales by furnishing the dailies one more place to display their wares.

The company aids newspapers in other ways—for instance, by delivering mail copies of foreign language papers to post-offices and railroad stations. New York's foreign papers have almost as many out-of-town subscribers as they have sales in the city. The outgoing mail is a problem. The Metropolitan News Company handles this mail taking it to the post-offices befor the regular city delivery begins. For a charge, of course. But it is far cheaper than if each publisher bought his own trucks and employed his own handlers.

And then they tell the story of the newspaper that needed new presses. Its funds for improvement were low, but its circulation was good. Louis Weinstock believed the paper had a great future. He came to the rescue, and the Metropolitan News Company lent the money which bought the presses.

Louis Weinstock at his desk today.

Beyond all this the outstanding service of the Metropolitan News Company has been its development of English newspaper sales in foreign sections.

How this was done brings us back to Louis Weinstock and his pushcart.

The general manager of the Metropolitan News Company, now 42, came to the United States from Austria with his parents at the age of 11. Like most immigrants, the Weinstocks settled on the East Side. Louis could not speak English, but neither could the majority of dwellers in his section which lies above Canal street and east of Chrystie.

In those days it was a tough district, and it is no drawing-room even to-day. The population was predominantly foreign. Italian, Yiddish, Polish, German, Russian, and a dozen hybrid languages were spoken.

It was as hard to buy an English daily there as it would be to-day on the streets of Moscow or Vienna, perhaps harder. The demand for papers was so low New York circulators refused to go to the expense of delivering in this tortuous, crowded section. Virtually the only newspapers read were Jewish dailies.

Eleven-year-old Weinstock jumped into the circulation business as a newsboy. He sold only Jewish papers. After a year of this he got the idea of a delivery service to newsdealers. At that time each dealer had to carry his own bundle of papers from the newspaper offices. Weinstock planned a route, interviewed the dealers, constructed a pushcart and inaugurated his own independent delivery system. The pushcart was more like a baby carriage—a short, deep box set on four wheels of slightly varying sizes. He handled three evening Jewish papers.

Weinstock and his first delivery cart.

For five years Weinstock trundled his pushcart over his route, collecting ten cents a week from each dealer for his services. He kept the orders in his head and collected the money for the papers in advance, for now he was buying directly from the publishers. If a dealer was prosperous and sold a larger number of papers than the average he charged a little more—15 cents.

Nineteen hundred was the year of the great East Side newspaper delivery merger. With four other East Side route owners, Weinstock formed the Metropolitan News Service. His partners at that time were Morris Eisenman, Meyer Rosen, Charles Hertzig and Joseph Kalmanoff, and they are still his partners. Into the common pool Weinstock placed his route, which was netting him at that time an income of $18 a week. The five shareholders voted themselves a salary of $10 a week each. Their office was a basement which opened into a coal cellar. It was here they stored their pushcarts at night. At one time their revenue was so low they discussed abandoning the partnership and returning to their old routes. Then the Jewish Morning Journal started, and the increased business tided them over.

The five partners worked efficiently and the business grew. The East Side grew also; English was mastered, and there began to be a demand for English newspapers. In 1912 they entered the English field. They encouraged their dealers to take a few English dailies along with the large orders of foreign papers. They worked consistently, and soon the New York Herald, the Times, the Tribune and others began to appear on stands that had never carried them before. And slowly the circulations of these papers in the foreign sections covered by the Metropolitan News Company began to mount.

Within a few years the company was placing 40,000 English language newspapers on East Side stands every day, in addition to a larger number of foreign papers. The company bought from all publishers, delivered, and charged the dealers a delivery fee. With the advent of automobiles, the company motorized its equipment and became the first automobile news company delivery service.

As the Jewish population north of 125th street and in the Bronx began to grow the Metropolitan News expanded its service to embrace this territory.

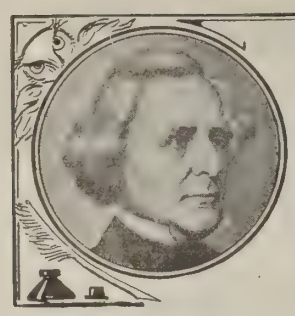
This brought a friendly territorial conflict with the American News Company, which for many years had held exclusive delivery rights for all English morning newspapers in all parts of the city. "Friendly contest" is correct, as the correspondence files will show. The American News distributed magazines as well as newspapers. The publishers had allowed Weinstock's company to deliver English dailies on the East Side because the American News maintained no delivery in this unproductive section. Uptown the American News delivered both Jewish and English dailies; the latter by contract the former by purchase on order.

The American News requested Weinstock to discontinue distributing his quota of 40,000 English dailies. A conference was called. The Metropolitan News Company asked a compromise which would portion certain territories between the companies, allowing both to deliver English and foreign papers. This compromise failed.

It was time for ultimatums.

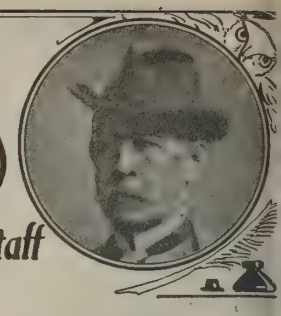
"I agreed to drop the English dailies," Weinstock declares, "but I warned the American News I would contract with the German, Jewish, and Italian dailies for exclusive delivery."

Weinstock kept his word. He obtained exclusive contracts. The situation changed.



The orders for these foreign papers were so large, delivery could be maintained by the Metropolitan News at a reasonable cost. But orders for English dailies were so small the American News could not make deliveries in outlying sections now that they had lost the foreign papers.

This was in January, 1923. A year later, on Jan. 1, 1924, because of the increasing cost of delivery the American News Company gave up its New York City newspaper contracts, recommending that the Metropolitan News Company be given much of the business. In the resulting readjustment of the New York delivery system the Metropolitan News took over the distribution of more than 200,000 English dailies in the section it had developed—and the lower and upper East Side, and the Bronx.



The Metropolitan News Company is an intricate business to-day. It employs more than 200 men, and owns a large garage and office building at 47-53 Chrystie street. It has not deserted the East Side, where the five pushcart news vendors first formed their partnership.

And what does Louis Weinstock, who supervises the delivery of half a million newspapers a day know about newspaper

(Continued on page 37)

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Illness and Death of James Gordon Bennett, Sr.—Editorial Tributes to Him—His Funeral and Various Comments on His Career

MR. BENNETT, Senior's health had begun to fail in 1871, and during the summer he rarely left his picturesque home at Fort Washington, intrusting the management of the Herald almost entirely to his son. There, in peace and quietude he rested from his arduous labors, spending hours in his large grape arbor, with his feathered pets—macaws and parrots; with his greenhouse and son's gymnasium in the rear, and the flower garden overshadowed by tall forest trees in front. In slippered feet, with stacks of books and a complete Herald file at command in the house, he leisurely read and wrote, thus passing the hours in what was his Elysium. An interesting incident in this connection was related by Embree Hill, a policeman who was transferred to Carmansville, his post being along what was called the Bennett road.

"On my first patrol," said he, "I saw under an arbor a tall, white haired man, who looked as if he might have been a soldier, sitting reading. He said, 'Good morning, officer,' and I replied, 'Good morning, Sir.'

"Then he invited me to come into the arbor and sit down. When I demurred that I might get a complaint for doing so, he said:

"'God won't report you, and I'm sure I won't!'

"He was a wonderfully scholarly man with a great memory. He had been reading Burns when I came in, and could repeat to me from memory much of what he had read. I valued the talks which I had with him then and other occasions more than most anything else."

At this time the Rev. Henry A. Brann, assigned to the Fort Washington section as a parish, began his efforts to erect a Catholic church, and from his published Reminiscences, we quote the following interesting account of Mr. Bennett's liberal contribution to the new church:

"I called on James Gordon Bennett, then ill in his home on the Heights. He impressed me deeply as a very clever man, with a vein of sarcasm peculiarly Scotch, in his conversation. Hearing from me that I had been partially educated in Paris, he said:

'Well the French are fond of opera bouffe, and now they have an opera bouffe republic!'

"Mr. Bennett gave the ground on which the rectory of St. Elizabeth's Church is built and also $5,000 in cash. His son had the deeds made out, and handed me the check and was exceedingly courteous and generous to me. He was a good shot and fond of pigeon shooting and I always benefited by it, for after any of his shooting matches, I always lived sumptuously on the squabs he sent me."

All the Bennetts were good to St. Elizabeth's, including Miss Jeannette, who was then a school girl at Manhattanville Convent. Mrs. Bennett before her last trip to Europe, promised to put a steeple on the church, but unfortunately she died before accomplishing her purpose. She was kind and charitable to the poor, as was also Mrs. Charles O'Conor, although neither was a Catholic.

The present beautiful picture in the church is a copy by May of Murillo's "Immaculate Conception" and was the generous gift of the present Bennett's son.

Joseph Fisher gave the ground on which the church was built and his two daughters donated the main altar. The cornerstone was laid by the then Archbishop McCloskey on April 30, 1871.

The account of the laying of the cornerstone was written for the Herald by Joseph I. C. Clarke, the well known author of the poem, "Kelly and Burke and Shea."

Last Illness of Mr. Bennett

In the spring of 1872, Mr. Bennett's condition became serious, and he was permanently removed to his luxuriously furnished town house at 425 Fifth avenue, northeast corner of 38th street. He occupied the front room on the second floor of the mansion. Everything possible was done to effect a cure. Three eminent physicians, Doctors Ceccarini, Hammond and Lusk were in attendance and for a while his health improved under their treatment, and in fact at one time he was able to leave the house and walk a few steps on Fifth avenue. All the members of his family were then in Europe, where he had designed shortly to join them. He had been anxious a year previously to make the tour of Europe with his daughter Jeannette, intending to go with her after her graduation from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, but the state of his health prevented. However, in the spring of 1872, he again hoped to make the trip, though feeble and constantly under medical care, and his strong will and great anxiety to join his children abroad, buoyed him up almost till the end.

In May his son and daughter had sailed for Europe, where his wife was at the time, and he resolved if at all able, to join them in June.

However, it was not to be, for a short time after his last walk in front of his residence, he had a relapse and was thereafter confined to his bed until the end.

On May 21, realizing his critical condition, at his own request Archbishop McCloskey visited him at his bedside, heard his confession, and administered the last sacraments. He had repented of his sins and was again received into the Catholic Church, whose tenets and claims his independent spirit had frequently antagonized.

He was failing rapidly and his wife, son and daughter were cabled to when it was seen that his end was near.

On Saturday, May 25, he experienced a slight convulsive attack, accompanied by epileptic symptoms, in the nature of a paralytic stroke repeated 12 hours later with greater severity, exciting the gravest apprehension among his friends and medical attendants. The lower portion of his limbs had become partially paralyzed and helpless, but his mind was clear and he had the papers read to him each morning, commenting occasionally on the news of the day. As Mr. Hudson said:

"He entertained no false hopes; he was fully aware of his approaching end and spoke to his friends with philosophical resignation. He had had a presentiment of his death, for as far back as May 1, when the workmen had begun tearing down the old Herald Building on Nassau and Fulton streets (where the famous Bennett Building was to be erected), he said: 'Well, the old house is going; I must soon follow; my time has come.'"

The last hours of his existence were passed in an unconscious state, and during this time an ominous event occurred in the Herald Building—the main shaft of the presses broke to the great consternation of the mechanical staff.

When "the last hour arrived," as the Herald said: "he sank to sleep in death, calmly and peacefully and his soul passed away without a struggle." His death occurred at 25 minutes past 5 o'clock on the evening of Saturday, June 1, in the 77th year of his age.

Frederic Hudson, for 30 years associated with him in the editing and management of the Herald; his cousin, James Reid; Mr. Connery the managing editor, and Dr. Ceccarini, the family physician, were present at the time of his death; but sad to say, none of his own family were there to take his hand and bid him a fond farewell as he passed away.

A telegraph instrument had been installed in the back parlor of the Bennett mansion early in the progress of its owner's illness, placed in charge of Miss Jennie Sibley, of the Herald's business staff, and the sad news of Mr. Bennett's decease was instantly made known to the world.

Tributes to the Great Editor

The death of Mr. Bennett was received by the entire press of the United States as an event of signal importance, and all the New York City newspapers, with one exception, published long and adequate obituaries. The Herald itself in an editorial review of his career, dwelt on his great journalistic achievements, and made special mention of his characteristic generosity.

"He was a man of large and ready charity, but he gave without ostentation and preferred that his contributions should be known only to their recipients. No appeal for a worthy object was ever made to him in vain; and there are many living witnesses to the promptness and liberality with which he responded when invited to relieve distress or to aid a useful or deserving enterprise."

The Tribune's editorial tribute was the most elaborate, exhaustive and heartfelt of any, and was from the pen of Mr. Greeley.

The New York Associated Press adopted the following resolution on the death of Mr. Bennett:

"Resolved, That his long and eventful connection with the newspaper press of the country, in a career of unexampled success and prosperity, was the result of his great foresight, energy and industry; that in all these qualities, the example of Mr. Bennett inspired the greatest enterprise in journalism in the United States and throughout the world, and must, therefore, for all time, leave their impression for good in the diffusion of knowledge and the advancement of the Press."

(To Be Continued Next Week)

SIXTEEN DAILIES WILL BROADCAST PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION RETURNS

United Press Furnishing Its Report to WEAF and Allied Stations—Hearst Newspapers Also to Place Results On the Air

NEWSPAPERS all over the country are planning to make use of radio as "an extension of the bulletin board" in broadcasting election returns next week.

This is apparent from a list compiled by EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week, which shows that at least 16 newspapers intend to give their readers first news on the outcome of the political campaign via the air. These 16 newspapers, operating from different stations, virtually blanket the nation.

Returns which will be broadcast will be supplied by the United Press Associations and the Hearst newspapers.

Operating from station WEAF, the United Press Associations' returns will be used by the New York Sun. Two special wires are being laid from U. P. headquarters into the WEAF studio, where Hugh Baillie, member of the U. P. staff, will prepare the returns for radio announcing.

From WEAF the same announcements will be relayed to broadcasting stations which for election night will be taken over by the Baltimore Evening Sun, Detroit News, Boston Post, Pittsburgh Press and Buffalo Evening News.

Although United Press returns are being used, the various stations will announce that the broadcasting is through the courtesy of the local newspaper.

The Cleveland Press, the Cincinnati Post, and the Rochester Times Union will broadcast through their own local stations.

The New York Sun will have as competitor the New York American, which will broadcast the returns through WNYC, the municipal broadcasting station.

In this service, according to the American, will be combined "the extensive news-gathering forces of the Hearst newspapers throughout the country." Station WNYC claims a broadcasting record of more than 7000 miles.

Edwin Jones Clapp, editor of the American, will be at the WNYC microphone. In addition to returns, an elaborate entertainment program has been planned.

Reception of the American's returns will not be confined to those owning receiving sets. Five receiving outfits, equipped with amplifyers, will be installed in different sections of the city.

Ralph Edmunds, program manager of station WRC, Washington, telegraphed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week that election returns will be handled by the Washington Times from their studio and will be broadcast through his station.

News bulletins on the election will be sent to the Times," through Universal Service, International News Service, Postal Telegraph Company, and Western Union," Edmunds said.

In addition, correspondents of the Washington Times in nearby states will send supplementary returns, he stated. Special wires from the National Headquarters of the three political parties are also being installed in Station WRC. In the Times studio a corps of expert political analysts will read and digest returns for the radio audience. A musical program has been arranged to cover intermissions between announcements.

Avery C. Marks Jr., managing editor of the Times, wired that it was probable that during certain periods WRC, Washington, will be hooked up with the Radio Corporation of America's stations in New York and Schenectady.

The Milwaukee-Wisconsin News will broadcast election returns over WSOE, the Milwaukee School of Engineering.

The Chicago Herald-Examiner, according to F. W. Carson, managing editor, is making plans to use Station KYW, to broadcast returns. The Herald-Examiner has no regular broadcasting station.

Barrett Andrews, publisher of the Boston American, announced his newspaper would broadcast returns gained from independent sources over WNAC, the station operated by the Shepard Stores, Boston. He was careful to state that he would not make use of the Associated Press service for radio purposes.

On the Pacific Coast election returns will be put on the air by the Oakland Tribune and the San Francisco Bulletin.

Classified Men Reelect Miller

Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, Southeastern Division, re-elected A. T. Miller, classified manager of the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner, chairman at its annual convention held in Atlanta, Ga. The main speaker at convention sessions was John L. Irwin, of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, president of the national association.

Planning New French Paper

An evening newspaper printed in the French language and in support of the conservative party, will start publication in Montreal in January, according to an announcement made by Hon. Rodolphe Monty, at a meeting of the Liberal Conservative Association, October 27.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

THE STAR REPORTER

I'm a pippin; I admit it!
Did you guess it? Well, you hit it!
I'm the Guy that Does assignments
That are so par-tic-u-lar

That the man who owns the sheet is Hypnotized; that's how complete is My influence
In the Office
Where I'm headlined as a Star!

I'm Aurelius, Epictetus,
Dickens, Balzac, Meningetus!
I'm a literary Wonder!
And they let my copy run!

Every blooming, blasted, blighted
Line of mine is copyrighted,
And the Copy
Desk was never
Known to cut a single one!

All the Cubs look on and wonder
At my Literary Thunder!
How they chew their Nails and hope that
They may climb to where I am!

I can mix my moods and tenses,
Put my shoe-shines in expenses;
I can split Infinitives and
Never care a tinker's dam!

I'm a Star! . . . A Star Reporter!
I'm the Editorial Snorter!
When I go to Draw my pay the Cashier stands Eyes Front! Salute!

So you've guessed it? . . . Well, you've hit it!
I'm a Wonder; I admit it!
I'm the Office
Cap Courageous,
With a System that's a Beaut!

Probing New York Political Ads

District Attorney Joab Banton started probe this week of a charge made by Arthur Garfield Hays, state chairman of the La Follette-Wheeler campaign that eight New York Corporations were publishing advertisements in New York newspapers urging the election of Coolidge and Dawes. Mr. Hays cited the corporations as violating the New York law against political aid for candidates.

Jewish Daily Builds in Chicago

The New York Jewish Daily Forward is erecting a new two-story stone building in Chicago for the accommodation of its western readers and advertisers, at Kedzie avenue and 13th street. The new equipment in the new building will consist of a Goss speed press and additional linotypes.

Duplex S. F. Address Changed

The western office of the Duplex Printing Press Company has been changed from the Chronicle Building, San Francisco, to the De Young Building. The local staff has been increased. F. H. Boynton is manager.

Winnipeg Daily to Use Color

A new recruit to use of color in newspaper advertising is the Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press, according to an announcement made this week by Bruce Campbell, promotion manager. Color page advertising will be printed commencing Nov. 12, in the Free Press Prairie Farmer and the Free Press Saturday magazine section.

COMPTROLLER NAMED FOR R. HOE & CO., INC.

R. Earle Anderson Appointed by Directors of Re-organized Corporation—Other Officers Continue—Open Shop Approved

R. Earle Anderson was appointed Comptroller of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., printing press manufacturers, at the first regular meeting of the board of directors of the company, since its control passed into the hands of a syndicate of New York bankers, headed by the Guaranty Company of New York. The meeting was held Oct. 30, at the company's office in New York.

Directors of the board include: Richard Kelly, president, R. Hoe & Co., Inc.; Harold Stanley, president, Guaranty Company of New York; John W. Cutler, of the Edward B. Smith & Co.; Arthur I. Hoe, R. Hoe & Co., Inc.; F. G. Coburn, manager, industrial department, Sanderson & Porter; and Boudinot Atterbury, assistant vice-president, Guaranty Company of New York.

At the request of the board, Mr. Kelly, who has been with the business since 1886 and has been president since 1920, has agreed to remain as president and general manager in entire charge of operations and personnel. Other officers will continue as before, with the addition of Mr. Anderson.

The board discussed various plans for increasing service to customers and enlarging output to take care of the growing demand for Hoe presses. Mr. Kelly spoke of the favorable experience of the company under open-shop methods since the successful conclusion of the strike in 1923 and expressed his intention to continue the open-shop policy, which policy was approved by the board.

FLAHERTY RESIGNS

Quits as General Manager, N. Y. Bulletin—Succeeded by P. H. Desmond

Frank B. Flaherty has resigned as general manager of the New York Evening Bulletin, a newspaper established late last June by Frederick W. Enwright, Boston and Lynn, Mass., publisher.

He has been succeeded by Peter H. Desmond, who on Monday this week resigned as general manager of the Boston Telegram, also an Enwright publication. Desmond has been associated with the Telegram four and a half years. Lewis Fuller, formerly business manager of the Telegram, has been promoted to fill Desmond's place.

When Flaherty became associated with Enwright in the management of the Evening Bulletin, he informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER that he was "making money in real estate, and was drafted by Enwright for this general management position much against my will."

Flaherty was for many years in charge of the New York Evening Telegram and later the New York Herald under James Gordon Bennett.

NIND HEADS BUSINESS PAPERS

Association Announces Agency Rating System at New York Meet

Formation of an advertising agency rating system similar to that now directed by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association was announced at the annual convention of the Associated Business Papers, Inc., held in New York this week.

The committee on advertising agency relations, in charge of this new department of the association, reported that advertising agencies were paying more attention to business publications than ever before.

John M. Nind, Jr., of the Periodical Publishing Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., was elected president. Malcome Muir of the McGraw-Hill Company was named vice-president, and E. A. Scott was re-elected treasurer. Jesse Neal remains as executive secretary.

JOURNALISM TEACHER PRAISES SMALL TOWN AS NEWSPAPER FIELD

Stanford Man Says Large Opportunities There for Reporters Who Are Disinclined to Leave the "Old Home Town"

By ANDREW R. BOONE

LEAVE home? Go to the city?

It's an old problem and plenty of answers have been duly prepared and issued, but after all, why leave home?

The questions come from Buford O. Brown, assistant professor of journalism at Stanford University, champion of everything that is small town—including newspapers.

He politely agrees with H. I. Phillips who wrote recently in EDITOR & PUBLISHER urging young men and young women to start their journalistic careers in a small town, to "stay six years, but don't stay longer," as far as the starting is concerned.

But he is even more enthusiastic than Mr. Phillips and openly declares that opportunity knocks as insistently and as loudly in the smaller communities as in the cities, even though the pinnacle of income-earning may be shared only by a few in the more crowded places.

When Professor Brown graduated from the University of Missouri in 1912 with the degree of Bachelor of Journalism, he considered joining a city staff, but turned, finally, to the small town.

He was editor of the Plainview (Tex.) Evening Herald, issuing to 1,800 subscribers on Tuesday and Friday, for two years.

He ran the Vernon Record in 1919 and 1920, and in both those years, the Record won the Texas State Press Association's prize for being the best small newspaper in the Lone Star state. The Record issues bi-weekly to 3,000 readers.

His last assignment saw him as editor of the Electra News, a weekly with 1,500 circulation.

A year ago he went to Stanford University as assistant professor, where he now champions the small paper, weekly, bi-weekly or daily, to his students in journalism.

"Why leave the old home town?" he asks the boys and girls in his classes. "Why not stay there forever?

"If you like the small town, hang up your hat and make yourself at home."

And he cites examples calculated to win them over to the less hectic life he espouses. For example:

"A few years ago there came into my office at the University of Texas a young man whose introductory remark was, 'It's ——— to live in a town like this; I'm going to Chicago!'

"For that man there was no place in the small town. However, if a man cares for the small town, he need not seek the city in order to be adequately remunerated. And I will not drag in those forms of compensation other than money which are so often urged in favor of the small town.

"Only this week I saw an advertisement in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of a newspaper in an Illinois town of 10,000 whose managing editor received $150 a week.

"Yesterday I learned of a tri-weekly published in a California town of 4,500 whose editors say they 'only made $20,000 during the past two years—and conditions were bad.'

"I saw the auditor's report on a weekly paper in a town of 4,300 in Texas which paid $1,200 rental, $1,000 depreciation, allowed the manager a salary of $3,600 and showed a trifle less than $4,000 net profit for 1922.

"A graduate from the University of Iowa landed 14 years ago in a northwest Texas town of 1,200 without any other property than a suit of clothes and went to work on the town weekly at $25 a week. He has for several years owned the paper, including a substantial brick building, a good home and some other property. His income is more than $5,000 a year.

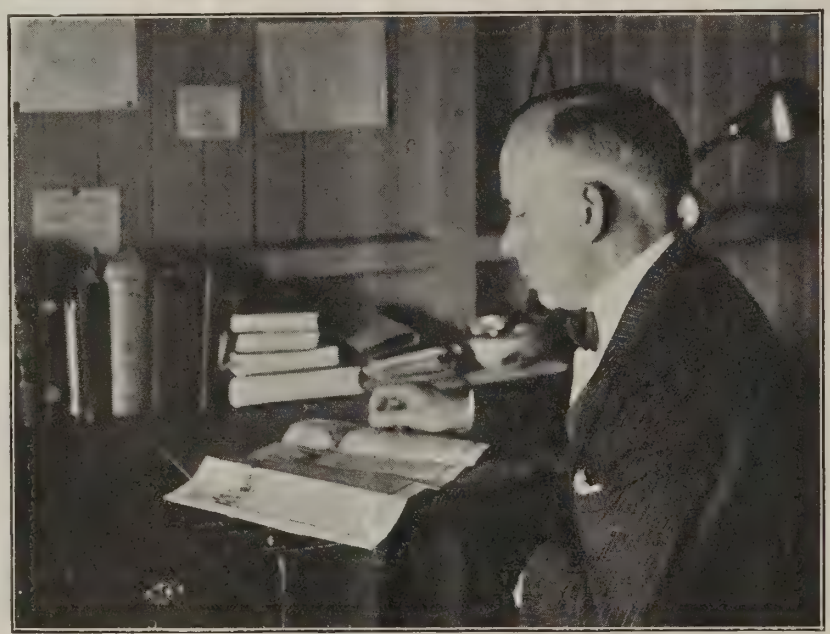
"Nor is it all confined to California and Texas. Last year the plant of a weekly newspaper in an Iowa town of 3,000 sold for $50,000. Undoubtedly such a paper adequately recompenses its editors.

"It is doubtless true that similar examples might be dug up pretty generally in every part of the country.

"I see no more reason why the country newspaper should be considered a stepping stone to the city than should the country bank be used as a stepping stone for getting into banking in the big towns.

"Of course, training in a country bank is valuable for the boy who wants to get into the city game later on. Nevertheless the country bank stands on its own feet and is generally thought of as providing a field amply large without serving as a training school for city banks.

"And surely, if we are not to become a nation of city dwellers the country must begin to stand on its own feet and be willing to pay adequately for men and women who enter its service.



"That is just the point I make—the country newspaper offers a salary at the start which compares favorably with that offered by the metropolitan daily, and the chances for advancement (even if there are no $25,000 jobs in the small towns) compares favorably with such chances in the city.

"Surely the opportunities for acquiring a competence, for helping work out the problems of the community, and for becoming an independent, representative, and respected citizen are amply adequate in the small town.

"I do not hesitate to say to aspiring reporters—If the problems of the small town and country appeal to you; if you want really to know the folks around you; if you care to share the joys and sorrows of your fellows in an intimate way, then you can find no better place than the country newspaper.

"The work is hard and hours are long, but it is a much more leisurely task than in the city.

"And any community of 2,000 or more into which a man goes will reward him adequately if he puts his life into it and in any reasonable way masters its problems."

Prof. Buford O. Brown

Beaverbrook Buys London Mansion

Lord Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Daily Express, and a group of British newspapers, has purchased for his home Stornoway House, one of the finest mansions in London. It is in the precincts of St. James Palace.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Nov. 3-8—Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Assn., annual meeting, Toronto.
Nov. 16-19—New England Advertising Clubs, annual convention, Hartford, Conn.
Nov. 17-19—Sigma Delta Chi, national convention, University of Indiana, Bloomington, Ind.
Nov. 19-20—National Forestry Conference, Washington, D. C.
Nov. 20-22—Michigan University Press Assn., annual fall session, Ann Arbor, Mich.
Nov. 20—Pacific Coast and Inter-Mountain Newspaper Executives, second annual meeting, San Francisco.
Nov. 23-25—Fourth District, A. A. C. W., annual convention, Nashville, Tenn.

A. J. BOYER DIES AT 85

Engineered Chicago Fire Scoop and Founded 17 Publications

Andrew Jackson Boyer, famous editor who scooped Chicago on the story of the Chicago fire, newspaper man since before the Civil War and owner of the Denver Times 50 years ago, died recently in Washington, D. C., at the age of 85 years, while compiling the story of his own interesting and vivid life.

Boyer's was a restless career, during which he founded and edited 17 publications, mostly in Colorado and California, the best known being the Denver Times and Oakland Tribune.

Agencies Heartily Approve

The consensus of opinions that prevail in the Agency field is expressed by the George Batten Company of New York:

"We are sure that you will continue to operate as efficiently in the future as you have in the past, and we hope that you will substantially increase the list of your papers, as we find that your service is the only means of solving the problems which both the Advertising Agencies and the Publishers have been attempting to overcome for years."

To "know" our proposition—is to use our service. Want more details?

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

A NEWSPAPER CHECKING PROOF SERVICE

W. E. LEWIS, PUBLISHER N. Y. TELEGRAPH, DIES

Succumbs After Two Years' Illness—Began Long Career on Old Kansas City News, Later Serving with Hearst Organization

William Eugene Lewis, president o the New York Morning Telegraph, die October 28, at his home in Great Neck L. I., following two years illness.

Mr. Lewis was born about 63 years ag in Cleveland and educated in Painsville O., and the Cleveland public schools. H deserted the practice of law for journalism, becoming a reporter for the ol Kansas City News. He became cit editor and managing editor of that news paper.

In 1891 he was offered and accepte the managing editorship of the Chicag Times, going to Washington three year later as correspondent.

When William Randolph Hearst pur chased the old New York Mornin Journal, he engaged Lewis as his repre sentative at Washington, but at the out break of the war with Spain, put him i command of the Hearst dispatch boat.

After the war, he first became a Albany correspondent for the Hears newspapers, and then was made manag ing editor of the Morning Telegraph. H held this position less than two year when he went to the Philadelphia Nort American as managing editor. In 190 when Edward R. Thomas obtained con trol of the Morning Telegraph, Lew returned to that newspaper, this tim forming an association that ended onl with his death.

New Jewish Weekly

Richmond (Va.) Virginia Jewis News, weekly, with A. Chardkoff a editor and owner, began publication re cently. It is the only paper of its kind i the State, carrying only Jewish new printed in English.

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?

Because

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

AND

The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.

Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

Over—

200,000

CIRCULATION

in less than 3 years.

—because Detroiters want it.

DETROIT TIMES

$2,000,000.00

The Printing Industry's Annual Tribute to Fire

Our first duty is to reduce this enormous economic waste by every possible means.

Our second duty is to face squarely the possibility of disaster and to plan in advance for any emergency.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

Brooklyn, New York

San Francisco Chicago New Orleans

Canadian Linotype Limited, Toronto

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

To protect publishers and printers against interruption of business, each of the Linotype Agencies carries in stock, ready for immediate shipment, enough machines to replace any plant in the territory which it serves.

Set entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Benedictine Series

AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY'S HUGE GROWTH DUE TO ADVERTISING

Newspapers Will Be Used More Than Ever in 1925, Harwood Declares—Stresses Value of Sunday Sport Page Position

NEWSPAPERS will be used more than ever before by the American Tobacco Company in its 1925 campaign, Frank Harwood, advertising manager, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

PERCIVAL HILL

Harwood would not disclose the company's budget. The advertising appropriation each year is based upon a percentage of the gross business, and it is understood this year's allotment will be increased.

During last year, American Tobacco Company spent a little less than $2,000,000 in newspaper advertising, and approximately $250,000 in the magazines.

"I am a firm believer in newspaper advertising, especially Sunday newspaper advertising," Harwood said.

"We are using more and more newspaper space all the time.

"This year, for practically the first time in history, we used the Sunday newspapers.

"For attracting a male audience the Sunday newspaper is one of the best ways I know of. Advertisers generally have not yet realized the value of the Sunday sporting pages.

"We put on a very successful drive this spring for Tuxedo tobacco, using the Sunday newspapers exclusively."

Details of all the company's 1925 advertising campaigns are to be handled by the following advertising agencies:

Williams & Cunnyngham, Chicago, handling the account of Bull Durham tobacco; W. K. Cochrane Advertising Agency, Chicago, Lord Salisbury cigarettes; Dorland Agency, Inc., New York, Piccadilly Little Cigars; Van Patten, Inc., New York, One Eleven cigarettes; H. K. McCann Company, New York, Piper Heidsick Chewing Tobacco; Frank Seaman, Inc., New York, Riz La Croix Cigarette Papers and Omar cigarettes; Lord & Thomas, New York, Blue Boar Smoking Tobacco and Lucky Strike cigarettes; The Harry Porter Company, New York, Melachrino, Milo Violets and Stroller cigarettes; Federal Advertising Agency, New York, Herbert Tareyton cigarettes; Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, Chicago, Roi Tan cigars; Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., New York, Tuxedo smoking tobacco; Lennen & Mitchell, Inc., New York, Pall Mall cigarettes and humidor sampler.

Mr. Harwood is a firm believer in the service which the agencies afford advertisers.

This last year Lord & Thomas, which handles the Lucky Strike account, put on a campaign using evening newspapers in every city in the United States, introducing the cigarette at special rates. This was a new idea taking place of the old plan used in the tobacco trade of giving away samples in the streets, and Mr. Harwood is particularly gratified at the response which came following the use of newspaper space.

From log cabin factory in little more than 50 years to a business whose net worth along with the financial resources of the company totaled $185,800,000 last December.

That is the thumbnail history of the American Tobacco Company.

And woven around that one paragraph is a story big enough to fill a weighty tome, which might well be captioned, "The Power of Advertising."

A member of the sceptic club or an anti-cigarette group might say it was the biography merely of "Mr. Cigarette Habit."

But how was the habit started in the first place? is the Socratic question in answer.

Fifty years ago Washington B. Duke manufactured tobacco in a little log shanty near Durham, N. C.

James B. Duke and Benjamin N. Duke, his sons, then young boys, peddled the product from door to door. As James grew older, he was attracted by that newfangled idea, advertising. The founding of the American Tobacco Company was his work. Mr. Duke created the American Tobacco Company while still in his thirties, saw it become the greatest enterprise of its kind in the world, withdrew from it and gave his attention to the international tobacco trade and in his later years has seen his interests multiply in many forms of commercial endeavor from the tobacco trade to the cotton industry and water power and electrical development.

He is about 67 years old now. But he has not forgotten how the loud shout of advertising preceded him, made his products known to the world, and assisted in their selling.

When the small tobacco firm of W. Duke Sons & Co. was expanding in its early days one of the first companies it purchased and merged was Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company, which dated back to the days of the Civil War.

This concern made tobacco of good quality, but did not have what has since come to be known as advertising vision. True, a lucky moment of inspiration had caused the owner of the firm to take the picture of a bull off a sauce bottle as he sat in a restaurant and adopt it as the trade-mark for his tobacco. So "Bull Durham" was originated. But Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company was content with just having a trade-mark.

It took the young, hustling James B. Duke to see its advertising value. It was under him that the picture of the bull advertising Bull Durham tobacco came to glower from barn walls, fences and billboards from one end of the country to the other.

The present head of the American Tobacco Company is Percival Smith Hill, who was elected president in 1912, after service for 10 years previous in important posts. The administration of Mr. Hill and his associate officials have been the American Tobacco Companies biggest years.

Mr. Hill believes in advertising and he has kept the names of the American Tobacco Companies' products continuously before the eyes of the people, through the newspapers, magazines, billboards, and last year through the latest type of advertising—sky-writing.

Because of this persistent advertising policy, there are but few men who do not know the companies' cigarettes and tobacco.

Fifty years ago Washington B. Duke manufactured tobacco in this little log shanty near Durham, N. C.; James B. Duke and Benjamin N. Duke, his sons, peddled the product from door to door. A persistent advertising policy has built up this concern until today it is a business whose net worth, along with financial resources of the company totaled $185,800,000 last December.

And now in charge of the company's advertising department, appointed by Mr. Hill, is Harwood, who is also vice-president of the Advertising Club of New York. Mr. Harwood came to the American Tobacco Company the first of this year, after ten years as advertising manager of the General Cigar Company.

246,043

was the average net paid daily circulation of The Baltimore Sun (morning and evening) for the

Six-Month Period Ending Sept. 30

The average net Sunday circulation of The Sunday Sun for the same period was 177,548.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

Who's Who in the CONSOLIDATED PRESS

A. F. HARRISON

A. F. HARRISON, Business Superintendent of the Consolidated Press in the Eastern Division, has an outstanding record in press association work. His notable service has been in the positions of field representative and sales manager, but he also has to his credit the covering of many big news events.

With the United Press for a number of years, Mr. Harrison played an important part, especially, in developing that system in the Central West and became General Sales Manager with offices in New York. He was Sales Manager of the Autocaster Service with John H. Perry's organization when he resigned to join the staff of the Consolidated Press.

Mr. Harrison has charge of the great Eastern field and makes his headquarters in the C. P. A. New York City offices, eighth floor, World Building.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

EDITORS HAVE CHOICE OF 1000 FEATURES

Sixty-Six Different Syndicates Supply Great Selection—146 Comics Listed in Editor & Publisher Annual Syndicate Directory

For the first time in journalistic history, the magnitude of the newspaper syndicate field was dramatized in figures in the EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S Annual Directory of Syndicate Features, printed last week.

The directory lists nearly 1,000 different features, representing the output of 66 organizations.

This total, 906 in exact numbers, does not include the titles of hundreds of serial fiction and short stories offered to newspapers by 18 different syndicates.

Of course, comic strips lead the list, with 146 different titles, including both daily and Sunday releases. Sporting editors have the choice of 46 different sporting page features; editors of women's pages can choose from 26 separate fashion services; there are seventeen different radio features; 32 daily and weekly cartoons; 17 editorials; 14 automobile page features; and, because of the present craze, 9 different cross word puzzles.

The list of syndicates represented in the directory follows:

American Radio Relay League.
Lewis Wilson Appleton Jr., Syndicate.
George Mathew Adams Service.
Allied Publishers Service.
Associated Newspapers.
Associated Editors.
Babson News Service.
Bell Syndicate.
Cosmos Newspaper Service.
Columbia Newspaper Service.
Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.
Chicago Journal of Commerce Syndicate.
Paul V. Collins Editorial Syndicate.
Copic Feature Syndicate.
Couch-Grimes Publishing Company.
D-P Syndicate.
Des Moines Register & Tribune Syndicate.
The Ellis Service.
Fairchild News Service.
Federal Feature Syndicate.
Giblin Feature Service.
Robert D. Heinl Syndicate.
Houghton-Miffling Syndicate.
Frederic J. Haskin Syndicate.
Hoosier News Syndicate.
International Press Bureau.
International Feature Service.
International Syndicate.
Interstate Commercial News Service.
King Editors' Features.
Keystone Feature Syndicate.
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
McNaught Syndicate.
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
Edward Marshall Syndicate.
Metropolitan Newspaper Service.
Murray Feature Service.
NEA Service, Inc.
New York Feature Service.
National Newspaper Service.
Newspaper Feature Service.
New York World Syndicate.
New York Evening Post Syndicate.
New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.
New York American Features.
Ledger Syndicate.
Premier Syndicate.
Putnam Syndicate.
Quality Newspaper Features.
Readers' Syndicate.
Service for Authors.
S. N. L. Technical Syndicate.
Science Service.
Smith Service.
Scripps-Paine Service.
Tri-Feature Co-operative Syndicate.
Thompson Feature Service.
United Feature Syndicate.
Ullman Feature Service.
U. P. C. News Service.
C. V. (Vanderbilt) Syndicate.
Christy Walsh Syndicate.
Washington Radio News Service.
Women's News Service.
Wheeler Syndicate.
World Color Printing Company.
World Wide News Service.

Loading the "Bowdoin" for Arctic Trip—June, 1923 Capt. Donald B. MacMillan

"All on Board Well"

Radio from Capt. Donald B. MacMillan on board "Bowdoin," Godthaab, Greenland, August 29, 1924:

"We are safe. Homeward bound with all on board well. Our little 88-foot schooner, which has been frozen in the ice for 320 days, 11° from the North Pole, has poked its way down the coast of Greenland."

While the Bowdoin was still in the frozen North, the following radiogram was received by Jack Barnsley at Prince Rupert, B. C.

"To Arthur White, Swift & Company, Chicago, Ill.: All food supplies from Swift & Company on Bowdoin in excellent condition and giving perfect satisfaction. —MacMillan"

Swift & Company Supplied the Meats

Among the supplies furnished by Swift & Company were:

Swift's Premium Hams
Swift's Premium Bacon
Swift's "Silverleaf" Brand Pure Lard
Brookfield Butter
Swift's Premium Dried Beef
Brookfield Cheese
Swift's Boneless Brisket Corned Beef
Swift's Pickled Beef Tongues
Salt Pork Tripe Pigs Feet
Peerless Cooking Oil
Pumice Soap
Wool Soap Flakes
Wool Soap
Sunbrite Cleanser

Swift & Company
U. S. A.

134E

The greatest adventure of our time!

THE FLIERS OVER CHICAGO

SAFE HOME AGAIN

Crossing the two great oceans, flying over desert, city, and mountain range; covering crowded continents and deserted wastelands; from the torrid zone to icebound Greenland—a summer of danger, discovery, exploration and adventure.

THE great story of the world flyers has been secured by The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and The McClure Newspaper Syndicate. It is written by Lowell Thomas, intimate friend of the flyers, who is also an adventurer and a flyer as well as an author. The personal, day by day records of Lieuts. Smith, Nelson and Wade; the anxious moments waiting for Major Martin, who smashed into a mountain; the dangers of the Aleutians in the Northern Pacific; problems of flying in China and India; receptions in Europe; Wade's disastrous fall in the icy Atlantic; the impatient delay in Iceland; the long flight over ice and open sea to Greenland; and then Tickle Harbor, and the American continent, and home. Many have called it the last great adventure left.

Lowell Thomas has written a fascinating story of the experiences of the flyers in the first circumnavigation by air. There are innumerable facts of interest which hitherto have never been mentioned. And there is the authentic record of the flight.

Don't miss this chance to get the official story of a great historic event. There will be approximately forty to fifty thousand words arranged for Sunday and daily publication. Excellent illustrations and maps will accompany the articles. Exclusive rights are held by The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and The McClure Newspaper Syndicate of New York. We expect a heavy demand for this remarkable account of the world flight. Wire—or write at once—for rates and proofs.

Territory East of Pittsburgh WIRE The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
Territory West of Pittsburgh WIRE The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate

The* CHICAGO TRIBUNE Newspapers SYNDICATE
Tribune Square Chicago

The* McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
New York

A feature like this is available only about once in a generation

MERCHANDISING SERVICE COST SHOULD BE ADDED TO LINEAGE RATE

Peoria Publisher Favors Cooperation With Advertisers on Common-Sense Basis—Believes Large Dailies Go Too Far

By CARL P. SLANE

PUBLISHER, Peoria Journal Transcript

I PREFER to deal with merchandising service and merchandising service policies under the name of "co-operation" because merchandising has more to do with distribution and sales with which the average newspaper has less in common than with what may be termed as ordinary help or co-operation.

Present day co-operation varies greatly in application. Generally speaking, competitive conditions govern the amount of help extended by a publication to the advertiser. The tendency today of co-operation seems to be to solve itself on a common-sense basis. The larger agencies are only asking for a moderate amount—in other words, they first select the newspaper and then say, "Give us what you have to offer." It is the smaller agency which has only one or two accounts that they are trying to hold or get away from other agencies, which plays up the co-operation they can get from newspapers. If the big newspapers in the country would cut down on co-operation, it would solve the whole problem, as where the big papers lead, the smaller must follow.

There is one subject which, after all, should be taken into consideration and that is that co-operation should be figured in the rate, for some newspapers give so much co-operation that it is really the same thing as a concession in rate to the advertiser. In a highly competitive newspaper market, the weaker papers often promise the "world with a fence around it" if given a schedule which is going to the stronger paper. Real, honest and effective co-operation is a product of recent years. Probably the most elaborate co-operation is given by the Chicago Tribune and the New York Journal. These papers have trained investigators, merchandising men and salesmen, who do everything but take the product off the dealers' shelves. The advertising does that.

Considering the various forms of co-operation, I am going to list them in their entirety, although my subject only calls for recent developments in service and policies. I am doing this because it was surprising to me to learn the number of newspapers that maintain no merchandising department whatsoever, and the great number that are just opening or considering opening such department at this time. Let us consider the following forms of co-operation:

(1) Furnish salesmen letters of introduction to the trade calling attention to the scope and character of the advertising and request co-operation.

(2) Furnish route list of city retailers in all classes to salesmen. These lists are kept up to date by the newspaper representative who actually covers this territory afoot or by automobile.

(3) Investigation of sale and distribution of products as against competitive lines.

(4) Mail out letters and broadsides to the trade giving details concerning the advertising and telling just what the retailers and wholesalers can do to cash-in on the campaign. Advertiser is expected to pay cost of postage and printing of broadside in all cases.

(5) Window and counter displays aid the dealer to link up with the advertising by placing the merchandise being advertised in the local newspaper in a conspicuous place in his window or on his counter.

(6) Check up on sale of product after advertising has run for some time.

(7) Publish trade aid bulletin on advertised goods. This bulletin should be a real trade newspaper so interesting that the retailers are certain to read it. It should demonstrate or spread the gospel of sound merchandising methods among the merchants and prove to them that it is to their pecuniary advantage to push advertised goods. It is also wise in publishing this trade paper to refrain from printing valueless "bunk" to please advertisers or their representatives.

(8) Urge upon local dealers value of selling and pushing advertised goods because of fast turn-over.

(9) Urge local dealers to tie up with national campaigns in newspapers. I say newspapers because some manufacturers have the nerve to ask us to sell space to local advertisers on the strength of magazine copy.

(10) Introduction of salesmen to important wholesalers, brokers and retailers. However, refrain from doing any actual selling of merchandise.

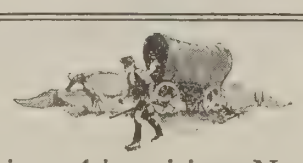
(11) Furnish portfolio containing some copy appearing in the newspaper, together with copy of non-cancellable contract and acknowledgment of contract from the paper to the manufacturer. This proves that the copy is actually running and aids the salesman.

(12) Some newspapers today send weekly notifications showing size of space and dates of insertion of advertisements to the grocers and druggists.

(13) Furnish facts and statistics relative to population, climate, industrial and agricultural conditions.

(14) To decline to publish reading notices or boosts in the news columns for advertisers.

Some newspapers have gained goodwill from local grocers, as well as manufacturers, on what they call a weekly "Market Basket Page." This is put on not by the merchandising department, but by the advertising solicitor that calls on the outlying grocers. Each week, on a page containing the advertisements of the small, outlying grocers, ordinarily non-advertisers, a market basket full of groceries is given one person whose name and address is picked from the city or telephone directory and inserted in one of the grocers' "ads" appearing on this page. This basket contains nationally advertised goods being advertised in the newspaper at the time the name appears. This has the effect of attracting housewives to this page of ordinarily unobtainable advertising. The grocer likes it because he can see results from his advertising, and the manufacturer likes it, especially if the products contained in the basket are newcomers on the market. This basket is conspicuously displayed in advance of the day it is given out. The newspaper usually pays the retailer approximately $2 for each basket.



Another thing that some merchandising service departments are doing at the present time is to sell the grocery advertisers in their cities on the idea of illustrating their advertisements by using newspaper cuts. The newspaper writes to all manufacturers of nationally advertised products asking them to send electros of not larger than ½ to 1 column in size, and are inducing the local retailers to embody those cuts of nationally advertised products in his advertising. This meets with a hearty response from the manufacturer and creates good-will for the newspaper. The local grocer is sold on the idea of using these cuts in his advertising to help produce quick turn-over.

One of my good friends in Texas wrote me that they are strictly adhering to the rules and regulations laid down by the A. N. P. A. and the A. A. A. A. regarding co-operation, but are having to do considerable explaining, as practically all the newspapers in his state and Oklahoma are giving the manufacturer anything he wants. He further states that he has only recently been informed that one of the biggest papers in Texas placed 100 window displays in grocery stores for one of their advertisers. He also knew of several instances where a selling crew was given an automobile and driver to take them around to the trade, and that he knew he had lost business by not doing these things, but he hoped that by not doing these things, he would be able to show to the newspapers in his vicinity the error of their ways. This association has had a standard of practice in vogue for several years and has been adhered to religiously by a number of our members. Many newspapers have this framed and hanging on the wall of their advertising manager's office in a conspicuous place. We have used it in Peoria and have rarely ever deviated from it. A great many of the strongest newspapers today issue a printed statement regarding co-operation, making two lists—one under a caption of "What We Will Do to Co-Operate" and another under "What We Will Not Do."

The volume and character of merchandising service given depends on the type of the product's standing in the local market, whether the advertising is to be adequate and satisfactory assurance that there will be no cancellation of advertising.

For my part, I feel that a newspaper can give great help to manufacturers and still stay within the legitimate functions of a newspaper. I feel it is an obligation for a publisher to know and give advice about the market covered by his own paper. The publisher is selling more than white space. He is selling the entrance to a market and should be able and willing to tell what that market contains. If the manufacturer has no distribution and attempts to advertise, as is sometimes the case, the publisher should know of the condition and advise the sales manager and so avoid a pure waste of money and effort and probable black-listing of his city by the manufacturer.

The policy of a newspaper should be based on being of the greatest assistance to the manufacturer, but not doing for him those things which legitimately and logically can only be done by his own representative.

Live Advertising News of Far West

Each month 200 or more news items of activities of agencies, advertisers, printers and publications.

WESTERN ADVERTISING
566 Market St., San Francisco
6 months' trial subscription with Big January Annual $1

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent, live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

THE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York Chicago Detroit
Kansas City St. Louis Atlanta

Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles San Francisco

To Have and To Hold Cincinnati Business

In the Cincinnati market the holding of trade is conditioned upon the same fundamental policy as the securing of distribution. Perhaps an analogy furnished by the local newspaper situation may point to the reason for this demonstrated fact.

For a generation the unquestioned leadership in local newspaper circulation has been consistently lodged in one evening paper, The Times-Star. This paper goes daily into four out of every five homes in this trading center, being read by practically every native, literate, white family in the twelve cities and towns included in the "local circulation area" of the Cincinnati newspapers. So much for "distribution."

But Times-Star leadership is not confined to distribution. It extends to display advertising as well. This dominance is both in the field of local display and in that of national advertising; it applies alike to the other evening daily and to the two morning newspapers, including their Sunday magazine editions. For thirty-three consecutive times, the semi-annual statements of display advertising lineage have showed the Times-Star leading the list. So much for holding trade.

During the first six months of the present year the Times-Star not only carried more display lineage than in any previous half-year, but it also registered a larger increase over all other Cincinnati newspapers.

To have business in the Cincinnati market and to hold it, profit by the experience of other successful merchandisers. Use the columns of the Times-Star to secure distribution and to sustain sales volume.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

STEWART NEW A.A.C.W. 2ND DISTRICT CHIEF

Vice-President of Philadelphia Record Succeeds Barrett as Chairman of Division Embracing Four Eastern States, 5,000 Members

Rowe Stewart, vice-president of the Philadelphia Record, has accepted the chairmanship of the second district of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, succeeding Paul V. Barrett, of the International Correspondence Schools, resigned.

ROWE STEWART

Election to fill Barrett's position was held by mail.

Stewart has long been actively interested in A. A. C. W. affairs, and is a former president of the association.

In point of numbers, the Second District is one of the largest in the A. A. C. W., the membership totaling close to 5,000. It comprises the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware.

Stewart is now arranging a date for the district's next convention, to be held in late April or early May. The date previously chosen conflicts with the international convention at Houston.

MILLINERS PLAN AD DRIVE

Will Spend $100,000 Annually in Co-operative Campaign

A national co-operative advertising campaign will be set in motion shortly by the millinery industry of the United States, with an annual appropriation estimated as between $100,000 and $200,000.

Plan for the drive, worked out by leading millinery men of the East and West, and advertising experts, was submitted at a dinner meeting in New York last week, to members of the Eastern Millinery Association.

An appeal for funds was made by Richard Sentner, president of the National Association of Ladies' Hatters, and before the meeting adjourned more than $110,000 had been pledged for support of the movement.

In addition to Sentner, leading backers of the campaign include: Lawrence Ach, of the Samuel Ach Company, Cincinnati; Jacob de Jong, president of the Associated Flower and Fancy Feather Manufacturers, Inc.; Seymour Mittlemark, Fashion Hat Company, New York; Charles Stonehill, Chicago Mercantile Company, Chicago; and M. W. Amberg, of M. W. Amberg & Co., New York, president of the National Millinery Association.

Syracuse Plant Nearing Completion

The new annex for the Syracuse (N. Y.) Telegram and Sunday American being erected at a cost of $90,000 is rapidly nearing completion. The structure is being set flush with the present plant and when finished the intervening wall will be demolished to make a single building. Orders have been placed for $200,000 worth of new equipment. The annex is expected to be ready for use by December 15.

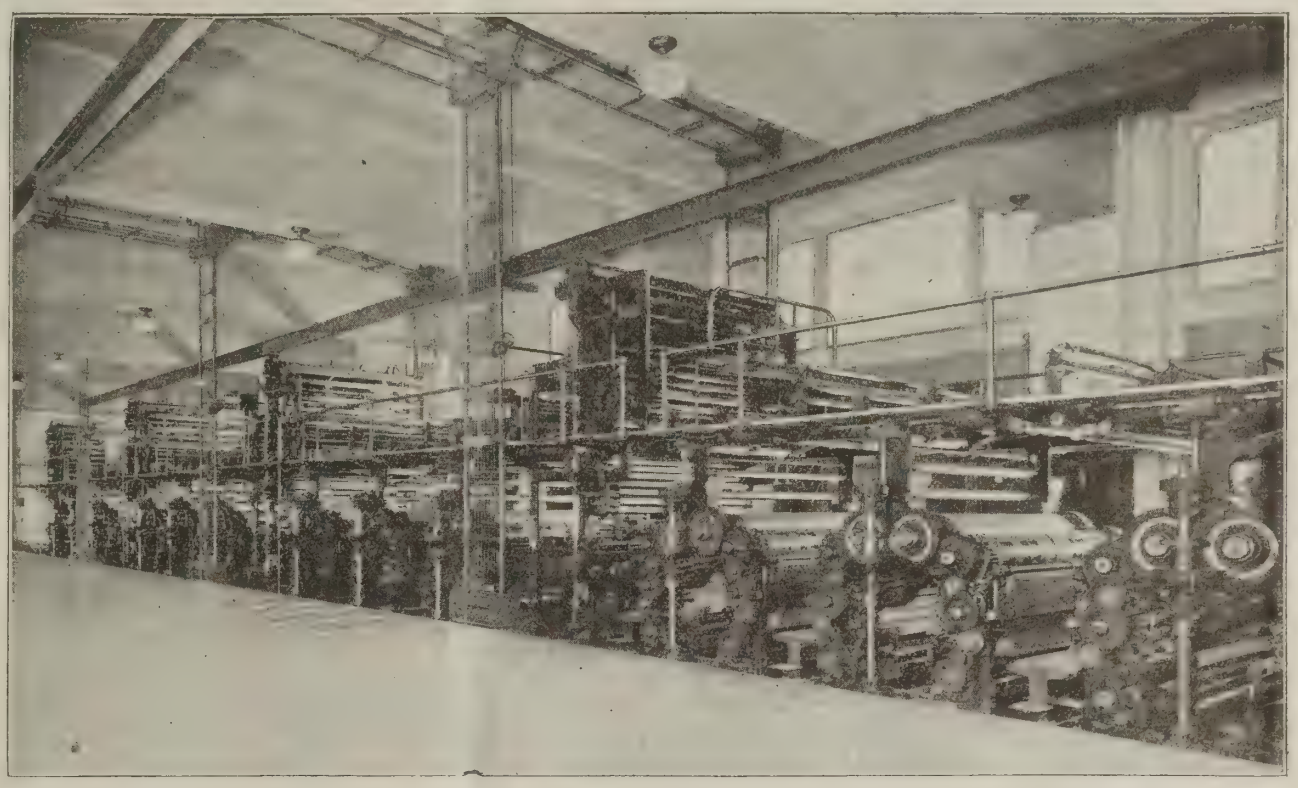
MARBLE DONATES N. E. A. TROPHY

Kansas Publisher Offers Prize for Best Community Service

The interest shown at the Oklahoma meeting of the National Editorial Association in the trophies awarded for the best editorial page, the best front-page make-up and for the paper indicating greatest community service has moved the Association to make similar awards at the Richmond meeting next June. One has already been provided for, the president's cup for best community service. This trophy is presented by George Marble of the Fort Scott (Kan.) Courier-Tribune.

The Community Service Contest will be judged by Past President Wallace Odell of the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Daily News. Papers entering this contest are asked to submit one paper each month for the next four months to Mr. Odell at Tarrytown. The selection of the copies to be submitted is optional with the publisher.

PITTSBURGH VETERAN DIES



Lawrence McDonald, 30 Years in Newspaper Work, Succumbs to Pneumonia

Lawrence Sarsfield McDonald, dean of Pittsburgh's reporters, died at his home, in Pittsburgh, Monday night, Oct. 28, after a nine-day illness of pneumonia. At the time of his death he was on the staff of the Pittsburgh Press, and had previously been with the Gazette Times, the old Dispatch and the Post. Before coming to Pittsburgh he worked on Chicago papers. In all he saw more than 30 years' service in the editorial rooms.

Early in his career McDonald gained an enviable reputation in his covering of the Johnstown flood, which is the classic assignment by which all Pittsburgh oldtimers set their standards. He was a member of the association of the correspondents who covered the flood.

"Poems and Sonnets" written by McDonald is known to hundreds of verse lovers, rejecting the unquenchable idealism and persistent search for beauty which marked his life.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma McLeod McDonald, and three brothers.

On the Fourth Street front is the "show place" of the new two million dollar home of The Milwaukee Journal. It is the immense pressroom, two stories high. The floor is raised a few feet above the sidewalk level so that passersby may observe, through the street windows, the operation of the entire press—as well as of the reels in the basement. Photograph, taken from inside, shows the battery of twelve Goss High Speed Low Construction Press Units (making four unit type sextuple presses) installed with four pairs of Goss folders. In this new Goss-equipped pressroom it will be possible to print over 500,000 forty-eight page papers in the running time now given to printing The Journal's 140,000 daily thirty-two pages each.

The Milwaukee JOURNAL

The Journal, at present, with its older Goss presses and plant designed for a maximum of 100,000 sixteen page papers, is printing 140,000 papers averaging thirty-two pages in size—an output 280% of what was originally contemplated!

The Journal's new Goss presses are of the same type used by The Chicago Tribune and ordered for the Detroit Free Press, Buffalo Evening News, Columbus Citizen, Louisville Courier-Journal, Long Beach Press - Telegram, Pasadena Star-News and other leading newspapers.

The Milwaukee Journal's beautiful new $2,000,000 edifice shortly to be occupied as its sixth home in 42 years, it is said will be the largest newspaper plant in the northwest. It is a five story stone and concrete structure, one-half block square. The facing is pink Kasota marble. One-fourth of the first floor—the main lobby—is devoted to serving the public with a tour bureau, information desk, general business desk, rest rooms, reading and writing rooms, telephone and telegraph stations. The basement will permit storage of a two months' supply of paper. Twelve trucks at one time can be lined up at the loading dock to receive bundled papers.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY, CHICAGO

The Goss Printing Press Co. of England, Ltd., London

GOSS STRAIGHT LINE GOSS HIGH SPEED

ANDREW MILNE JOINS LONDON CHRONICLE

A. A. C. W. Convention Secretary Named Advertisement Manager by Horace I. Imber—Was Formerly With James Black Agency

Andrew Milne, secretary of the London convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has been appointed advertisement manager of the London Daily Chronicle by Horace S. Imber, the advertisement director.

ANDREW MILNE

The appointment came as a surprise to Fleet Street, where it was expected Milne would continue as organizer for District 14, A. A. C. W. Milne, it is now believed, will continue to act in an honary capacity with the convention movement, the Daily Chronicle being anxious that he should be available for that work.

Milne was formerly in the James Black Advertising Agency, London, from which he was released to take up duties as Convention Secretary. He was for some time secretary of the Publicity Club of London.

NEWS MAN ENTERTAINS PRINCE

Britain's Future King Visits John Bassett of Montreal Gazette

When he pays his next visit to the States and Canada, the Prince of Wales is likely to have a Canadian newspaper man as his line of communication with the press. He intimated this in the course of his visit to Ottawa, during which he perhaps established a record for continuous residence in one spot by remaining as the guest of a prominent Canadian newspaper man from 10 p. m. until 4 the next morning. The host was John Bassett, vice-president and Ottawa bureau manager of the Montreal Gazette, with whom Britain's future king discussed some of the foibles of the press of this continent.

The Prince's views on American newspaper enterprise have not been divulged, but it is known that he notes what is said about him and values accuracy. It is probably in the latter regard that he intends having a newspaper man accompany him on his next tour.

This occasion was the second on which the Prince has been the guest here of Mr. and Mrs. Bassett, he having made the acquaintance of the former overseas during the war.

Southern Iowa Editors to Meet

The University of Iowa school of journalism, Iowa City, will be the scene of the next regular meeting of Iowa editors and publishers November 14 and 15, when the southern district of the Iowa Press Association holds its sessions. Although officially a district meeting invitations are going out to all Iowa publishers. Former Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, publisher of the Wichita Beacon, will speak November 14. Other men of national repute have been invited to appear. The program is under the direction of G. L. Caswell, managing director of the association, the school of journalism and the extension division.

New Nebraska Campaign by Dailies

The Nebraska Association of Daily Newspapers, composed of 16 Nebraska dailies, has laid tentative plans for an extensive campaign drafted to advertise the state as a market for the products of eastern manufacturers. The proposed campaign is to include a series of display ads in central and eastern dailies. A campaign of like nature was sponsored by the same organization last spring. Full page ads were used in Chicago and New York papers. The new schedule, as planned, will include more publications of that class. The expense of the campaign will be born by all papers in the association, divided proportionately according to each paper's advertising rate per agate line.

New A. A. C. W. Publicity Director

L. M. Hughes, formerly telegraph editor of the Sacramento (Cal.) Union, has been appointed publicity director of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, with headquarters in New York. Before joining the Sacramento Union Hughes was a member of the Associated Press San Francisco staff.

London Times Editor Returns Home

Geoffrey Dawson, editor of the London Times, and Mrs. Dawson, who have been visiting in this country returned to England, October 24, on the S. S. Olympic. Before leaving Friday, Dawson was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Recess Club, New York, given by Sir William Wiseman of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Following the luncheon, there was informal discussion of English business and politics, with Dawson answering the questions of American bankers.

Weekly Suspends After 39 Years

The Crawford County (Pa.) Sentinel, a weekly which had been published without break for 39 years, has suspended. H. L. Bowen, publisher, will continue the job printing department of the newspaper.

Dailies to Share Ad Budget

The $75,000 special community advertising fund which the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce-Commercial Club will collect this fall is to be spent early in the coming year. Of the total amount $42,250 will be set aside for display advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Radio Account With Churchill-Hall

Churchill-Hall, Inc., New York, has been appointed to direct the advertising account of the Adams Morgan Company, Inc., Upper Montclair, N. J., which manufactures Paragon radio receivers and radio parts. Newspapers will be used, as well as magazines, radio publications and farm papers.

What the People of Every Iowa County Pay for Subscriptions to The Des Moines Register and Tribune

Advertisers will find it interesting to compare their sales in Iowa, county by county, with this table.

County and County Seat	Number of Families	Annual Expenditure for Subscriptions to Des Moines Register and Tribune	County and County Seat	Number of Families	Annual Expenditure for Subscriptions to Des Moines Register and Tribune
Adair, Greenfield	3,169	$7,370.00	Johnson, Iowa City	5,881	13,042.00
Adams, Corning	2,338	3,865.00	Jones, Anamosa	4,135	2,530.00
Allamakee, Waukon	3,841	2,345.00	Keokuk, Sigourney	4,663	10,378.00
Appanoose, Centerville	6,784	11,734.00	Kossuth, Algona	5,574	15,293.00
Audubon, Audubon	2,783	9,113.00	Lee, Keokuk	8,817	2,307.00
Benton, Vinton	5,354	5,737.00	Linn, Cedar Rapids	16,445	14,682.00
Black Hawk, Waterloo	12,572	11,602.00	Louisa, Wapello	2,707	2,146.00
Boone, Boone	6,644	32,656.00	Lucas, Chariton	3,486	13,518.00
Bremer, Waverly	3,717	3,233.00	Lyon, Rock Rapids	3,429	2,637.00
Buchanan, Independence	4,419	2,853.00	Madison, Winterset	3,338	12,265.00
Buena Vista, Storm Lake	4,123	11,529.00	Mahaska, Oskaloosa	5,838	15,054.00
Butler, Allison	3,965	4,076.00	Marion, Knoxville	5,546	24,920.00
Calhoun, Rockwell City	3,951	6,056.00	Marshall, Marshalltown	7,251	18,427.00
Carroll, Carroll	4,787	22,872.00	Mills, Glenwood	3,427	1,522.00
Cass, Atlantic	4,315	12,138.00	Mitchell, Osage	3,094	5,798.00
Cedar, Tipton	3,902	2,646.00	Monona, Onawa	3,806	2,013.00
Cerro Gordo, Mason City	7,706	21,471.00	Monroe, Albia	5,216	10,864.00
Cherokee, Cherokee	3,946	4,677.00	Montgomery, Red Oak	3,789	4,975.00
Chickasaw, New Hampton	3,429	4,910.00	Muscatine, Muscatine	6,454	4,045.00
Clarke, Osceola	2,326	7,467.00	O'Brien, Primghar	4,234	5,287.00
Clay, Spencer	3,480	7,567.00	Osceola, Sibley	2,272	1,693.00
Clayton, Elkader	5,561	3,350.00	Page, Clarinda	5,364	8,257.00
Clinton, Clinton	9,639	3,740.00	Palo Alto, Emmetsburg	3,441	7,739.00
Crawford, Denison	4,581	9,912.00	Plymouth, Le Mars	5,241	2,309.00
Dallas, Adel	5,582	33,463.00	Pocahontas, Pocahontas	3,467	14,810.00
Davis, Bloomfield	2,794	3,223.00	Polk, Des Moines	37,239	384,330.00
Decatur, Leon	3,682	10,783.00	Pottawattamie, Co. Bluffs	13,679	3,796.00
Delaware, Manchester	4,041	1,298.00	Poweshiek, Montezuma	4,424	17,806.00
Des Moines, Burlington	7,893	3,169.00	Ringgold, Mount Ayr	2,871	6,544.00
Dickinson, Spirit Lake	2,276	6,260.00	Sac, Sac City	3,889	10,455.00
Dubuque, Dubuque	12,947	4,188.00	Scott, Davenport	16,435	3,957.00
Emmett, Estherville	2,806	10,319.00	Shelby, Harlan	3,570	4,578.00
Fayette, West Union	6,500	4,156.00	Sioux, Orange City	5,879	1,761.00
Floyd, Charles City	4,191	4,572.00	Story, Nevada	5,819	34,387.00
Franklin, Hampton	3,513	10,083.00	Tama, Toledo	4,858	10,443.00
Fremont, Sidney	3,433	2,294.00	Taylor, Bedford	3,448	6,874.00
Greene, Jefferson	2,806	17,783.00	Union, Creston	3,837	11,477.00
Grundy, Grundy Center	3,205	5,941.00	Van Buren, Keosauqua	3,125	3,316.00
Guthrie, Guthrie Center	3,910	19,320.00	Wapello, Ottumwa	8,430	10,206.00
Hamilton, Webster City	4,340	19,670.00	Warren, Indianola	4,011	17,366.00
Hancock, Garner	3,272	6,838.00	Washington, Washington	4,538	4,129.00
Hardin, Eldora	5,187	18,070.00	Wayne, Corydon	3,417	9,536.00
Harrison, Logan	5,443	2,235.00	Webster, Fort Dodge	8,357	28,544.00
Henry, Mt. Pleasant	4,066	2,611.00	Winnebago, Forest City	2,998	5,084.00
Howard, Cresco	3,046	2,689.00	Winneshiek, Decorah	4,909	2,805.00
Humboldt, Humboldt	2,878	9,353.00	Woodbury, Sioux City	20,484	8,491.00
Ida, Ida Grove	2,598	4,827.00	Worth, Northwood	2,585	1,976.00
Iowa, Marengo	4,133	7,856.00	Wright, Clarion	4,522	17,842.00
Jackson, Maquoketa	4,429	2,746.00
Jasper, Newton	6,190	26,436.00
Jefferson, Fairfield	3,653	3,344.00	Total		$1,278,660.00

The net paid circulation of The Des Moines Register and Tribune for the 6 months ending Sept. 30 averaged—

143,214 Daily 130,908 Sunday

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

J. CARROLL MANSFIELD, creator of "High Lights of History" a new art strip feature added to the list of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, obtained the idea for his feature during his earliest school days, when he used to sketch illustrations of the daily lesson on the margin of his history book.

J. Carroll Mansfield

"I can remember being dissatisfied with the histories we were given to study—dry, uninteresting affairs with little to intrigue the youthful imagination," he recalls.

"And so I was obliged to embellish any available white space on the page after reading between the lines."

The strip "High Lights of History" aims to tell in picture form, the outstanding events of history.

Mansfield was recently an illustrator on the staff of the Baltimore Sun. He started his newspaper art career on the old Baltimore Star, later working as artist for the Baltimore News.

During the war, Mansfield served with the Field Artillery in France. Returning to the United States, he studied art at the New York School of Fine and Applied Art. A collection of sketches he had made in France was published in book form.

Three years later he returned to Baltimore to illustrate the Sunday tabloid section of the Baltimore American. He was also required to cover murder cases, sensational trials, theatrical reviews, and conventions. He left the American for the Sun.

Science Service, Inc., Washington, this week announced it is handling exclusively the syndicate material on the White Indians of Central America, three of whom were brought to Washington by R. O. Marsh, discoverer of the White Indian nation. A 3,000 word story, illustrated by photographs of the Indians, their king, and their villages, is now being offered to newspapers by the Service. Dr. Edwin E. Slosson is director of Science Service, Inc.

And yet another! Climbing on the puzzle band wagon, the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, announces this week that it has added a daily Cross Word Puzzle by R. H. Tingley to its list. Editor & Publisher now knows of nine different syndicates offering this feature.

Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, has just created a new daily interior decoration feature under the title "Home Notes."

A new entrant in the syndicate field is the Vanguard Press, which has just been established at 70 Fifth avenue, New York, with Richard Rohman, formerly of the Paris staff, Chicago Tribune, New York Call, and Detroit Free Press as managing editor.

Weekly articles are being offered to American newspapers by Henri Barbusse, author of "Under Fire"; Stefan Zweig, Franco-Austrian journalist and biographer of Romain Rolland; Andreas Latzko, author of "Men in War"; Marcel Fourrier, Parisian journalist, editor of Clarte; and other notable Europeans.

Associated with Rohman is B. F. Sills, formerly of the staff of the London Daily Herald. Simon Doniger is business manager.

Lain C. Lane has written a new serial entitled "Smouldering Fires" for the Central Press Association, Cleveland.

The title of "Gleanings from the Book of Life," a daily editorial feature by Clark Kinnaird, handled by the Central Press Association, Cleveland, has been changed to "The Best of Advice."

"Bud" Fisher, whose "Mutt and Jeff" comic strip is handled by the Bell Syndicate, New York, sailed on a trip abroad last week.

The George Matthew Adams Service, New York, this month took over the "Fun Shop," humorous joke column feature, which had been previously handled by Maxon Foxhall Judell through the Fun Shop, Inc., New York. Judell continues as editor.

The Thompson Feature Service, New York, is handling the newspaper features created for Bernarr Macfadden's New York Evening Graphic, a tabloid.

John Bach is creator of a new daily one-column comic for the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia.

Marcel Wallenstein, European manager of the Pacific & Atlantic Photos, returned last Saturday to Europe, following a two weeks' visit in this country. Mr. Wallenstein was formerly connected with the New York Daily News.

"Darkened Windows," by Cornelia Kane Rathbone, has been added to the serial offerings of the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia.

The North American Newspaper Alliance, New York, obtained the services of no less a personage than George Bernard Shaw to write a story for them this week on the baseball game played in London, October 24, between the Giants and the White Sox, now touring England and the Continent, playing exhibition matches. Mr. Shaw couldn't remember the names of the teams. He called them the "famous Chicago Sioux and the New York Apaches." It was his first baseball game; and he witnessed it, he said, "as a sociologist, not as a sportsman."

Ernest Newman, known as Europe's foremost music critic, who recently joined the staff of the New York Evening Post as guest critic for the season of 1924-1925, is now writing a weekly article on music for the Post Syndicate, New York. The articles are distributed to newspapers for use Saturday or Sunday. Mr. Newman came to the Evening Post from the London Sunday Times.

Nellie Revell, the best known woman news writer and press agent on Broadway, who writes "Nellie Revell Says" for the McNaught Syndicate, New York, was given a rousing welcome, when she visited the office of the New York Herald Tribune last week. The Herald Tribune was the first newspaper office Miss Revell has entered, since she was taken ill four years ago.

A weekly New York Dramatic Letter, written by John Anderson, dramatic editor of the New York Evening Post, has been added to the list of features offered by the Post Syndicate, New York. It is to run under the title "Two on the Aisle," the same as used over Anderson's daily dramatic column in the Evening Post.

The Max Somers Feature Service has just been established at 204 Fitzpatrick Bldg., Portland, Ore. Max Somers, former owner of a commercial photograph studio, handles photographic, advertising and circulation features, while Naomi Swett is in charge of feature stories, news correspondence, and special editions.

For Editors Only

This copy is not put in competition with that which the publishers' advertising men write.

Nor is it addressed to the same audience.

* * *

It is meant for editors: managing editors, editorial writers, city editors, dramatic editors, financial editors, book editors.

You have seen Scribner's Magazine mentioned frequently in James Melvin Lee's column, and realize that Scribner's Magazine has a special appeal to newspaper men because so many newspaper men contribute to it. But Dr. Lee only touches upon the work of journalists in our columns—and not all of that, of course.

Such things as E. P. (Editorial Page) Mitchell's articles, the stories of McCready Huston, "The Provincial Editor's Outlook" and "The Changing Country Press" and others have been mentioned by him.

* * *

But the important thing to you editors is—each month in Scribner's Magazine there are articles which are editorial material, articles dealing with problems in which your paper is interested, which furnish ideas for follow-ups, or for news stories from a local angle.

* * *

Take, for instance, the November number of Scribner's Magazine which is just published.

Has there been any attempt in your state to censor school histories? Or any controversy about propaganda in histories?

Then Albert Guérard's "The New History: H. G. Wells and Voltaire" will furnish you with much food for thought and for editorials.

* * *

Are you interested in the problems which Japan and the Pacific are offering?

If so, Ramsay Traquair's "The Coming Commonwealth of the Pacific" is right in your line.

The whole country is concerned over the small number of qualified voters who actually exercise their right of franchise.

And Sarah Schuyler Butler, prominent political leader, toured 2,800 miles to find out why. "Women Who Do Not Vote" in the November Scribner's tells what she found.

* * *

You are, of course, interested in community projects. Henry S. Pritchett's "A Tale of Two Cities" is the story of a contest between Philadelphia and Boston which Ben Franklin started and which has almost a hundred years yet to run.

* * *

The dramatic critic will be interested in "Rip Van Winkle Goes to the Play" by Brander Matthews.

* * *

And the book editor in William Lyon Phelp's "As I Like It" every month.

* * *

And the art editor in "The Field of Art" by Royal Cortissoz, which discusses current phases of art in a fresh and vigorous manner with particular attention to America's progress in art.

* * *

And the financial editor in Alexander Dana Noyes' "The Financial Situation."

* * *

And after your office has finished with it, you will find that, above all, it is a magazine worth taking home.

* * *

And here is one more fact—twenty-two papers, situated in widely different parts of the country and ranking among the nation's greatest dailies, contained editorials about one article in the September Scribner's.

Indications are that the number will be surpassed by those commenting upon one article in the October number.

Merely a P

THE PUBLISHER is a manufacturer. He purchases newsprint at so much a pound and labor at so much an hour, and sells space at so much a line and his product at so much a copy.

He has other functions, of course, but, as the inventor sees it, the publisher is a manufacturer, who works under unusual difficulties.

News is the most perishable of all commodities, and publishing nearly always is done in the most crowded section of a community. The publisher accordingly must make rigorously economical use of time and of working space.

A minute of time and a cubic foot of space, therefore, become desiderata of the utmost importance to an inventor of newspaper machinery. My own designs invariably are conditioned by these and other requirements, namely, that they shall result in a machine which will produce the greatest number of products possible—whether they be printing plates or printed papers—per minute of time, per cubic foot of working space, per unit of man-effort, per dollar of operating cost.

Take the case of the PONY AUTOPLATE Machine. Before designing it a survey of all but the largest foundries disclosed an enormous waste of time, space, man-effort,

L. J. TARTE,
Président

La

EDIFICE MO

WOOD NEWSPAPER MACHI
501 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We are very well pl
When your Mr. Washingto time ago, he watched the o and was much pleased to se spent in the Stereotyping r delivered ready for the pre

There is no questio purchased from you is the
this year.

LA PATRIE

actical Talk

and operating cost. To make a plate five separate pieces of apparatus were used, and each occupied a space and required a working space, while a plate had to be lifted and carried five times.

Upon the application of my formula four spaces and four lifts and four carries disappeared. Now, only a single occupied space requiring a single working space and a single carry—to the press—are needed, while the work—better work—is done in only a fraction of the time formerly needed.

That the uncompromising application of scientific method to the foundry has been appreciated the universal adoption of the AUTOPLATE bears testimony.

The popularity of the PONY AUTOPLATE Machine, for instance, could not be better shown than by the orders which are passing over our order desk at the moment of writing, from the Cedar Rapids Gazette, the Tampa Tribune, the Troy Record, the Youngstown Telegram, and the Windsor, Ontario, Border Cities Star.

It is not without good reason that Mr. Tarte says of the PONY that it is the best investment his newspaper has made this year.

HENRY A. WISE WOOD

...rie

...treal, October 7th, 1924

...RPORATION,

...th the Pony Autoplate. ... was in Montreal some ... of the Pony Autoplate ...uring the 20 minutes he ... plates were made and

...e Pony Autoplate we ...vestment that we made

... truly,
... J. TARTE,
President,
...HING CO., LIMITED.

EDITORIAL

THE PRESS PROBE

ACCORDING to an article appearing in The Ohio Newspaper, written by Dr. Herbert A. Miller, professor of Sociology of Ohio State University, the proposed press investigation by a committee of the National Research Council, exclusively announced in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, has by no means been wrecked by the decision of the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Foundation to furnish no funds beyond the initial payment which that foundation granted for the first meeting of the scientists.

Dr. Miller writes in terms of the present saying that the committee, of which he is chairman, is neither recognizing nor rejecting the "many criticisms directed against the press" as the committee holds that much criticism grows out of conditions which cannot at present be helped, and perhaps never can be controlled. "Some of it," he says, "depends on conditions which arise out of human frailty and prejudice which can never be eliminated."

Dr. Miller says that the most pressing of all social problems is that of the relation of nations and, as this depends upon what nations know of each other, it is the purpose of the committee to make a study of the conditions under which news goes from one country to another. This study includes transportation of news by post, telegraph, cable, radio and films, and Dr. Miller says that there are conditions in the mechanical organization of these instruments which can give bias to news.

He discusses a study of American and European news agencies, which exercise a powerful influence on public opinion. "It will be possible to find out what may be their relations to their governments or to special interests," he says.

The statement concludes: "At present a newspaper may promote hostile or friendly attitudes between nations as it pleases. It is hoped of this investigation, not that there will necessarily be radical reform movements, but that fundamental principles will be outlined and correlated so that as time goes on and studies of this sort are continued, almost unconsciously there may be evolved ways out of what now seems to be insoluble dilemmas in the matter of the relation of the press to public opinion, and thus of the straightforward relations of nations to one another."

Your newspaper is not serving advertisers if any page is too dull to hold the reader's eye.

SHOCKING

"WHAT'S wrong with Albuquerque?"

There was a secret meeting of forty business men in the Chamber of Commerce on a recent Tuesday night to discuss the question.

After solemn weighing of causes and effects the unanimous conclusion was reached that the trouble with Albuquerque was that the newspaper editors of the city were publishing "scandal, personal squabbles of the editor and information concerning places far distant from Albuquerque on the first page, and relegating Chamber of Commerce boosting stories to the back page."

This was said and repeated all around after the chairman of the meeting had announced: "Gentlemen, we are quite alone—newspaper men are not here and nothing that you say shall go beyond these walls."

Next day there appeared in The New Mexico State Tribune, edited by intrepid Carl Magee, a shockingly old-fashioned piece of impudence. It was revealed that a reporter for that newspaper had concealed himself behind a few mailsacks of Chamber of Commerce reports, and had made a detailed report of every utterance, which was duly set forth in cold print on page one, with the additional fact that the meeting had selected a committee composed of regular advertisers to wait on the editors, or bring them together, for the purpose of plainly telling them how to edit.

The facts as stated here are confidently set down from the published account.

A comic feature of the reporter's quaint story deals with the arrival of a morning newspaper man on the scene of the meeting, after the business had been done and the doors opened.

"Hello, gentlemen, anything up?" quoth the reporter.

"No, nothing out of the ordinary; just a little booster meeting."

ROMANS

Chapter III—20-21

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

NEWS SUPPRESSION

COMMENTING on the peculiar embarrassment a newspaper man feels when suppression of news is asked by personal friends, the editor of Ottawa Journal tells his readers that news is a commodity and that it is as absurd to ask an editor not to print an item as it would be to ask a butcher not to dispose of certain beefsteaks to customers, or importuning a music store proprietor not to handle certain songs.

News suppression is usually futile, benefitting no one and doing positive harm in many instances. In Ottawa it has been discovered, for instance, that when the local newspapers yield to the pleas of personal friends to "keep it out, like a good fellow," the special correspondents of out-of-town papers usually get the news and it gradually floats back by word of mouth and Ottawa newspapers are suspected of being either incompetent or cowardly.

Suppression of many news items also reacts against those who have sought it as a means of escaping supposed disgrace or humiliation. It only piles up their troubles.

This angle always reminds us of the Boston merchant who told an editor that he would withdraw all advertising if news of his daughter's elopement was published.

The editor replied: "You can't scare me into doing an injustice to your daughter and her husband. I shall not be party to a family conspiracy which proposes to make the happy and impulsive marriage day of a boy and girl something abnormal and mysterious and therefore a topic for backstairs gossip and indecency. Your daughter has a right to be known as a bride; her husband has a right to his social status as her husband. If you had sense, instead of stupid and half-baked pride in the shallow conventions of life, you would be here asking us to tell the whole town the glad tidings that your daughter had chosen her life partner, and was sufficiently independent and characterful to take him whether you and your wife approved or not."

Poor old daddy weakened and before the interview ended he not only gave permission to run a first page story, but corrected the proof and asked for additional galley proofs to "send to the other papers." He did not "pull" his advertising, but increased it and for years was that editor's personal friend.

The best way to avoid embarrassment when the "good fellows" come around to suppress legitimate news is to tell them exactly what the logical consequences are, to them and your newspaper.

"Though the human race degenerate,
These are pleasant days, at any rate."
F. P. A.

November 1, 1924 Volume 57, No. 23

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulonge-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

WHO'S LOONEY?

IRRESPECTIVE of diverse political interpretations, the income tax "didn't-know-it-was-loaded" blunder would be one of the most laughable incidents in modern newspaper experience if it were not so serious in its effects.

It is amusing that high government officials who are wont glibly to refer in public speeches to "harum-scarum" newspaper practices and invariably address full-grown newspaper men as "boys," should issue a premature or illegal order in a most delicate publicity matter and spill the cards in forty directions.

It is serious that the impression has gone to sections of the public that it was the newspaper press which initiated and executed this famous flivver; that many newspapers violated a law in making public income tax returns; that some newspapers did not publish the names of powerful men and interests as a special favor; that it was a high-handed piece of scandal-mongering by ruthless reporters; that in short the impudent adventure of prying into the affairs and secrets of many of the best guarded families was just another newspaper outrage.

A heated nation-wide debate is now in progress on the question whether there is any justification in principle, let alone law, for the publication of any man's financial status as revealed in an income tax return. It is said to be an unnatural invasion of privacy; it is also said to be as legitimate for news as records of the bureaus of vital statistics, the marriage license bureau, baseball box office receipt, or the proceedings of the courts, including divorce tribunals. If privileged news which now fills the press does not invade the privacy of individuals, should tax returns, if publicity is legal, be regarded as inviolate? These are points raised in the whirl-wind discussion that has followed the treasury action of making public those famous names and startling figures. One point should be kept clear: The press is not guilty of the offense, if any, and we do not believe any newspaper will be called upon to shell out a $1,000 fine.

If you regard syndicate drawings as evidence of a "canned newspaper," localize the captions where it is legitimate to do so—many newspapers are doing this so effectively that only an expert would know they were not made locally.

ENGLISH INSURANCE SCHEMES

ALL British newspapers have reduced the benefits of press insurance schemes, eliminating sickness and small accidents in the home, and it is predicted that there will shortly be increased restrictions.

Newspaper insurance has had a sensational run as a circulation maker in England for the past three years. Contracts were made for stated periods and the premium was regulated by increased sales. One paper vied with the others in giving increased premiums and in this hot competition hundreds of thousands of pounds were paid to beneficiaries.

Circulation leaped in many instances by the hundreds of thousands, but presently publishers discovered that much of this new business was artificial, as it gave small corresponding value to advertisers. The public was found buying four or five newspapers and reading one.

Evils also grew up, and it is estimated by one authority that 60 per cent of the claims sent in were fraudulent. As English newspapers are now tapering off on insurance schemes, they are applying methods which get newspapers into the hands of people who take them to read, and although there have been some heavy circulation declines it is said that publishers are better satisfied.

PERSONALS

M. H. DE YOUNG, publisher of the San Francisco Chronicle, was honored by veterans of the San Francisco fire department, who called at his office, Oct. 23, with a garland of flowers for him in appreciation of what he had done and is doing for the city.

Edward E. Bartlett, president of the Bartlett Orr Press, New York City, and director of Linotype typography for the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, sailed for Europe on the Olympic, Oct. 25.

Charles E. Marsh of Austin, Tex., president of the Newspaper Publishing Company, publishers of the Austin American, Waco News-Tribune, Wichita Falls (Tex.) Record News and other papers, has been appointed by Gov. Pat M. Neff as a member of the board of regents of the University of Texas.

L. C. Brown, owner and business manager of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, and Mrs. Brown have returned from a visit to New York City and other northern points.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

ALEXANDER CUSCADEN, for 15 years on the Los Angeles Examiner and for 2 years on the San Francisco Examiner, has been appointed night editor of the latter paper. E. Cullenward has been made assistant managing editor; William Wrenn, city editor, and Vic Short, head of the copy desk. Raymond A. McNally, recently on the San Francisco Examiner, has been given the post of sports editor on the San Francisco Bulletin.

Walter Healy, city hall reporter on the Bellingham (Wash.) Reveille, has resigned on account of ill health. He has been succeeded by Benton Thompson.

Benjamin Lothridge, make-up man for the Syracuse Journal, is on a two weeks' hunting trip and vacation in the Adirondacks.

Forbes Watson, art critic for the New York World, will speak on "Nineteenth Century Art," before the newly formed Newark Art Club, on Dec. 18.

Ralph B. Flint, of the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, who has been covering the art events in New York has been appointed associate editor of the Art News and International Studio, in the place of William B. McCormick.

Alger S. Beane, recently on the night copy desk of the Boston Herald, has resigned.

Randolph Edgar, musical critic of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, has resigned.

Edwin S. Shortess, editor of the Vinton (Ia.) Eagle, has resigned and will go to Kansas City as an organizer for Co-Operative Clubs, a luncheon club organization.

Everard Jack Appleton, Cincinnati poet and columnist, formerly editor of the "Ginger Jar" and other comic material of the Commercial Tribune and latterly of the Times Star, is confined by illness to his home in Avondale.

Miss Mary K. Linn is now with the Salisbury (N. C.) Evening Post in charge of the woman's page.

James Townes, editor of the Merrimac valley edition of the Boston American, has been spending a vacation at Rangeley Lakes, Maine.

John G. O'Brien, in charge of the Lowell office of the Boston American, has joined the city staff.

L. S. McKenna, sports editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, went to Seattle to cover the games for the minor baseball league championship.

Fred A. Cummings, formerly managing editor of the Lynn, (Mass.) Telegram-News, has been promoted to vice-president of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company. Until recently he has been chairman of the company's board of public relations.

Alvin J. Steinkopf, reporter for the St. Paul Pioneer Press, has gone to the Milwaukee Sentinel and is succeeded by Elliott K. Hayes.

Joseph Garrettson, former managing editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, who retired last year due to a stroke of paralysis, is reported to be much improved.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moline, society editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, has resigned, and is succeeded by the club editor, Miss Amy McGuffin, whose place is taken by Miss Alice Larson, editor of the children's page. Mrs. Stanley Miller takes charge of that page.

John J. O'Flanagan has returned from a trip of several months to Europe and assumed his duties as head of the Boston American copy desk.

Clarence L. Moody, city editor of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, and Mrs. Moody, are parents of daughter, Barbara Louise.

Paul A. Davis, formerly of the Jamestown (N. Y.) Journal, has resigned as city editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Evening Independent, to enter the real estate business. Al W. Burger succeeds him.

Harry A. Kenny, city political man of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune has been appointed assistant city editor. The politics run has been assigned to Charles K. Swafford, formerly of Richmond, Ind.

Fred E. Hadley, for many years editor and publisher of the Winnebago (Minn.) Enterprise, has returned to San Diego, Cal., his birthplace. Citizens of Winnebago gave him a farewell dinner, which was attended by a large number of the leading newspaper men of the state.

A. J. O'Malley, city editor of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, recently spent his annual vacation in New York City.

Albert F. Phillips, reporter on the Salt Lake City Telegram passed his 74th birthday on Oct. 16. He is still as active as he was a half a century ago.

James Dempsey, assistant city editor, has resigned from the Boston Post to become managing director of the Eastern Newspaper Service, Boston, Mass.

John Brogan has resigned as managing editor of the San Antonio Light. L. A. Hoskins formerly news editor is now acting managing editor.

Frank T. Wright, sporting editor of the Bellingham (Wash.) Herald, has been appointed manager of the recently organized International Amateur Basketball League.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

C. H. CARSON, formerly general manager of the Johnson City (Tenn.) Staff and later the News, has taken charge of the installation and management of a promotion and service department for the Roanoke (Va.) Times and Roanoke World-News. Mr. Carson assumed his new duties Oct. 20.

Fred I. Cook has resigned as circulation manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican.

James Aaron, formerly connected with the Philadelphia North American, has joined the Trenton Times advertising department.

George C. Nungezer, mechanical superintendent of the Alexander (Va.) Gazette, has been promoted to manager of that newspaper.

Roger Ferger, advertising manager of the Cincinnati Enquirer, has been elected as president of the American Business Club of Cincinnati.

H. P. Neuman formerly advertising manager of the Pensacola (Fla.) Daily News and more lately of the sales staff of the American Press Association has been appointed advertising manager of the American Press, monthly paper of the organization. Joe Brown continues as business manager.

Robert B. Miller, assistant advertising manager of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle has resigned to join the advertising staff of the West Palm Beach (Fla.) Palm Beach Times.

P. G. Laughridge has joined the advertising department of the Salisbury (N. C.) Evening Post, in charge of the local advertising.

J. A. Matthews, late of the San Antonio (Tex.) Light, has been made circulation manager of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press in place of W. E. Sherlock, who has been transferred to the editorial side.

Albert W. Sherer of Wheaton, Ill., has been appointed western manager of the Curtis Publishing Company, to succeed Earl Reeve.

Everett A. Holman has been appointed director of advertising of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. He was formerly Pacific coast representative of the Hearst morning newspapers with headquarters at San Francisco.

Sam F. Goddard has been appointed Western merchandising manager of Management Magazines, Inc., publishers of Cafeteria Management, School and College Cafeteria and Club-Management.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

A MAN with a record for seeing things through to completion with success is descriptive of Henry L. Freking, organizer, founder and now general manager of the Mansfield (O.) Daily Journal, Freking's latest venture in the newspaper field.

HENRY L. FREKING

Born in Louisville, Freking at an early age entered the newspaper field as a reporter on the Louisville Commercial. Following the purchase of that publication by the Louisville Herald, he became a member of the Herald's advertising staff. Seeking larger fields he went to Chicago where he became a representative of Standard Farm publications. Later he joined the Hearst organization where he remained until three years ago.

Freking then decided to enter the field independently. During the past three years, he not only organized but established three successful newspapers.

His latest achievement is the founding and organizing of the Mansfield Daily Journal. During the summer months of 1924, Mr. Freking entered this field and within a comparatively short time, he had a company of Mansfield's foremost citizens associated with him, installed a modern newspaper plant and on September 13, the first issue of 64 pages made its appearance on the streets.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

L. C. PROBERT, superintendent of the Associated Press, Washington Bureau, Byron Price, J. L. West and P. F. Haupert, all of the A. P. Washington staff came to New York this week to direct tabulation of the election returns, which is centralized from New York A. P. headquarters.

D. Q. Riddle, formerly United Press staff correspondent, has been appointed professor of journalism at Baylor College for Women, Belton, Tex.

MARRIED

WILLIAM H. MILLHAEM of the Des Moines (Ia.) Register staff, to Miss Harriett Barrowman of the Register's society department, Oct. 22.

Lawrence J. McCarthy, city editor of the Ogdensburg (N. Y.) Daily News, to Miss Veronica Hazel May of Syracuse, N. Y., at Syracuse, Oct. 28.

William J. "Dick" Slator, telegraph editor of Springfield (Mass.) Union, to Helen Mary Cameron, society editor of the New Haven (Conn.) Union in New Haven, Oct. 7.

Walter J. Stahl, assistant city editor of the Columbus (O.) Evening Dispatch, to Miss Nellie Gilbert, private secretary to E. H. Mack, editor of the Sandusky Register, Oct. 27.

Harold W. Klamser, assistant editor of the Chelsea (Mich.) Daily News to Miss Lenore Sigler of Decatur, Ill., Oct. 18.

Richard MacFarland, son of the late Granville MacFarland, editorial writer and counsel of the Boston American, to Miss Elinor D. Hanley, of Swampscott recently.

Vincent Francis Callahan, reporter on the Washington (D. C.) Times, to Miss Florence Anita Hawkins, of Washington, D. C., last week.

Charles L. Nicholson, advertising manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News, to Miss Alvina B. Hults, Oct. 22, at Hutchinson.

Joseph W. Dugan of the Chicago Evening Post to Miss Isabel Schaefer, October 24.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

D. A. BRISLIN has resigned as foreman of the Scranton Sunday Dispatch composing room. He has been succeeded by Al Jennings, of the Scranton (Pa.) Times.

The most widely read daily newspaper feature service in the United States is "Answers to Questions" by Frederic J. Haskin—a circulation holder that never loses its grip. The complete Haskin service is worth inquiring about. Why don't you write for full information? Address Frederic J. Haskin, Washington, D. C.

HEAD HOUSTON'S A. A. C. W. COMMITTEE

Mayor Oscar Holcombe of Houston has been appointed general chairman, and Robert F. Cornell, assistant publisher of the Houston Chronicle, general secretary of the committee in charge of Houston's arrangements for the 1925 convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. Mayor Holcombe and Mr. Cornell were among the most active participants in the campaign to obtain the convention for Houston and led the delegation to London last July.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

F. G. SMITH, from staff, Boston Telegram to sports editor, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent.

Morris Miller, from staff, Town of Union (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch, to managing editor, Bayonne (N. J.) Times.

Richard Armstrong, from Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, to night editor, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent.

Mrs. Mary Mahoney, from Boston Traveler, to staff, St. Petersburg (Fla.) Evening Independent.

Walter Fogg, from Boston Sunday Herald to Bangor (Me.) Commercial staff.

C. K. Logan, from reporter to city editor, Salem (Ore.) Statesman, succeeding Stephen Stone.

S. M. Mitchell, from editor, Newton (Ia.) News, to city desk, Ft. Madison (Ia.) Evening Democrat.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

DUBUQUE (Ia.) TELEGRAPH-HERALD, 14-page section devoted to Better Homes week.

Peoria (Ill.) Sunday Morning Star, Oct. 19, 12-page supplement devoted to Home Beautiful week.

WITH THE SPECIALS

CHAS. H. EDDY COMPANY has been appointed national advertising representative for the Elizabeth (N. J.) Daily Journal.

C. L. Houser Company has been appointed national advertising representative of the Peekskill (N. Y.) Evening Star in the East and West, effective Nov. 1.

Payne, Burns & Smith, Inc., has been appointed to represent the Manchester (N. H.) Daily Mirror.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

PASADENA (Cal.) STAR-NEWS, has installed three Intertypes.

Columbus (Ind.) Republican has installed an Intertype.

Uica (N. Y.) Daily Press is now printing with its new Hoe octuple press.

SCHOOLS

JAMES VERNOL CLARKE, formerly associate director of publicity for the Presbyterian Church at New York headquarters, is now in charge of Journalism work and assistant professor of English at Albion College, Albion, Mich. He was formerly on the staff of the Nashville Banner.

Enrollment in the classes in journalism at the University of Illinois are 15 per cent greater than last year and the largest since the course was instituted.

FLASHES

The same brains which think up the titles for Pullman cars are now working overtime naming the new fall collars.—Newark News.

Along the roadside the parking space is determined by the sparking pace.—Cleveland Times.

Prince Youssoupoff, while pressing his suit against Mr. Widener, also got his jacket well dusted.—New York World.

Daily news stories indicate that Wrangel Island is well named.—Newark News.

One of the principal reasons why capital punishment doesn't deter criminals is that we rarely resort to it.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

The Author of the aphorism, "Talk is cheap," lived before the days of traffic cops.—Cleveland Times.

Usually the man with that hunted look has six daughters who know how to say, "Charge it."—San Francisco Chronicle.

All roads led to Rome, but in those days Rome was worth going to.—Little Rock Arkansas Democrat.

At the present rate it probably won't be long before the man who removes his collar and coat in a barber shop will cause letters of condemnation to reach the newspapers from the fair sex.—Baltimore Sun.

In these halcyon days of ownership of motors and radio outfits it makes us smile to recall the time when the tricky politicians tried to lure our votes with the promise of a full dinner pail.—Milwaukee Journal.

To tell how one's hair will look bobbed, there is the one and only safe method of picking a good cantaloupe—cut it.—New York Herald Tribune.

Movie star claims she has an ideal husband. Those movie stars will say anything to get publicity.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Political Dope doesn't kill those who swallow it, but it makes them crazy.—Cleveland Times.

Europe is like your grandmother's corsets. Worked by invisible strings.—"Bugs" Baer in New York American.

The Mead Messenger inquires: "Why must a man die before he becomes a bafodagtn fiafonmabtsn?" We know a lot of live men who are worse than that.—Colorado Transcript.

One good thing about the Chinese is that when they make war they make it at home.—James J. Montague in New York Herald-Tribune.

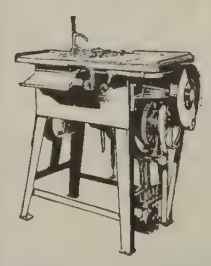
A "good loser" feels just the same about it as the bad loser does, the difference being that he is a better liar.—Boston Transcript.

All women are fond of bargains, but it is rare that we find a woman who will admit that she is wearing one.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Henry Ford declares that the horse must go and that the cow has no certainty of the future. But let us hope that we never have the scenery.—Little Falls (N. Y.) Times.

JOHN · H · SCHNACKENBERG & ASSOCIATES

Magazine and Newspaper Accountants



299 MADISON AVENUE

NEW YORK

Ludlow Gives Excellent Results

Says President McDowell

MR. A. W. McDOWELL, President of The Sharon (Pa.) Herald Publishing Company, writes: "As a result of installing the Ludlow System some months ago, we have been getting excellent results both in the appearance of our paper and in the composing room. This all-slug way of producing display faces enables us to handle copy much faster and with new faces every day. The Ludlow also eliminates worries about having enough sorts, especially figures, as our advertisers are extensive users of them—and our distribution problem has been solved. To make the story brief, the Ludlow was just what we needed and just what you represented it to be."

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue

San Francisco Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

J. R. GABBERT, editor of the Riverside (Cal.) Enterprise, is the 1924 president of the Southern California Editorial Association, having been re-elected to that office at a recent convention.

J. R. Gabbert

Twenty-four years ago, Gabbert started his newspaper career as assistant editor and manager of the Oxnard (Cal.) Courier. He held this position three years, before matriculating at the University of California, where, in addition to his college studies he was a newspaper correspondent, editor of the Daily Californian, and the College annual, the Blue and Gold.

Upon graduation in 1907, he became owner and publisher of the Oxnard Courier, establishing the daily edition of that newspaper. He held this property five years.

In 1912, he became editor and proprietor of the Riverside Enterprise. Nine years ago he organized and established the California Citrograph, now published in Los Angeles, and the leading citrus publication in the country.

Gabbert has long played an important part in the affairs of the Southern California Editorial Association. From 1920 to 1924, he has been a member of the association's executive committee, and was elected president in 1923.

ASSOCIATIONS

MICHIGAN LEAGUE OF HOME DAILIES will hold its next meeting at Ypsilanti, Mich., Nov. 20 to 22, when members will attend the Michigan University Press Association's annual fall sessions at Ann Arbor. Walter S. Kennedy, Albion Recorder, is League president, and William H. Shumaker, Three Rivers Commercial, is secretary-treasurer. The quarterly meeting was held in Grand Rapids, Oct. 16 and 20, with eighteen of the 20 member newspapers represented. J. F. Campbell of the Portland Cement Association, was the principle speaker.

American Association of the Teachers of Journalism will hold its annual meeting in Chicago, Dec. 29, 30, and 31.

Oklahoma Press Association, Group 2, comprising a membership of editors and job printers in 18 counties of the northwestern portion of the state recently held its fall convention in Enid, entertained by members living in that city. Ursel Finch of Cherokee is president. Speakers included Kay Peters of Garber, Elmer V. Jessee of Mangum, Elmer Woods of Lamont and D. T. Meek of Enid.

Chicago Press League observed the thirty-third anniversary of its founding with a luncheon at the Great Northern Hotel.

New York Advertising Club held a Hallowe'en Costume Carnival of Ideas at the club house the evening of Oct. 29. Members had been asked to appear in original costumes representing advertised goods or products. Paul Meyer was chairman in charge of arrangements. Members of the club heard Prof. Lewis Havey of New York University speak on "New York as a Market" at a noon meeting, Thursday, Oct. 23.

Advertising Women's Club of Boston held its third meeting of the season Tuesday evening, Oct. 28 at the Hotel Bellevue. George C. Frolich talked on "Putting On A National Advertising Campaign." Mr. Frolich is a former president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association and is now the general manager of the Medicine Department of the United Drug Company.

New York Business Publishers Association heard Saunders Norvell, chairman of the board, McKesson & Robbins, Inc. discuss "How We Can Make Our Papers More Interesting" at the regular meeting of the Association at the Hotel Astor, Oct. 24.

Virginia State Typographical Society has been reorganized with the election of C. J. Hughes, of Richmond, as president; C. S. Carlton, of Roanoke, vice-president; H. W. Furlow, Norfolk, secretary, and George Hundley, Richmond, sergeant-at-arms. A meeting will be held in Roanoke the first Sunday in November to further outline the work in the state.

Southern California Editorial Association is making arrangements to obtain the services of a field secretary or manager, and it is expected the new office will be created and in operation by Jan. 1: This was made possible recently by the adoption of a new constitution and by-laws. J. R. Gabbert, editor, Riverside (Cal.) Enterprise, is now making a tour of the territory, obtaining support of the membership. The association prints a monthly craft publication known as the Southern California Editor, the direction of which will be taken over by the new manager.

Maritime Press Association, which embraces members of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association in the Maritime Provinces, will hold its annual meeting at the College of Agriculture, Truro, N. S., on Nov. 7.

Advertising Club of New Orleans has announced a series of 16 lectures on different phases of retail advertising and selling, to be given every two weeks at regular meetings of the club by New Orleans men prominent in the advertising field.

Advertising Club of Jacksonville, Fla., has just become affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, following its reorganization a few weeks ago. George S. Lowman is president of the club, and Harry E. Burns, of the Thomas Advertising Service, Jacksonville, is secretary.

League for Public Discussion, New York, is planning to send Upton Sinclair, the author, on a lecture tour, which would cover all important schools of journalism in the United States. No definite dates have been decided upon yet.

Iowa Press Association southern district meeting will be held at the University of Iowa school of journalism, Iowa City, Nov. 14 and 15. G. L. Caswell, managing director of the association, is co-operating with journalism faculty members in arranging a program.

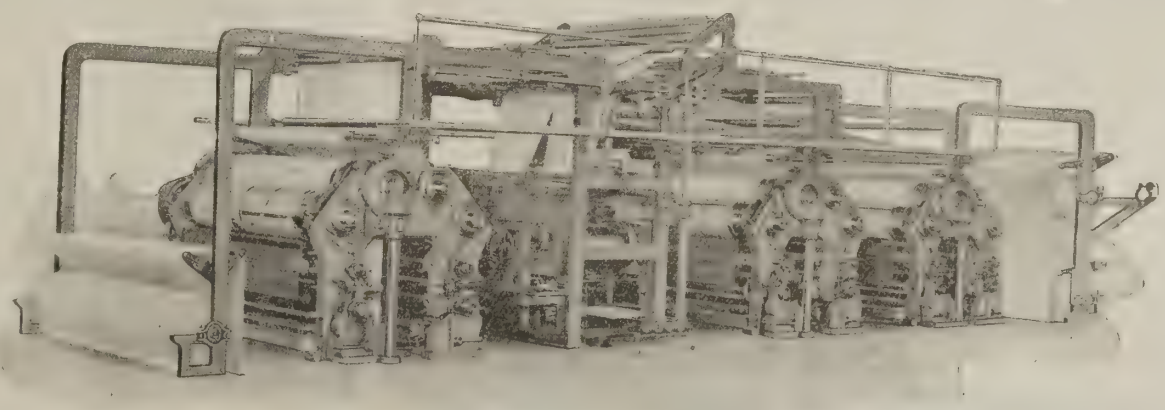
SUBLIME FAITH

The following "letter to the editor" appeared in the Hongkong Daily Press, betraying the implicit faith of a coolie in the powers of a newspaper:

"Dear Editor,—I no too muchee savvy anything, but have got one smallo business must can talkee. Before two day I washee clothes Wanchai. Bymeby have got one thief catchee one bamboo come, makee stealum one coat. I no can catchee. I savvy that thief what side he live, Please Mister Editor you can help, no can? My mother she too muchee olo. She talkee 'You go Pleece Station catchee one Shajeen can do. How fashion writee letter Editor? Who man Editor.' She too muchee olo, she blong foolo. I talkee he 'Splosum have got one piecee letter too long time no come, allo man no can write Post Office; must can write Editor. Splosum too muchee stink any side, allo man no can write Santry Board; must can write Editor. Splosum have got street makee break, allo man no can write Koongmoosee; must can can Editor. I think Editor he blong number one topside. Allo same joss. Any business can do.' My mother she no got anything can say. Please Mister Editor you can help, no can? That thief he too much bad man. I savvy what side he live. Please you send one man makee help—SUM BOY."

Embezzler escapes Sing Sing and reward is offered. Here is one skin the cops would love to touch.—New York American.

1893 SERVICE 1924
as visualized by
BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.



NEWSPAPER REPresentation as we practice it consists of intelligent, honest selling of markets and media; serving advertisers in every possible way; billing and collecting for advertising and sending a publisher a check for all business sent him.

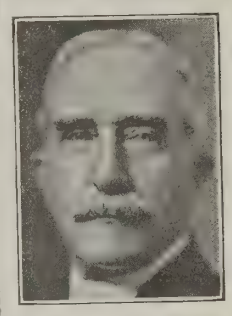
It is a time saving and money saving system for publishers.

Always willing to talk representation to the right kind of newspapers.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.
Advertising Representatives of Newspapers
2 W. 45th St. New York — 900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago
401 Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

THIS IS THE SCOTT
"Straight Unit" Sextuple Press



it is without any exception the finest piece of machinery for producing newspapers in a hurry. It prints 4 to 12 page papers at 72,000 per hour, 14 to 24 pages at 36,000 per hour, 28 to 48 pages at 18,000 per hour, delivering product in 2 or 4 collected sections.

Can be expanded to Octuple, Decuple or Double Sextuple Press at any time.

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block — PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A. — NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42d Street

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

HEADED by Frank Presbrey, president of the Frank Presbrey Company, New York advertising agency, 40 New York advertising men called on President Coolidge at the White House, October 29, and assured him of their support in the campaign.

FRANK PRESBREY

The delegation took breakfast with the President. The party was arranged under the auspices of the Coolidge Non-Partisan League of which Col. Rhinelander Waldo is president.

Presbrey, who led the delegation, is chairman of the National Coolidge Advertising League, and first vice-president of the Advertising Club of New York.

The full delegation is as follows:

Frank Presbrey, president, Frank Presbrey Advertising Company, chairman National Coolidge Advertising League; Stanley Resor, president J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency; Frank Seaman, president Frank Seaman Advertising Agency; William H. Rankin, president William H. Rankin Company; Paul Block, president Paul Block, Inc., advertising director Pictorial Review and newspaper owner; George L. Johnson, president Thomas Cusack Company; H. K. McCann, president H. K. McCann Company; Conde Nast, publisher Vogue and Vanity Fair.

Frank W. Harwood, advertising director American Tobacco Company; Frank J. Reynolds, president Albert Frank & Co.; C. W. Hoyt, president Charles W. Hoyt Advertising Company; E. D. Gibbs, advertising director National Cash Register Company; William Griffin, vice-president American Press Association; Robert L. Barrows, president Barrows & Richards Advertising Company; Wendell P. Colton, president W. P. Colton Advertising Company; Sturgis Dorrance, president Dorrance-Sullivan Advertising Agency.

Kerwin H. Fulton, president Poster Advertising Company; Herbert Gardner, president Gardner Advertising Company and president of the A. A. A. A.; Stanley Gunnison, president Gunnison Advertising Company; Arthur Kastor, Kastor Advertising Agency; Edward Gould, president Gould Advertising Agency; Carl Kaufman, president Federal Advertising Company; George L. Kleiser, president Foster & Kleiser Advertising Company; Charles C. Green, president Charles C. Green Company; L. A. McQueen, advertising director B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company; G. W. Williams, advertising manager Postum Cereal Company.

Mont. H. Wright, advertising director John B. Stetson Company; Gilbert T. Hodges, advertising director Frank A. Munsey Company; Mark Kellogg, advertising director First National Pictures; Robert Leavitt, advertising director Onyx Hosiery Company; S. D. Malcolm, advertising manager American Express Company; Seamon Lockwood, advertising manager Johns-Manville Company; M. R. Maas, president Auto Strop Razor Company; E. Noble, president Life Savers, Inc.

Carl Shumann, advertising manager Hilo Varnish Company; R. R. Strassman, vice-president Red Book Magazine; C. C. Vernon, advertising director Street & Smith; G. Lynn Sumner, vice-president Association National Advertisers; Bernard Lichtenberg, advertising director Alexander Hamilton Institute; O. C. Harn, advertising director National Lead Company; D. A. Carroll, advertising representative; S. P. DeLano, vice-president Presto-O-Lite Battery Company; A. L. Sherman, Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

K. Herb Palin, California advertising man, noted as a sloganeer, returned to New York October 25, on the "George Washington" from a brief business trip to England.

R. S. McMichael, who was recently appointed manager of the western advertising office of the New York World, is a former advertising agency man, well known to the field.

He started his career as "printer's devil" in the office of his father, who published the Atlanta (Ga.) Evening News and the Christian Index. Later he became associated with his brother in a general advertising agency.

During 1916 and 1917, he was a service man with Lord & Thomas, Chicago, and in the offices of the same agency in Los Angeles, Cal. For several months before going into the U. S. Air Service, he was with N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia.

After returning to the United States from France, where he served as commanding officer of the 224th Aero Squadron, he went into the advertising department of Collier's Weekly. Before joining the staff of the World in March of this year, he was from 1920 with the American Weekly Magazine, New York office, and in Chicago representing the Saturday Magazine section of the New York Journal and the Chicago Evening American.

Keen competitive conditions, under which outdoor advertising agencies have been operating, will be eliminated, when the merger of Thomas Cusack Company, O. J. Gude Company, and several others is completed. An offering of securities for the new corporation is expected shortly. The financing, it is understood, will be handled by Blair & Co., Inc.

The merger of Thomas Cusack and O. J. Gude was announced recently. At that time it was said it would involve an issue of $6,000,000 of new bonds. Since then plans have been changed, it is said, to admit several other companies into the combine, making the new company the biggest thing of its kind in the country.

L. F. Mowrey, assistant superintendent of the department of colonization, Canadian Pacific Railway Company, is chairman of the Institutional Advertising Service, a foreign language advertising service, which has just been established with offices in New York. Other officers are: Jules R. Arbocz, vice president and manager; George W. Hinckley, secretary; and Conrad Lang Jr., secretary.

William G. Palmer, president of W. S. Hill Company, New York, will be added to the staff of J. Walter Thompson Company, Inc., effective Nov. 1.

J. Raymond Prohaska has joined the art staff of the Southwestern Advertising Company, Dallas, Tex.

The Keelor & Hall Company, Cincinnati advertising agency, has changed its name to the Keelor-Sites Company. L. S. Sites is president; H. G. Shepard, vice-president; H. G. Keelor, treasurer, and S. B. Mallon, secretary.

L. L. Laird has joined the staff of Cecil Edward Cutting, Buffalo advertising agency. He was formerly New York state representative of the Reuben H. Donnelly Corporation.

Richard C. Fowler has resigned as vice-president of Campbell, Trump & Co., Detroit advertising agency, to become general manager of the American Viewpoint Society, Inc. He retains his financial interest in the advertising firm.

Frank I. Whitman has been appointed sales manager of the Hewitt-Gordon Advertising Company, Spartanburg, S. C. Until recently he was secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Ashville, N. C.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

The Register suppressed a news story yesterday. In doing so, we threw ourselves open to many of the charges of corruption or distortion of the news often brought against newspapers. The facts are these: A young man, 19, working hard for his father on a farm, forged his father's name to a check for $55.00 in part payment for a second-hand automobile. To teach the boy a lesson that would last forever, his father had him arrested. Juvenile Court made a thorough investigation of the case, lectured the boy upon the severity of his offense, and turned him over to his father. The boy is thoroughly repentant, and we've still got a splendid chance of making a valuable and useful citizen out of the youth. His father asked that we suppress the story. We did.

Thereby we lost what some folks might call a "good news story" and certainly we violated our trust to furnish the people of Marietta with all the news of the community. We may be wrong—but, according to our present somewhat dimmed moral lights, there was nothing else to do. And if you, or your son, or grandfather, ever get in similar trouble with an equally good case to present, we promise you the same suppression of "the story."—Marietta (O.) Register.

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this, and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921.

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

Norwegian Paper Mills Agency
(INCORPORATED)
33 West 42nd Street
NEW YORK CITY
Telephone: PENNsylvania 7443

SELLING AGENT IN THE U. S. FOR
NEWS PRINT PAPER

Representing Seven Largest Norwegian News Print Mills with an Annual Capacity of 200,000 Tons.

SOLE SELLING AGENT IN U. S. FOR
Ankers Traesliperi & Papirfabrik A/S
Bohnsdalen Mills, Ltd.
A/S Randsfjord Traemasse & Papirfabrik
A/S Holmen-Hellefos
Hunsfos Fabrikker
Union Paper Co., Ltd.

Agent for FOLLUM TRAESLIPERI

Prompt Shipments . . Inquiries Solicited

WORK STARTED ON NEW BUILDING FOR CLEVELAND TIMES AND COMMERCIAL

ABOVE is a reproduction of the architect's drawing of the new home of he Cleveland Times and Commercial, which is expected to be ready for occuancy early next year. It will be located t E. 22nd street and Payne avenue and vill be a two-story and basement structure, fire-proof, and containing 25,000 quare feet. The foundation will be uilt for a six-story structure, thus proiding for anticipated future expansion nd growth of the paper. The building vill be used exclusively by the Times nd Commercial.

The ground floor will be occupied by the business offices, the circulation and advertising departments. The editorial department and the composing room will be on the second floor, while the basement will hold the presses and provide storage space for white paper. When finished and occupied the structure and land will represent an investment of approximately a quarter million rollads.

O. K. Shimansky is president of the company, and editor; Samuel Scovil is treasurer, R. Malcolm Scovil is assistant treasurer, and Karl Shimansky is secretary.

NEW ENGLAND A.A.C.W. PROGRAM READY

ectional Meet Scheduled for Hartford, Conn., Nov. 16-19—Fred B. Smith, E. A. Filene, Roger Babson Among Speakers

Final details of the program for the nnual convention of the New England)istrict of the A. A. C. W., were pracically completed last week at a meetng of the executive committee held in pringfield. Frederick W. Bliss, of 'rovidence, chairman of the District, preided. The convention will be held in lartford, Nov. 16 to 19.

The convention will open Sunday afteroon, Nov. 16, at 2:30 o'clock in the fternoon with an "inspirational meeting" the Capitol Theatre, during which the ublic will be invited to listen to an rgan recital by Edwin H. Lemare, disnguished organist and composer. Fred . Smith of New York will give an ddress of welcome on the subject, "Is merica a Great Nation?" This will e followed by a reception at the Busiess and Professional Women's Club.

The following morning, in addition to ie period of registration, there will be general session of delegates at the artford Club, where the delegates will e welcomed by Mayor Stevens, as well listen to addresses by Bliss and Merle horpe, editor of the Nation's Business, e publication of the United States hamber of Commerce.

Speakers appointed to address conntion sessions include: William F. ogers, advertising manager of the Boston Transcript, and president of the Adrtising Club of Boston; Edward A. lene, president of William Filene's Sons mpany, Boston; Charles Cheney, treasrer, Cheney Brothers, silk manufacrers; George Hopkins, vice-president, harles W. Hoyt Company, New York; lward L. Green, manager of the Boston tter Business Commission; Roger bson, Babson Statistical Organization, ellesley Hills, Mass.; Ernest Elmo lkins, of Calkins & Holden, New York, d Prof. Hugh E. Agnew, professor of vertising, New York University.

An immediate membership drive was t under way at the executive committe meeting. New clubs are now being ganized in Pittsfield, Fall River, and eenfield, Mass. John W. Longnecker, advertising manager of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, was appointed chairman of a new committee on club development.

TULSA TRIBUNE APPOINTS

Hollett Named Circulation Manager—Expansion Campaign Under Way

J. V. Hollett has been appointed circulation manager of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, of which Richard Lloyd Jones is publisher and William B. Dimon, general manager.

J. V. Hollett

The appointment is coincident to a campaign of general expansion, which has been launched by the Oklahoma daily.

Hollett has had 23 years experience in newspaper work.

Beginning with the old Indianapolis Press in 1901, he later was transferred to the Indianapolis News, where he remained for 11 years.

He then went to the Cincinnati Enquirer, serving two years there, and then to Washington where he served on the Washington Herald for three years.

Joining the former Perry-Jones staff, Mr. Hollett served in Tulsa, Pensacola, Minneapolis and Reading, Pa. He resigned to become circulation manager of the Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation 118,000
Sunday Circulation 175,000

Member A. B. C.

Experience The Best Teacher

Has taught American exporters that the best advertising medium in Japan is

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

The explanation is readily apparent to all who have examined carefully the comparative status of newspapers in Japan. There are journals which cater to one political party, to the literati, to gay circles and even to the rikisha men and coolies. But The Jiji Shimpo is known throughout Japan as the Empire's foremost NEWSpaper and the favorite in business circles. The Jiji's circulation is greatest among prosperous Japanese. Its typical readers are found among those progressive Japanese who lead the way in the introduction of foreign goods in our country. To interest them is the foreign salesman's first requirement.

J. P. Barry, an authority on Far Eastern advertising, represents the Jiji in the American field. Mr. Barry is thoroughly equipped to assist you in planning your advertising campaign in Japan, and will take pleasure in serving you in every possible way. Communicate with him at

JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE
342 Madison Avenue New York City

THE JIJI SHIMPO
Tokyo

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

BERRY BROTHERS HOSTS TO BRITISH AD MEN

London Publishers Tender Banquet to 400 Backers of London A. A. C. W. Meet—British Advertising Discussed

By Herbert C. Ridout

(London Editor, Editor & Publisher)

Sir William Berry and J. Gomer Berry, British publishers, tendered a banquet October 15, in London to the organizers of the London advertising convention at which the results of the convention were discussed. Four hundred persons prominent in British publishing and advertising circles attended.

Sir William Berry presided, and was supported by the French Ambassador, T. P. O'Connor, M. P., Sir Joseph Cook, Sir Robert Kindersley, Sir Edward Iliffe, Sir Lawrence Weaver, Sir Woodman Burbidge, Sir James Carmichael, Mr. J. H. Thomas, M. P., Sir Travers Clarke, Sir Robert Hadfield, Sir Harold Bowden, Sir Charles F. Higham, C. Harold Vernon, John Cheshire, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Crawford, Gordon Selfridge, and members of the Thirty Club, and representative members of the British delegation that visited the Atlantic City 1923 Convention.

Sir William Berry, in proposing the toast of the Organizers of the London Advertising Convention, reminded his hearers that he and his brother were advertising men, and accordingly took a deep interest in the Convention. He believed that as the result of those meetings at Wembley a great and far-reaching movement had been set on foot. Advertising ran into figures of millions. It had been estimated that thirty-two millions sterling were spent annually in Great Britain in press advertising, another ten millions in other forms of advertising, and including printing, which was largely used for publicity, he thought the total spent on advertising might be set at 50,000,000 pounds. On behalf of advertising he wished to pay tribute to those who had planned and carried through the immensely successful Wembley Convention of 1924. Sir William named the five outstanding figures as C. Harold Vernon, as chairman, John Cheshire, as last year's leader, Sir Charles F. Higham, the first Convention Ambassador to America, W. S. Crawford, in whose brain the idea was conceived, and J. C. Ackerman, chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

C. Harold Vernon, in response, disclosed the interesting facts that 80 per cent of the Convention subscriptions was received from newspaper publishers, and of the whole received, some 40,000 pounds, one-eighth of the total was subscribed by the Berry interests.

Citizens Underwrite New Plant

The residents of Goldfield, Nev., have pledged funds for the purchase of a new plant for the Goldfield Tribune, burned out in a recent fire. The newspaper which had been running for 18 years would have suspended but for the action of the townspeople.

Read Editor & Publisher—$4 a year.

PUT CASH IN EDITOR'S HAT; BEATS SCISSORS BY JUST TWO LEAPS

OVER the luncheon table of a Dallas club three newspaper men were exchanging views and reminiscences. In a discussion of journalistic experiences with things religious, E. B. Doran, director of news and telegraph of the Dallas News, told the tale of a "divine healer" who once came to Dallas—and suddenly left. Freely quoting Doran, the story ran about like this:

"When I was a reporter a 'divine healer' came to Dallas; and his appearance on the streets created somewhat of a sensation. He plainly attempted to impersonate the traditional appearance of Christ. His hair was long and thick and brown, hanging down over his shoulders. He wore a rich, untrimmed beard. His feet were bare, except for sandals, and he was dressed in a flowing white robe of oriental effect.

"Crowds followed him; and his claims to powers of divine healing quickly spread throughout the city. I was put on the story; and one day I watched him work. His stage presence was perfect. In a crowd of a thousand or more, out on the open street, the sick would be brought to him, and he would stretch out his hand over them, and, closing his eyes, pray for them. It looked like a scene from Galilee of 2,000 years ago.

"Everybody was deeply impressed. The grateful recipients of his attention pressed money upon him, which he took with an air of ignoring it. I was watching the whole procedure carefully, and I could see the coins and bills put into the healer's hands; but scan his movements as best I could, it was impossible to detect what become of them. Better sleight-of-hand work I never saw.

"After that particular seance was over, the 'healer' went to his hotel, a modest little place, and I followed him. I was sent at once up into his room, where I was greeted with astonishing words, so out of character that I could scarcely recover myself:

"'Hello, kid! I've been looking for you. You can do me a lot of good. Here, hold out your hat.'

"Mystified, I held out my hat, wondering what marvel he was going to practice on me. Then I learned where the money had so mysteriously gone. For the 'healer' put his hand under his expansive beard, into the bosom of his long white gown, and began to pull out money by the handful, and to pour it into my hat. There were quarters and halves and dollars and bills, and almost before I sensed the full significance of the affair, my hat was overflowing full of money.

"'There, take that and go back to the office and write a good story about me,' said the fakir.

"Of course, I threw the whole hatful of money at him, and started to tell him what I thought of him.

"The 'divine healer,' looking so spiritual in his whole make-up, and especially with his wonderful big eyes, thereupon let loose such a stream of plain and fancy profanity as is not often heard in Texas. The incongruity of it shook me: for the man's appearance was certainly that of a religious devotee. He cursed me from Dan to Beersheba; and threatened to 'get' me. Never mind what I said.

"A short time afterwards, who should walk into the local room, and make straight for the managing editor's office but my friend, the 'healer.' Only there was a difference. He was now dressed in ordinary clothes, and his long hair was tucked under his coat, and his beard was hidden under his vest. He could have passed along the street without being recognized as the same figure who had been setting the town by the ears.

"Of course, I was interested to know what was going on in the boss' office, and I did not have to wait long to be able to make a guess. For soon the 'healer' came leaping through the door, making for the stairs lickety-split.

"About two jumps behind was the chief—Captain Walter was managing editor then—making wild passes at the runaway with a pair of big editorial shears. It was not the fakir who was cussing then; he had other use for his breath.

"The boss was exploding with 'That ('words-we have-no-concern-with,' as Sentimental Tommy says) tried to bribe me to keep news out of the paper!' Then he would make another lunge with the shears at the 'healer' who was well out of his reach.

"Foiled, the old captain went slowly back to his office, muttering words some of which are sometimes heard in church—but not in the same connection.

"The 'healer' was never heard of again in Dallas."

New York Sun to Give Banquet

The New York Sun's Benevolent Association will give a dinner and entertainment Nov. 2 at the Hotel Shelburne, New York. Prominent Broadway stars will provide entertainment.

AD TIPS

Emil Brisacher & Staff, 405 Flood Building, San Francisco. Placing account of the Paraffine Companies, Inc., San Francisco, manufacturers paint, roofing and floor covering.

Nelson Chesman & Company, 500 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Sending contracts on Newbro Manufacturing Co., Atlanta, to newspapers in the southwest.

Nelson Chesman & Company, 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Handling account of the Elite Manufacturing Company, Ashland, Ohio, manufacturers jacks and builders of scaffold brackets.

Conover-Mooney Company, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. Issuing small schedules to run for a year on Cudahy Packing Co., Chicago (cheese).

Dorrance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York. Making contracts with newspapers for the Chas. A. Eaton Company of Brockton, Mass. manufacturers of the Crawford Shoe.

S. Roland Hall, First National Bank Building, Easton, Pa. Placing account of the Asbestos Shingle, Slate & Sheathing Company, Ambler, Pa., manufacturers of asbestos fireproof building products.

Industrial Advertising Company, 615 Wayne street, Detroit. Placing account of The Truscon Laboratories, Detroit, manufacturers paints waterproof.

Arnold Joerns Company, 26 East Huron street, Chicago. Sending to small eastern newspapers copy to run about six weeks on Grain Marketing Co., Chicago.

Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, Inc., 417 Sycamore street, Milwaukee. Conducting a national advertising campaign for Frank Holton & Co., Elkhorn, Wis., makers of "Holton's—America's Greatest Band Instruments," on their new revelation Saxophone.

H. K. McCann Company, Inc., 16 Broadway, New York. Placing account of the Physical Products Corporation, New York.

Marschalk & Pratt, Inc., 49 West 45th street, New York. Handling account of the S. K. F. Industries, Inc., New York, Manufacturers "S. K F." ball bearings.

Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Co., 215 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Sending orders to newspapers of the United States and Canada on Babson Bros. (radio), Chicago.

Street & Finney, Inc., 171 Madison avenue, New York. After January 1, 1925, will handle account of Dwinell-Wright Company, Boston, "White House" coffee.

Francis M. Waters Advertising Agency, 288 Main street, Springfield, Mass. Has secured account of the Duckworth Chain and Manufacturing Company of Springfield.

INTERTYPE

Standardized and interchangeable typesetting machines for all composition, from 5-point text up to full width 36-point bold, and 60-point bold condensed, on slugs up to 42 ems wide. See our full page next week.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

General Offices: 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR SALE

POLLARD-ALLING SYSTEM OF ADDRESSING

3—Reliefographs for embossing names and addresses on aluminum plates. Capacity each machine, 150 to 250 addressed plates per hour.

2—Style "H" motor driven addressers. Capacity each machine, 9,000 addresses per hour.

1—Combination addresser. Capacity 10,000 to 12,000 addressed wrappers per hour and 20,000 to 25,000 addresses per hour on proof.

3—Automatic addressers for printing the addresses on the publication direct. Capacity each machine, 10,000 to 12,000 addressed publications per hour.

ALL IN "A-1" CONDITION

If interested, detailed information will be furnished on request.

C. M. Earley, Manufacturing Director
COLLIERS—THE NATIONAL WEEKLY
416 West 13th Street
New York, New York

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

"Population's Purchasing Power"

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Our attention has been called to some comments by Arthur Robb which appeared in your issue of September 24 and which relate to our recent pamphlet, "Population's Purchasing Power."

Stated briefly, Mr. Robb believes that the estimates in "Population's Purchasing Power" are so low that they give the cost of advertising a much higher ratio in the costs of doing business than he believes to be the case. In his own language it is stated that: "The inference that newspaper competitors might draw from the pamphlet, apparently bearing the approval of a national business organization, is that the newspapers are levying too heavy a publicity tax on business."

It was very far from the purpose of this department in issuing the pamphlet under discussion to draw any conclusions of any nature other than those which appear in the pamphlet itself; and where so many approximate estimates must be used in criticism of the figures contained in this pamphlet we find it difficult to discover ground firm enough to sustain either an agreement or a disagreement with Mr. Robb.

For example, he states that the average retail purchases in 1923 of a family of 4.9 persons amounting to $1,027, "does not ring like heavy metal." But the Treasury Department reports that the average net income for a family of 4.9 persons was $955, which presents a more unfavorable advertising ratio of expenditure than Mr. Robb derives from our figure. If from the Treasury figures we were to subtract savings accounts, payments for insurance, payments for such services as physicians and dentists, expenditures for amusements, for rent and others not within our classification, even lower family expenditures would be the result and the advertising ratio proportionately higher. It is somewhat unfortunate that the Treasury figures for 1923 are not available yet, but those for 1922 will serve to illustrate the argument.

In Mr. Robb's statement of money spent for advertising in the Cleveland newspapers, he regards 5.3 per cent, the ratio which he derives from $1,027, as being unjust. We agree with Mr. Robb in this conclusion, since a measurable proportion of Cleveland newspaper advertising is of national products, and this proportion, the amount of which we do not know, should be subtracted from the strictly retail advertising of Cleveland. In another respect also there seems to be some misunderstanding, since in such cities as Cleveland, where newspaper circulation extends far beyond the corporate limits and is read by hundreds of thousands who do not live in the city, a considerable proportion of the retail advertising should be assessed against the surrounding population and not against the amount of business done in the city.

For example, the Cleveland Plain Dealer has divided its main circulation area into twelve zones, eleven of which are outside of Greater Cleveland and with twice as many inhabitants as are in the Greater Cleveland's trading area to which our figures apply. Other Cleveland newspapers show a similar condition and the inference is clear that the advertitsing revenue of the Cleveland newspapers must be compared with the total retail business for the circulation area outside of Greater Cleveland, in addition to the amount of business shown for Cleveland alone. This means the inclusion of territory within a radius of 100 miles, while our figures relate only to a territory within a radius of 10 miles. By applying these factors we find that the retail advertising ratio of corporate Cleveland actually is about one-third of the 5.3 per cent established.

Every adverse criticism of "Population's Purchasing Power" of a constructive nature will be welcomed by this department equally with all others who are seeking earnestly for facts, the truth of which can be demonstrated. Commendation is pleasant and we have received what we believe to be a generous amount; but our purpose is vastly different: It is to learn, in order to know; it is to call as wide attention as possible to the state of comparative ignorance in which distribution lives and has its being; and finally, to inspire as many as possible to join in the great work of collecting facts which now are distinguished by their absence.

Perhaps we should feel gratified at Mr. Robb's comments as strong evidence of the value and importance of our pamphlet, but we deprecate his concluding words: . . . "the document is worse than useless as an addition to the reliable marketing information already available." We deprecate this language because it is an unwarranted attack upon statistics which were gathered not by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States or its Domestic Distribution Department, but through a carefully worked out plan by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which has devoted many years to the perfection of its methods. These methods and their results furnish the only substantial clue to the expenditures per capita per annum in the United States, and they will continue to be the basis for many conclusions used as a guide in the consideration of serious distribution problems.

ALVIN E. DODD, Manager,
DOMESTIC DISTRIBUTION DEPARTMENT,
Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The article in EDITOR & PUBLISHER did not impugn the methods or the accuracy of the Bureau of Labor statistics. It was not, and is not, denied that "their results furnish the only substantial clue to the expenditures per capita per annum in the United States." It is denied that these results, the outcome of surveys of the budgets of 12,000 workingmen's families, are sufficiently substantial or accurate as the basis for an estimate of the annual expenditures of the 24,000,000 families of the United States. Such a pyramid cannot be balanced on a pin-point.

Mr. Dodd's citation of Treasury figures in support of those in the pamphlet is not relevant. The figure given—$955 as the average income of a family of 4.9 persons—appears to be the net income, after the exemptions allowed the head of a family under the income tax law have been deducted. These exemptions certainly exceed the $1,027 allowed by the Bureau of Labor statistics for retail expenditures per family per annum.

As to Cleveland—and the same applies to most of the other cities listed—if we are to include the retail business done within a radius of 100 miles of the city and set against it only the advertising done in the Cleveland papers, without doubt the ratio of advertising expenditure to local business will be considerably less than 5.3 per cent. If, on the other hand, we include the retail business done within this 100-mile radius, using the Chamber's estimating method, and set against it the daily newspaper advertising done in cities within that area, it is probable that the 5.3 per cent ratio will not be substantially altered. EDITOR & PUBLISHER made clear at the time its reasons for criticising the Chamber's pamphlet. If its calculations of retail sales totals are allowed as accurate, newspaper advertising in many localities is little more than an expensive joke.—EDITOR.

LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

"Haphazard" Agency Methods

HAMBURG, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1924.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Do all publishers of country papers have trouble with certain large advertising agencies? Usually the big agencies are scrupulously honest and their systematized methods supply the "system" for many a small paper.

As an example of the other kind of agency, however, may be taken the case of a firm on lower Broadway. During the summer we received an order from this firm at 10½ cents an inch under our regular rate, which is published at the masthead of our paper. We ran the first ad of the series and wrote, correcting the rate. When we heard nothing from them dissenting from our figure, we supposed they had accepted it. Several weeks after the last ad had been run we received their check, not only shaved down to their own price but also with a 2 per cent discount added to their agency commission. Heaven only knows what it was for—whether "promptness" in payment or something else.

By the way, why does every agency take the 2 per cent? Even though they take six or eight weeks from the time they are billed until they pay—and many of them do—they take off 2 per cent besides their 15 per cent commission.

We would be glad to hear the experience of other publishers of small papers—weeklies—in these respects. This is not an attack on all agencies, because we often wonder how they get along so well with the haphazard methods of so many country papers, but rather an inquiry for information.

Yours truly,
ERIE COUNTY INDEPENDENT,
E. H. VAN DUZEE.
Editor.

BERNHARD PERMANENT RECEIVER

Takes Over Affairs of Newark Press—Fiske Attempts to Refinance

John A. Bernhard, Newark attorney, was appointed permanent receiver for the Newark (N. J.) Press, illustrated evening tabloid, at a court hearing held Tuesday, Oct. 28. By order of the court settlement of claims against the property was held in abeyance for 30 days to give Joseph J. Fiske time in which to attempt to refinance the paper.

Bernhard was appointed temporary receiver October 17, at the demand of 75 employes of the newspaper who claimed two weeks' wages were due them.

Current History Editor Honored

George W. Ochs Oakes, editor-in-chief of Current History, published by the New York Times Company, was tendered a complimentary birthday luncheon by his associates in the editorial and business departments, Monday October 27, at the New York Advertising Club. The occasion marked the 63rd birthday of Mr. Oakes and the 10th anniversary of Current History Magazine.

The Shop-o-scope
TRADE MARK
Nearly 200 newspapers are already on the list of Shop-o-scope users for 1924. Send your order today!
The BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, INC.
Otis Building Philadelphia

Grand Rapids
Votes for Imperial

THE Grand Rapids Herald and the the Grand Rapids Press have also seen fit to cast their votes for the Imperial Plus Metal Plan. This is another city that has gone solid for Imperial.

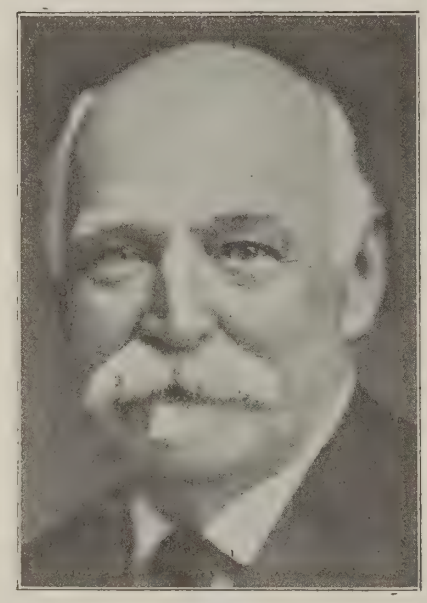
We wish you could talk with these two publishers and with hundreds of others now using the Plus Plan. They would tell you that the Imperial Plus Plan not only means reliability but that it also adds years of life to type metal. And that's our big point of economy.

Will you trade 5 minutes for the Plus Plan?

On the strength of what other publishers have done will YOU trade five minutes of your time for our plan? If you will, send today for a copy of the Plus Plan.

The main plank of Imperial's platform is dependability and economy. The publishers of these two papers recognize these points as being just as essential to them in publishing as they are to the manufacturers of fine furniture for which Grand Rapids is noted. That's why they selected Imperial!

Imperial METAL
LINOTYPE—MONOTYPE—INTERTYPE—STEREOTYPE
Imperial Type Metal Co.
New York—Philadelphia—Cleveland—Detroit
BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.



W. B. HALDEMAN, FAMOUS KENTUCKY EDITOR, SUCCUMBS TO HEART STROKE

Noted Associate of "Marse" Henry Watterson Stricken at Churchill Downs Race Track—For Years Edited Louisville Times

ONE of the last editors, linking the old American journalism with the new, is dead.

Gen. W. B. Haldeman, who died within half an hour after being stricken with a heart attack at Churchill Downs, Louisville, October 28, passed away as he must have wished, close to the race track, symbol of the exciting adventure his life has been. He was 78 years old.

As editor of the Louisville Times, one of the great newspapers of the South, Gen. Haldeman rated next to the colorful "Marse" Henry Watterson, with whom he was associated from boyhood, as one of Kentucky's most noted editors.

W. B. Haldeman

He entered journalism an adventurous youth, a Confederate veteran, in the days when newspaper work was real romance. So-called personal journalism was flourishing. Yet Gen. Haldeman's whole influence was directed towards overturning this brand of editorship and limiting battle lines to the editorial page.

His was the true journalistic instinct; and he was among the first to overturn long tradition and divert his news columns from color and bias.

Thus in the early days of his editorship of the Times, he fought all over the paper with Richard W. Knott, editor and publisher of the Louisville Evening Post. Editor Haldeman called Editor Knott "Slippery Dick" in his columns, while Knott retaliated with "Crooked Bill."

Eventually Knott's name was blacklisted from the Times, but Gen. Haldeman was quite ready to declare "absolutely all right," when the black list was shortly afterwards broken once and for all.

"W. B." lead a roving youth. He must have had many remarkable adventures, which have never been told.

One legend comes from Palestine, Tex. That "Wild West" frontier town was terrorized by a "bad man." A youngster named Haldeman, the General himself, according to whispers, met the "bad man" and single-handed attacked him, took away his gun, and drove him from town.

Whether this story was true or not, no one knows. But no one ever could or would deny the courage of General Haldeman.

The elder Haldeman, Walter N., was first a book seller and periodical publisher. He was intensely Southern in his sympathies and his paper, the Louisville Journal, supported the cause. It soon became dangerous to run his paper in Louisville and he moved further South, leading an itinerant newspaper career.

At this time "W. B." was 15 or 16. He ran away from home and joined a regular regiment in the Confederate army. His father considered his son too young to endure army hardships and obtained a midshipman's appointment for him in the Confederate navy.

Life, however, in the navy proved too dull for the spirited youngster, and he left that branch of the service to join the "Orphan Brigade," so named because it lost so many of its commanders in the battles in which it figured along the Mississippi River. Wounded at Chickamauga, he recovered and returned to the brigade, ending the war as a lieutenant, although he was then only 19 years old.

When peace was declared, the Haldemans returned to Louisville, and "W. B." completed his education at the Kentucky Military Institute, where the curriculum corresponded with a collegiate course of the present day.

After being graduated, he entered newspaper work, his father and Henry Watterson having established the Courier-Journal in 1868 and in 1884 the Times. He was made editor of the weekly Courier-Journal.

From the start he proved himself a good journeyman newspaper man, showing particular aptitude, however, for politics. He had a fine instinct for making friends, and he was therefore used by his father and Watterson as their political representative.

In 1896, the Haldemans and Watterson decided to bolt the Bryan free silver ticket, risking their entire newspaper property in this campaign. Due to the efforts of the Courier-Journal and the Times, Kentucky gave its electoral vote to McKinley.

Later "W. B." was editor of the Times, and under his direction that newspaper became the breadwinner of the two, and it still remains one of the most prosperous newspaper properties in the South. During 1916 and 1917 a family row developed between Bruce and W. B. Haldeman over the extent of authority Bruce, as company president, was showing in directing policies. After a long suit, W. B. Haldeman and Watterson finally won.

In his editorship of the Times, he followed the English method, being a great admirer of Delane of the London Times. He seldom wrote anything himself for his newspaper. But in particularly hot campaigns he contributed editorials. Sometimes these were far too vigorous and had to be edited by another. He consented to this always.

General Haldeman was a magnificent physical specimen, 6 feet 2, very attractive, very picturesque. He wore a long white mustache, carefully twisted, and a little goatee in Southern fashion.

He was fond of sport and at all times was extremely interested in military matters. His outstanding characteristic, however, was his political genius. Nevertheless, he repeatedly declined public office, with three exceptions.

Like the true Southern gentleman he was, he was a devotee of the race track, and consequently he accepted the appointment to serve as a member of the Kentucky Racing Commission from 1914 to 1919. And, because of his military service, he was made Adjutant General of Kentucky. The third office he held was that of Democratic National Committeeman.

The two things upon which General Haldeman prided himself most were the Jefferson Davis monument, and the stand he took supporting Woodrow Wilson. He took entire charge of the movement to erect a monument in memory of the Confederate President at Fairview, Ky., the Davis birthplace.

And General Haldeman, even when Watterson was most bitterly denouncing the then Governor of New Jersey, he remained personally sympathetic with Wilson and later was the Wilson leader in Kentucky.

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency

Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

A. B. C. EULOGIZES KOHLSTAAT

MEMBERS of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, assembled in convention in Chicago, learning of the death of Herman H. Kohlsaat, ordered the following minute written and spread upon the records of the Association, and a copy sent to Mr. Kohlsaat's family:

Mr. Kohlsaat's life was an example of the triumph of character and ability which we like to identify with America and its opportunities. A boy born to hard work and small means, he won victory over adversity; and he capped that accomplishment with the greater triumph of so impressing his character and personal worth upon his nation and his time that he was the beloved friend and counselor of rich and poor, of Presidents and humblest citizens, of a multitude who now mourn his passing.

Mr. Kohlsaat was distinguished alike in the profession of journalism and the business of newspaper publishing. A vigorous and fearless hater of inefficiency and corruption in public life, a brave defender of sound principles of Government of our Republic, his contributions to the welfare of the city, State and nation as a newspaper man and as a citizen were substantial and lasting. More particularly in those affairs within the domain of newspaper publishing, Mr. Kohlsaat throughout his wide experience in the management of journals of great influence, was a leader in efforts to lift the ideals and standards of his chosen field of endeavor. The members of this association voice their sorrow over Mr. Kohlsaat's death and their gratitude for his life and example.

VICTOR L. LAWSON,
R. R. McCORMICK,
FRANK MUNSEY,
CYRUS H. K. CURTIS,
ARTHUR HAYS SULZBERGER,
JOHN STEWART BRYAN,
LOUIS WILEY, Committee.

BELL, "NEWSPAPERMAN'S DIPLOMAT," IS DEAD

Charge d'Affaires of American Legation at Peking Formerly Handled Press Relations at Washington and London

Edward Bell, charge d'affaires of the American Legation at Peking, whose sudden death Tuesday came as a great shock to Washington, was a newspaperman's diplomat.

A "career" man in the foreign service of the United States, constantly on duty since he began as American vice-consul in Egypt in 1909, Bell displayed an unusual faculty for dealing with reporters. On three important occasions he was deliberately chosen by the State Department to handle press relations. Few trained newspaper men, yanked from the craft and put in a press relations post, ever handled the job as well. Washington correspondents particularly appreciated Bell and nothing except his death caused more genuine regret than the order that transferred him from the Division of Current Information of the State Department to the post of Counsellor of the Peking Legation.

As second secretary of the American Embassy in London, when Walter Hines Page was Ambassador to the Court of St. James, Bell first came in contact with the reporters in the tense days of American neutrality between 1914 and 1917. It was his chief duty to meet the representatives of the American and British press then, and later after the United States entered the war. It was in no small degree due to his frankness and tact that the American position was intelligently interpreted.

Bell, who was left in Tokio as charge d'affaires when Roland S. Morris returned from his post as Ambassador just before the Washington Conference on the Limitation of Armaments and Far Eastern Questions, was recalled to act as American observer on the Chino-Japanese Commission, which succeeded in working out the Shantung settlement.

At the conclusion of the Armaments Conference, Bell was retained in Washington as chief of the Division of Current information and served in Washington more than a year before being sent to China. Since the outbreak of the present Chinese conflict, Bell, as acting head of the American Legation in the absence of Minister Schurmann, has done yeoman service. Only the day before his sudden death from heart disease, he contrived to put through via the State Department, dispatches from the various correspondents now stationed in Peking.

Edward Bell was born in New York in 1882, and entered the foreign service five years later.

New A.N.P.A. Member

The Parkersburg (W. Va.) Daily News has been elected to active membership in the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Cartoons

Radio Comic Strip—John Decker.
Weekly Sport Survey—Buddy Scheel.
Jingles, by Sucker & Pause.
Tri-Feature Synd. Service, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LET US BUILD YOUR CIRCULATION
Famous stories by famous authors.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y. C.

Home Features

"WOMEN IN THE HOME,"
and every kind of home feature.
Tri-Feature Synd. Service, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman.
Washington Radio News Service,
Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Obituary

THOMAS HARBAUGH, 75, known as one of the first newspaper columnists, died at Piqua, O., Oct. 28. Nearly 40 years ago he wrote brief comments on news and political happenings for the New York Times. He was also one of the writers of Nick Carter detective stories.

LAURA JEAN LIBBEY, 62, novelist, and former newspaper woman, died at her home in Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 25. She wrote more than 50 novels and a vast number of short stories and articles. Her first composition, she sold to the old New York Ledger for $5. While publishing her first novels, she remained in newspaper work, serving as editor of the New York Fashion Bazaar and for three years as special correspondent of the New York World.

HENRY BAWKES, founder and publisher of De Telegraaf, first Dutch language newspaper to be nationally circulated in America, died at his home in Clifton, N. J., Oct. 25. He founded the newspaper in 1881 and sold it in 1894. It suspended publication two years ago.

CLARENCE A. NEWMAN, formerly city editor of the Iowa City (Ia.) Citizen, some years ago prior to its merger with the Press, died Oct. 18, in Oak Park, Ill., following an attack of paralysis.

THOMAS A. KAVANAGH, veteran printer and make-up man on the Boston Herald-Traveler, died Oct. 24, at his home in Dorchester, Mass.

ALFRED HOFFMAN, 35, a pressman on the Boston American, was killed when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a street car at Chelsea, Mass., last week.

EDWIN C. HUMPHRIES, city editor on the Pittsburgh Post 15 years ago, died Oct. 26, in his home in Washington, D. C. He began his work in Washington as a reporter.

MAJOR JOSEPH W. KELLY, 80, Civil War veteran and for 15 years publisher and editor of the Acme (Wash.), Prospector, died at Sumas, Wash., on Oct. 20. He had been in the newspaper business 66 years.

MRS. WILLIAM PECK, mother of William J. Peck, owner of the Pittston (Pa.) Gazette, died recently.

WILLIAM M. MARDEN, for 15 years a district man for the Boston Globe, later with the Boston Herald, died Oct. 26, at his home in Plymouth, Mass. He retired from newspaper work a few years ago.

WALTER M. FERNALD, 57, a member of the Boston Transcript editorial staff, died Oct. 23, at his home in Melrose, Mass. He formerly was editorial writer on the Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel, later on the Hartford (Conn.) Times, joining the Transcript last May.

MISS MARY T. HAMILTON, 34, of Austin, Texas, for several years a member of the staff of the Austin American, died recently after a lingering illness. She was at various times society, music and city editor, and later secretary to the publisher.

LOUIS BURTON MACKENZIE, 44, prominent publisher and clubman, died recently at the Southe Shore Hospital in Chicago following a short attack of pneumonia. Mackenzie was head of the Automotive Electrical Engineer, the Welding Engineer, and the Welding Encyclopedia.

PETER MCARTHUR, 58, humorist, poet, biographer, and contributor of articles to the Toronto Globe died in London, Ont., October 28, following an operation.

IN MEMORY OF NELLIE BLY—REMARKABLE NEWSPAPER WOMAN

JUST as our circumaviators reached this land of freedom the newspapers printed an item that the net estate of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Seaman, the world-girdling Nellie Bly, is but $8,700. Her feat thirty-five years ago is nothing compared to the problem of her executors. How are they to encompass her bequests, amounting to about $11,100, with $2,400 less than that? But she always wanted to do the impossible, and her will is not a surprising document to those who knew her, remarks a writer in commenting on her wonderful career.

Nellie Bly was a great figure in her day, far more popular than our aviators. Her day was the time when American journalism was getting ready to don the motely, and she was half creature, half creator of her era. As Elizabeth Cochrane she found her native Pittsburgh gave no scope to her elbows, and she naturally made for New York—for New York and the amazing editor of the day, Joseph Pultizer of the World. She asked for an assignment to go up in a balloon. Instead, they sent her to the city insane hospital, where she stayed as a patient to get copy. It is enough to say of her story about it that there was finally an appropriation of $8,000,000 to remedy the abuses which she told us of. She exposed city police stations in the same way, and again the city took steps to correct grave wrongs.

As Nellie Bly—she appropriated the name from a popular song of the day—she bought a baby for $10 in the open market, and exposed the infamy of the traffic in infants. She walked with Coxey's army to Washington. She visited Pullman, Ill., during the great strike, wrote a series of articles on gambling at Saratoga, and went on the war-path against frauds, large and small. Her best known feat, of course, was the circling of the world. Leaving Hoboken Nov. 14, 1889, she was back Jan. 25, the trip taking 72 days, 6 hours, 11 minutes and 14 seconds. Everybody had read Jules Verne's fanciful story, "Around the World in Eighty Days." She not only bettered him by several days, but stopped at Amiens, while she was performing her feat, and let Monsieur Verne greet her.

Nellie was not the first of the sob sisters of the press, but she was one of the first and one of the best. Her name will be associated with her trip around the world. She did more than that for women, however. She showed that they have capacity for newspaper work of certain kinds, and doors opened to them a decade or two earlier than if she had not impetuously shown city editors something.—Editorial, New Haven Union.

Sun Employes Organize

The Sun Club, composed of employes of the New York Sun, has recently been organized for the purpose of promoting closer cooperation between the various departments of that newspaper. The following officers were elected: president, E. O. Peterson; vice-president, H. Muller; corresponding secretary, Joseph Friedman; recording secretary, Mrs. A. K. Suplee; treasurer, Mrs. S. F. Meringer.

Enjoy Hollowe'en Dance

Advertising Club of New York members and their friends held a Hallowe'en costume carnival at the clubhouse, Oct. 29. Advertising slogans, trademarks, products, or services were the theme of the costumes, for which prizes were awarded by advertisers.

Ad Men to Fete World Flyers

Chicago Advertising Post of the American Legion will celebrate Armistice Eve with a military ball and reception for the world flyers, to be held at the Bal Tabarin, Hotel Sherman.

Special Parish Jubilee Section

The Fall River (Mass.) Herald published an interesting 8-page section Saturday, Oct. 25, commemorating the 50th jubilee of the founding of the parish of Notre Dame de Lourdes in that city. Page 1 carried a large picture of the parish church with the jubilee program. The other pages carried the history of the parish and its clergymen along with the advertisements from local merchants.

London Morning Post Changes

The new proprietary of the London Morning Post has brought in its train some staff changes. The former business manager, H. E. Peacock, has resigned, and his place is being taken by Ivor Fraser, of the Press and Publicity Department of the Underground Railways. Ivor Fraser's successor at Electric Railway House will be Sir Ernest Clark, associated with the Civil Service of Northern Ireland.

Typos Give Dinner to Hewson

Austin Hewson, recently elected second vice-president of the International Typographical Union, was guest of honor at a dinner in Brooklyn, N. Y., October 26. More than 1,000 friends attended. Speeches were made by Leon H. Rouse, president, and John S. O'Connell, secretary and treasurer of "Big Six." Jack Sullivan, vice-president, and L. A. Prendergast, trustee, arranged the affair.

You Know It's

The Beacon Journal

In Akron, Ohio

No one disputes that fact. But do that business is booming in Akron—that the factories are working three shifts—that every one is buying what they want, as well as what they need. Money is plentiful—business is good.

You Know

Run Your Campaign in a Live Paper, in a Live City.

The Value of News

The New York Times holds to its single purpose of gathering and printing the news.

News is the indispensable element of a newspaper for which there can be no substitute, for which nothing else can compensate.

The New York Times spares neither effort nor expense to gather the news. The energy and trained intelligence of an unrivaled staff, the unequaled use of cable, telegraph and local facilities assemble nightly news of world, nation, state and city for the readers of The New York Times.

first!

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

First eight months of 1924

Carried more Men's Wear advertising than the World and Sun combined.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

Present average circulation 126,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Always Reliable

The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK

Drawn Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER

By CARL ED

Creator of "Harold Teen" Began on Rock Island Argus

"BORN? Sure," was Carl Ed's characteristic reply to the first of the usual questions on essential data regarding well-known persons.

CARL ED

The date, if that means anything, was July 16, 1890, the place Moline, Ill. Other details of the rise of the originator of the comic "Harold Teen" include a start with the World Color syndicate in 1912, which lasted for six years; along with the job of sports writer for the Rock Island (Ill.) Argus. From there he went to Chicago, in 1918, where he was connected with the Chicago Evening American. The next year saw him at his desk in the Chicago Tribune, which he still holds down with ability, and a little additional weight acquired since the salad days.

Other details of this sleek appearing cartoonist's life are perhaps less technical, and consequently more interesting. For instance, his last name, the shortest perhaps in the world, is pronounced the longest way round, "ED."

Also, he does not use bear grease on his hair; it just got the sheikish habit through the Teenish thoughts trickling through; for of course it is a w. k. fact that Harold Teen and his companion of the strips, Lillums, are the original sheik and Sheba of cartoondom, and comprise the only feature on adolescence in existence.

Persons who know Mr. Ed from early days in Moline claim that his knowledge of lovelorn lads was acquired at an early age; and it's easy to see that he had no trouble in procuring a good model for the ideal youth by taking a look in the mirror each morning. But at that he isn't spoiled. He lives in Evanston, the happy hunting ground for his sort of copy; where collegiate youths and beautiful co-eds flock the streets.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

WHOLE PRESS CONFUSED BY TREASURY OFFICIALS

(Continued from page 3)

"Collectors of Internal Revenue:

"The attention of Collectors is invited to Section 257 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1924, which reads as follows:

> The Commissioner shall as soon as practicable in each year cause to be prepared and made available to public inspection in such a manner as he may determine, in the office of the collector in each internal-revenue district and in such other places as he may determine, lists containing the name and the post-office address of each person making an income-tax return in such district, together with the amount of the income tax paid by such person.

"It is held that the provision of Section 257 (b) are applicable to all returns of income made after January 1, 1924, filed under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1924 or prior income tax acts. This section apparently contemplates the filing of only one list in a collection district for each year. Such list must show the amount of tax paid as well as the name and address of the taxpayer, and it should be prepared as soon as practicable in each year.

"Section 2 (a) (1) of the Revenue Act of 1924 defines the term 'person' as including an individual, a trust or estate, a partnership, or a corporation. The term must be considered as having this meaning in Section 257 (b) and the lists for public inspection must be prepared accordingly. Under the express provisions of the statute, the lists should contain the names of only those taxpayers who make income tax returns in the particular collection district.

"The Assessment Lists prepared on Form 23A meet all the requirements of Section 257 (b) in that they show the name, address and amount paid by each taxpayer on all original assessments and additional assessments as well as penalties, interest, etc. Such lists, prepared from the income tax returns filed after January 1, 1924, shall, therefore, be open to public inspection as quickly as possible after they have been compiled. It is not necessary to treat the Assessment Lists as confidential pending the receipt and posting of second, third, and fourth installments.

"Forms 23A upon which are listed taxes transferred from other districts shall not, under the provision of the Act, be opened to the public.

"In view of the importance of the Assessment Lists, every precaution should be taken to insure their protection and to prevent their being damaged or mutilated. Under no circumstances shall the Assessment Lists leave the possession of the Collector or his representatives, or be removed from the Collector's office.

"Each Collector of Internal Revenue will designate an employe of his office who will assist all persons making inquiry to obtain the information to which they are entitled under the provisions of Section 257 (b).

"It is realized that the opening of the Assessment Lists to the public may interfere to some extent with the work in the Collector's office, and the loss of at least a part of the services of the employe assigned to this additional duty will be a matter of consequence to some Collectors. However, it is the desire of the Internal Revenue Service to afford every facility to persons seeking the in-

Special Copy for Special Church Days

Series No. 6 of church advertisements issued by this department has special copy for such days as Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter, Mothers' Day, etc. Here is the suggested copy for the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving:

NEXT THURSDAY

Thanksgiving is in some senses a good deal like the church. The church is here and has been here from the early days of the city. Thanksgiving has also been here as long as any one can remember. We take both as a matter of course. But we wouldn't have one without the other, and both are meant for more important uses than boisterous sports.

If the hardy men and women who hewed a living out of bleak New England had been men who put gold above God there would be no Thanksgiving observance this week. The Pilgrim Fathers came here so that they might have the religious freedom they could not find abroad.

The people who settled South America were of another stripe. Gold was their main object in life, and the intelligent leaders of the republics to the south are keen enough to realize that religious inheritance makes a vast difference to a country.

How you treat the church and Thanksgiving may make a great difference to the future of this land. It has been built upon Christian principles. These will change with the growth of men's understanding, but any lessening of respect for the things of God mean that fifty years hence (name of town) will be a less good place in which to live than it is today.

By all means join the other good folk of (name of town) and go to church tomorrow.

Wouldn't the publication of this ad help the churches, the community and your paper? Force the church-going people of your town to look to your paper for news and inspiration. Series No. 6, 52 ads, one paper in a town, costs 3 cents per week per thousand circulation.

For proofs address Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

383 Madison Ave. New York City

formation to which they are entitled by virtue of Section 257 (b) of the Revenue Act. For this reason it has been decided to open the original records. Any list that might be prepared to show the name and address of each taxpayer and the amount of tax paid would necessarily have to be taken from the Assessment Lists, and the possibility of typographical errors would have to be considered, but by opening the original documents to the public, there can be no question as to the authenticity of the information obtained.

"D. H. BLAIR,
"Commissioner."

It was this statement that eventually led to publication by newspapers of income tax returns secured by them from the Collector of Internal Revenue of their respective districts.

When there arose almost immediately a far-reaching difference of opinion as to the legality of the action of these newspapers, Mr. Mellon's office issued the following statement, dated October 23:

"In connection with the opening in the Collector's office of each district of the list showing the amount of income tax paid by each person, in accordance with the provisions of Section 257 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1924, the Treasury desires to call the attention of all persons to the provisions of Section 3167 of the Revised Statutes which provides in part:

> * * * and it shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any income return, or any part thereof or source of income, profits, losses, or expenditures appearing in any income return; and any offense against the foregoing provision shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court." * * *

Almost simultaneously with this statement, another ("Document B" for this story") descended upon the Press Room of the Treasury building from the office of Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair, which read as follows:

"By direction of the Commission of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, lists of taxpayers showing the amount of income tax paid by each, have been made available for public inspection in the offices of collectors of internal revenue.

"The revenue act, approved June 2, 1924, provides that there shall be prepared and made available to public inspection in the office of the Collector in each internal revenue district, lists containing the name and tho Post Office address of each person filing an income tax return in such district. The law also provides that the amount of income tax paid by each person shall be shown.

"The Bureau of Internal Revenue interprets this provision of the Act as applying to all returns of income made after January 1, 1924 whether filed under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1924 or prior income tax acts. The term "person" means an individual, a trust or estate, a partnership, or a corporation.

"The lists required by the new revenue law are now available for inspection in the collector's office and the collector has designed one of his employees to assist all persons making inquiry to obtain the information to which they are entitled by virtue of the new revenue law.

"The records which are open to the public are the official assessment lists. They show a complete history of each person's transactions with the Government in regard to his income tax matters. The name and postoffice address appear on the lists as well as the amount of tax paid on all original and additional assessments, also penalty and interest payments. It is the desire of the Internal Revenue Service to afford every facilty to persons seeking the information to which they are entitled and the Bureau is prepared to co-operate with the public to the fullest possible extent.

"The assessment lists are, of course, the basis for all the collector's bookkeeping transactions and any additional information that might be compiled would have to be taken from these lists. The opening of the official assessment lists to the public eliminates all possibility of errors that might be made in transcribing the information and there can be no question whatsoever as to the authenticity of the information given to the public."

On the following day, as a nation-wide controversy raged as to the right of newspapers to have access to the tax lists for publication, Mr. Mellon gave out the following:

"My attention has been directed to an editorial in the New York World charging partisan purpose in the compliance by the Treasury with the mandatory provisions of an Act of Congress. The amendment to the Revenue Act of 1924 added to the provision under the former law which made open to inspection names of taxpayers, the requirement that there also be open to inspection the amount of tax paid, and in due course when the information was available it was opened to inspection. Presumably Congress in reenacting specifically in the same Act the prohibition against printing or publishing a part of a return, intended to have both provisions effective. Inspection where reason for it existed and not newspaper publication solely to satisfy idle public curiosity. The World sees fit to ignore the penal statute against printing or publishing and such action is alone responsible for just what it pretends to condemn—partisanism. The Treasury had no alternative and criticism would rightly have been made had it not complied with law."

EVENING WORLD CLAIMS BEAT

The editorial management of the New York Evening World this week claimed it had "beat the country" on publishing the income tax returns.

Receiving the flash at 3:30 last Thursday that the lists were available for public inspection, three reporters were immediately dispatched to the Customs House, where returns of many of the world's richest men were filed. By the 4:20 edition, the Evening World was on the street, printing some of the more important names, and the list was added to in subsequent editions.

SCRIPPS-HOWARD COUNSEL O.K.'s PRINTING TAX LISTS

On Wednesday of this week, Robert P. Scripps, editorial director, and G. B. Parker, general editorial executive, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, announced that the 25 members of the chain would continue publication of the income tax payments.

The announcement followed an opinion on the income tax publicity subject from Baker, Hostetler, and Sidlo, a Cleveland law firm.

The announcement follows:

"The Scripps-Howard newspapers hereby announce that they intend to continue publication of income tax payments.

"This declaration follows receipt of a legal opinion from Baker, Hostetler and Sidlo.

"Newton D. Baker, former mayor of Cleveland and secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet, is senior member in the law firm referred to.

"The Scripps-Howard newspapers take this position, not because of any tendency or desire on their part to defy a law, but on the contrary, because of a desire to serve the law.

"They believe publicity of income tax payments is a thing specifically called for by congress in its latest legislation on the subject.

"And they therefore, believe they would not be performing the service they should perform if they withheld from their readers the information congress intended to be made public.

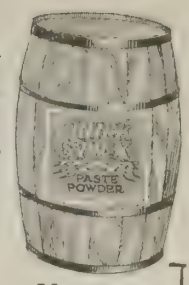
"They conceive as a basis mission of a newspaper the quick and convenient transmission of public records—that it is manifestly impossible for every citizen to go to a court or to a legislature hall or to the capitol at Washington or to a revenue collector's office and find out personally what is going on in public affairs.

"And they believe that when a newspaper ceases to function as a service by which the public is thus informed, the newspaper as an institution becomes impotent and that some other medium for quick and convenient transmission of public information should take its place.

"It is not therefore, as a newspaper privilege but as a newspaper duty that the Scripps-Howard newspapers view their action in this matter.

"Accordingly, publicity of income tax payments through the Scripps-Howard newspapers will be continued, and in event of a refusal of the lists to representatives of Scripps-Howard newspapers, suitable action to compel publicity will be taken."

The following is the opinion of the Cleveland law firm in part:



"Section 257 of the revenue act of 1924 provides 'returns . . . shall be open to inspection only upon order of the president and under rules and regulations prescribed . . . ' But a further paragraph of the section provides the commissioner of internal revenue shall . . . make 'available to public inspection in such manner as he may determine . . . lists of names . . . with the amount of income tax paid.'

"The reason for protecting one kind of information from publication and permitting the other kind to be published readily appears," the opinion stated. "If the returns by the tax payers that is, the report as to the sources of his income his profits, losses, etc., were made public it might cause him serious injury and give his competitors an undue advantage. Publication of only the amount of the tax paid could not cause any injury."

35,434
Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of
47% in 7 Years.
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World. MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

The Plain Dealer has the Largest Circulation of Any Cleveland
Daily Newspaper
205,569
J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York
Woodward & Kelly Security Bldg. Chicago

QUICK STICK
PASTE POWDER

Has Many Uses
Quick Stick is the stickiest paste powder on earth and has a hundred uses. It is used in many instances in place of hot glue—it's that strong. In a newspaper organization Quick Stick is indispensable.
In the Mailing Room
For bundle and single wrapping Quick Stick has no equal. Mixed in a minute—enough for the day's batch—won't sour or mould—and it certainly makes the wrappers stick. Won't smudge—can't pull loose—the paper tears before the paste would give.
As a Matrix Paste
Quick Stick Paste Powder makes the finest matrix paste. Fine for either backs or facing and it certainly makes a halftone stand out clear, sharp and distinct. We'll guarantee it to be better and more economical than the "mat" paste you now use. Quick Stick in 200 and 150 lb. barrels cost you only 10c a lb.
For Splicing Webs
Many a pressman splices his webs with "Quick Stick" without stopping the press. Do you know of any other paste that will stick quick enough and tight enough for that? Truly a barrel of "Quick Stick" Paste Powder will serve every department satisfactorily.
"Quick Stick"
Sticks Quick
Quick Stick will mix quick, stick quick and stick tight. The best powder paste on earth. 10c a lb. in barrel lots or a 25 lb. trial keg for $3.00.
705 Mailing Machine Paste

Our "705" Mailing Machine paste works perfectly in any standard make mailing machine. Will not clog or gum, nor does it ever harden in the fountain. Absolutely free from lumps and flows freely for rapid labeling. The labels stick. Send for a trial order. 51 gallon barrels at 35c per gallon. 2 gallon wooden pail for trial $1.40.
COPASCO
The Perfect Semi-Liquid Desk Paste

Copasco Liquid Paste never needs water, sticks quickly, dries fast, spreads smoothly and never dries out. 1 dozen self-closing 5 oz. desk jars only $3.00 or $1.40 a gallon in 12 gallon lots.
Write Today for Complete Catalog
The Commercial Paste Co.
Makers of the Largest Line of Adhesives
Dept. 51 COLUMBUS, OHIO

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

A NEWSPAPER of four pages, but every bit of it good stuff, a newspaper which featured brevity and cleverness of expression above everything else—such was The New York Sun in 1875 when it hired young Edward P. Mitchell fresh from the shore of Maine at the then extremely generous salary of $50 a week.

Mitchell's "Memoirs of an Editor" (Scribner's) tells the story of fifty years of the Sun and of American journalism, but the success of Dana seems to have enjoyed most the period in the seventies and eighties when Dana had made the Sun "the newspaper man's newspaper."

"There never was such a paper" says the cover blurb. The humor of Dana resembled a bit that of Eugene Field, and he was at his best in ironic persecution of public figures who had incurred his malice. One such affaire afforded Mitchell the chance to compose his first contribution for the Sun:

> Richard Smith, of the Cincinnati Gazette, had been so lucky as to offend Mr. Dana by some now forgotten utterance. He was forthwith elected or erected as one of the Sun's pet targets for its mock admiration, constant solicitude, and tormenting archery; being styled Deacon Richard Smith, of the Cincinnati Gazette, and represented systematically and almost daily as a truly good man, struggling hopelessly to keep his newspaper virtuous despite the contrivances of a gang of wicked partners, the wickedest being a subordinate named Romeo Reed. This motive was played with a hundred ingenious variations for month after month and year after year. . . .
>
> Just at this time one of the periodic revivals of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy was flagrant in the press. My trial essay attempted to prove by internal evidence that the real author of the once immensely popular, "Proverbial Philosophy," of Martin Farquhar Tupper was none other than the truly good Deacon Richard Smith, and that the immortal poem was packed full of admonitions and warnings privately intended to reform Romeo Reed and the other wicked partners. In looking it over I am compelled to admit that the case for the deacon was as good as that for Verulam.

Mr. Mitchell, who remained with the Sun until 1922, wrote at different times, everything from obituaries to editorials, met cranks, of which a superior variety seemed to infest the Sun offices, traversed the United States and most of the rest of the world, and even, for many years, assiduously but unsuccessfully hunted ghosts.

"Memoirs of an Editor" is a delectable quarry of pleasing facts concerning the great and the obscure of the last two generations. One of Editor Mitchell's early recollections is of seeing through a transom in the Willard Hotel the Pickwickian George Frisbie Hoar earnestly declaiming a speech before a mirror clad only in nightgown and spectacles.

Mitchell's apprenticeship began in Boston on the Daily Advertiser, "a vast blanket sheet . . . . . crammed with good writing."

> We used to believe that the regulations governing the use of English in the Daily Advertiser had been drawn up originally by the faculty of Harvard University in solemn conclave, and the professors met from time to time to devise new refinements of speech and to investigate the fidelity of our observance.

After the Daily Advertiser and a period on the Lewiston Journal, under Dingley of the McKinley tariff bill, Mitchell began his connection with the Sun which was to last nearly all the rest of his life.

But the early days are the ones to which Mr. Mitchell refers with the most gusto. The happy days thus described:

> No happier working days can come to the newspaper man than those wherein the responsibility is minor, rather than major; that is to say, to the paper and its chief, and not directly to the paper's ownership and the public. The forenoon illusion of importance and efficiency has not yet faded, the opportunities seem boundless, the pride and joy of effort are the greater, as I thought then and still believe, behind an impersonal journalism in which self-promotion by individual advertisement has no place. Fashion has changed much in 40 or 50 years in this respect; I am not the less convinced that for the writer as well as for his paper anonymity is a desirable thing. . . .
>
> The decade of years from 1872 to 1881 was a period of stimulating prosperity for the four-page Sun . . . Dana . . . paid his helpers' salaries sometimes mounting to from four to ten times the highest pay he had received on the Tribune a few years previously.

Despite this generosity the Sun during this decade paid an annual average dividend of 36 per cent. For some time Dana had hopes of doing without advertising altogether and depending entirely on his circulation for support.

> The vision dissolved only when the enhanced cost of white paper from the mills and the expansion of pages invited by the public appetite for quantity, especially in the Sunday editions, with the competition of esteemed contemporaries to meet this growing demand, and the sudden development of department-store advertising, all conspired to shape the Brobdingnagian format.

Memoirs of journalists must inevitably contain incidents relating to celebrities. Some of Mitchell's lesser known personages are more entertaining than the greater or more notorious ones. There was the episode of the predacious baron, during the great junket given in celebration of the completion of the Northern Pacific:

> The adjacent table was occupied by a party of Mr. Villard's German barons. They were silently but energetically devouring venison in huge mouthfuls and grunting satisfaction as they swallowed. I saw one florid, spectacled well-born interrupt his exercise and fix bulging eyes upon an especially attractive tidbit that lay upon the plate of his neighbor next but one. After a moment of envious observation he reached with his fork in front of the intervening banqueter, speared the desirable morsel and transferred it to his own aesophagus without a word of "by-your-leave, baron." It was not a mere act of heavy Teuton sportiveness, as one might have supposed; the rape was in dead earnest. The two barons glared at each other; the despoiled baron gurgled a gutteral protest; the despoiler stared him down, being perhaps an ace in Berlin high finance, while the other was but a jack; and I derived then on the shore of Lake Minnetonka in Minnesota my first conception of the possibilities of Prussian ruthlessness.

The episode of the Baron is a sample of Mitchell's writing at its best. But almost every page contains some interesting reminiscence. As an editor Mitchell seems a bit the survivor of a forlorn hope. The gay and strenuous journalism of Dana's day has changed into something just as strenuous, but which hardly dares the playful manner of presentation that permitted Dana to bestow absurd front or middle names on his victims and nominate them for undesired offices like the Liberian mission or the consulate at Duck Portage. Such antics must be left to the columnists now, alas.

The "Memoirs" are appropriately discursive and leave out much of recent history which would be extremely interesting. Perhaps Mitchell considers recent journalism less interesting than the great Sun of the eighties.

Frank A. Munsey, the final owner and transformer of the Sun (who would have thought the once puny Evening Sun would become the sole inheritor of the grand old name?) writes:

> Notwithstanding his very great place in the newspaper world Mr. Mitchell is little known to the American people . . . He has insistnetly kept himself in the background of his newspaper and in the background among men.

The background seems the fated stage of the modern editor. Perhaps Bernarr MacFadden, with his Graphic, will guide us back to the good days when the editor was better known than the comic strip artists or the columnist.

* * *

THE address of Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, before the New Jersey Newspaper Institute recently held under the auspices of the New Jersey Press Association at Rutgers University has been put into type. Mr. Wiley spoke on "The Newspaper as a Public Trust," and in the course of his remarks said many sensible things in reply to recent criticism of American newspapers in the magazines. Printed copies of this speech can doubtless be obtained—while the edition lasts—upon direct application to Louis Wiley, business manager, the New York Times, Times Square, New York City.

FROM the Department of Journalism at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., comes "The Small City Daily and the Country Weekly" by Norman J. Radder, Associate Professor of Journalism at that institution and author of "Newspaper Makeup and Headlines" (McGraw-Hill Company). Among the topics taken up by Prof. Radder are "News and Editorials," with special reference to country correspondence; "Newspaper Circulation," with some reference to newspaper accounting; "Advertising," in which local display is not overlooked; "Promotion Methods," in which marketing plans are outlined.

Anyone who glances through this text by Prof. Radder will be impressed by the frequent references to the EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Professor Radder covers a field where the literature has been most scant and jejune.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,000 People

Four transcontinental railways, two with terminal shops in Tacoma; large and commodious harbor; thirty commercial docks; cheapest electric power in U. S.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A. B. C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City — Ford, Parsons Co., 360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS
Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

On and after September 6th, 1924
The New Orleans States
Will be represented in the East and West by the
JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY
New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

UTILITIES FIND NEWSPAPERS VALUABLE FOR EMERGENCY MESSAGES

Philadelphia Company of Pittsburgh Submits Its "Best Piece of Good Will Copy" from the Standpoint of Results—Value of Timely Copy Discussed

EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith presents scnts the sixth of a series of nine articles dealing with public utilities and advertising prepared, in response to many requests, by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The purpose is to help public utility companies build business through newspaper advertising. The articles are built upon facts rather than theories.

ALL newspaper advertisers recognize the timeliness and the adaptabiilty of newspaper advertising—the instant publicity which newspaper copy makes possible.

Newspaper campaigns are often organized "between days" to meet some sudden emergency, some unforseen development and the advertising story comes

PUBLIC SERVICE

To the Men Who Did the Work!

Duquesne Light Company Pittsburgh Railways Company

Friends Were Made by This Copy Among Public and the Company's Employes along as a fresh piece of business news, while the public is still thinking and talking about the event with which the copy deals.

Public utility companies who advertise, understand the value of the newspaper as a means of acquainting the public quickly and completely with the facts behind unusual circumstances that develop in the conduct of their business.

Probably there are on record a great many striking examples of successful "emergency advertising." Typical of these is an experience of the Philadelphia Company of Pittsburgh which has as subsidiary organizations the Duquesne Light Company, Equitable Gas Company, Pittsburgh Railways Company and Equitable Sales Company, all of which serve the Pittsburgh district.

In submitting some of its newspaper copy which has been used with much success, an officer of the Philadelphia Company says:

"We have used a number of advertisements on good will and informative lines from time to time, but there is one full page advertisement on public service which we consider the best piece of good will copy it has been our pleasure to produce.

"This copy appeared on Feb. 21. In explanation, the Pittsburgh district was stricken with the worst sleet storm in twenty years on the night of Feb. 19 and the morning of Feb. 20, with the result that our men were on the job from early Tuesday morning right straight through until Thursday morning, a stretch of forty-eight hours without sleep.

"Copy appeared on the morning of Feb. 21, just at the time when the men were virtually exhausted. Its effect was immediate, the men appreciated the public acknowledgement of our thanks, and kept on working."

"The effect upon the public was equally well demonstrated, as the Philadelphia Company officer asserts in elaborating his statement. The advertising indicated clearly the unstinted effort of the company's men to make good with the public and the latter, appreciating the circumstance through the advertising, were quick to respond.

The Philadelphia Company feels that this single page advertisement, which is reproduced in connection with this chapter, won for it a tremendous number of friends which could not have been gained by any other means.

The Philadelphia Company uses newspaper advertising consistently to obtain definite objectives. Its policy is to take space in the newspapers which serve the Pittsburgh district and its schedule calls for every-other-day insertions.

Speaking of further results obtained, an officer of the company says:

"All of our campaigns which have made tangible offers have met with response from the public, such as an offer to replace broken iron cords, 'Duquesne Luminaire,' and the offer of service on gas and power. A hot water heater campaign also proved a producer, with the result that we have installed more hot water systems this year than in any corresponding period in previous years.

"Frankly, we consider the newspaper the best means for putting our story over to the public, and our advertising budget is so set up as to provide for the expenditure of the largest portion in the daily newspapers. While we use other mediums, they cannot compare with the daily newspapers for the presentation of our story, and I think that the public utilities in general can be of greater service to themselves by devoting more attention to the presentation of their problems in the daily newspapers."

SWOPE GIVES COLLEGE PRIZE

Establishes $250 Annual Essay Award at Hobart College

Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the New York World, has established at Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y., an annual prize of $250 for the next five years for the best original essay on a subject of general interest selected from any department of study at the college, President Murray Bartlett of the college has announced.

HERBERT B. SWOPE

Not only is this prize the most valuable now available at the local institution, but the contest is the broadest one ever provided there. The purpose of the Swope Prize is to promote on the part of the students a tendency to apply to everyday life the lessons of the classroom and laboratory, and to express the relationship between the two in a form similar to the editorial.

The founder of the prize, is an honorary graduate of Hobart College, which conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters last June. On that occasion he delivered before the Phi Beta Kappa Society an address entitled "Journalism: An Instrument of Civilization," which was later published and distributed by the college.

Provo (Utah) Herald Sold

The Provo (Utah) Daily Herald has been sold by E. C. Rodgers, to William H. Hornibrook, who has been a publisher of newspapers in California and Washington.

IOWA'S BOUNTY

A Plentiful Supply of Soft Coal

19,000 square miles of black diamonds, in the form of coal deposits, underlie the state of Iowa, causing the operating of about 250 mines, the employing of about 15,000 men, and yielding about 8,000,000 tons, annually.

These mineral deposits not only furnish a direct source of wealth for Iowa, but because of certain characteristics, influence the fertility of the soil. These two resources furnish Iowa with a more productive surface and less waste land than is found in any similar area in the U. S.

The residents of such a natural field of wealth are necessarily possessing a greater individual wealth. A greater individual wealth makes for a greater market.

Iowa, besides being blessed with many natural advantages, has exceptional marketing facilities, the cities providing excellent distributing centers, while hundreds of small towns offer trading and shipping accommodations.

This veritable gold-field of fertility can prove a real gold field for advertisers who use these dailies.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,535	.04
*Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	21,481	.07
*Council Bluffs Nonpareil .....(E&S)	16,096	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times .....(E)	24,676	.07
*Des Moines Capital .....(E)	57,945	.14
*Des Moines Sunday Capital.....(S)	24,662	.14
*Iowa City Press-Citizen.....(E)	6,387	.035
†††Mason City Globe Gazette.....(E)	13,405	.04
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	17,071	.06

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

IN a small room on the top floor of a flat we saw the other day a newspaper vending machine that worked perfectly. Two cents dropped in a slot that seemed to be gum proof and slug proof—a slight turn of a handle and out came a paper that was as clean as when kicked off the press. And this machine did not work any better than several others we have seen in the past year.

So, it really looks as though the mechanical method of selling newspapers will be adopted pretty generally within a few years, at the most.

The newsboy will always be able to outsell a machine and will probably continue to be a necessity on busy corners but he is now being and will continue to be replaced in even greater numbers on corners where only few papers can be sold.

But before vending machines can be universally adopted their cost will have to be greatly reduced. Most concerns now making machines do not seem to be equipped for large production and their prices are consequently too high. They do not, it seems to us, realize that the newspaper business is organized in its circulation department on a penny basis and that a machine costing from $25 to $50 would have to 'sell' papers for about a year to pay for itself.

What the paper vending business needs is a Ford who will build and sell machines at from $5 to $10. Until such a product is produced we are going to stick to our open style metal boxes with which most circulators are pretty familiar. These boxes are made of heavy material, wear well and cost about $2.00 each. They are a tremendous help in circulating our paper and we consider them just as important to our distribution system as we do the newsstands.

We will have more to say at another time about our experiences with these boxes.

* * *

The outlook for a steady increase in circulation this fall and winter looks good to us. We are paying no attention to the calamity screamers and making plans for promotion just as though this were not an election year. Business and industry will go on just the same regardless of what happens November 4.

* * *

Food shows, radio expositions and the like conducted by newspapers create good will and help get advertising. Another way to profit by these shows is to solicit all the visitors for subscriptions. Many papers hesitate to capitalize a show to this extent even though the orders that can be obtained are often the most desirable kind. People who attend a show sponsored by a paper are usually interested in it and those who are not regular readers make the best prospects, especially if the paper has a strong department of particular interest to them.

* * *

The newspaper section of the A. B. C. at the recent convention in Chicago was wise in favoring the classifying as premium orders subscriptions obtained by club raisers. We never could see much difference between getting orders by giving dishes to subscribers and bicycles to boys. The less hair splitting distinctions the A. B. C. makes in its rules the more satisfactory will be its work.

Another good move, we believe, was to count subscriptions paid for by contestants as bulk circulation. What will the contest boys do now in the last days of a campaign?

* * *

Our boss told us that, as usual, he got more out of the round table discussions at the Chicago convention than from the addresses and papers read.

The New York State circulators are to be commended for vigorously opposing the proposed increase in postal rates. We hope that other state organizations will take the same action at their winter meetings.

When the present proposal is killed an effort should be made by all publishers to get rates reduced as they should be.

Organizations and committees working on this problem would do well to look into the cost of handling government and politicians' mail free. Such an investigation might reveal that the P. O. department could wipe out a good portion of its deficit if the franking privilege were curtailed or abolished.

* * *

Once again newspapers are classified as a necessity by zealous municipal officials in enforcing Sunday blue laws. Ashtabula, O., is going through the painful and humiliating experience of having Sunday closing laws enforced. But Sunday papers are permitted to circulate as usual.

Merchandise Conference Committee Named

Michael Levy of the Drygoodsman again has been named chairman of the Advertising Club of St. Louis committee which will have charge of the Move-More Merchandise Conference, which will be held in connection with the meeting of the American Retailers' Association in St. Louis next February. J. L. Isaacs of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Felix Coste of the D'Arcy Advertising Agency are members of the committee.

Two Illinois Weeklies Combine

The Harvard (Ill.) Herald has purchased the Harvard (Ill.) Independent, combining the two weekly newspapers under the heading Herald-Independent.

COAST CIRCULATORS AT OAKLAND

Round-Table Meetings and Lavish Entertainment Feature Two-Day Sessions of Semi-Annual Meeting

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 20.—Representatives from nearly every newspaper in California attended the sixth annual convention of the California circulation managers association at the Hotel Oakland, Oct. 20. The Mayor and the Chamber of Commerce were hosts. Al the married delegates brought their wives and a special committee saw that they were properly entertained. On the second day the San Francisco publishers gave the delegates and their wives an auto ride around the Bay District.

At a banquet Monday night addresses were made by Charles S. Young, publisher of the Oakland Post-Enquirer, and J. R. Knowland, publisher of the Oakland Tribune. On both days round table sessions listened to papers on "Recent A. B. C. Questionnaires," "Radio News Broadcasting," "Street Sales—How to Make Them," "Newest and Best Promotion Plans," "Should Postmasters Be Paid Commission on Mail Subscriptions?", "Cost of Subscriptions Secured Through Prize Offers."

Reports and papers were read by J. Dillinger, Oakland Tribune; Virgil Lundy, Fresno Republican; Frank See and B. B. Marcum, Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, Harold Searles, Hollywood Citizen; O. K. Williams, Pomona Bulletin; W. V. O'Farrell, San Diego Union; Charles A. Fay, San Pedro Pilot; P. M. Knox, Fresno Bee; King T. Boardman, Santa Barbara Press; F. E. Rhode, Sacramento Union; Robert J. Corrigan, Los Angeles Examiner; J. L. Wagner, Riverside Press; B. W. Bates, San Francisco Bulletin; O. F. Thayer, San Bernardino Sun Telegram; H. A. Waters, San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald; E. T. Hamrick, Pasedena Star-News; George Fisher, San Francisco Chronicle, and A. L. Parker, Los Angeles Times.

The program was arranged by A. E. Crawford, San Francisco Examiner, W. J. Harrison, Los Angeles Evening Herald; Harold Searles, Hollywood Citizen; John E. Grey, San Francisco Call; Edgar Pugh, Long Beach Press, and Edwin L. Simpkins, San Jose Mercury-Herald.

W. F. D. Brown of the Oakland Tribune was chairman of the entertainment committee, assisted by Mr. Fisher, Mr. Bates, and Victor Lattaner of the Oakland Post-Enquirer.

JOHN GLASS RETURNS

Well-Known Chicago Special Spent Three Years in Europe

John Glass, for many years Chicago special representative of the Pittsburgh Press, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Cincinnati Enquirer, Indiana Star League and other important newspapers, returns this week from Europe and is at Hotel Marguery, 270 Park avenue, New York.

During his three years' absence he traveled through nearly every European nation.

Your readers will praise your selection!

Most popular serial of the year.

THE DARK CHAPTER

by E. J. Rath

Author of "The Nervous Wreck"

SERVICE FOR AUTHORS, INC.

Dept. A. 33 West 42nd Street

New York City

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Times Building, New York

again

ON THE

San Francisco Chronicle

Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.

HOLLISTER

CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION

717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service

21 Spruce St., New York

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service

Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

what does your name mean?

Are you named William, John, Margaret, Anna—? These as well as all other names have interesting stories which are explained daily in

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By Hope Norris

Keep your readers watching for their own and their friends' names. A sure circulation builder.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.

799 Broadway New York City

Metal Markets

J. Barton Nealey will bring to your readers a knowledge of metals possessed by few men in this country. His daily weekly and monthly authoritative signed dispatches are eagerly awaited wherever metals are traded in and used.

His fundamental grasp of general conditions, together with his intimate knowledge of the production of metals, the manufacture of finished products and the marketing of both lend a force to his interpretative market analyses that has brought them attention throughout this country and abroad.

Besides writing a weekly and monthly review, Mr. Nealey writes a daily dispatch on the situation in iron, steel, copper, tin and other metal markets which is available to newspapers for simultaneous publication to morning and evening dailies.

INTERSTATE COMMERCIAL NEWS SERVICE

38 Park Row New York

SHERMAN HEADS DAILY LEAGUE

Elected President of Texas Group at Recent Dallas Meeting

K. K. Hooper of the Sherman Democrat was elected president of the Texas Daily Press League at the annual meeting held recently in Dallas. Homer Price of the Marshall News was elected vice-president and Walter Murray of the Ranger Daily Times, secretary.

Representatives of 47 daily newspapers of the smaller cities of Texas were present at the meeting. Practically all of the members of the league were in attendance. The Advertising Bureau of the league met also in connection with the annual meeting of the league.

J. L. Greer of the Denison Herald was elected chairman of the advertising Bureau. Houston Harte of the San Angelo Standard was the choice for vice-chairman.

The next meeting will be called in Dallas in January.

PUSHCART CRADLED N. Y. CIRCULATOR'S FORTUNE

(Continued from page 7)

making that would interest cynical editors?

He knows first of all the importance of getting papers on the stands at the time people want to buy. He speaks of morning papers chiefly because the majority of his papers are morning publications.

"When the paper arrives late at the stands it misses a large part of its readers," he declares. ""They are on their way to work. They buy something else. of his newspapers are morning publications.

"Papers are often held up an hour for a play review or a bit of news the editor considers important. But how many people care? They want the paper first of all. They don't care much about the bit of extra news that breaks on the deadline. One more piece of news won't recapture the circulation lost by arriving late on the stands."

Another thing Weinstock knows is that he can't sell mediocre papers. They don't have to be "high-brow," but they must be good of their kind. He is disinclined to estimate the value of comics and special features as circulation boosters,—he might lose his impartiality—but he does affirm that on the East Side at least, news pictures have great pulling power.

Weinstock has watched the growth of New York dailies from 16-page publications to the present 32-36 page size. And from delivering newspapers in the bulk he knows what this growth means, not only to himself but to the reader.

"I know this for a fact," he says, "that people who go to business in the morning want a 'light' paper—one which is not bulky to handle and in which they can get the news at a glance. A 40 and 50 page morning newspaper drives away circulation because of its sheer weight. I will make an exception of Sunday papers for the buyer has all day in which to read them."

During his long connection with New York publishers Weinstock has kept out of entangling alliances. He serves the weak papers as faithfully as the powerful. He has been offered stock in new publications, to enlist his aid as a distributor, but he has refused. He has been asked by old customers to deny his delivery facilities to a growing rival. He has always refused. He serves all the newspapers impartially.

Since the majority of the papers he handles are from the foreign language press he has had opportunity to watch their effectiveness as builders of Americanism.

"You often hear foreign language papers termed a menace because they don't teach Americanism," he says. "I call them the greatest builders of Americanism. The foreigner who cannot read English naturally buys a paper printed in his tongue. There he gets his first lessons in English. There is scarcely a foreign paper which does not carry simple English lessons. Progress is rapid. As soon as the immigrant can read English he buys English papers.

"During the war the Evening Telegram printed daily a page in Italian. Italian papers lost in circulation. Their buyers bought the Telegram because they were proud to be seen with an English paper in their pockets."

A good share of the success of the Metropolitan News Company is due to Louis Weinstock, but he would rather this were not said. For he disclaims his part was any greater than that of his partners.

"We have all worked equally, one with the other," he says. "And we are still together."

Weinstock knows his East Side as thoroughly as an unemployed actor knows Times Square. He understands the foreigner, his likes and dislikes. He knows the news dealers from Park Row to the Bronx, and he understands the habits of their patrons.

He is the unseen factor in the East Side circulation of half a million newspapers daily.

CAN WOMEN SUCCEED IN MODERN JOURNALISM?

(Continued from page 5)

periences, and stand in her light every time there's a chance for her to really learn anything.

"Next to the city editor who falls in love with his girl reporter and kills her chance once and for all, comes the city editor who thinks woman's place is in the home or the cabaret. He doesn't believe in newspaper women at all and starts in a series of petty persecutions which will break any woman's heart and turn her into a discouraged, disillusioned drudge in six months.

"The third sort of city editor who is never any help to a newspaper woman is the nice fellow who hates to think of a woman going out in the rain, or being out alone too late at night, so he protects her from all the good stories and makes her feel like saying 'thank you for nothing.'

"City editors are busy men in these days of many editions. It is hard for them to take the time to train and develop either young men or young women but that is no excuse—the city editor ought to see to it that he has someone on his staff whose sole business it is to do that.

"Nobody has the time to go over a beginner's story and tell her why it's wrong or why it's good. If I've had success it's because I had training!

"The editors are too busy thinking up 'circulation drives' to keep the old-fashioned 'back-to-the-wall, you and I and our crowd against the world' spirit alive in the average newspaper office.

"We get out better newspapers now than we ever did—better headlines, better pictures, better print and better play-up. Have we as much influence as we used to have? And where are the courageous brilliant and sincere writers that used to be a part of every newspaper staff?

"We need newspaper women all over America, the public needs them and the newspapers need them.

"The business manager of every good newspaper knows that the big advertisers want to advertise in a paper that women read—women are the ones who pay attention to the bargain sales—not the men.

"And women like to read what other women say."

The woman's point of view coupled with a man's action. That has been the keynote of Winifred Black's success. At heart she is entirely feminine. And in her brief auto-biography which she wrote for EDITOR & PUBLISHER we find the following quiet paragraph, typical of the woman herself:

"I have been twice married. I have had three children. My eldest son is married and has an orchard in Sonoma county, California. My daughter is married and lives in Los Angeles. I lost my second son seven years ago when he was eight years old. The world has never been the same to me since then."

We Find in the State of Indiana

—36,354 square miles of land with more than 3,000,000 people.

—Over 50 per cent of the population live in cities and towns of more than 2,500 inhabitants.

—Over 47 per cent of the entire population is employed in gainful occupations.

—The aggregate wealth of the state exceeds $8,800,000,000.

—The most liberal spenders in the country live in Indiana cities—all of which are exceptionally prosperous communities.

Indiana ranks eleventh in point of population and presents opportunities for successful advertising of everything from toilet soap to farm tractors.

Indiana is thoroughly American. Only 5.9 per cent of its 3,000,000 people are foreign born. It is a productive state for every national advertiser.

The state can be covered like a blanket by using Indiana's leading newspapers. They have enormous influence and result producing power.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(M) 27,839 (E) 11,230	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,502	.07
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,520	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,196	.055
Hammond Times	(E)	15,436	.05
Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,563	.025
*Indianapolis News	(E)	128,400	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,605 (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,000	.025
*Newcastle Courier	(E)	6,000	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,155 (E) 12,884	23,039	.06
South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,440	.06
†South Bend Tribune (S) 19,388	(E)	20,627	.06
Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,608	.06

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

STUDY PUBLIC OPINION

"JOURNALISM is the most powerful agent to recast public opinion. Therefore it behooves everybody in the profession to make a careful study of public opinion, what it means and how it acts, to understand thoroughly how it operates."—Nicholas Murray Butler, president, Columbia University.

* * * * *

A REPORTER'S WORK

"REPORTING is work for a gentleman; the good newspapers today do not expect their reporters to do anything a gentleman would not be willing to do. Jimmying windows in order to steal a photograph is not being done nowadays by reporters on respectable papers. Third degree bullying by reporters to get facts is not countenanced by the persons who are running better newspapers."—Prof. W. S. Maulsby, School of Journalism, University of Iowa.

* * * * *

NEWSPAPERS AND UTILITY ADVERTISING

"NEWSPAPERS have been found the most productive of all advertising mediums for public utility advertising. People can be counted upon to see your business messages as they appear, because the better class of people in every community are constant readers of the daily and weekly newspapers. Through them you can get quick action upon any proposition you may present."—Frank LeRoy Blanchard, Henry L. Doherty & Co., New York.

* * * * *

THE WOMAN'S PAGE

"THERE must be something on the page to please every type of woman: the home, the business and the club woman, and the young, the middle aged, and the elderly. Nine women out of ten are just 'Mrs. Average Smith,' a woman of about 35-55, and she is not a type, but a combination of all those types. She is housekeeper, wife, mother, business woman, club woman, reformer, and always looking out for new ideas. She is not a 'high-brow,' not a moss-back. She wants good stuff for her reading matter and she recognizes and appreciates it when she gets it."—Mrs. Florence Riddick Boys, Woman's Editor, Plymouth (Ind.) Pilot.

* * * * *

WHEN TO ADVERTISE

"THERE are two times when some men talk about cutting out their advertising: When business is good and they say they do not need it: and when business is poor and they say they can not afford it. The man who cuts out his advertising when business is good is simply placing a surtax on himself and denies himself one of the most potent factors for promoting better business. The man who does not advertise when business is poor is like the farmer who refuses to plant corn because his last year's crop was a failure. We cannot de without newspaper advertising."—Andrew N. Fox, before Advertising Club of Indianapolis.

* * * * *

MAKING THE CARTOON

"THE mission of the cartoon is to picture national, international, and local questions. Have some idea. I do not believe in a lot of extraneous matter. Do not try to put more than one idea into a cartoon. When a cartoonist tries to put three or four ideas into a cartoon, the reader does not know what it is all about. Two labels and the picture must tell the story. There are many things necessary for a cartoonist besides mechanical skill. You have to read. You have to know. You have to be able to interpret national, international, and local events, in a way to appeal to your reader."—Roy H. James, Cartoonist, St. Louis Star.

* * * * *

"TRIAL BY NEWSPAPER"

"LIBERTY of the press does not warrant trial by newspaper. But, since it is of public importance that the proceedings of those who administer justice be known, the newspaper may publish accounts of judicial proceedings, provided they be fair, impartial and reasonably accurate. The publisher may abridge and condense if thereby he does no violence to the requirements of fairness; but he must not interpolate or give opinion or impugn the truthfulness of witnesses or reflect upon or threaten the court, the parties, or the jurors. Sensational or insinuating headlines should be avoided, and while comment, if fair and in good faith, is permissible, it should be in the editorial column and not incorporated in or as a part of the report of the court proceedings."—Guy A. Thompson, President, Missouri Bar Association.

* * * * *

THE EDITOR'S TASK

"NO editor has the right to say 'we must give the people what they want to read.' Ours is a profession, not a mere business. We are not dealers in self commodities. We are above the plane of hucksters and peddlers. We must give these readers better things than they want because we want them to become better men and women than they are. We represent one of the most powerful agencies in American public life. We preach to people who never enter a church. We teach folks who were denied the opportunity of school and university. We make the mental food upon which men's and women's souls are fed and healed. It is our duty to make our readers' interests broader, their world wider, their tastes appreciative of the finer things in life. Make these readers think. Unless our newspapers do this our dreams of democracy will never be realized. Unlimited publicity of the right kind is the life blood of a people's government."—Mrs. Marie Weeks, Editor, Norfolk (Neb.) Press, and President, Nebraska Press Association.

John E. Wright Is Dead

John E. Wright, 64, who died at his home in Lees Summit, Mo., October 24, was at one time managing editor of the Chicago Evening Post and later managing editor of the St. Louis Times. He was a cousin of Melville E. Stone, counsellor for the Associated Press.

Seek $400,000 for State Advertising

Californians, Inc., are seeking $400,000 to finance its 1925 national advertising campaign, boosting California. The first advertisements will probably be run Dec. 1. J. B. McCargar is chairman of the finance committee of the corporation, with headquarters in San Francisco.

Editor Arrested for Libel

Edward M. Davis, publisher of the Newark (Del.) Ledger was arrested Oct. 26, and held in $5,000 bail, charged with libeling Gen. T. Coleman du Pont, a candidate for United States Senator. The action taken by General du Pont's friends is the outcome of attacks by Davis' newspaper on General du Pont in the present campaign.

Launches Cambridge Edition

Commencing last Monday the Boston American launched a Cambridge edition, which consists of a four page supplement at present. Robert Gillis, day city editor, has been placed in charge of this edition. Herbert Caryl, assistant city editor, is now acting city editor. A Cambridge office has been opened, with Francis P. O'Neill, as district man.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale

Sixteen-page Potter web press, printing 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 16 page papers, 22½ inches long, 7 columns 13 ems wide, extra color on four pages. Speed 10,000 per hour. Papers folded to half page. With stereotype machinery and motor. A good press at a low price. Send for details and price (our No. 589). Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York. (Many other machines for sale. "Used but Good." Let us know your wants.)

Printers' Outfitters

Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

For Sale.

Cox Duplex Flat Bed Web press, printing 4, 6 or 8 pages 7 col. 13 ems; or 8 col. 12 ems. Paper page 17½x22½ inches. Replaced by 16-page web press—must be moved quick—very low price. Price and sample of its work on application. Wire or write for details, referring to our No. 590. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York.

Web Press for Tabloid Papers.

For Sale—Hoe 24-page newspaper web press, printing the usual combinations up to 24 pages, seven or eight columns wide, 21¼ inches long, equipped with complete stereo. outfit and motors for 220 volts direct current. Arranged to print tabloid papers also. For details address: Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth avenue, New York City. (Many other machines for sale, "Used but Good." Send for our list No. 42.)

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE MEMPHIS APPEAL
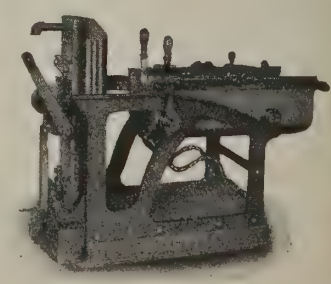
Memphis, Tenn.
We refer you to them for their opinion

QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE



MAIN OFFICE Fisher Building 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Building Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Hoe Patented Duo-Cooled Equipoise Curved Casting Mould

"It is essential to Success to be the first out with the News—and Minutes count."

This Hoe Curved Casting Mould is a time-saver, designed especially for Speed and Efficiency. Cold Water, circulating through the stationary Lid and the concave Side, gives quick cooling for rapid Casting.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST
R. HOE & CO., INC.
504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL.
7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man.
Display, classified. Contracts. Features. New accounts. Copy writer, 11 years' experience. Large and small cities. Married. Family. Age 31. Permanent connection as solicitor or manager desired. Short trial will prove ability. Address B-933, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Solicitor.
Have you a place in your organization for a capable young advertising executive, copywriter and solicitor? All my working life has been spent in the newspaper business; have a working knowledge of every department including mechanical end. Pleasing, energetic, convincing personality; the ability to meet and talk to one or a hundred men, a thorough knowledge of advertising and merchandising methods, including the discernment as to the advertiseability of products and a good creative imagination that can dig up possibilities and develop them into space users. Available now for job as advertising manager—solicitor on strong small daily. Salary about $3,000 a year. Aged 31, family. Splendid recommendations. Address B-938, Editor & Publisher.

All Round Newspaper Man,
widely experienced, editorial and business, well educated, clean cut, desirable personality and good address, wishes connection with ad service department. Can write copy and solicit. Address Maxwell, 22 South Tenth, Minneapolis, Minn.

Business and Advertising Manager.
Available Nov. 15, twenty years' experience in all departments. Thirty-six years old and married. Unquestioned references. Will locate anywhere job is big enough. Address B-940, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager,
fifteen years general manager small daily, metropolitan experience editorial end, now assistant daily 70,000, seeking change in New England. Address B-937, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist
desires position that can offer better future than one he now holds. Experienced in all newspaper art. Address B-939, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
15 years' experience on morning, evening, Sunday and combination papers; thoroughly familiar with all branches of circulation work. At liberty now; go anywhere. Address Box B-923, Editor & Publisher.

City Editor or Editor.
At liberty Nov. 8. Now employed as editor on 8-20 page daily, seeks change to sane, progressive newspaper in bigger field with future. Prefer Missouri, Iowa or Kansas, in city of 20,000 or larger. Experienced. Capable of handling telegraph, editorial and writing features. Am 27 years old, unmarried. Only permanent positons considered. State all in first letter. D. S. Ruble, Pekin, Ill.

IS YOUR MECHANICAL DEPARTMENT CROWDED?

Have you any unused equipment taking up valuable space? There is no need for this machinery to become an obstacle to efficiency in your plant.

A classified ad in EDITOR & PUBLISHER will sell it for you quickly and cheaply.

Situations Wanted

Classified—General Promotion.
Writer and compiler of "The Story of Classified Ads" in its published form and creator of the publicity used to secure distribution of this book which was the hit of the Columbus Convention, desires connection as Promotion-Publicity Manager or Assistant Classified Manager. Direct Mail Expert, copy writer. Knows how to build classified lineage and how to hold it. Knows how to increase Reader Responsiveness to advertising columns of newspaper. Thirty-five years old. Single. College education. Ten years' advertising experience. Unquestioned references. Can come at once. Address B-930, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Specialist.
Mr. Publisher. Here is an entirely new proposition to increase your classified columns without change of management or additional expense.
Are you satisfied with present returns from your classified department or do you desire an increase?
Are you aware of the fact that the revenue from classified advertising is considerably higher than the major bulk of display advertising in some very large newspapers?
Are you open for a proposition to increase your present volume of classified advertising?
Are you anxious to increase the number of advertisements under certain classifications?
Are you anxious of securing entirely new business under new classifications?
All this can be accomplished by the undersigned. Twenty-five years' experience with New York City and out of town newspapers, thoroughly familiar with all so-called systems now in use, as well as with the rates of all prominent newspapers. I will visit your office, city or out of town, as a Specialist in classified advertising and submit my proposition. I refer by permission to Mr. Frank McCabe, Classified Advertising Manager of the New York World. If interested please address Ernest Liebermann, 200 East 23rd Street, New York City, N. Y. Phones: Lexington 9719, Lexington 9553.

Editor.
Man 38, Democrat, two college degrees, legal training, experience all news and editorial departments, now managing editor and editorial writer, desires position as editor or editorial writer, preferably the latter, anywhere east of the Mississippi. Specimens of editorial work and interview on request, also reference to present employer, with whom he has been eight years. Is a hard, steady, careful worker who knows how to co-operate and make friends for a paper. Can report in thirty to sixty days. Address B-935, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, General Manager.
Available November 15, accomplished editor, with complete box office viewpoint. Thorough experience in organizing and directing editorial, art, photographic, display, copy-writing, classified, circulation and promotion departments. Seasoned in build-up campaigns in all revenue-producing departments. Has legal training; familiar with costs, installation and finance. Forty-two years old; 26 years' newspaper experience (mostly Metropolitan) regular and tabloid size newspapers. Executive with personality capitalized for newspaper he directs. Sober and conscientious. Highest references. Now employed in Metropolitan Area in East. Salary must be commensurate with service and zeal. Will consider progressive cities from 200,000 up. Contract optional. Address Box B-927, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer
Desires connection. Highly identified. Now with large nationally-known publishers. Clean record as writer and executive. Address Box B-914, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Reporter.
University education. Feature writing, crusade and promotion experience. No objection going South. Address B-932, Editor & Publisher.

Financial Editor.
Young man, college educated, sound knowledge of business finance, investments, accounting and stock market, wants position as financial editor. Man who can make financial page interesting to small investor as well as to large capitalist. B-922, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Managing Editor
with unbroken record of success, now employed, desires connection with progressive daily. Best of reasons for seeking change. Excellent organizer, real builder and thoroughly competent newspaper man. Young, aggressive and reliable. References and detailed information gladly furnished. Address B-934, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor's
or similar position wanted on small afternoon paper; permanent connection only; Great Lakes region preferred. Practical young news man with executive experience, including three years with Associated Press. Married. May have small sum to invest. Box B-921, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor.
Who plays ball with advertising and circulation departments, now in market for high-class connection. Nationally known publisher paid him as managing editor an annual bonus for phenomenal circulation building without premiums. Thoroughly conversant with all departments and cost of operating them. Long experienced. In the prime of life. Clean-cut, dynamic, versatile. At the top of his game now. Address Box B-946, Editor & Publisher.

News Man,
sheet or desk, wants position. Can write good stories, take telephone report, write heads and make up attractive page. Single, 25. W. J. Duchaine, Y. M. C. A., El Paso, Texas.

Young Woman,
college graduate, would like position as reporter or society editor. Has had experience in newspaper work. Address Box-944, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager or Assistant.
Thoroughly experienced, neat appearance, personality, executive and business getter, dependable, not a floater. Presently employed without opportunity for advancement. References. Address Box B-945, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

New England Newspaper Has Opening for young man with reporting and desk experience. Quick recognition of news, accuracy and energy will be needed to hold the job which will prove a good one for the right man. Address B-943, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted
for permanent traveling position. Man with circulation experience for verifying work. Single man over 30 preferred. Address stating experience, Box B-942, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Accurate desk man and copy reader, under thirty years of age, college graduate preferred. Write Wallace L. Robinson, Lancaster, Pa., News Journal and Sunday News.

Young Man.
Experienced book lovers' contests and similar enterprises. Give full particulars. Address B-936, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
An experienced circulation manager who can manage boys and men to get results and increase circulation at reasonable cost. Write giving experience, references and salary expected. Exceptional opening on live paper in large southern city. B-931, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

For Sale.
Job and publication printing plant in Florida City of 100,000. Established trade. Address Box 4385, Jacksonville, Florida.

For Sale.
Only newspaper (weekly) in small city in Everglades section of Florida. Rapidly becoming industrial center, with rich outlying farm lands. This is opportune time to convert property into daily. Modern equipment. Net cash profit this year will be about $8,000. Price $18,750—$12,000 cash down. Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer, 350 Madison Ave., New York.

Owner New York Printing Establishment, too busy to properly handle property, offering borough weekly six months old, showing weekly profit, $10,000; half interest $5,000. Address Box B-941, Editor & Publisher.

FEATURE ARTICLES

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept. MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

Ben Mellon Leaves Newspaperdom

Ben Mellon has left Newspaperdom, a fortnightly newspaper magazine, where he had been engaged as editor.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PAYING OVER 16% and $2,000 SALARY can be bought for $5,800—part deferred. Owner has opportunity to purchase job printing plant, which he prefers. Outlying towns swell advertising volume; job printing from two important educational institutions. Equipment includes Linotype, Miehle cylinder (recently installed) and two Gordons. Our No. 6830.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

POLLING CONGRESS ON POSTAL RATE CUT

American Publishers' Conference Sending Card to Members Asking Congressmen's Attitude — Seek Repeal of War Increases

The American Publishers' Conference, through its membership, is polling the candidates for Congress, both senators and representatives, on their attitude upon second-class postal rates. The Conference is backing a proposal to repeal the last two increases in second class rates authorized just after the war. The repeal, sponsored in the last session of Congress by Senator McKinley, of Illinois, was defeated, but will be re-introduced at the December session.

A. C. Pearson, national chairman of the conference, has circularized the members with return postal cards upon which the publisher, who receives the card, will write the "Yes" or "No" answer of tse senatorial and congressional nominees in his state or district to the following question:

"Do you favor reducing the postage rates on newspapers, magazines, farm papers and business papers which were raised 265 per cent during the war?"

Mr. Pearson's letter calls attention of threat of raise in postal rates instead of the reduction the publishing interests virtually have been promised. The increase, Mr. Pearson believes, unquestionably would result from the advance in pay of postal employees, which will be agitated before Congress.

"Now that we are threatened with a raise instead of a decrease," wrote Mr. Pearson, "all political parties hide behind their inability to persuade the Senators and Congressmen of their own party. While most of the candidates are now in their own districts, it is a good time to find what we are facing in the future.

"I wish you would ask all the candidates for the Senate and the House in your territory the question on the enclosed card, and advise our Washington office."

Theater Party for Classified Staff

The classified advertising department of the New York World, which recently tendered a testimonial dinner to Frank McCabe, classified manager, held a theater party and supper on Wed., Oct. 29, at the Casino theater where "I'll Say She Is" written by Tom and Will Johnston, is playing.

The playwrights are both on the World.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

FOR years you have believed that your newspaper's heavy suburban and country circulation deserved the patronage of mail order houses, and you have enviously looked at the mail-order sections of large city rival newspapers, which carry whole pages and even Sunday sections of this copy.

If it is true that your circulation deserves this business, why not set about this week to get it? There are plenty of reliable mail-order houses in every large city, doing business largely by direct-by-mail solicitation. There is a group of national mail-order houses clamoring for the business of the biggest houses.

Mail order stuff gets run of the paper and often stands up when other accounts fall by the wayside. If it is the right copy, all conditions being fair, mail-order stuff turns merchandise and makes a satisfied advertiser.

* * *

THE Worcester Evening Post is running a series of advertisements, six inches double column, introducing Post Specialists to Post Readers. Other papers might adopt this plan of giving the pictures and short writeups on the folks who make their publication interesting.—V. G. Dawson, Halifax.

Why not have every fraternal lodge in town call its meetings in a special inch ad the morning or afternoon before meeting? A lodge of 600 members spends $12 in stamps alone to call meeting, to say nothing of printing 600 copies of the notice, and the labor of mailing. One Southern paper has obtained the regular advertising of practically every lodge in the city. These lodges have abandoned use of letter notices. The paper states that every lodge member looks to that column for all calls and that this method is the surest and the cheapest way to call meetings.—C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

It may be a little soon to mention it, but a good Red Cross page will be found profitable in a few weeks, so keep the idea in mind. I have never found a page which sells so easily as does this feature.—Donald O. Ross, Washington, Iowa.

A Kentucky newspaper distributed slips to the carrier boys to be filled in with the subscriber, the slips containing these questions; What appeals to you most in our newspaper? What appeals the least to you? Could you offer any suggestion whereby we can improve our service to you? Space was left for the name and address of the subscriber. The boys left the slips one day and collected them in the next. The survey provided valuable information and resulted in a number of changes as recommended.—B. A. T.

This is the time of the year when autoists who have been leaving their cars outdoors during the summer months feel that they should get the cars indoors at night so as to save them from the wear and tear of winter weather. Consequently at this time of the year there is always a great amount of interest in the matter of new garages. It would be a good plan to group together in a full page or half page all the local concerns handling ready-cut garages or putting up garages.—Frank W. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

Write the numerals 1, 2, 3 and 4 vertically in a row and ask your friends to cross out one number; four out of five will cross out No. 3. Why?—M. E. P.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

CONSIDER for a minute the number of people who have automobiles and the number who are going to have automobiles and those who have had automobiles and haven't them anymore. Not any subject has much more life than this one. Then devote a minute to the number of citizens, prominent and otherwise, who violate the automobile regulations. There's a little story of wide interest in every man and woman of 'em. Sometimes a grievance, which is perfectly luscious for reading purposes; sometimes a cheerful confession and a resolution which is good preaching; sometimes something else. The papers I see make only the barest mention of such things. Wouldn't it be good stuff to spread a bit upon it?—D. H. T.

A comparison of the headlines of your paper of Oct. 1, 1904, Oct. 1, 1914, and Oct. 1, 1924 (or any equivalent dates covering twenty years of history) will make a vitally interesting story. The Denver Post ran a four-column feature story embellished with pictures of society women in frocks of the three dates, that in themselves told an obvious story of the transition from sedateness to speed that twenty years has seen. The amazing changes in everything from the physical appearance of the city to the tactics of criminal defense before the courts; from wine advertising to the names of stage stars, and from our pre-1917 conceptions of war to the complete change in political issues made very good reading—F. J. McEmry, 2857 Humboldt st., Denver, Col.

PRINCE PLEASES REPORTERS

Grants Interviews and Pictures During Chicago Visit

Reporters in Chicago assigned to cover the visit of H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, during his 24-hour visit to that city, found none of the difficulty and trouble attendant upon getting a good story from him and his activities encountered by reporters in other cities, especially New York. At every occasion on the prince's program, publicity men were especially provided for. Photographers and human interest writers for the Chicago papers found him a very agreeable subject.

Reporters were informed in advance by private letter through Louis F. Swift, host to the royal visitor, just when he would arrive and where. A special car was provided to care for the newspaper men during his visit through the Chicago Stock Yards and the University of Chicago. The Prince posed on request and moreover very gracefully. At a dinner in his honor, tickets were given the reporters.

Throughout the entire day of his visit, the press men followed him about and were treated with exceptional graciousness. When the Prince left Chicago at three-thirty o'clock in the morning, he obligingly posed on the observation platform of his train for a farewell flash.

Van Dyke New Syracuse Ad Manager

Curtis E. VanDyke of the advertising department of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal has been made advertising manager and will take over the duties of business manager, held by the late W. Howard Burrill. Mr. VanDyke has been on the Journal staff for a number of years. Fred W. Burnett has been promoted to assistant advertising manager. No successor has yet been appointed to Wilbur G. Miller, editor-in-chief, who recently resigned to go into business after many years on the Journal as editorial writer.

Ferger Wins Golf Cup

Roger H. Ferger, advertising manager of the Cincinnati Enquirer, won the cup in the Enquirer golf tournament held recently in which the advertising, editorial and business department of the Enquirer contested.

Mildred Barbour
"Mistress of the Emotions"
"DELIGHTFUL DISPENSER of THRILLS"
"THE DARLING OF DESTINY"
A New Serial Now Ready
Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK CITY

All-Star Features
Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction
Send now for
THE GREEN CATALOG
of
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
M. Koenigsberg, President
NEW YORK CITY

NEA NEA
The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Try the Sunday Anecdote Feature-
"With the Notables"
by
Robert D. Heinl
Washington D.C
REG. U.S. PAT. OFFICE

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager
The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write
CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

New England States

COMPRISE AN INDUSTRIAL GIANT

Billions Are Annually Poured Into Her Coffers for the Products of Her Mills, Soil and Waters and Make Her One of the Richest Markets of the World

IN a territory comprising only a little over 2 per cent of the area of the United States, New England produces more than 11 per cent of the total manufactures. It is a closely knit industrial region which has had the longest experience in manufacturing of any section of the United States. Within its borders are a great variety of industrial products and on its roster of manufacturers are many world famous names.

In various lines of industry, New England leads the country in production. In the textile industry, of which cotton comprises the larger part, fifty per cent of the manufactured value came from New England.

New England leads all other sections of the United States, as a shoe manufacturing district. It produces about 50 per cent of the boots, shoes, and slippers and a large proportion of the leather made in this country.

New England manufactures more than two-thirds of the textile machinery produced in the United States. It also leads in the manufacture of shoe machinery, blowers and fans, paper mill machinery, brass, bronze and copper products, needles, pens, hooks and eyes and rubber goods.

This territory is mostly city trade with more than half of population living in thirty-nine cities. These people are spending millions of dollars daily and, for the most part, depend upon local newspapers to introduce and tell them about new merchandise.

To secure this trade it is necessary to use these foremost Daily New England Newspapers

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
Boston Globe	(M&E)	278,616	.50	.50
Boston Globe	(S)	332,083	.55	.55
Boston Post	(M)	362,520	.60	.60
Boston Post	(S)	367,600	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,410	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.055	.04
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
New Bedford Standard-Mercury	(M&E)	32,565	.10	.10
New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	27,334	.10	.10
North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,604	.04	.035
†††Pittsfield Eagle	(E)	17,073	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.08	.07
Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,551	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15
MAINE—Population, 768,014
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
Portland Press Herald	(M&S)	31,115	(A) .09	.08
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07
†Waterville Sentinel	(M)	6,134	.035	.025
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683
*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07
RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397
†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
†Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,666	.05	.05
VERMONT—Population, 352,428
*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015
CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
†New London Day	(E)	11,925	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†††South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	3,771	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,305	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	22,836	.08	.08
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,048	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
(A) Circulation daily edition only.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

THE NEW YORK
TELEGRAM-MAIL

Six Months' Net Paid Circulation Statement Analyzed Day by Day

The following day by day record establishes the regularity and dependability of the Telegram-Mail's circulation and its sound value as a day by day medium for your advertising announcements.

DATE	NET	APRIL	MAY	JUNE	JULY	AUGUST	SEPTEMBER
1.		191,913	223,584	Sunday	242,637	206,817	Labor Day
2.		190,334	224,591	226,846	243,684	219,447	208,558
3.		208,970	251,470	260,484	242,793	Sunday	215,282
4.		201,322	Sunday	229,698	171,147	205,324	220,888
5.		235,918	224,874	227,142	231,181	204,557	210,219
6.		Sunday	227,532	226,286	238,008	201,683	228,720
7.		197,350	226,224	264,332	Sunday	198,170	Sunday
8.		201,573	214,963	Sunday	234,888	196,582	227,701
9.		201,593	212,075	228,615	270,121	212,724	218,639
10.		199,100	280,920	226,408	223,717	Sunday	233,961
11.		196,546	Sunday	226,432	219,539	196,950	228,415
12.		233,340	218,646	221,580	232,443	191,620	217,968
13.		Sunday	228,229	222,999	Sunday	203,506	239,952
14.		198,437	226,062	252,610	219,926	202,915	Sunday
15.		213,552	223,350	Sunday	219,596	202,970	222,800
16.		219,733	224,118	229,690	216,068	211,842	224,424
17.		218,311	265,495	231,026	210,888	Sunday	209,054
18.		188,660	Sunday	226,896	211,175	203,135	221,734
19.		237,890	228,986	225,053	226,124	204,126	212,244
20.		Sunday	224,260	220,739	Sunday	200,487	238,623
21.		216,343	219,759	250,321	213,363	202,547	Sunday
22.		216,788	223,538	Sunday	213,617	203,353	221,430
23.		224,003	221,525	225,302	215,017	210,980	223,685
24.		218,823	246,747	225,358	210,465	Sunday	225,635
25.		228,872	Sunday	216,576	205,742	201,657	223,986
26.		243,731	220,451	231,997	223,199	202,986	221,670
27.		Sunday	221,871	226,674	Sunday	206,704	280,939
28.		223,620	226,050	260,290	210,771	203,459	Sunday
29.		223,045	225,804	Sunday	210,721	205,104	199,529
30.		220,662	174,766	240,013	212,046	215,778	195,566
31.			251,908		200,480	Sunday
TOTAL		5,539,445	6,127,797	5,823,367	5,968,807	5,315,423	5,499,622
AVERAGE		213,055	226,955	232,934	221,067	204,440	219,985

Total number of copies sold in six months	34,274,461
Average daily sales	219,739

The Government report of 220,707 included free copies distributed for services rendered.

Western Representative
J. E. LUTZ
Tower Building, Chicago, Ill.

Publication Office
73 DEY STREET

Eastern Representative
DAN A. CARROLL
110 East 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

THIS ISSUE:—WHAT RADIO DID ON ELECTION NIGHT.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1924

SUITE 1117 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879
Issued Every Saturday

Vol. 57. No. 24 | NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 8, 1924 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

LOWELL THOMAS

When the War Department picked Lowell Thomas to write the official story of the world flight, it made the best possible selection, particularly from a newspaper point of view. Mr. Thomas is a noted war correspondent, as well as an author and explorer. His travels have taken him to every country over which the American aviators flew. Since the end of the great adventure, he has been living with the flyers, getting the story day by day from the men who made history in the first aerial circumnavigation of the world.

To get the most out of this great story, it should be preceded by a thorough advertising campaign in your newspaper, in your circulation zones, by car cards and billboards.

Leigh Wade, Jack Harding, Lowell Smith, Lowell Thomas, Eric Nelson, Henry Ogden, Leslie Arnold

The story of the world flight is now available to American newspapers

One of the greatest stories newspapers ever have had the opportunity of printing—the account of the first aerial circumnavigation of the globe—has been secured jointly by The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and The McClure Newspaper Syndicate. Unquestionably it will be one of the most popular stories of this generation.

This is the official and only account of the flight by the flyers themselves, who are collaborating with Lowell Thomas. Mr. Thomas was selected by the war department for the job.

The story is divided roughly into eight parts, each from 10,000 to 12,000 words in length. The daily articles will run about 1,500 words and the Sunday articles 2,000 words. The series, which will be well illustrated, will last for approximately eight weeks. Please act quickly to be sure of plenty of time to advertise this unique feature in your territory.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE NEWSPAPERS SYNDICATE
Tribune Square, Chicago

THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
373 Fourth Ave., New York

Wire for Rates and Further Information

A Repeat Order Is Proof of Satisfaction

A FEW INTERTYPE USERS	Initial Order	First Repeat	Second Repeat	Further Repeats	Total Intertypes
Hearst Newspapers	50	15	23	24	112
Scripps-Howard Newspapers	26	25			51
New York Times	31	4	10	1	46
New York World	1	5	8	25	39
Cincinnati Enquirer	1	8	4	24	37
Vanderbilt Newspapers	7	25			32
St. Louis Globe-Democrat	7	4	21		32
Frank A. Munsey	12	2	1	14	29
Library Bureau	2	6	8	13	29
Louisville Post-Herald	14	3	1	9	27
Indianapolis Star	7	1	1	16	25
Cleveland Plain Dealer	1	2	3	17	23
Pittsburgh Post	1	1	2	19	23
Providence Journal	5	2	12	2	21
Houston Post-Dispatch	10	10			20
Portland (Ore.) Telegram	10	1	1	7	19
Memphis Commercial Appeal	10	2	4	2	18
Jersey Journal, Jersey City, N. J.	2	2	1	13	18
Omaha World Herald	1	11	1	4	17
Springfield (Mass.) Union	1	1	3	11	16
Richmond News Leader	15	1			16
Springfield (Mass.) News	1	14			15
Minneapolis Star	8	2	2		12
Camden Daily Courier	1	1	2	8	12
Nebraska State Journal	1	10	1		12
Williams Printing Co., Albany, N. Y.	4	1	2	5	12
St. Louis Post-Dispatch	1	3	4	4	12
Toledo Blade	3	2	2	5	12
Peoria Journal	10	2			12
Il Progresso Italo-Americano, New York	1	1	1	8	11
Tacoma News-Tribune	2	7	2		11
Trenton Times	7	4			11
Lorain Journal	1	1	1	8	11
Seattle Star	1	4	2	4	11
St. Paul Dispatch	3	6	1		10
Knickerbocker Press	3	2	5		10
Wilkes-Barre Record	1	4	1	4	10
Pawtucket Times	1	2	4	3	10
Long Beach (Cal.) Press	1	1	1	7	10
Reading Tribune	7	1	2		10
Atwell Printing Company, Chicago	3	2	3	2	10
American Typesetting Corporation, Chicago	9	1			10
Syracuse Post Standard	1	2	1	6	10
The Leader (Milwaukee and Oklahoma City)	1	2	6	1	10

Write for Intertype literature—or wire collect if you'd like to see the Intertype man who travels in your vicinity

INTERTYPE CORPORATION, 50 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Branch Offices: Rand McNally Building, Chicago; 77 McCall Street, Memphis; 560 Howard Street, San Francisco. Sales Offices: 49 Federal Street, Boston; 1240 South Main Street, Los Angeles. Canadian Agents: Toronto Type Foundry Company, Ltd., Toronto. British Branch: Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, King's Cross, London, W. C. 1.

INTERTYPE

No Standardized Intertype Has Ever Become Obsolete

Sun Readers Show The Family Spirit

¶ When a reader writes to the editor of the Sunpaper, the family spirit becomes apparent.

¶ The letters to the editor of The Sun are not the formal documents of protest or approval which are the usual lot of newspaper editors.

¶ Formality does not figure in Sunpaper letters. The editor is addressed, reproved, criticized, or commended, with the frankness one member of the family uses to another.

¶ What the Sunpapers think and what the Sunpapers say count heavily in the life of Baltimore. The tone and spirit in which these letters are written would prove that, even if detailed circulation statistics were not available.

¶ Possibly this family spirit among Sun readers is due to the fact that the unit of circulation of the Sunpapers is the family, rather than the individual.

¶ The Sunpapers go into the home — delivered there with unfailing regularity by an exclusive carrier organization sure of a welcome from the whole household.

October Average Net Paid Circulation

Daily (M. & E.) . . 248,618

Sunday 180,930

A Gain of 3,940 Daily and 2,831 Sunday over October, 1923

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

If you should ask any intelligent Philadelphian how to make your advertising appropriation do you the most good in Philadelphia the reply undoubtedly would be "place it in The Bulletin," because, "In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Net paid circulation for the six months ending September 30, 1924,

516,609 copies a day

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in the United States.

NEW YORK—814 Park-Lexington Bldg. (46th St. & Park Ave.)
CHICAGO—Verree & Conklin, Inc., 28 East Jackson Blvd.
DETROIT—C. L. Weaver, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 117 Lafayette Blvd.
SAN FRANCISCO—Harry J. Wittschen, Verree & Conklin, Inc., 681 Market St.

(Copyright 1924—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding publication, by The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor; Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 8, 1924 No. 24

Press Radiocasting of Election Returns Gives Journalism New Ally

Twenty-Eight Dailies Put Results On the Air—Chicago Tribune Bows to A. P. Rule and Uses U. P. Service—Foreign Demand for Election News Establishes Record

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

THROUGH the enterprise of American newspapers, more than 10,000,000 radio fans, according to estimate, received election returns Tuesday night via the air.

This was the outstanding feature of this year's newspaper and press association coverage of the national vote, marking, as it did, the first time in the nation's journalistic history that the newspapers utilized broadcasting on a wide scale to inform readers about an important news event.

A total of at least 28 newspapers put news of the Presidential and local political voting upon the air for the benefit of their communities, EDITOR & PUBLISHER learned.

Also of considerable interest was the action of the Chicago Tribune, which, having previously challenged the Associated Press regarding its right to prevent broadcasting of A. P. returns, and having intimated it intended to violate the association's rulings and instigate a test case, eventually veered from this stand and used the election returns of the United Press Associations.

It is understood that several A. P. members, embarrassed by inability to broadcast A. P. returns, intend to protest to the association, seeking a change in the radio ruling.

Associated Press officials, however, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER that no such protests were received up to Wednesday evening this week. A change in the ruling can only come through action of the entire membership at the next annual meeting to be held in New York in April it was said.

In addition to use of radio, increased transmission of election news to foreign countries featured the handling this year of the "big quadrennial story."

Despite the heaviest polling in the country's history, and the fact three candidates were in the field, press association officials reported that returns came in with the usual speed and were transmitted with no more than the customary difficulty to newspaper clients or members.

The biggest radio hook-up was that engineered by the United Press Associations. The U. P. took over station WEAF of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for six client newspapers, headed by the New York Sun. Other newspapers included in the hook-up were the Baltimore Evening Sun, Detroit News, Boston Post, Pittsburgh Press, and Buffalo Evening News.

A new kind of newspaper office was set up in the A. T. & T. Company's building, New York, to handle this service.

Two wires were cut in from U. P. headquarters in the World Building on Park Row to a duplicate of a newspaper's city room installed adjacent to the A. T. & T. broadcasting studios. There Hugh Baillie acted as city editor, and with a staff of six men, prepared election returns for the air, instead of for newspaper presses. Graham McNamee, of the WEAF staff manned the microphone.

The manner in which the returns were played on the air was interesting. Between announcement of returns, which were made at frequent intervals from 7 o'clock in the evening until 1 o'clock Wednesday morning, entertainment was provided by two prominent advertisers, the Gold Dust Corporation and the National Carbon Company. What these advertisers paid is not known.

For the first time in history, news dispatches by press association staff correspondents were broadcast. At intervals during announcement of the returns, interpretative stories by Paul Mallon and Robert Bender, U. P. political writers, were read by McNamee. Joe Vila, sporting editor of the Sun, was also on the program.

The WEAF hook-up, according to estimates, reached 6,000,000 radio listeners. The Twentieth Century Limited installed radio receiving sets, and passengers heard U. P. election returns on their journey between New York and Cleveland.

More than 200 congratulatory telegrams were received by WEAF, A. T. & T. Company officials announced.

Karl A. Bickel, United Press president, was enthusiastic over the first use of radio by a press association.

"It demonstrated without any doubt that radio is simply an extension of the newspaper bulletin board," he declared to EDITOR & PUBLISHER; "that radio, properly used, can be made a great asset for building good will and prestige for broadcasting newspapers; that radio has proved itself an efficient factor in the general work of a newspaper for performing public service in its community.

"By the use of radio, the widest and most comprehensive distribution of election night bulletin service in American journalistic history was made possible."

Other newspapers which broadcast United Press election returns in addition to the six in the hook-up and the Chicago Tribune were: Trenton (N. J.) Times, Wilmington (Del.) Journal, Rochester Times-Union, Fall River (Mass.) Herald, Albany News, Cleveland Press, Cincinnati Post, Omaha News, Dallas Journal, Norfolk (Neb.) News, Hastings (Neb.) Tribune, Oakland (Cal.) Tribune, San Francisco Bulletin, Portland (Ore.) Journal.

To provide election returns for the Chicago Tribune, four United Press wires were run into the Tribune office.

Five Hearst newspapers broadcast returns. They were the New York American, using Station WNYC; Washington Times, WRC; Milwaukee Wisconsin-News, WSOE; Chicago Herald Examiner, KYW; Boston American, WNAC. Their returns were collected by Hearst news gathering forces.

Other newspapers which used neither United Press nor Associated Press returns but which broadcast election news were the Brooklyn Eagle, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Kansas City Star, Detroit Free Press, and Fort Worth Star Telegram.

The Brooklyn Eagle obtained the returns by arrangement with the headquarters of the different political parties. Their radio report was of an interpretative, rather than a news nature. Figures were supplemented by interpretations by Henry Suydam, of the Eagle's Washington bureau.

To cover and transmit the election by wire, all five important press associations of the country centralized their activities in New York.

In that city the Associated Press, the United Press, the United News, the Universal Service, and the International News Service tabulated returns received from all sections of the country, and from there all important leads to the big political story were dated.

Political writers handling the assignment from A. P.'s New York headquarters included L. C. Probert, superintendent of the Washington bureau, Byron Price, J. L. West and P. F. Haupert, all of the Washington staff.

Chief correspondents for the United Press were Paul Mallon, Robert Bender, Raymond Clapper, and Frank Getty.

Five members of Universal Service's Washington staff who came to New York on the political assignment were John T. Lambert, James R. Nourse, Winder Harris, Franklin Wisner and Sears Taylor.

George Holmes, Gus Heywood, William Hutchinson and Kenneth Clark were the political reporters for International News Service.

All press associations reported keen interest among members and clients in election returns, with many extra editions the rule, despite the use of radio.

In regard to the issuance of extra

CAMPAIGN PUBLICITY COST UNKNOWN DESPITE BORAH INVESTIGATION

Little Paid Newspaper Advertising Done by National Committees, Who Know Nothing of That Done Locally—Much "Literature" Employed

By J. Bart Campbell

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—One of the unsolved riddles of the 1924 Presidential campaign promises to be how much was spent in newspaper advertising and other forms of publicity by the various and manifold Republican, Democratic or LaFollette national, state, county, local and other organizations, individually and collectively.

The Borah committee shed some light upon part of the campaign expenditures of the Republican, Democratic and LaFollette parties, it is true, but many details were lacking in the testimony at almost every turn.

It became obvious as the committee pushed its investigation to almost the eve of the national election there would be many a dollar collected and expended by all sorts of campaign committees and subcommittees alike which could never be accounted for completely, if at all.

This appeared true particularly of the publicity end of a campaign in which the newspaper, the magazine, the radio, the mail and the telegraph were all employed by the contending parties to an unprecedented extent.

George Barr Baker, publicity director for the Republican National Committee, testified before the Borah committee, he and his associates had spent about $430,000 for publicity purposes.

James W. Gerard, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, submitted an advertising item of $25,916.88 in testifying to a total expenditure of $548,440.02 by his committee between July 1 and October 20.

Congressman John M. Nelson, of Wisconsin, the LaFollette campaign manager, accounted for a total of $245,710.24 part of which he divided into $57,500.37 for printing and $21,107.52 for publicity.

All three of them conceded such figures did not by any means cover the tremendous scope of the advertising and other publicity reaching from the rival candidates for the White House down the long line of Senatorial, Congressional, State and county aspirants for office.

When William M. Butler, the Republican National Chairman, was on the stand he stated it would be just as humanly impossible for the Republicans as for the Democrats or LaFollette to compute accurately how much money was expended for or by their respective interests.

All phases of the publicity work of the Republican National Committee he left entirely to Mr. Baker, Mr. Butler explained.

"There is no way of determining how much money is being spent in the campaign to elect President Coolidge?" Mr. Butler was asked by Samuel Untermyer, LaFollette counsel before the Borah committee.

"All I know about it are the transactions we have through the Republican National Committee," Mr. Butler replied.

"You do know there is money being spent outside of your committee in various directions?" pursued Mr. Untermyer.

"I know there are State campaign funds," replied Mr. Butler. "There ordinarily are."

"But apart from State campaign funds, you know money is being spent in various directions in advertising and by the various sub-committees of the various contributions committees?

"No, I do not know that."

(Continued on page 4)

editions, a change of policy on the part of the New York Sun was regarded as significant. The Sun, of course, was broadcasting over WEAF, and consequently, for the first time, on record this evening newspaper did not publish an extra Tuesday evening, appearing on the street instead with an "election paper" at 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The New York Evening World and the New York Evening Journal were the only New York evening newspapers which printed election extras.

All New York morning newspapers were on the streets earlier than usual with extras.

The New York World, Democratic, was the first in the country to concede Davis' defeat, and proclaim an overwhelming Coolidge victory. The extra carrying this news was sold on Manhattan streets at nine o'clock Tuesday evening.

The United Press informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER that more than 900 client newspapers in the United States took the U. P. election service.

George C. Shor, editor and manager of International News Service, said that there were "more newspapers on the I. N. S. wire election night than on any other night service offered by the organization since it began operation."

Nearly all the regular clients took the election report, Shor said, and in addition there were a great many morning newspapers added to the usual list.

"It was a difficult election to report," Shor told EDITOR & PUBLISHER. "Its coverage required care, caution, and sound judgement, as well as speed."

The elaborate election reporting machinery of the Associated Press, set up annually at a cost of approximately $250,000, worked with well oiled precision, Jackson Elliott, assistant general manager, declared. By the A. P.'s method, all returns gathered are tabulated at New York headquarters and disseminated from that point.

All press associations reported a demand for election news from newspapers in foreign countries, which broke all previous records and indicated the world-wide interest in the quadrennial event.

J. H. Furay, United Press vice-president, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER, that the U. P. election report was sent direct to 20 different foreign countries, the greatest number that this association has thus served. The U. P. had a staff of 14 correspondents filing cables exclusively to foreign newspapers.

The United Press report was sent direct to Germany, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Italy, France, England, Spain, China, Japan, Philippines, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Columbia, Bolivia, Porto Rico, Guatamala, Santa Domingo, Sweden, and Russia.

To South American countries, the United Press sent 3500 words by cable Tuesday night. This press association serves 50 South American newspapers. To Middle European countries and France and Spain, the U. P. cabled 1500 words. Included in the list were fourteen German newspapers. The Paris Herald Tribune purchased 1,000 words cabled by the U. P.

To the Orient, the U. P. sent 1,000 words direct to the Osaka Mainichi and the Tokyo Nichi Nichi, where it was translated and published in Japanese. In Japan the U. P. report was also furnished to the Nippon Dempo Tsushin Sha, telegraphic agency, which serves practically all Japanese newspapers.

The British United Press supplied about 10 newspapers in the British Isles, while nearly all English newspapers got the U. P. report through the Exchange Telegraph Company. The A. P. report reached England through Reuters Limited. France learned of the election through U. P.'s connection with the Agence Radio Telegraphique, and A. P.'s connection with Havas Agency.

A similar demand for news on the termination of the Presidential race by foreign countries was reported by International News Service, which served clients with cable reports, in England, Germany, South America and Japan. The I. N. S. has approximately 30 client newspapers in Germany, George C. Shor said.

CAMPAIGN PUBLICITY COST UNKNOWN

(Continued from page 3)

"You do not know whether that is so, or not?"

"I do not know, no."

"Then it would not be possible for any one man to know how much is being spent in the interests of the Republican Party in the campaign?" Mr. Untermyer continued.

"Or, the Democratic Party, or the LaFollette Party," was Mr. Butler's reply.

"Or, any party?"

"Or, any party."

"There are so many outside agencies?"

"There may be."

"Then it is impossible to find out what the campaign costs?"

"It is very difficult."

"Have you any approximate idea of the amount that has been spent in advertising, outside of the Republican National Committee?"

"I know nothing about that, except I have occasionally seen advertisements."

"We have a number of them here, which have appeared in different places, marked 'paid for' by the wool industry."

"Yes?"

"Or the cotton industry, or some other industry, the advertising men, and so on."

"That has been done for years. I know nothing about it, however; I have not asked anyone to advertise."

"Do you know whether or not these advertisements are being vised by your publicity department?"

"I cannot answer, because I do not know definitely whether they are or not, but my opinion is they are not, and, if they are, it is against my orders."

Mr. Butler explained at another stage of his examination by Mr. Untermyer that he had not included newspaper advertising in the budget of the Republican National Committee.

"We have not any broad newspaper advertising plan," he added. "It is very easy to spend a million dollars overnight in general newspaper advertising."

"You have cut that method of campaigning out of your budget?" inquired Senator Caraway.

"Yes, I have cut that item out," Mr. Butler replied.

"Do you think the so-called boiler plate and canned editorials more effective than regular paid display advertising?" pursued Senator Caraway.

"I have left that question largely to Mr. Baker," answered Mr. Butler.

Mr. Baker, who followed the Republican National Chairman to the stand, explained partly the expenditure of $430,000 for publicity purpose under his direction by stating:

"We have put out 66,000 mats, 8,000 full page plates, 2,000 part page plates, two, three or four columns each. That is a very large amount to put out."

Mr. Baker said the "mats" alone cost about $20,000.

"That is the mere cost of them," he continued, "not the writing or mailing them."

"The full page plates cost about $22,000.

"The staff that did the writing and all the work on them cost about $24,000.

"Aside from that there has been the ever-present mimeographing and addressographing, and I should say, with the cost of machines, and the operation of them, and the paper, and all the expense of writing the material, the cost would run up to about $24,000."

One article, entitled "Debunking LaFollette," went into about 3,000 newspapers, Mr. Baker volunteered.

He estimated an expenditure of about $65,000 under the heading of "literature."

Up to October 17 he figured finally there had been spent for all kinds of publicity at the Chicago headquarters of the Republican National Committee about $365,000; at the New York and Washington headquarters combined, about $104,000.

"But the Washington office does not count for much," he remarked.

"How many advertisements have been put in the newspapers under the direction of the Republican National Committee?" Mr. Baker was asked.

"Practically none," he replied. "The Democrats have spent a great deal of money in advertising which has not been signed by them. We always sign ours in some way."

Mr. Baker was shown a copy of the Woman's Home Companion by counsel for the Republican National Committee. Containing an article boosting the Democratic candidates, it was intended to be put into general circulation by October 25, it was stated.

Mr. Baker said he had been told by the advertising agency responsible for the magazine carrying the "boost" the cost would be $7,600 for the page.

"I only wish we had money enough to do that sort of thing," was his comment.

"A full page advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post would cost more?" inquired Mr. Untermyer.

"Yes," replied Mr. Baker.

"It would cost double?"

"Oh, I do not think double, but a lot more."

Mr. Baker said he had relied to some extent upon the publicity he believed the Republicans got by his sending out "sixteen million different pamphlets through the mails."

Light was shed on the cost of advertising in the Saturday Evening Post by Cyrus H. K. Curtis, its owner and publisher.

Mr. Curtis testified to the expenditure of $40,000 in advertising Samuel G. Blythe's much-discussed LaFollette article in the Saturday Evening Post.

"LaFollette wrote one article about himself for us for which we paid him $1,000," said Mr. Curtis.

The article was one of three. The others were about John W. Davis, the Democratic Presidential candidate, and Charles G. Dawes, the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate.

"LaFollette charged us $1,000; the others did it for nothing," added Mr. Curtis.

"We spent $10,451 advertising the publication of one editorial in the Country Gentleman," Mr. Curtis said at another point in his testimony. "Out of $700,000 spent so far this year by us, about $60,000 was for advertising articles that might be considered political."

There had been spent $17,000 advertising "The Farmer in the White House," a Coolidge article in the Country Gentleman, Mr. Curtis also figured.

Questioned as to the cost of a page advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Curtis replied, "I believe it is $8,000." A page advertisement in the Country Gentleman, he explained, cost $3,000 in color, $2,500 in black and white.

When it came to the turn of the Democrats to explain their campaign expenditures, former Ambassador James W. Gerard, their treasurer, figured, aside from the $25,916.88 set down as advertising, there had been expended between July 1 and October 18, for printing and stationery, $12,335.33; for publications, $42,745.79, at the New York headquarters of the Democratic National Committee.

The expenditures of the publicity bureau of the Washington headquarters of the committee he estimated at $19,766.50.

Clem L. Shaver, Democratic National Chairman, who followed Mr. Gerard to the stand, was asked, "Have any of your funds been expended in the way of paying directly to the newspapers for publication of matter for you?"

"I do not think I am in a position to answer that," responded Mr. Shaver.

And the committee let it go at that.

When J. Henry Roraback, Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut, was on the stand, he testified to a total of $55,557.48 expended in his State, "advertising included, but not specified."

William Skinner, a New York silk manufacturer, and treasurer of the Uptown Dry Goods Association of that city was among those summoned by the committee in its inconclusive efforts to discover just how much either the Republican, Democratic or LaFollette parties had spent for advertising or other publicity.

Mr. Skinner testified he had collected a total of $34,000 in behalf of the Coolidge campaign. He admitted as treasurer for his association he had been arranging for advertising in the New York newspapers to urge their readers to support Coolidge and not LaFollette.

"The people who volunteered or gave their advertising space to you were people who already had contracts with the newspapers and merely said, 'Use that space,'" it was suggested to Mr. Skinner.

He replied in the affirmative.

Among those mentioned as having donated such advertising space was the American Woolen Company.

On this subject, Mr. Butler, the Republican National Chairman, was also questioned by LaFollette counsel.

"Don't you know certain industries have clubbed together and have done advertising for the Republican ticket on their own account?" demanded Mr. Untermyer.

"I do not know that they have," was Mr. Butler's reply.

"Have you not seen such advertisements?"

"I have seen one or two of the advertisements."

How far the manifold phases of campaign expenditures might extend was borne witness to by W. Harry Baker, Republican State Chairman of Pennsylvania.

"How much have been the collections and expenditures for the county tickets in your State?" Mr. Baker was asked.

He shook his head.

"Cannot you estimate how much?" was the next question.

"That is impossible," was his reply. "I could not tell you that, because we have no way of finding out exactly."

When the Borah committee finally suspended its labors it was evident to those who had followed its course that the extent to which newspaper advertising was resorted to, the cost of it all and the extent to which the radio, so freely used by all parties, supplanted the newspapers in paid publicity, would doubtless remain one of the unsolved mysteries of the 1924 campaign.

Assuredly, the Borah committee only skimmed the surface of so tremendous a subject, as is attested by the thousands of words of testimony taken by it both at Washington and Chicago.

HUGE ELECTION PRIZES OFFERED

London Dailies Post $15,000 for Subscribers Guessing Returns

Huge prizes were offered by a number of London dailies to readers who gave the most correct forecasts of the recent Parliamentary election. The London Daily Chronicle offered a prize of $15 a week for life (or a cash sum of $15,000) for the nearest estimate to the actual number of successful candidates for each of the several parties. The Daily Graphic offered $15,000 for an absolutely correct forecast, or $2,500 for the nearest.

The Daily Mail first offered $15,000 (or $15 a week for life), but subsequently increased the prize to $25,000, or $25 a week for life.

On election night, the Daily Chronicle entertained more than 300 prominent advertisers to supper at their offices in Salisbury Square, Fleet street, with a lavish entertainment, so that they might enjoy the hospitality of the publishers and learn the election results as received.

The Daily Mail engaged the Albert Hall, with accommodation for 10,000 people, for election night. Between the announcements of results, an entertainment was provided of music by an orchestra, songs by well-known vocalists, topical cartoons drawn on the spot by Tom Webster and "Poy," the newspaper cartoonists, films and pictures of political interest, and broadcast items.

NEWSPAPER MEN'S PLAY DAZZLES BROADWAY

But Golden Flood of Royalties Fails to Lure Lau ence Stallings from N. Y. World Staff Although Maxwell Anderson, Co-Author of "What Price Glory" Departs for Greener Fields

By BRUCE GOULD

EASY Street may be the goal of most newspaper men, but Grub Street is mine, says Laurence Stallings, youthful literary editor of the New York World. This blunt manifesto was elicited by questioning the co-author of Broadway's spectacular dramatic hit, "What Price Glory," as to whether he will follow Maxwell Anderson's example of leaving the grand old profession flat on its back. Three days after the play was produced, and success was assured, Mr. Anderson left off writing editorials for the World to watch the goose nightly lay its golden eggs. Mr. Stallings stuck.

"I'll be making deadlines 20 years from now," grumbles Stallings after the sour tradition of the newspaper man.

The play's the thing, it seems, to make money. H is for Happiness, meaning the Harness. Mr. Stallings likes his rut, and in his not infrequently amiable moments can be heard contending that it's a bed of roses.

Not so Mr. Anderson. When his weekly royalties of $1,000 made him fair meat for enterprising bond salesmen, he joined the "I used to be a newspaper man myself" club. At the present moment he is a professional playwright, passionately bent on the destruction of all that is flimsy and gimcrack in the theatre, and on the production therein of a few of his own finely articulated dramas.

The phenomenal financial and artistic success of Messrs. Anderson and Stallings is not more startling than the determination of the younger collaborator to remain a newspaper man. Thousands of journalism's best men yearly desert the field when the wind blows southerly. Greener fields, better salaries, opportunities for more rapid and more secure advancement lure all too many of the most vigorously minded youthful Danas away from Park Row and its local equivalent. And the satisfied renegades distract their more steadfast brothers with persistent urging to go and do likewise, baiting them with a fat and alluring pay envelope.

An anecdote will perhaps reveal why Mr. Stallings prefers to remain chained to his typewriter and dictionary, measuring off his life by editions. A few nights after "What Price Glory" became a sure hit on Broadway, he emerged from the theatre to find his managing editor, Herbert Bayard Swope, and Laurette Taylor, of "Peg o' My Heart" fame, in animated discussion of him and his play. Turning to Mr. Stallings, Miss Taylor burbled:

"Anyway, I'm glad it's so successful for Laurence's sake. It will relieve him from that driving newspaper work!"

The Swope brow darkened. The Swope hair flamed. The idea advanced that his brilliant slaves galled under the yoke, rankled in the managerial breast. But Stallings, too, strangely enough, was fuming at the injustice of the well meant remark. He exploded first.

"Nonsense! I can afford to stay in now!" he detonated. The curtain came down on the little scene with Messrs. Swope and Stallings smiling and happy, and the lovely Laurette not a little puzzled, perhaps, at their strange attitude.

It was not until nearly the hour of midnight on Sept. 5, last, that Mr. Stallings and Mr. Anderson were presented with a choice between journalism and a life of affluent ease. On that date "What Price Glory" opened at Arthur Hopkins' Plymouth Theatre.

It was the night when blasé and sophisticated first-nighters shouted themselves hoarse with applause; when strong men and beautifully gowned women, overcome with delight, fell on the nearest neck and wilted formal collars of utters strangers with tears of hysteria. It was the night Alexander Woollcott cried "Magnificent" in a voice 46 points high, and Heywood Broun muttered in his beard, "And to think he was once only a —— —— copyreader!" thinking of Mr. Stallings. It was the night——

LAURENCE STALLINGS

MAXWELL ANDERSON

But enough! The success of that night put Messrs. Stallings and Anderson both on Easy street, to coin a phrase, beyond the dreams of avarice. The play promises to net them individually upwards of a quarter of a million dollars before Fortune up-ends her capricious cornucopia.

The story of the acceptance of "What Price Glory" for production by Mr. Hopkins is hardly less exceptional than the story of its success. Many successful plays have waited weary years for a hearing, with only their authors to believe in their ultimate triumph. The stories of such plays, if placed end to end, would reach from here until bedtime. But the Anderson and Stallings play, in less than six months after its inception, was not only the artistic but the box-office success of the reigning season.

Alexander Woollcott, in his chosen character as Mr. Fixit, plays an important part. The day the typist returned the manuscript to Mr. Stallings, the author met the dramatic critic of the New York Sun at the Hotel Brevoort. In the middle of a demi-tasse, Stallings loosed the terrifying information that he and Anderson had just finished a play. He had been wondering, he said, how the important fact could be brought to the notice of Mr. Hopkins. Almost as if that were his cue, Mr. Hopkins entered the room, looking as unconcerned as if he were not going to be bearded the next moment.

"I have a play I'd like you to read," observed Stallings.

"Send it to me," encouraged Mr. Hopkins.

"I won't do it," replied Stallings. "You won't read it."

You could, as they say, have heard a pin drop. Mr. Hopkins is notoriously careless in his treatment of manuscripts. It is said that taxi drivers, who find the scripts of plays left in their cars, automatically return them to the Plymouth Theatre. Woollcott, aware of this, smiled knowingly. Either the smile or the Stallings' gesture saved the day.

"I'll read it tonight," said Mr. Hopkins. "You'll have your answer Monday."

The answer was "Accepted."

Park Row, as well as Broadway, buzzed with the instant success of the play. Doubtless, by this time, reporters in even the furthermost county seat have learned of the "luck" of the two newspaper men. Both were fairly well known before their names went up on a skyrocket. Perhaps the name of Mr. Anderson, due to the anonymity of the editorial column, was less well known than that of Mr. Stallings. The latter's triweekly column, "The First Reader," and first novel, "Plumes," just published, had created a respectable sensation. But the most successful journalists sometimes indulge in the professional grouch, and declare "It's a good game to get out of." Undoubtedly, the majority of newspaper men who thought about the matter at all took it for granted that both men would "take the cash and let the credit go."

Mr. Anderson fulfilled those expectations. The farewell bang of his roll top editorial desk almost echoed the drop of the curtain that tumultous night. He departed from the World on an extended leave of absence. Friends expect the leave to become more and more tenuous. He can produce excellent reasons for his departure from Park Row and entrance into other fields. Mr. Anderson's first play, "White Desert," though a financial failure when produced last year, disclosed to the theatrical world a brilliant and authentic playwriting talent. It is quite possible that he will let his several years' service on the San Francisco Bulletin, the San Francisco Chronicle, the New Republic, the New York Globe with Henry J. Wright, and later years with Frank I. Cobb on the World stand as his journalistic record. However, he is only 36, and many things can happen.

Mr. Stallings first entered the newspaper world as a reporter on the Atlanta Journal. He was born in Macon, Ga., in 1894. He received a B. A. from Wake Forest, a small college in North Carolina. The daughter of the president, Helen Purefoy Poteat, later became his wife.

In 1917, Mr. Stallings joined the Marine Corps as a result of helping the sergeant in charge of the Atlanta recruiting office prepare alluring articles for newspaper use. He was convinced by his own stuff, and enlisted for five years. After ten months in the ranks, he emerged as an officer. As First Lieutenant he was in command of a company at Belleau Wood, when wounded. He learned of promotion to the rank of Captain while convalescing in a hospital.

While playing hide and seek with surgeons in the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C., he worked on the Washington Times, and earned a M. Sc. degree at Georgetown University. On the Times he served as reporter, financial editor, acting city editor, dramatic critic, and creator of advertising copy. In March, 1922, he came to the World, and was placed on the copy desk.

On the World he was successively dramatic reporter, Sunday writer and editorial writer, before assuming his present position. It was while on the editorial staff that he became acquainted with Mr. Anderson. Mr. Stallings' job was to take down the editorials dictated by Mr. Cobb, who was confined to his bed. He helped in the composition of the final editorials written by that brilliant and courageous editor. It was when E. W. Osborn became dramatic critic of the Evening World that Stallings was given the post of literary editor of the World. The change occurred in August, 1923.

One of the reasons given by Mr. Stallings as to why he prefers to remain a newspaper man instead of setting up shop as a professional playwright and novelist, parallels the answer given by William Hazlitt in explanation of the reason he preferred the conversation of authors to that of all other people.

"Newspaper men, their talk and their ways of living may not be so interesting as outsiders suppose them to be," says Mr. Stallings, "but they are better than anyone else."

"What Price Glory" was born in the editorial rooms of the World. Mr. Stallings, as an expert on the Marines, was given to entertaining Mr. Anderson with merry tales of army life, after both had settled the problem of the universe and proofread their solutions for the first editions. The anecdotes Mr. Stallings related dripped with human juices. Mr. Anderson, seeking eagerly for vivid and colorful dramatic topics, saw the skeleton of a good play. Stallings also believed that the Marines would make good stage material, and dallied with the idea of using them in a musical comedy, with settings in Haiti during the leatherneck occupation.

Anderson clung to the idea that grimmer drama was there. He plied the former captain with questions concerning life and love with the Fourth Brigade of the Second Division on the battlefields of France. Shortly after, Anderson appeared with the manuscript of a war play. The second act, to say nothing of other portions, was written in its entirety by Mr. Stallings. It took him, he states on oath, just 35 minutes to complete the act, with the deadline, the hour set by his wife for dinner. He had come home from the World, and was told when he sat down to work on the second act, that dinner would be ready in half an hour. He emerged from his study with the act written as later produced on the stage, just as his wife pulled the hot biscuits out of the oven, and beseeched him to hurry. He made the edition.

It is possible that a mistake is being committed in publicly lauding Mr. Stallings for his action in remaining with the newspaper men. It appears that the matter was not entirely of his own choosing. Pressure was brought to bear to glue him to the editorial seat.

"Mr. Stallings deserves only a minimum of credit for staying in newspaper work," says Walter Lippmann, editor of the World's editorial page. "We wouldn't let him get away."

Which, after all, may be the real reason why Mr. Stallings will never say—until such time as Saint Peter assists him out of the celestial elevator—"I used to be a newspaper man myself."

WASHINGTON POST BEATS SHUBERT EFFORT TO CENSOR CRITIC

Full Privileges Restored, Also Advertising Schedule, Without Conditions, After Paper Refuses to Disavow a Frank Opinion

By J. BART CAMPBELL

THE Washington Post has won a great moral victory for the freedom of the press. Before the courageous fight undertaken by the Post to insure its dramatic criticisms absolute freedom from outside dictation the well known New York theatrical producing firm of S. S. and Lee Shubert, Inc., has capitulated.

On the night of October 26 John J. Daly, Post dramatic editor, was refused admission to Poli's, one of two Shubert theatres here, because he had the temerity to give his frank opinion about "Artists and Models," a Shubert production, when it was shown first at the house on the night of Oct. 5.

The Shuberts, evidently incensed because criticism instead of praise was bestowed by Mr. Daly upon the production, which early received pruning at the demand of the Washington police, went even further to bar him from Poli's. They denied him access to the Shubert-Belasco, their other house here. They then reduced their advertising in the Post to a bare fraction of ordinary schedule and followed this up by revoking all passes and other courtesies to the Post.

Even at the loss of most of the Shubert advertising, the Washington Post stood by Mr. Daly, and the Shuberts finally decided to open negotiations directly with Edward B. McLean, its owner and publisher. They agreed this week (Tuesday) to rescind their order barring Mr. Daly from their theatres here, had their Washington representatives communicate personally to him he was again to have the freedom of both Poli's and the Shubert-Belasco, and at the same time restored their advertising to the Post on its former basis.

Mr. Daly's experience paralleled in some respects that of Alexander Woollcott, when he was dramatic critic of the New York Times, who, after printing an unfavorable review of the farce, "Taking Chances," when it opened in New York, March 17, 1915, was barred from all theatres under the control of the Shuberts. Shubert advertising was then barred by the Times from its columns.

Some time later Mr. Woollcott, after he was denied admission to the Maxine Elliott Theatre, began action against the Shuberts under the civil rights statute, and later attended a performance of "Trilby" under the protection of a court injunction.

After hearing arguments in the case Supreme Court Justice Hendrick handed down a decision on May 18, 1915, for Mr. Woollcott against the Shuberts, who then appealed. The appeal was sustained, and the case continued until Lee Shubert formally notified the Times in May, 1916, that the Shuberts would welcome back its critic to their theatres.

In commenting on this at the time the New York Times stated:

"This invitation is the voluntary act of Mr. Shubert and comes to the Times without any solicitation, agreement or understanding of any kind."

It is understood the Shuberts have now made their peace with the Washington Post on a similar basis.

On the morning following Mr. Daly's exclusion from Poli's, George Rothwell Brown, "columnyist" of the Post, made this reference to the incident in his column which paralleled on the first page the news story of the treatment of the critic:

"Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true,
But are not critics to their judgment too?"

J. J. Shubert, of New York, turns critic, and undertakes to prevent the people of Washington from learning the truth about his plays. He bars the Post's dramatic editor, with the highly puritanical name of Daly—but he can't keep Mrs. Van Winkle out, just because she doesn't like "Artists and Models." As Pope says in his Essay on Criticism—

"To what base ends, and by what abject ways,
Are mortals urged through sacred lust of praise."

The Washington Post itself presented Mr. Daly's case as follows:

John J. Daly, dramatic editor of the Washington Post, was refused admission to Poli's theatre last night after having purchased his ticket at the box office.

In line with the regular first-nighters, Mr. Daly appeared in the theatre lobby shortly before curtain time and was sold a seat in "E" row by Stephen Coster, ticket-seller. Advancing along with the regular patrons, Daly was about to hand his ticket to the doorkeeper, William Henley, when the manager of the house, Leo Leavitt, who was standing nearby, came over and intervened. Mr. Leavitt explained that the Shuberts, lessees of Poli's theatre, had placed a ban on Daly, as dramatic editor of the Washington Post, following the review of "Artists and Models," which recently appeared here.

Mr. Leavitt, taking Daly's ticket, went to the box office and refunded the purchase money—$2.75. In doing so he stated that he personally had nothing to do with the action taken; that he was merely carrying out instructions, acting on orders from New York and that, as manager of the house, it was his duty to exclude Daly as critic.

When "Artists and Models" opened at Poli's theatre on Sunday evening, October 5 last, J. J. Shubert, member of the firm of S. S. & Lee Shubert, Inc., New York, theatrical producers, came along with it. On the following morning the Washington Post carried a review under the headline, "Artists and Models Found to Feature Suggestiveness—Revue at Poli's Called Blend of Old-Time Burlesque and Vaudeville, with Vulgarity and Coarseness Streaking Numbers."

In the review itself, written by Daly, it was pointed out that "Artists and Models" was for men only. It was further stated that cleverness in this revue fell by the wayside to let vulgarity, coarseness and sometimes commonness takes its place. Admitting that there were lovely, even exquisite scenes in the show, the reviewer stated that some of the acts wound up "with dirt behind the ears" and that "evidently, everything has to be tainted to get by in 'Artists and Models.'" These references, according to Mr. Leavitt, brought down the wrath of J. J. Shubert upon the head of J. J. Daly, resulting in the edict executed last night —the banishment of the Washington Post critic from Poli's.

On the opening night of "Artists and Models" among those present were members of the local police force who, after consultation, succeeded in having revised certain features of the show. Objections to some scenes in the revue were advanced not only by the critic of the Washington Post but by a majority of the newspaper reviewers present. The verdict that "Artists and Models" was off-color came near being unanimous. It was admitted, however, that the closing number almost took the curse off the production.

Receiver Issues Call for Claims

John A. Bernhard, receiver for the Newark (N. J.) Press, evening tabloid which suspended publication Oct. 17, has given notice to creditors of the company to file their claims on or before Nov. 27, or they will be excluded from such dividends as may be declared by the court from the assets of the company.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

THAT OLD SUBSCRIBER

God bless that Old Subscriber! . . . He drifted in one day
Fresh from the uncut meadows, all redolent of hay,
The smell of sod upon him, his boots begrimed with clay.

He came into the office as one who'd done his chores
And earned the right to mingle with cubs and editors!
He brought a breath of Somewhere . . . the soul of All Outdoors.

He spoke of Autumn plowing, of clover crops and wheat,
Of fattening hogs and cider, a smokehouse full of meat! . . .
The talk he talked was magic, the talk he talked was sweet!

His mind was filled with acres, his vision touched the sky;
And as he talked, our troubles went drifting, sailing by.
Man-power was in his sinews, and God was in his eye.

He spoke of bulls and bullocks, of sheep that grazed his hills,
Of woods gold-clothed in glory that only Nature spills;
His voice was like the music sung by a thousand rills!

And we who toiled with trifles, who heaped our desks with trash,
Sifting the stuff disgusted . . . that pile of wordy hash! . . .
We who must earn our living where minds and moments clash,

We took our Old Subscriber, our prophet of the hoe,
Out to the elevator, to lift us down below. . . .
We took our Old Subscriber to see a Burlesque Show!

Him who had All of Nature, we took to see the dregs! . . .
He who could speak of chickens and moulting time and eggs,
We tried to entertain him with painted lips, and legs!

God bless that Old Subscriber! . . . and may he come again
Fresh from the sod, so simple, so manly and so plain!
(No burlesque show the next time, though; he nearly missed his train).

SURPRISE TO WATSON

Assistant Publisher of N. Y. American Given Party

Victor Watson, assistant publisher of the New York American, was given a Hallowe'en surprise party by friends Oct. 31.

Jack V. Smith, purchasing agent of the American, entertained Watson while guests gathered at the latter's apartment.

Among those present were: A. J. Koebler, general manager of the American Weekly; W. A. Thayer, managing editor of the American; Martin Dunn, city editor; F. J. McCarthy, Sunday editor; Edwin Jones Clapp, editor of the American; Rudolph Block, who writes for Hearst newspapers under the name of Bruno Lessing, and George Van Cleve, head of the American's dramatic department.

Gilda Gray was also among the guests and gave an exhibition dance. Besides Watson's newspaper associates, those at the party included doctors, lawyers, politicians and one priest, Father McGoldrick of Flushing, N. Y.

Watson returned from a trip abroad Oct. 25.

BRITISH PRESS WEARY OF PRESS AGENT FAKES

"We Like Your Stars But Not Your Stunts," Is Comment on Visits of U. S. Celebrities and Their Publicity Men

BY HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

English newspaper editors tell me they are getting a little tired of the attentions of the press agents of American movie principals and grand opera stars who seek free publicity for their employers. In this they confess, there is no intent to criticize the ability of the artists in question, but only the feeling that the press agents are overdoing their part.

And truly, our long-suffering editors have endured much at the hands of the wily free-publicity merchant who is part of the retinue of every movie and operatic star that visits our shores.

Their editorial eyes were opened first when Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford timed their visit to England to synchronise with the release of one of their big films, and although they saw certain news values in the stories of the mobbing of the stars, they still saw the nigger in the woodpile.

When Chaplin followed a little later the news-editors gave him all the publicity he wanted, until there came a time when even he pleaded for mercy, and it is on record that he was obliged to sneak out of back-entrances from his hotel to take quiet walks at night in his old London haunts. But he had the powerful appeal of the fact that he was a Londoner, and there was a news-story in his meteoric rise.

Then, in rapid succession, it became a fashion of film producers to send over their movie-stars on the release of big pictures—with press-agent attachment. But it did not work very time, and a lull set in until the child Coogan, with papa and mamma, set foot in town. This precocious infant, might have had a good press of a kind, but some of our editors smelt a rat when a guileless mayor of a seaport town gave a civic reception to the child on landing. That was a clumsy bit of free publicity work, but might have escaped notice, if the press agent had not introduced a "slobber" line of talk, and tried to feed editors with sob-stuff and gush. The press dropped the million dollar kid straightway, and his departure from the country went unnoticed.

This past week or two we have had the Galli-Curci "boom"—a clever press campaign upon a voice that musicians declare to be in no special way phenomenal. It was not until the newspapers found that an astute press agent had unloaded upon all of them "specials," signed either by the singer herself, or her husband, that they realized they had been rather cleverly "worked" again and had given thousands of pounds worth of free publicity to boost a business tour, whose principals were quite able to pay for all the advertising they needed.

Small wonder that the English editor, with an experience of news that seems to be nothing but one darned press stunt after another, is getting a little sick of it, and is beginning to look upon the press agent as a totally unnecessary evil. And as these things invariably recoil upon the innocent, it may be that some deserving and high-souled American visitor may suffer in consequence, for our editors are looking askance at new arrivals, deeply suspecting that each one in has his or her baggage a press-agent whose sole mission it is to pull something over on them when they are not looking.

As one of them said to me a few days ago, "a press agent is an advertising man who takes pride in the fact that he is not called upon to subscribe the motto of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World—Truth in Advertising!"

Graphic Joins Publishers Association

The New York Evening Graphic has been elected to membership in the Publishers Association of New York.

PROFESSOR WEIGHS "KEEP MY NAME OUT" PLEA

Arguments For and Against Suppression of News Listed By L. N. Flint, University of Kansas—Typical Cases Presented and Analyzed

SUPPRESSION of news, reasons for and against such suppression, and some typical instances where the question has been met and solved by editors are contained in a recent article printed in the Kansas Editor, published by the department of journalism, University of Kansas. The article, taken from a forthcoming book by L. N. Flint, director of the University's journalism school, on "The Conscience of the Newspaper," follows:

The phrase, suppression of the news, has an evil import to most minds, arising from the fact, no doubt, that the cases of suppression we hear most about are coupled with intimations of venality or graft on the part of the editor or sinister influence by some powerful individual or group. Experience with the problem, however, or even study of it from the outside, soon reveals that it has its laudable aspects as well as its evil ones. A veteran in journalism, looking back over his career, may very possibly take as great satisfaction in the remembrance of acts of news suppression as in those of fearless news publication or any other of his achievements.

One editor of a metropolitan daily ventures the opinion that, "suppression of news has come to be a topic of conversation largely because some persons have disagreed with newspapers about the relative importance of news. A committee organizes a political party and then complains that the newspapers suppress the news about it. The trouble is that the doings of the committee interest so few people that the editors do not feel justified in giving much space to them."

Moreover, if one looks at the reading matter in almost any issue of any newspaper, with the question in mind as to how much of it would have been suppressed if everybody's selfish interests or personal preferences had been considered, he will find plenty of evidence that remarkable independence is maintained by the press. It is printing the news without much fear or favor. A view behind the scenes will, however, show him that this is not the whole story.

Among the reasons given for asking that news be withheld from publication are some of doubtful propriety or plausibility and some which may be accepted as convincing. Some of the more familiar and interesting reasons are:

That withholding of an item about a misdemeanor would constitute a threat calculated to prevent further offenses by the same person.

That the publication of the item would hurt the business of the person concerned.

That the item of news would hurt the town.

That publication of the item would hurt the business of the editor.

That suppression of the item would be a favor to the editor's friends and in line with his social obligations.

That suppression of the truth about an incident would be proper because of the paper's previous acceptance of a formal statement, though unture, as covering the case.

That the item refers to a first offense.

That the item relates to a juvenile offender.

That sympathy for parents justifies the suppression.

That suppression would promote peace in the community.

That suppression would avoid embarrassment of innocent persons.

That the paper is not sure of all the facts.

That the matter is a delicate one involving affairs of state or similar public matters.

That the item involves the reputation of a woman or a girl.

That the story looks like propaganda.

That the story was obtained in confidence.

That the story is morbid in tone and content.

Sometimes suppression of news works good to public and to press, but not very often, it seems to Prof. Flint, who finds dissection of the newspaper conscience an interesting field of the new psychology.

L. N. FLINT

That the item is to be regarded as free publicity.

Favoring full publicity. Among the obvious reasons against suppression, the following are to be regarded seriously:

That the newspaper has an implied contract with the public to give it complete information of the day's events.

That omission is one way of telling an untruth.

That suppression gives rise to rumors while publication of the facts protects the public against anxieties growing out of baseless reports.

That the news can be published with substantial fairness to all concerned and with better results than to attempt to favor certain ones through suppression.

That by refusing to suppress news, a newspaper demonstrates its independence.

That the knowledge that publicity may be "a part of the penalty" will act as a wholesome deterrent from wrong doing.

Typical Cases

"Don't Scare the People." An argument for suppression that is met by large and small newspapers alike is that publication of the news in question would disturb the community's peace of mind.

Case. Information came to a newspaper in a city having one paper that the water supply of the city was menaced by typhoid contagion. Officials and prominent citizens earnestly requested the newspaper to refrain from "scaring the people." It was represented that the officials were doing their utmost to remedy the evil, and that there was no need to create general alarm.

The news was suppressed.

Comment. In this particular case an epidemic came and the death list was large. The editor afterwards expressed the opinion that, "to have scared the people would have been to keep the faith and save life." But regardless of the eventualities in this case, it seems clear that suppression was the wrong policy. Fear is often salutary. There were precautions the people could have taken against infection if they had appreciated the danger. They had a right to the facts on which to base a judgment as to whether or not some city official or employee had been derelict in duty. Perhaps an intelligent public opinion, fully informed by the newspaper, could have brought about improvement in the water supply system.

"Don't Hurt the Town." Among the most difficult tasks of an editor is to decide what to print and what to suppress in the way of unpleasant facts about the town or city. No performance by a newspaper requires more courage than telling the truth, perhaps the whole truth, in such a matter.

Case. A newspaper in a large city was convinced that vice conditions were the worst in the city's history. It had evidence of collusion between the underworld and the police. It believed that nothing but an aroused public sentiment could force officials and judges to enforce the law or at least maintain a maximum of restriction. But it was argued that advertisement of the wickedness of a town prejudices desirable non-residents against it while attracting an element that only intensifies the evil. Also that news of vice is not fit reading matter for the home.

The paper decided upon a vigorous campaign to enforce a "clean up." It centered the attack upon the chief of police; published much sensational evidence of evil conditions, including addresses of illegal resorts and stories of personal observations by reporters, and many photographs.

"Don't Hurt Business." While the advertising influence is a subject by itself, a case from that general direction may be included here.

Case. Some weeks before Christmas in a period of hard times and manifold demands for money in support of public enterprises, a newspaper published a number of interviews with prominent women of the town declaring that these women were going to confine the giving of Christmas presents to members of their own families and make the presents simple and inexpensive. The paper received vigorous protests from its advertisers and demands that articles which would discourage Christmas shopping be not published.

The paper ceased the publication of the interviews.

Comment. It is not clear that publication was justified by any duty to the public. The interviews were not news in the strict sense. They were opinions of people in the community. If the paper held the same opinions, it had a right, of course, to print not only interviews but editorials on the subject. If it held contrary opinions it could print the interviews and at the same time dissent editorially from the views expressed. But it is difficult to see that the paper sacrificed anything of its independence in discontinuing further publication of the interviews on the ground that the matter dealt with was entirely of individual concern and not of public concern.

"Don't Antagonize Your Friends." There is an interesting diversity of opinion as to how popular an editor ought to expect to be.

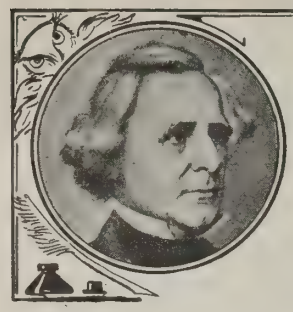
Case. The editor's family had accepted an invitation to dine with friends. Two days before the dinner the brother of the lady who was to be their hostess was indicted by grand jury for misuse of public funds. The lady asked as a personal favor that no sensational story, if any story at all, be printed. She regarded her brother as innocent and was sure that the money was safe and would be paid at the proper time. The front page of the paper was already made up, with a banner heading on the story, a two-column cut, and a ten point lead. Should the editor (1) tone down the display and print only the bare facts of the story, (2) let the page ride, sending regrets for the dinner, or (3) let it ride and go to dinner as if nothing had happened?

The second course of action was chosen.

Comment. The public had a right to the facts in the case when it became a matter of record in the proceedings of the grand jury. No sense of duty compelled the sensational treatment of the story, however. It was a dramatic story and the editor "played" it. If the editor had been willing to modify his sense of the news value of the story in consideration of the feelings of his friends, he would hardly have been derelict in duty. He chose to get the utmost returns in reader interest through sensational handling. It seems fitting that he should relinquish his claim to the hospitality offered.

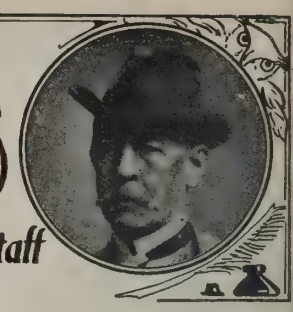
This raises the much discussed question as to whether or not an editor should have friends. Can he be faithful to his responsibilities as an editor and maintain friendships? A few great editors have answered in the negative. Certainly the editor's friends can not be chosen from among whose interests are likely to conflict with the public interest.

In the words of one careful editor: "I have quite come to the conclusion, after twenty-five years in the newspaper business, that the directing editorial chief of the paper must make up his mind to have very few friends. The fewer he has the better it is for the newspaper and the more independent he becomes."



"Have Sympathy."—The plea for suppression on this ground has many angles. Sometimes it is sympathy for individuals mentioned in the story, sometimes for their relatives or friends. Sometimes the basis of the request is the youthfulness of the offender, sometimes it is the fact that the offense is his first one and likely to be his last, if he is given a chance to save his good name. Sometimes the story relates to no offense against the law but to some humiliating or compromising or embarrassing incident.

Case. A prominent man in a large city was found dead in a downtown hotel. The coroner's verdict was acute alcoholism. He had a wife and several daughters who would be embarrassed if the cause of death were given. Did the paper owe it to other men to print what might serve as a warning against intemperance? If the man had not been prominent would the question have arisen at all?



It was determined not to print the alcoholism angle of the story. Upon request the coroner changed the verdict to heart disease. Instructions were given the desk that in all cases of death, good judgment and humanitarianism should be exercised, even though it were necessary to omit the facts.

Comment. Publication of the details to satisfy the morbid curiosity of some newspaper readers would undoubtedly have been unjustiafiable. If the case had no real bearing on a question of public policy, of law and order, the newspapers' handling of it was doubtless correct. The

(Continued on page 31)

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

The Funeral

Mr. Bennett, Jr., cabled to New York ordering the embalming of his father's remains and that arrangements for the funeral be postponed until he arrived from Europe. His mother and sister did not accompany him on his return, and he was the sole representative of the family, excepting a cousin of his father at the final obsequies.

The son preferred to have the funeral services conducted in the home of deceased rather than in St. Patrick's Cathedral, as proposed, though Mr. Hart of the Cathedral had charge of the elaborate funeral arrangements.

The funeral took place on June 13, from the Fifth avenue mansion, the remains lying in state in the drawing room, and were viewed by hundreds of citizens, who came to pay their last respects to the great journalist, and who passed in solemn procession by the coffin. Among the distinguished citizens present were Charles O'Conor, A. T. Stewart, Leonard W. Jerome, Mayor A. Oakey Hall, Judge Gunning S. Bedford, Theodore Tilton, August Belmont, John Swinton, Isaac W. England, etc.

The costly casket was remarkable for its elegance, nearly square in shape and made of a species of wood said to be more durable than metal. The side panels were covered with velvet. The eight handles were of solid silver, while the lid was in two parts, hung on heavy silver hinges. The entire casket was surrounded by a massive moulding of silver, forming a frame work that "will survive the lapse of ages," said the Sun.

The casket lay literally in a bed of roses, while floral emblems filled the parlors and the air was heavy with the perfume of the flowers. Placed on the foot of the coffin was a large floral anchor and a harp. They bore a card with this inscription:

"Miss Jeannette Bennett, from Mme. Hardy, with affectionate condolence."

The Herald Fund Association's huge cross of white roses was also a noticeable tribute.

The body of the late editor was dressed in a plain black suit. His arms were crossed, and in his right hand was a small bunch of white flowers. There were two tall golden candlesticks, one at each end of the coffin, each having seven lighted candles.

At half past ten, Mr. Bennett, Jr., and his father's cousin took up their places at the head of the coffin, and the former with bowed head manifested his grief at the great bereavement. The Herald Office had been closed for the day, and the members of the staff of the paper filed into the parlor and took up positions in rear of the chief mourner.

The Pallbearers

The following prominent editors and publishers accepted an invitation to act as pallbearers: Horace Greeley, of the Tribune; George W. Childs, of the Philadelphia Ledger; Erastus Brooks, of the Express; Robert Bonner, of the New York Ledger; Charles A. Dana, of the Sun; George Jones, of the Times; Frederic Hudson, formerly managing editor of the Herald; Hugh J. Hastings, of the Commercial Advertiser; David M. Stone, of the Journal of Commerce; and J. M. Bundy, of the Mail.

Manton Marble, of the World had also been invited, but sent a note regretting his inability to serve. In fact he could not have very well accepted the invitation as about a month before he had attacked the Herald, referring to "keyhole" journalism in his editorial, and commenting sneeringly on the news that Stanley had found Livingstone, adding that the Herald had entered a newer and larger arena, "assuming to itself all possible human industries in addition to its own." Dr. Ceccarini was chosen to take Marble's place.

It had been expected that Archbishop McCloskey would have conducted the funeral services, but he was absent from the city at the time, and the Very Rev. Dr. Starrs, the Vicar General, took his place. Entering the room dressed in full canonical vestments, and followed by Mr. Bennett's negro servant carrying the censer, and standing at the head of the coffin, he delivered a brief address, eulogizing the deceased.

"Mr. Bennett," said he, "was a man of great genius and enterprise; and of great charity, and he has made his memory of times past to live after him, and I think that he was not alone the greatest journalist in the country but in the world. His death is a serious loss to this great city. He was charitable to the church. He gave one of the lots on which the Church of St. Elizabeth is built at Fort Washington, and he also gave $5,000 to the priest of that church for the building fund. Mr. Bennett as I have ascertained was kind to those in his employment. He died in the faith in which he was baptized, and in the church in which he was brought up by his pious and devoted mother. He had a brother who studied for the priesthood prior to his untimely death, and his aged sister in Scotland is also a devoted member of the church. At his own request the Archbishop administered to him in his sickness and also gave him the rites of the church. He was an affectionate father and a fond husband, but he is to be no longer seen; no longer will he guide his family by his hand. Death has separated him from his family; from the church; and from the world. May he rest in peace."

At the end of the solemn service the coffin was closed and conveyed to the hearse. Mr. Bennett, Jr., had hired 50 carriages and these with fully as many other private vehicles, all filled with those eager to show their respect for the great man, proceeded to Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn, where the body was temporarily placed in the vault of the Jerome family, until the son had completed a vault on his family plot in the beautiful Fern Avenue and where Mr. Bennett's remains rest today along with those of two of his infant children and those of his wife and mother-in-law.

In reporting the funeral the Brooklyn Union gave a very interesting account of the pallbearers' early careers—at or about the time that the late Mr. Bennett started the Herald.

Horace Greeley was a young journeyman printer who came to New York in 1831 with only $10 in his pocket. After a hard struggle he started the New Yorker and later the Log Cabin, but met with little financial success, until like Bennett he founded a great daily newspaper.

James Brooks was already the publisher of the Express, and Erastus, his brother, worked under him. George Jones, of the Times, was then a young boy, employed later in the Tribune office. Dana was an ambitious reporter on the Boston Chronotype, fresh from the meadows of the noted Brook Farm. Bonner was a young typesetter on the Journal of Commerce. Stone, of the Journal of Commerce, was then working at the saddlery and harness making trade, while Hugh Hastings was a cub reporter on the Albany Knickerbocker.

(To be continued next week)

FRENCH DAILIES INCREASE PRICE

Rising Costs Force Advance from 15 to 20 Centimes Per Copy

By G. Langelaan

(Paris Correspondent, Editor & Publisher)

Paris, Oct. 26.—In spite of efforts to aid in the struggle against the ever-increasing cost of living in France, French newspapers have been obliged to increase their price from 15 to 20 centimes a copy. Twenty centimes at the present rate of exchange, which is around 19 francs to the dollar, represents a fraction over one cent.

When the newspaper representatives, at a meeting held Oct. 20, came to this decision they set forth their reasons in a communiqué issued to the public, which gives an idea of the conditions prevailing at present in France in the newspaper industry.

"The representatives of the French press," says the communiqué, "have today examined the situation created by the economic crisis through which the country is passing. This crisis in so far as they are concerned has brought with it a considerable increase in all kinds of costs, which are bearing heavily upon production.

"Newspapers which before the war bought printpaper for from 28 to 30 francs (in 1914 $5.60 to $6) per 100 kilos (220 pounds) now have to pay more than five times as much. All other expenses have suffered considerable increase.

"The independence and the existence of the press would be threatened were immediate steps not taken to give to the newspapers of Paris and the provinces, whatever their importance, the means of ensuring regular publication.

"In view of this situation, constituting a problem of exceptional gravity for newspapers, the general meeting have voted an increase in the selling price of the papers to 20 centimes per copy as from Nov. 1. It has furthermore been decided at the meeting to fix at 14 fr. 50 (roughly 75 cents) per 100 the minimum price at which newspapers will be supplied to retailers."

Alaska Daily Sold

Anchorage (Alaska) Daily Alaskan has been purchased from the Alaska Miners News Publishing Company by a group of Anchorage business men. E. F. Jessen, former advertising manager of the Alaskan, now head of the Jessen Advertising Syndicate, has been made general manager. C. J. Lincke is editor, and R. G. Southworth, former editor, is president of the company. The paper will continue as an 8-page daily, published every morning except Monday.

Houston Chronicle Wins Suit

The Houston (Tex.) Chronicle emerged victorious in an extended libel litigation Oct. 29, when the state supreme court upheld the civil court of appeals in its action reversing a $10,000 libel award to Sheriff Henry Thomas given by a Galveston trial court. The suit grew out of publication in 1921 of a statement in a news story to the effect that "the sheriff was not available when sought."

Capper Sweeps Kansas

Senator Arthur Capper, owner of the Capper publications, which includes two dailies, the Kansas City Kansan and the Topeka Capital, was re-elected to the Senate by a majority of 250,000 votes, the largest majority ever given any candidate in Kansas at the election Tuesday. He carried every county and every precinct in the state.

Daily Sponsors Food Show

The St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, in conjunction with the Retail Grocers' association recently gave a week-long food show at the Auditorium, with cash and other prizes.

COLONEL McCORMICK DEFINES A NEWSPAPER

It Is a Daily Publication, Conducted for Profit, Conveying News of the Day to the Public, Promoting Commerce, and Supplying Check on Government that Constitutions Lack

TWO definitions of a newspaper were put forward by Col. Robert R. McCormick, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune, in an address he delivered last week before the church publicity conference held under the auspices of the Chicago Church Federation and the Advertising Council of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce. After reviewing the history of the press and the explosive influence it has held upon world affairs since the invention of printing machines and movable type, he declared that the "newspaper is a daily publication conducted for profit." And, after carrying out that thesis in all its phases, he submitted a final definition:

"A newspaper is an instrument created by modern civilization to convey to the public the news of the day, while promoting commerce through advertisements and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

Col. McCormick's address, with his historical allusions excised, follows in substance:

A newspaper is a daily publication conducted for profit. I take it that the prevalence of the telegraph, the newspaper syndicate and the fast mail have relegated the weekly newspaper into the domain of the periodical magazine. The same agencies have held the newspaper to become primarily a purveyor of the most recent events of public interest.

In this assembly I expect to find considerable surprise in that part of my definition which requires that a publication be conducted for profit in order to be termed a newspaper. The signal fact remains that unless a newspaper is conducted for profit it is not a unit in itself but part of something else.

* * *

A newspaper cannot be independent unless it earns its living.

The next aspect of a newspaper conducted for profit is that it must exist in the face of competition not only of other publications like itself but of those subsidized by some other money making or money collecting institution.

* * *

News is the basis of the modern newspaper, but it cannot live by news alone. It must also amuse and serve. There are strips of comics. There are book and theatrical reviews. There are columns of advice on health, investment, radio, law, love, complexion, corsets, cooking, good manners, substantially all subjects that interest the general public.

We also have circulation campaigns and our intricate delivery system.

All those things must be paid for. A price must be obtained for the paper and the advertisements in it which will cover all these expenses—and more—because of the law of commerce that what does not increase, decreases and finally disappears.

Individually, most people rail at the newspapers of today. Collectively, they will not tolerate any other kind.

We receive much comment, largely unfavorable, upon the selection of news for publication made by our editors. The principal charge, of course, is that we lean toward sensationalism. The charge is perfectly true, but if sensationalism in itself is an objection, how much of literature can escape?

Newspaper editors come from the ranks of the normally educated. The first newspaper men's minds were moulded by the prevailing education. Newspapers have not altered this standard. Our earliest instruction, be it religious or otherwise, is filled with marvels. I trust no one will misunderstand if I draw attention to those features of the Bible which stand out in every man's memory, how great or how little a reader of the Scriptures he may be:—the Creation; the Flood; the drunkenness of Noah; the Plagues; the death of Absalom; David and Bathsheba; the thousand wives of Solomon; the Miracles; the Crucifixion; the Resurrection; the Adventures of St. Paul.

Entering the realm of great poems, what more sensation than "Paradise Lost"; than "Dante's Inferno"? Passing into lay or profane literature, what works of Shakespeare first strike your memory—Hamlet, Macbeth, King Henry IV, King Lear, Julius Caesar. What of Homer and Cicero? What of the Greek tragedies?

It is everywhere the same. Literature, other than scientific and economic, is founded upon sensation. What more sensational than aviation and radio, or the redemption of mankind by issuing silver money? Others than journalists made a sensation of Darwin's dry tomes.

The next charge we hear is that of untruthfulness, a very acrimonious word for the reason that it combines two words in its meaning; "accuracy" and "honesty." If you say to me that newspapers are inexact I will say "amen." If you will say they are dishonest, I will say their honesty is in the ratio of eleven out of twelve. To claim a higher ratio than that would seem presumptuous.

Accuracy is difficult of attainment. Last year I was one of five witnesses to an automobile accident. None of the witnesses had any personal interest, none meant to deceive. Their stories varied considerably and agreed on only one point—the street corner at which the accident took place. It so happened we were all mistaken as to that one statement, and upon cross-examination all realized and admitted the mistake.

Who has not been to a baseball game and seen men angry in denunciation of an umpire's decision? Prejudice. And even more aroused at strikes being called upon a favorite batter? Prejudice plus belief that their batter would not have let a good ball pass.

The reporter witnessing an event has but one pair of eyes, located in a certain position. To be sure the eyes are trained, and the position generally an excellent one for observation. But he may err and others may differ from him. It is not necessary to be wrong to be contradicted.

The majority of the happenings reported in newspapers do not occur before the reporter's eyes. He is forced to accept hearsay testimony and sift it without the right to compel witnesses or administer an oath.

Of course, liars do go into the reporting profession just as unworthy men enter other professions, but they eliminate themselves. The outbreak of the European war found American journalism unprepared, while the rival governments and generals placed every possible obstruction in the way of newspaper work. How well I remember the mushroom war correspondents that sprang up all over Europe, who presumed upon the ignorance of American editors upon European conditions and upon war. There was a heyday of sensation and, I will say, thrilling "eye-witness" stories, but as these stories one after the other proved their authors liars, the latter were discharged, disgraced by the profession they had offended.

And yet, newspaper writers are story-tellers and are subject to the temptation of all story-tellers. Perhaps newspaper men are naturally credulous. It may seem to their interest to be credulous. Believing and wanting to believe have an affinity. Against this tendency we have recently raised a defense—the school of journalism. It is teaching a technique and creating a code of ethics. Editors are called to lecture before the lasses. They find it congenial to describe their occupation in admirable light and then feel the obligation to live up to their description.

Another charge against newspapers is that they are controlled by their advertisers, a charge heartily subscribed to by unsuccessful journalists and echoed by whoever wishes, to weaken the reputation and influence of newspapers. It is as absurd as a number of false statements which by continued reiteration win a certain belief.

In yesterday's Chicago Tribune there were 12,306 separate advertisements, paid for by people of all religions and political beliefs. The largest advertiser in this newspaper last year produced 2.1 per cent of its advertising revenue. Assuming a willingness on the part of the advertiser to spend his money for political support rather than sales effect, and assuming cupidity on the part of the newspaper proprietor, how many advertisers with identical interests or the same political opinion would it take to justify a proprietor in ignoring the rest of his advertising clients, to say nothing of his readers, upon whom he as well as his advertisers depend for a living?

Shall I refer to the charge that news is distorted for ulterior purposes?

What ulterior purpose can you imagine a newspaper can have strong enough to induce it to adulterate the article it sells? Would you expect a milk company with millions of dollars invested in a collection and distribution system to put ipecac or prussic acid in the milk? As well expect us with our vast collection and distribution organization to poison our news. Mind you, the charge is not made that we water our news, but poison it. And news is our staple in trade.

There remains the editorial policy of the newspaper. Those policies vary widely and to some extent follow the public opinion in which they circulate.

* * *

As I have said, a newspaper is an entity, not a limb of a greater organization. Its editorials are the product of organization rather than the work of an individual. A single person would find the task of conducting a modern editorial page far too complex. There are, of course, paragraphers, literary Will Rogers, who cover the whole field of news with amusing comment, but not usefully.

The editorial page, however, must be the work of organization. In our own case this consists of the editors, three editorial writers, two political cartoonists, librarians and stenographers. The entire personnel of the newspaper is available for investigation and research.

Of the editorial writers one has been a lawyer, one a political reporter, one a college professor. Of the cartoonists one used to pitch professional baseball.

Editorial organization permits deliberation and discussion and ample time for writing, the day's work of a writer averaging seven hundred words, a small tax on a professional literary man. Six days a week there is an editorial conference lasting from one to three hours. The decision to take sides on a new question or one which has assumed new aspects is taken after much consideration and debate and when the accuracy of the view seems established.

An editorial page, therefore, has the benefit of a large amount of information hardly to be found elsewhere. A self contained unit, it expresses its own opinion, not that of a party, a bloc, a church or a class. It therefore must frequently be at variance with all parties, blocs, churches and classes, because they are from time to time or all the time at variance with each other.

Hence it is called demagogic by Dawes, aristocratic by LaFollette, capitalistic by the farmers, and sinful by churchmen.

The greatest importance of the newspaper comes from a function that has develved upon it, a function not mentioned in the Constitution and without which the Constitution could not continue to function. This is the exposure and denunciation of corruption in government.

Parties view with alarm all that the opposition does and point with pride toward or cover up all of their own performances.

Blocs ally themselves to any parties, groups or individuals who support their particular hobby with a callousness to common honesty that shocks hardened ward politicians.

Fortunately, corruption is important news. A paper that fails to print such news because of political affiliations or other reasons is seriously handicapped itself in its struggle for existence.

I am now led to give a final definition of the Newspaper:

A Newspaper is an instrument created by modern civilization to convey to the public the news of the day while promoting commerce through advertisements and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide.

ACCORDING TO COLONEL McCORMICK

A newspaper cannot be independent unless it earns its living.

Individually, most people rail at the newspapers of today. Collectively, they will not tolerate any other kind.

An editorial page has the benefit of a large amount of information hardly to be found elsewhere.

TEN FIRMS LISTED AS MILLION DOLLAR NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING ACCOUNTS

There Are Many Others No Doubt Says Bureau of Advertising In Issuing First Estimates of Outlays In Daily Press

THE Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association this week issued the first estimates ever made of the newspaper advertising appropriations of 62 large national advertisers. The figures, which cover the newspaper advertising expenditures of these firms in 1923, range between $1,700,000 and $100,000 and total about $27,000,000. Several months have been spent in the compilation.

"So far as the Bureau knows," its statement reads, "this is the first time a compilation of this sort has been made. Figures showing the appropriations of magazine advertisers have been published annually for a number of years. The many difficulties in the way of obtaining similar estimates in the newspaper field have been considered heretofore sufficient reason for not attempting the task.

"In deciding to undertake the work, the Bureau was actuated by the constantly growing demands of advertisers and agancies for data of this character. The Bureau has estimated with reasonable accuracy the total valume of national and local newspaper advertising, but the amounts spent by individual companies have remained something of a mystery.

"Wishing to help advertisers in every way to a better understanding of the newspaper medium, the Bureau believes its compilations will be welcomed as a new and important service.

"The Bureau believes the estimates given are generally accurate. It must be remembered that they represent only a small portion of the big list of national newspaper advertisers. While ten advertisers who spent $1,000,000 or more in 1923 are listed, there are many others in this class whose names do not appear.

"There are scores of others whose expenditures fall between the $1,000,000 mark and the minimum of $100,000, and then beyond this group there is the vast army of national or sectional advertisers who spend less than $100,000.

"The tabulation suggests that there is no fixed sum covering the cost of a general newspaper campaign. Some advertisers find it profitable to spend much; others accomplish their purpose by spending a little. A great deal depends upon the advertiser's merchandising plan and the number of markets in which he may find profitable business. But a study of the figures emphasizes the low cost of newspaper space, when it is remembered that so many products have become household words through newspaper advertising with what seem like surprisingly modest appropriations. This fact should become increasingly apparent as the Bureau is able to add to its list of estimates from time to time."

The Bureau's figures appear in the box on this page.

BROWN GOLDEN RULE CHAIRMAN

Heads A.A.C.W. Committee to Co-operate with Near East Relief

President Lou Holland, as the result of action taken at a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs, has appointed James Wright Brown, chairman of a special committee to co-operate with the Near East Relief in connection with obtaining the co-operation of advertising clubs and other advertising organizations, in the celebration of International Golden Rule Sunday, December 7.

Advertising clubs are asked immediately to appoint strong co-operative committees to get in touch with the local chairman of their Golden Rule Committee.

The Near East Relief has prepared a sort of trade mark, (advertising Golden Rule Sunday) which is being supplied to retailers and other advertisers and to many publications for use in connection with advertisements. Matrices and electrotypes have been supplied through a number of the advertising service companies dealing with retailers. This material will be sent to a club if the committee addresses John A. Goodell, organizing director, Golden Rule Sunday, Near East Relief, 151 Fifth avenue, New York.

Florists Approve Huge Ad Fund

The Pittsburgh, Pa., branch of the National Florists' Association has voted approval of a $2,000,000 newspaper advertising campaign, national in scope.

Column Contributions in Book

"The Line Book" a compilation of the best recent contributions to the "Line o' Type or Two" in the Chicago Tribune, conducted by Richard Henry Little, has made its appearance. The book has 64 pages.

Whatever China's troubles, its people don't have to fight over the question of Nordic superiority.—Beloit (Wis.) Daily News.

HERE ARE THEIR NEWSPAPER OUTLAYS FOR 1923

American Tobacco Company	$1,700,000
Lever Brothers Company	1,500,000
Standard Oil Company of Indiana	1,500,000
Victor Talking Machine Company	1,500,000
Calumet Baking Powder Company	1,200,000
Dodge Brothers	1,200,000
United States Rubber Company	1,110,000
Literary Digest	1,080,000
Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company	1,000,000
Wm. Wrigley, Jr. & Co.	1,000,000
Corn Products Refining Company	900,000
Pepsodent Company	800,000
Buick Motor Company	600,000
B. F. Goodrich Company	600,000
H. J. Heinz Company	600,000
Clicquot Club Company	550,000
Hupp Motor Car Corporation	530,000
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Inc.	525,000
Firestone Tire & Rubber Company	500,000
General Cigar Company	500,000
Hart, Schaffner & Marx	500,000
Sun-Maid Raisin Growers Association	485,000
Kellogg Company	450,000
Armstrong Cork Company	430,000
Colgate & Co.	430,000
Packard Motor Car Company	400,000
Proctor & Gamble Company	400,000
Quaker Oats Company	400,000
Chevrolet Motor Car Company	325,000
Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe R. R.	300,000
Cheek-Neal Coffee Company	300,000
Portland Cement Association	300,000
Union Pacific R. R. System	300,000
Franklin Automobile Company	285,000
Borden Sales Company, Inc.	265,000
Autostrop Safety Razor Company	250,000
International Magazine Company	250,000
Pompeian Laboratories	250,000
Southern Cotton Oil Trading Company	250,000
New York Central Lines	240,000
California Fruit Growers Exchange	240,000
Coca Cola Company	225,000
Eastman Kodak Company	225,000
Anheuser-Busch, Inc.	220,000
Simmons Company	205,000
Johns-Manville Company	200,000
Andrew Jergens Company	200,000
Hurley Machine Company	200,000
Alfred H. Smith (Djer-Kiss)	200,000
A. Stein & Co.	200,000
Pond's Extract Company	200,000
Vick Chemical Company	200,000
American Radiator Company	175,000
Famous Players-Lasky Corporation	165,000
B. Kuppenheimer & Company	150,000
Northern Pacific Railroad Company	150,000
Metropolitan Life Insurance Company	125,000
Edison Electric Appliance Company	115,000
Van Ess Laboratories, Inc.	115,000
Cacuum Oil Company	105,000
McCall's Magazine	100,000
Washburn-Crosby Company	100,000

W. A. WHITE DEFEATED

"Never Wanted to Be Governor," Says Emporia Gazette Editor

William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, who entered the Kansas gubernational race as an independent on an anti-Ku Klux Klan platform, was defeated by Ben S. Paulen, Republican.

"Naturally, I never wanted to be Governor or I would have gone about getting it in the regular way," said White in a statement issued Nov. 6.

"It was a beautiful adventure that I will always treasure in my heart," he said of his campaign, which was waged without manager or organization.

Printers' Home to Appoint Trustees

Two trustees will be elected for the Union Printers' Home, Colorado Springs, at a meeting of the board to be held Nov. 8. The men to be appointed are Steven O'Donnell of Colorado Springs, Col., and E. D. Ballentine of Newark, N. J. Vacancies were left on the board by the death of Thomas McCafferty, resident trustee, and election of Seth R. Brown, Los Angeles, as vice-president of the International Typographical Union.

Another "Nick Carter" Writer Dead

Eugene T. Sawyer, 78, who died in San Jose, Oct. 29, was a writer of "Nick Carter" stories, more than 300 of them being credited to his pen. In his work on the "Nick Carter" series, Sawyer was associated with Thomas C. Harbaugh, who died recently in the county infirmary at Piqua, Ohio, after an illness of eighteen years.

Woman Buys Paper

Betty Wright, who has been editor and manager of the Hilmar (Cal.) Enterprise for a year has bought the newspaper. The four newspapers in Hilmar and Turlock, within five miles of each other, are each owned by a woman, and with one exception, edited by women.

Publisher's Wife Dies

Mrs. Nellie Lynett, wife of E. J. Lynett, publisher of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, died Nov. 5, after an illness of a year. Besides Mr. Lynett, two sons, William R., assistant to the publisher of the Times, Edward Jr., and one daughter, Elizabeth, survive.

Intertype Issues Booklet

Intertype Corporation has recently issued an illustrated booklet in two colors explaining the advantages of a standardized slug casting machine. It can be obtained on request from the offices of the Corporation, 50 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Nov. 14-15—Iowa Press Assn., Southern District, fall meeting, University of Iowa, Iowa City.

Nov. 14—Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Assn., annual convention, Toronto.

Nov. 16-20—New England Advertising Clubs, annual convention, Hartford, Conn.

Nov. 17-19—Association of National Advertisers, annual convention, Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City.

Nov. 17-19—Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity, national convention, University of Indiana, Bloomington, Ind.

Nov. 19-20—National Forestry Conference, Washington, D. C.

Nov. 20-22—Michigan University Press Assn., annual fall session, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Nov. 20—Pacific Coast and Inter-Mountain Newspaper Executives, second annual meeting, San Francisco.

Nov. 20-22—Michigan League of Home Dailies, fall meeting, Ypsilanti, Mich.

Editorial Excellence a Mark of The Detroit News

The Literary Digest for October 25, 1924

TOPICS IN BRIEF

(An extension of this department appears weekly on the screen as "Ears from the Press")

17

That seat that will end all seats will not be bought or sold.—Columbia Record.

If La Follette expected to be elected he would make fewer promises.—Toledo Blade.

Now the straw vote, but the wheat vote is the more important.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Giraffes used to be green with envy. Now they are merely tall and not much more.—Asheville Times.

WOMAN'S watchful waiting ... Pictures and Pinafores ... Horizontal line out. —Baltimore American.

The sum of Dr. Valk is excuses to be made.—Portland Oregonian.

You can tell China is a republic. They're not trying to save her.—New Republic.

The Chinese are now at it hammer and tongs.—Florida Times-Union.

Reverses are people who would thank you nothing to get it.—Boston Herald.

They are planning La Follette a birthday party. But there is no cake with the paint.—Columbia Record.

It's a good idea to kiss the children goodnight, if you don't mind waiting 16 years.—Pittsburgh Post.

If some almost unbelievable thing happens and nothing like the Zeppelin ever hey during the campaign.—New York Herald Tribune.

A lot of people will be unhappy in heaven when they find out there aren't institutes and prisons and passing laws.—Columbia Record.

Many mansions please—but are not to be compared with the clothed in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day.—Detroit News.

Fifty-thousand-dollar mansions for sale by a church, was our first truthful surprise.—Detroit News.

What this campaign needs is a message from Albert B. Fall.—Detroit News.

Do plants suffer? asks Tue Literary Digest. We'd say a good question for them to put on their Intelligence Department.—Detroit News.

Jack Dempsey is demonstrating the futility of fisty- ... And it's particularly unfortunate when it's in the other fellow's face.—Detroit News.

A New Jersey humorist gets fined $100 for trying to be funny. Judge Oberwager is a humorist, too, in his way.—Detroit News.

The Government is operated on a system of "checks and balances," but in the people put up the checks and the special interests get the balances.—Columbia Record.

A magazine suggests that Americans should boost home-made liquor. Here is a good chance to die for your country.—Fort Worth Press.

[illegible] Ears at the speed at which light travels. The ears are a lot of film stars like that, too.—Detroit News.

Now that a dispatch from Moscow says Trotsky has been [illegible] that much of it ought to be true.—W. G. McAdoo.

Few babies are born with a silver spoon in their mouths. They started the overproduction.—Columbia Record.

The common people who are [illegible] will be glad to [illegible] recommend [illegible] before we read about —Columbia Record.

Thus is the hatchet buried.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ask dad; he knows.—Boston Post.

It's rather fine, this willingness of the candidates to say, [illegible] another [illegible] the country from one end to the other.—Cleveland Leader.

The way to keep audiences at political meetings from getting sleepy is to stop bleeding in the old bunk.—Nashville Tennessean.

Politicians who promise to save the farmer always make the condition that the farmer is to save them first.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

The man who whistles [illegible] professional [illegible] never [illegible] the [illegible] hand, the Victrola.—Detroit News.

Ease the good name of the world was [illegible] more about the human race than we found about the Martians.—Columbia Record.

Now that a [illegible] invented [illegible] heat [illegible] —Columbia Record.

THE POLITICAL BIRD WATCHER
—Chicago Tribune.

THE issue of the Literary Digest of October 25, a page of which is reproduced here, contained six quotations from The Detroit News including the reproduction of a cartoon by Thomas. The following week, The Literary Digest reprinted a dozen paragraphs from The Detroit News and two of its political cartoons. It is this very editorial excellence which has locally won for it the great circulation and reader interest which makes The News the greatest advertising medium in Michigan and largest carrier of advertising lineage in America.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Weekday or Sunday in Michigan

THRIFT WEEK OFFERS OPPORTUNITY FOR LARGE EXTRA LINEAGE

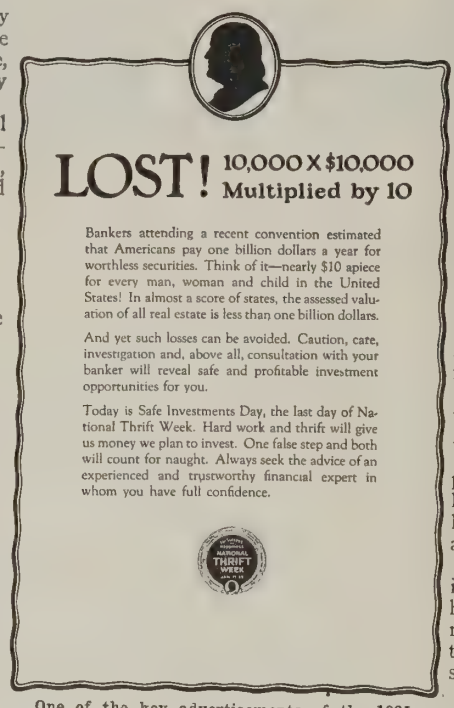
1924 Figures from Many Newspapers Indicate Business Firms Backed Week Liberally—Indorsed by Many National Organizations

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

PLANS are being completed rapidly by small and large newspapers to make Thrift Week, 1925, an event of large, extra lineage and distinct local community interest.

Even last January's considerable total volume of advertising obtained is expected to be exceeded from Saturday, Jan. 17, through Friday, Jan. 23, based on the following line-up of dates:

Saturday, Jan. 17—Pay Bills Day.
Sunday, 18.—Share with Others Day.
Monday, 19—Thrift or Bank Day.
Tuesday, 20—Life Insurance Day.
Wednesday, 21—Own Your Own Home Day.
Thursday, 22—Budget Day.
Friday, 23—Safe Investment Day.



A new feature this January will be Safe Investment Day, which has been arranged because of the millions lost in fake stocks. It tunes in with the advertising program being launched by the Investment Bankers of America and, it is thought, should make every reliable financial house, bank, building and loan association and similar institution prospect for solicitation for extra liberal space on this day.

Signs point to keener interest this year on the part of Building and Loan Associations, of which there are over 10,000 with 3,000,000 members. Advertising on their part will prove appropriate in particular on Thrift or Bank Day, Own Your Own Home Day and Safe Investment Day. Such associations have been backward in using newspaper advertising as extensively as they should, but once awakened should yield much high grade lineage. In a previous article EDITOR & PUBLISHER has shown the great strides one such institution made under a far-visioned executive with an advertising sense.

John A. Goodell, executive secretary of the National Thrift Week committee, 347 Madison ave., New York City, met recently with the representatives of the various advertising mat services. These on January releases plan to devote increased attention to thrift week appeals. In addition, the committee will have ready a complete series of mats, one for each day, prepared without charge by Edwin Bird Wilson, New York advertising agency, late this month or early in December. These mats may be obtained from Thrift Week headquarters or through the local Y.M.C.A.

With endorsements of organizations which include, among others, the American Bankers Association, the American Red Cross, the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, the Jewish Welfare Board, the Kiwanis Club—International, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Federal Council of Churches, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts and International Rotary Clubs, newspaper publishers as a whole have concluded this at least, out of the various "national weeks" attempted, presents a real editorial and business office opportunity which go closely together.

A phase of Thrift Week which has appealed to many publishers is that its various days give the staff solicitors forcible ammunition to bring to bear on many types of firms which seldom use space. In addition to building and loan associations, it enables the men to line up co-operative banks, savings banks, trust companies and commercial banks, insurance agents, manufacturers, retail merchants of all kinds, credit groups, welfare organizations, reliable stock and bond houses, churches and real estate operators. The thrift movement plays up wise spending as well as wise saving. The slogan is "For success and happiness". The small country weekly as well as the big city daily can find ways to adapt the idea to local conditions.

One of the key advertisements of the 1925 Thrift Campaign.

The Macon (Ga.) News last January sold 5,684 lines. This included a full page bought by the Macon Retail Credit Men's Association and space used by banks.

Eight more pages than usual were used on Jan. 17, by the Wilmerding (Pa.) News-Tribune in connection with the local Y.M.C.A. The newspaper printed articles previous to the 18th and in this edition. About 480 single column inches were netted in advertising. The Oklahoma City (Okla.) Oklahoma News, obtained about 400 inches through special pages.

"Our paper obtained 2,632 lines of special Thrift Week advertising, including one full page, which was paid for by the Spokane Life Underwriters' Association", reports Earl Smith, advertising manager, the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review. "This is business which we would not have secured except upon some special plan such as National Thrift Week offers. In our opinion National Thrift Week is an institution worth fostering".

The Trenton (N. J.) State Gazette, published a news item each day and a streamer across the bottom of page one. On Jan. 17, it published 2,212 lines of advertising, on the 18th, 2,114, on the 19th 2,009, on the 21st, 2,121 lines, on the 22nd, 2,800 lines, and the 23rd, 1,582, making a total of 12,838 lines during the week.

The Niagara Falls (N. Y.) Niagara Falls Gazette, sold 4,000 extra lines, the Van Wert (O.) Times 6,000 lines, the St. Paul Daily Volkszeitung 1,500 lines, and the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press, obtained substantial added lineage, to cite just a few.

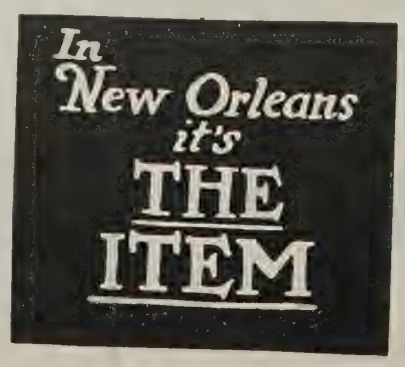
The Easton (Pa.) Express sold a total of 14,952 lines. Five full pages were bought by the banks of Easton and Phillipsburg, which lies the other side of the Delaware River, each bank paying an equal share for representation.

The secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Ansonia, Conn., directed the selling of display advertising on Thrift and the Ansonia Evening Sentinel, published by Emerson Brothers, ran two advertisements of 30 inches each free.

The day before Thrift Week opened, the Galveston (Tex.) Tribune, published a page of advertisements of local merchants and manufacturers. On National Thrift Day, the banks had a page of individual advertisements. Local life insurance agents and concerns paid for a full page on Life Insurance Day. Fifteen firms, mostly realtors, jointly shared the cost of a page on Own Your Own Home Day. Doctors and other public-spirited citizens financed a page on Share with Others Day. On Budget Day, various firms, including a dentist, a business college, a credit jewelry company, an electric company, a phonograph store and an insurance man bought advertisements. Net result of the week—10,600 lines.

Interviews with prominent citizens were run daily by the Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise and Journal.

The advertising managers of both newspapers at Meriden, Conn., sat in with the local Thrift Week Committee and helped line up five different groups for special advertisements.



"The main idea in selling this advertising is to go to the prospect and show him that here is a national campaign running throughout the country during this particular period to increase new savings accounts, etc.," says Wilson M. Brooks, advertising manager of the Danville (Va.) News. "The first page we ran had only four spaces open to sell and was sold within an hour."

"We started our campaign ten days in advance of Thrift Week, using several editorials and news articles to create interest, following up with a solicitation of bankers, insurance men, merchants, contractors, tradesmen, etc.", explains the Leader Publishing Company of Staunton, Va. "Our advertising was built around the official Thrift Week advertisements furnished by the Y.M.C.A. and material furnished by our advertising service. Before the week opened, we had a large volume of additional advertising accepted. We could have sold more, had we had the facilities to handle it, as interest increased in Thrift Week, due to advance work, the appearance of the first ads, and editorials and interviews on each day's subject."

The Hartford Courant sold 23,940 lines of special advertising including two double trucks on Budget Day and Own Your Own Home Day, two full pages on National Thrift Day, a page on Pay Your Bills Day, one on Share With Others Days and one on Make A Will Day, plus four or five miscellaneous thrift advertisements.

The Toledo Blade is thought to have won top place last January on total lineage, which, incidentally, included a full page contributed by local theatres for Share With Others Day and a strong showing on the building and loan association idea.

The sentiment of publishers seems to be that National Thrift Week is taking its place as a permanent event which will yield extra advertising in an "off month" and at the same time benefit the community.

Major B. H. Namm hits the nail on the head.

Home Owners

¶ The United States has more home owners than any other country. ++

¶ Over six million families here are not subject to the whims of the landlord. ++

¶ And this is a great factor in the content of the American people. ++

¶ When a man owns property in a country or stock in a company for which he works, there is a deeper interest and a closer bond. ++

¶ 90,000 Brooklynites own their homes. ++

¶ Hence their interest in the development of this borough. They live here, own property here and shop here. ++

B. H. N.

Oct. 14, 1924.

¶ The advertising pages of the A. I. Namm & Son department store carry from day to day an editorial written with much care by the head of that firm.

¶ This one particularly is worthy of National reproduction.

¶ It is significant that the daily circulation of the Standard Union rapidly approaches the number of Brooklynites who own their own homes.

A. I. Namm
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

EDITOR'S LIFE THREATENED, BUT HE LIVES

Graphic Chief Gets Murder Note and Mysterious Telephone Calls— Seven Days Come and Go Without Action

"Crooks to Murder Editor in Seven Days!"

Old time turbulent newspaper adventure seems to have jumped back into Manhattan, after a long period of calm.

At least so the New York Evening Graphic would have its growing list of readers believe, when it decorated its tabloid front page with this sensational threat headline recently.

And Emile Gauvreau, the Evening Graphic's managing editor, object of the threat, stands by his newspaper's slogan "Nothing But the Truth."

"Newspaper adventure in New York is turbulent," he declares.

The "seven days" have come and gone and Gauvreau still lives. But he admits a week attended by slight nervousness, following receipt of an anonymous letter, which gave him seven days to live, the story of which ran under the heading at the beginning of this story.

Gauvreau traces probable origin of the letter back to a group of illicit cotton brokers against whom he directed the power of his newspaper, New York's infant tabloid.

The Graphic early last month started an exclusive expose of conditions in the cotton market. The public, it found, was being mulcted of millions of dollars by illicit brokers.

The newspaper's reporter-investigators were put to work after the Graphic obtained the first story of a death threat sent Louis Brooks, chairman of the committee of business conditions, of the New York Cotton Exchange. The letter came presumably from members of a bucket shop gang.

The Graphic, under Gauvreau's orders, immediately started further probe.

Then came the anonymous letter addressed to the editor of the Graphic. The newspaper has reason to believe it originated with the same clique which threatened the life of Brooks.

The letter, typed on a Western Union telegram blank through a sheet of black carbon paper, follows:

"Keep your hands off the fight against the autocrats of the Cotton Exchange if you don't want trouble. We have laid up one of them and we will take care of you later. We can do the same to your shop as we will do to their structure. Money won't save them or you if you don't lay off. You are up against men who mean business. See that you print no more lies. 'Seven-Three?'"

In addition to the letter Gauvreau was treated to other thrills, he says. Every day for a week, his telephone would ring and a voice would tell him:

"You have just six days to live," or "just five days" and so on, down to the final day.

Bernarr Macfadden, the Graphic's owner, wanted his editor guarded by detectives, but Gauvreau refused.

"I didn't worry a great deal," he said to the writer this week. "A threatened man, I think, is always safe. If one's enemies are going to shoot, they don't tell about it beforehand."

As a result of evidence, obtained by the Graphic, A. H. Jackson, chairman of the directors of the Southern Cotton Exchange, and F. Donovan Darby, secretary and treasurer, of the same organization, were subpœned and in secret sessions recently testified before Supreme Court Justice Guy in New York.

The story has not yet ended. Despite death threats, according to Gauvreau, the Graphic is continuing its investigations and expects developments shortly, which will end bucketshop activities among certain cotton traders.

McCullagh Returns from Russia

Capt. Francis McCullagh, war correspondent, and former special writer for the old New York Herald, arrived in New York this week on the Saxonia from Liverpool. He lived six years in Moscow and Leningrad, while under the Soviet regime, and comes to this country to deliver a series of lectures on "Bolshevik Persecution of Christianity." Also on the Saxonia was Christopher Morely, former columnist on the New York Evening Post, now writing for the Saturday Review of Literature, who has spent six months in Normandy with his family.

TUCSON STAR SOLD

Matthews and Ellinwood Assume Control of Arizona's Oldest Daily

Sales of the Tucson (Arizona) Daily Star by the Phelps Dodge Corporation to W. R. Matthews, formerly business manager of the Santa Barbara (Cal.) Morning Press and R. E. Ellinwood of Tucson was announced Oct. 31, by P. G. Beckett, general manager of the corporation.

All stock of the State Consolidating Publishing Company is equally owned by the new publishers who assumed charge of the plant on Nov. 1.

The sale marks the fifth ownership of the Star, the oldest daily newspaper in Arizona, since its founding in 1877. Mathews becomes general manager, Ellinwood, editor.

Folsom Moore, former manager, returns to Bisbee as manager of the Bisbee Daily Review while Chester A. Johnson, former editor, is to devote his entire time to writing.

REPORT DES MOINES NEWS SOLD

Gossip That Cowles Will Merge It with the Tribune

A report as in circulation late this week that the DesMoines News, a Scripps-Howard newspaper at DesMoines, Ia., had been sold.

There was gossip that the property had been acquired by Gardner and John Cowles, for merger with their Des Moines Tribune.

No confirmation of these reports could be obtained on Friday, but it was said that a statement might be expected on Saturday or Monday.

"Perfect" Batteries Sold

Perfect batteries do not exist, despite the enticing assurances of some advertisers, the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World reported this week following a probe of advertising put out by battery concerns. Cases of deceptive battery advertising were reported by Better Business Bureaus and investigated by the Vigilance Committee. Firms responsible promptly corrected errors in their advertising copy, the committee says.

Brooke Leaves Toronto Globe

Bertram R. Brooke has resigned as promotion manager of the Toronto Globe and has purchased the interest of W. A. Lydiatt in Marketing Publishers, Limited, Toronto, becoming president of the publication, Marketing, with first issue for November. Mr. Brooke was formerly vice-president and business manager of Marketing, prior to which he was advertising manager of the Regina (Sask.) Leader and promotion manager of the Winnipeg Free Press. Marketing is an advertising publication, issued bi-monthly.

EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

When Petey Dink is left out —they ask for him

Ask The Hartford Courant and The Fort Wayne News Sentinel.

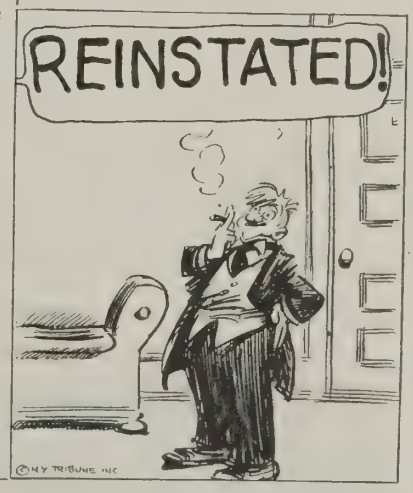
More than 100 newspapers have printed Petey for years.

Petey Dink Is Back Again!

Petey Dink is back.

After an absence of almost a year he has consented to once more join The Tennesseean's famous family of comic strip notables.

Petey makes his bow to his old friends today on the daily page of comics, along with such notables as Otey Walker, Freckles and Rudy Nebb.



This time he is here to stay, in response to an insistent demand.

The adventures of Petey are born of the brain and pen of C. A. Voight, one of the world's greatest comic strip artists, who has a clean, pleasing brand of humor that is contagious.

Watch for Petey daily in the evening edition of The Tennesseean.

—and now

The Nashville Tennesseean prints this on the front page:

How many of your comics will stand such a test?

The New York Herald Tribune Syndicate

PITTSBURGH PAPERS' CO-OPERATIVE WORK EXTENDED TO NEW FIELDS

Joint Outdoor Advertising Campaign Started by Five Papers Which Also Experiment With Joint News Stands and Delivery

THE daily newspapers of Pittsburgh, acting through the Pittsburgh Publishers' Association, have decided upon a co-operative campaign to advertise newspaper advertising which is believed to be the first experiment of its kind in newspaper history.

On a large number of sign boards which have already been contracted for, the following will be painted.

"NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
PAYS IN PITTSBURGH
WHERE PROSPERITY BEGINS."

The arrangement, being co-operative, has no provision for the use of the name of any newspaper and the plan can be accepted as a general boost for newspaper advertising.

Another experiment is now in process of development. Some thousand or more news stands have been placed at important points of distribution over the city and surrounding territory for the convenience of the public. Heretofore these stands have been furnished by the individual newspaper but a recent arrangement has been made wherein they are to be owned jointly by all of the newspapers and in the future they will be so maintained.

Under the new arrangement the words "Pittsburgh Daily Newspapers" and "Newspaper Advertising Pays" will supplant the names of the individual newspaper.

Another experiment, co-operative delivery of newspapers to the stands, is now being tried, and if successful will result in one of the greatest economic systems ever attempted, the publishers believe. The morning newspapers are being delivered to important points in the city by the same motor truck. The plan that is being worked out is to have the truck of one newspaper take on its load for a given route and then drive to the plant of its contemporary and take on the papers necessary to cover the same route, thus saving duplication of truck delivery. Schedules will be arranged as rapidly as possible fixing a given time of arrival at a stated point so that excessive speeding will not be necessary. For the time being this plan is confined to the morning newspapers but should it prove successful it likely will be extended to the afternoon field.

The members of the Pittsburgh Newspaper Publishers Association are the Chronicle Telegraph, Press, Sun in the afternoon field, and the Gazette Times and Post in the morning field. These newspapers a few months ago purchased the Pittsburgh Dispatch and the Pittsburgh Leader and retired them from the field. Healthy co-operation in an effort to eliminate destructive and wasteful competition is practiced to a greater extent in Pittsburgh than in any other city in the country, the publishers state.

MELLON AND BLAIR CITED

Injunction Sought Against Publication of Income Tax Returns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, and David H. Blair, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, have been cited by Justice Hoehling, of the District Supreme Court, to show cause November 14 why they should not be enjoined from publishing or from making available for publication the figures contained in the income tax return of Gorham Hubbard, of Boston, Mass.

The rule of the court is based on a petition filed by Hubbard this week in which he claims that the provision of the income tax law permitting publication of returns is in violation of the constitutional rights of privacy of the citizens and violates the Fourth Amendment, which assures citizens against unlawful search and seizure.

GERMAN EDITOR A SUICIDE

Hans Hackel of St. Louis West-Liche Post Feared Breakdown

On the verge of a nervous breakdown, caused by the extra effort and anxieties incident to the election, Hans Hackel, 56 years old, editor and publisher of the St. Louis West-Liche Post, a German language paper, ended his life by gas in the kitchen of his home last Sunday night. "The work has been too much of a strain on me," he wrote to his wife.

Hackel strongly urged the election of President Coolidge as against the Stueben Society and other German-American organizations and leaders who favored the candidacy of La Follette. Because of this, he received many letters of abuse, according to his son, Carl Hackel, manager of the West-Liche Post steamship agency.

Hackel was born in Germany. He came to the United States as a young man. He enlisted as a private in battery A during the Spanish-American War, and because of his unusual letters from the front to the West-Liche Post he was given employment as a reporter when he was mustered out of the service in 1899. He became city editor of the paper in 1907, managing editor in 1914 and president in 1919.

SPIEGELMAN NAMED EDITOR

Former Warsaw Newspaper Man Joins N. Y. Jewish Bulletin

William Z. Spiegelman has been appointed editor of the New York Jewish Daily Bulletin, a tabloid printed in English, which began publication Oct. 15.

Spiegelman started his journalistic career in Warsaw, where he was city editor of the Jewish daily Der Moment. He has been a contributor and collaborator of the Haolom, a Hebrew weekly now published in Berlin, the Hazefirah, which formerly appeared in Warsaw, and other journals.

For two years he was editor of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency in London.

Montague Joins Herald Tribune Staff

Richard Montague, son of James J. Montague, conductor of the syndicated column of poetry and comment "More Truth Than Poetry," has joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune as reporter. Montague was formerly a reporter on the staff of the New York Sun, and more recently was connected with the Herald Tribune's London bureau.

Copy Course Opens

The Graduate Copy Course of eight lectures, being given by the Advertising Club of New York under the [illegible]on of Charles Austin Bates, opened Monday evening, November 3, with a talk on "Letters, Correspondence, Direct Mail," by John Howie Wright, editor of Postage. Harry Varley is manager of the class.

DAILIES LAUNCH RADIO FUND FOR BLIND

N. Y. Herald Tribune Starts Nation Wide Campaign Organized by Radio Assn. and Foundation for the Blind

Working in co-operation with the American Radio Association and the American Foundation for the Blind, newspapers of the nation this week launched a drive to place a radio receiving set in every home throughout the United States where there is a needy blind person.

Start of the campaign was announced in New York by the New York Herald Tribune. Other newspapers in the United States will co-operate with this movement, carrying the campaign in their columns. A detailed report of all money received by these newspapers will be prepared by Prince, Waterhouse & Co., who have agreed to audit the campaign free of charge.

All money raised will be collected into a national fund and spent under authority of the radio advisory committee on which the Herald Tribune, the American Foundation for the Blind and the American Radio Association will be represented.

Alfred M. Caddell, organizer and secretary of the American Radio Association, which comprises in its membership more than 150 radio editors throughout the United States and listeners-in in every state of the Union, conceived the plan of the campaign.

The American Foundation for the Blind is the national organization of organizations which work for the betterment of the nation's blind.

GRAVURE SECTIONS PRINTED
Special and Regular Editions, Magazine Inserts and Commercial Work.
Standard Gravure Corporation
LOUISVILLE, KY.

MORNING PAPERS THE GET ACTION SAME DAY
LAST REMINDER!
ON OUR Christmas Shopping Number
Artgravure Section
SUNDAY, DECEMBER SEVENTH
FORMS CLOSE TIGHT NOVEMBER 20TH
This feature issue, beyond all shadow of doubt, is the most widely read issue of the year; and as for coverage—well, it goes to every person in the Cincinnati market.
Wire Reservations Now
I. A. KLEIN Chicago New York
R. J. BIDWELL CO. 742 Market Street San Francisco
The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER
One of the World's Greatest Newspapers

AUTO CRASH FATAL TO MISSOURI PUBLISHER

George A. McClellan, St. Joseph Gazette, Dies Nov. 5, Following Injuries Received When Car Leaves Road —Bought Newspaper May, 1923

George A. McClellan, publisher of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette died the evening of Nov. 5, in St. Joseph. Death was caused from injuries received when his automobile plunged from the road and crashed into a fence Sunday, Nov. 2.

G. A. McClellan

Mr. McClellan purchased controlling interest in the Gazette in May, 1923, assuming full control four months later. He moved to St. Joseph from New York, where for six years previously he was publisher and part owner of Today's Housewife.

Prior to that he was general manager of the Star League of Indiana, publishing the Indianapolis Star, the Muncie Star, and Terre Haute Star. He became part owner and publisher of the Indianapolis Times and publisher and owner of the Dayton (O.) Journal and the Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis.

Miller, London Editor, Dies

Frederick Miller, 61, managing editor of the London Daily Telegraph, died in London, Nov. 5, from pneumonia, following a chill contracted last week. He joined the staff of the Telegraph in 1883. In 1900 he advanced from chief sub-editor to assistant managing editor, holding the latter position 23 years. He was appointed managing editor in June, 1923, upon the retirement of Sir John E. Sage.

Obituary

EDWIN C. R. HUMPHRIES, newspaper reporter and lawyer died last week in Washington, D. C. He was at one time connected with the Washington Post and later the Washington Evening Star covering courts. He studied law and about 5 years ago was admitted to the bar.

WALTER SCOTT, 84, one of the pioneer printers of the Providence (R. I.) Evening Bulletin and later connected with the Providence Morning Star, died Oct. 28.

C. F. LECOMPTE, one of the oldest newspaper men in Iowa, for 62 years associated with the Corydon (Ia.) Times-Republican, died Oct. 27 in his home after a brief illness.

CHARLES W. WEISER, 60, one of the best known newspaper men in Pennsylvania died at his home in Fullerton, Pa., Nov. 2. For many years he was active in the editorial department of the Allentown Call and Allentown Record.

J. W. HALE, editor and owner of the New Berlin (Ill.) Tribune, died recently.

THOMAS A. KAVANAGH, veteran make-up man and printer on the Boston Traveler-Herald died recently at his home in Boston.

GUY MCGREER, 53, proofreader on the San Diego (Cal.) Union, died recently from pneumonia.

London Post Editor Ends U. S. Visit

Sir Percy Bates of the London Morning Post, who has been visiting in this country, returned to England this week on the Berengaria. He told ship news reporters before leaving that he could see no parallel between the United States and British elections. Washington, from the European standpoint has always been an "incalculable quantity," he said.

TORONTO SUNDAY WORLD SOLD

Merged With Weekly Edition of the Toronto Star

The Toronto Sunday World, published at the week-end by the Toronto Mail and Empire, has been purchased by the Toronto Star and will be amalgamated with the Toronto Star Weekly. The Sunday World was established originally by the Toronto World. When the latter was taken over some years ago by the Mail and Empire, the Sunday edition was continued under the old name.

Terms of the sale have not been announced and parties to the deal decline to divulge figures. The Star Weekly will take over best of the World features but will not absorb any of World staff. The World has circulation of about 70,000.

The World was started 34 years ago by W. F. McLean, publisher of the Daily World as a Sunday paper. Legislation later prevented its sale on Sunday but it retained its name and was circulated Saturday evening. For years it had hard struggle but eventually became source of profit and financial strength to the Daily World attaining circulation of over 100,000, when absorbed by the Mail and Empire it was retained by purchasers as profitable property. The Star Weekly was launched by the Daily Star as week end paper in 1910.

Tabloid to Become Daily

The Toronto News-Mirror, tabloid newspaper, hitherto issued weekly, will shortly become a daily publication, it has been announced.

Saved N. Y. Telegram from Oblivion

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 1, 1924.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—I noticed that a recent issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER carried a full page advertisement of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail, containing picture of H.R.H. Prince of Wales, reading the Telegram.

It pleased as well as interested me to note the circulation quoted at over 220,000. But I wondered how many of its readers of today knew that but for the writer there would have been no Evening Telegram published over 30 years past.

In 1888, Mr. Bennett had decided to discontinue the Telegram as it was then a losing proposition. But before doing so he gave me the management to see if I could revive the paper. The circulation had dropped to 10 or 12 thousand and the advertising to less than two columns daily. I took charge in November, 1888, and in the following spring the circulation had increased to between 30 and 40 thousand and advertising 20 to 25 columns daily—according to my recollection.

It never went back again, but continued to prosper also under good management after I had resigned on account of poor health, about 1900, from both the business management of the Herald and Telegram. During the late war at Mr. Bennett's request I went to Paris to reorganize the Paris edition of the Herald, after which I returned to New York again as general manager, resigning again later on to come to California.

ALBERT FOX.

If our creditors will practice strict economy they soon will save as much as they have lost on us.—Milwaukee Journal.

First nine months of 1924

Carried more Men's Wear advertising than the World and Sun combined.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

Fifty Years of Service

DURING the month of June the Mirror Printing Co., publishers of the Altoona Mirror, passed their fiftieth milestone in the newspaper profession. It has been fifty years of continual service to the general public and to our advertisers.

During this time we have built a circulation of 27,579. This circulation comes from a population of 115,000 people, who are voluntary subscribers to this newspaper. No premiums were ever offered nor were there any inducements for over-night subscribers. People bought the Altoona Mirror because it was the kind of a newspaper they wanted, clean and up-to-the-minute at all times.

Not only have its columns been kept clean from a news standpoint, but the publishers of the Altoona Mirror have refused all advertising that was not up to a high standing and in accord with the policy of the publishers.

Advertisers locally use the columns of the Altoona Mirror almost exclusively to put their message across. National advertisers seem to have just as much confidence as the merchants at home, realizing that to cover this territory thoroughly, it is necessary for them to buy space in Altoona's leading newspaper, "The Altoona Mirror."

MIRROR PRINTING CO., Publishers

Altoona Mirror

ALTOONA, PA.

Business Direct.

LA FOLLETTE CHARGES DAILY WITH LIBEL

Enters $100,000 Suit Against Seattle Times for Publication of Excerpt from Noted St. Paul War Speech

Alleging publication of "false, defamatory, and libelous matter," a suit for $100,000 damages was filed in the federal court of Seattle, Oct. 31, against the Times Printing Company, publishers of the Seattle (Wash.) Daily Times, on behalf of United States Senator Robert M. La Follette.

The complaint was filed by Attorney Edgar C. Snyder, secretary of the Washington State Progressive Committee, and Attorney W. D. Lane.

Excerpts from an article appearing in the Sunday Times of Oct. 19 are made the basis of the suit. The particular language excepted to, as set forth in paragraph 4 of the complaint, follows:

"The speech by La Follette at St. Paul, to which reference is made in the above excerpt, contains these phrases:

'I wasn't in favor of beginning this war. We had no grievance. The German Government had interfered with our right to travel on the high seas. . . . On these grievances, which were insignificant considering the rights and consequences involved, we went to war.'"

The article in question purported to quote from a speech delivered by Senator La Follette at St. Paul on Nov. 20, 1917, according to the complaint.

What La Follette in fact had said, the complaint sets forth, was: "I don't mean to say that we hadn't suffered grievances; we had—at the hands of Germany. Serious grievances."

"As the defendant well knows," it is further alleged, "it was republishing a false and incorrect report of the plaintiff's said speech as given out by the Associated Press at the time, and knew that the Associated Press had retracted said statement and publication in the following language:

"'The error was regrettable, and the Associated Press seizes the first opportunity to do justice to Senator La Follette.'"

Attorney Snyder, following the appearance of the Times' article, notified Senator La Follette and was authorized to take any action deemed advisable. The present suit is the outcome.

CHURCHES SHOULD ADVERTISE

Lutheran Group Reports Paid Space Effective in Church Work

"Churches should avail themselves of every opportunity to reach the public through newspaper publicity or advertising," was the report made by the committee on publicity at the convention of the United Lutheran Church in America held recently at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago.

"The Lutheran churches have found publicity and advertising proper aids in prosecuting their work nationally and locally," the report declared, "and the public press has come to attach a growing value to church activities as news for their leaders. Paid advertising has become invaluable to a considerable number of local churches."

Chicago Associations to Meet

Members of the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, the Advertising men's Post of the American Legion, American Association of Advertising Agencies, Newspaper Representatives Association, the Agate Club, the Women's Advertising Club and the National Aeronautic Association will hold a joint pre-Armistice Day luncheon meeting on Monday, Nov. 10, in the Tiger Room of the Hotel Sherman. Guests of honor will be the world flyers, Gen. James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, Richard Henry Little, column conductor for the Chicago Tribune, and distinguished military men.

Washington Reporter to Wed

The engagement of John Aloysius Kennedy of the Washington (D. C.) Herald staff to Miss Viera Hines, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank T. Hines has been announced. The wedding will take place Nov. 19, in Washington. Kennedy was one of the leaders in exposing conditions in the Veterans' Bureau which led to the dismissal and indictment of Director Charles R. Forbes during the Harding administration.

Woman Editor to Marry

Miss May Kerrigan, former editor of the Bootle Times, British publication, sailed from New York Friday on the steamship Munamar for the Bahamas, where she will be married to Cyril Morton, manager of the Nassau Guardian. Miss Kerrigan recently arrived from Liverpool where a play of hers was produced.

FLASHES

If violent exercise is essential to health, how does the turtle hang up his records for longevity?—Baltimore Sun.

A third party may be all right in politics, but when it comes to courtship that is different.—Chicago Daily News.

One kind of patching the modern girl knows about is patching auto tires.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Eskimo wives, says a returned Arctic explorer, often are traded. Civilized nations wouldn't think of using so harsh a word.—Detroit Free Press.

—"It is a pleasure to greet this multitude of representative and intelligent people" usually means: "Howdy, suckers."—Baltimore Sun.

There are any number of things which appear to be wholly impracticable until we have tried them.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Many a flame is started by the flicker of an eyelid.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

Report says the Prince of Wales wears just what he likes. But he will be married some day, like the rest of us.—New York American.

Imagine the consternation were creditors to adopt radio broadcasting the first of every month.—Detroit Free Press.

True religion is the kind that makes you love people after you no longer need them.—Baltimore Sun.

John Barleycorn was staged to sing his swan-song years ago—since which time he has been constantly engaged singing encores.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

The ZR-3 deserves praise. She let off her gas without boring anybody.—Baltimore Sun.

1890:—Wine, women and song. 1924:—Moonshine, flappers and static.—New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

There is a movement on foot to raise the levels of all highways so automobile tourists can see over the billboards.—New York American.

"George Washington, wot kinds of cigars does you smoke?"

"Why, brother, I smokes a Robinson Crusoe cigar."

"Wot kinda cigar is a Robinson Crusoe?"

"Castaway, dumb-bell, castaway!"—Chelsea Record.

Things would be better if, when the nations stack their arms, the diplomats wouldn't stack their cards.—Columbia (S. C.) Record.

RADIO RESULTS

The 44-page Radio Section of The Sun last Saturday, November 1, was the largest in its history—12 pages larger than was published by any other New York newspaper.

That advertisers appreciate its worth is evidenced by the fact that The Sun publishes far more Radio advertising than any other New York newspaper—nearly as much as all the others combined.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

The Cathedral Towns of England

PETERBOROUGH

Easy of access by the great trunk route from London to Edinburgh, Peterborough beckons the traveler to its noble fane.

In passing through a stone gateway into the close one stands in front of what is perhaps the noblest western facade of any Cathedral in the World. Three uniform gables are supported by three very deeply recessed Early English Arches. On either side are towers of the same period carrying spires and corner turrets.

Two queens have been buried in the Cathedral, Catherine of Aragon, Henry VIII's first wife, and Mary, Queen of Scots, after her execution at Fotheringay, a few miles away. The remains of the unfortunate Scottish queen were later removed to Westminster Abbey.

On the London & North Eastern Railway's famous East Coast Route Between England and Scotland.

Apply for free booklet describing
ALL YOU OUGHT TO SEE IN BRITAIN

H. J. KETCHAM
General Agent

LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY,
311 Fifth Avenue (at Thirty-Second St.),
New York

Quality Plus Speed with the Ludlow

THE Ludlow system of matrix composition is fast because it is the "Short Route" to display composition. No matter what style or size of typeface you need, if it is between six and sixty point, you can have it instantly and in any quantity you want as you want it. The Ludlow eliminates running around in circles hunting for sorts. It eliminates distribution of used forms. Ludlow type on slugs handles faster than single types, and make-up time is reduced.

Ludlow compactness eliminates much leg work, because everything is within easy reach of the operator. Ludlow slugs are of even height to paper, thus make-ready time is reduced over the make-ready necessary for high and low, worn single types. The Ludlow requires no magazine, mold or machine changes. Several compositors can work at it at the same time, each setting and casting a different size or face without interfering with one another.

Just as long as you keep the metal pot full of slug metal, the Ludlow provides an unlimited amount of new, clear-cut type in a six to sixty point size range, also bold and extended.

The Ludlow stands ready at any time to prove its claims to simplicity of operation, versatility for producing display type on slugs, and speed in production—it being the fastest system for setting regular run-of-the-hook display copy.

Let us show you how the simple, versatile, fast Ludlow System can profit you.

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue
San Francisco Hearst Bldg. CHICAGO New York World Bldg.

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

"Whale of a Service" —by United Press

FOUNDED IN 1771
THE NORTH AMERICAN
PHILADELPHIA

November 5, 1924.

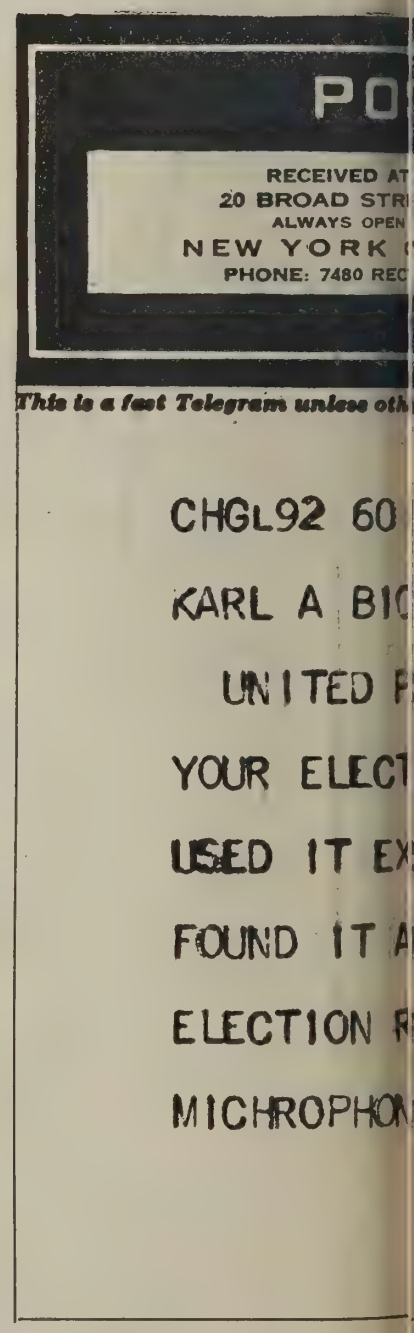
Mr. Karl E. Bickel,
United Press Association,
World Building,
New York City.

My dear Karl Bickel:-

The very first thing I am doing this day after election is to write to you to tell you what a whale of a service the United Press gave us last night.

Early in the evening I defined what it was to be and gave orders that the United Press report was to be delivered to me personally.

The North American beat the hide off every other morning paper in Philadelphia, and I want you to know how much help the United Press was in our victory. Just so show you what we did I will mail you the first pages of some of our editions.



I think they are quite a triumph of presentation and election results and I am glad that your organization had such a prominent part in the triumph.

Incidentally, I want you to thank your Mr. Wasney for his courtesy and cooperation. It is a pleasure to have him around.

With best wishes, I am as ever

Very cordially yours,
Frederick F. Forbes
Frederick F. Forbes
MANAGING EDITOR.

From the Chica

UNITED PRESS

World Building

go Tribune

AL TELEGRAPH – COMMERCIAL CABLES

CLARENCE H. MACKAY, PRESIDENT

TELEGRAM

DELIVERY NO.

ndicated by signal after the number of words:—"Blue" (Day Letter) "N.L." (Night Letter) or "Nite" (Night Telegram) | 16—39597

STANDARD TIME INDICATED ON THIS MESSAGE.

WR CHICAGO ILLS 5 NOV 5 7 42 PM 24

S ASSOCIATIONS NEW YORK NY

SERVICE NATIONAL STATE AND LOCAL WAS SPLENDID STOP WE

IVELY NOT ONLY IN OUR COLUMNS BUT IN BROADCASTING AND

RATE RELIABLE SPEEDY STOP DURING THE HOURS WHEN WE BROADCASTED

RNS WE WERE GLAD INDEED TO GIVE FREQUENT CREDIT THROUGH THE UNITED PRESS FOR ITS RAPID AND ACCURATE NEWS SERVICE

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

ASSOCIATIONS

NEW YORK

And the New York Sun

The Sun

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

New York

November 6th,
1 9 2 4.

Mr. Karl A. Bickel,
United Press Association,
World Building,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Bickel:-

Please accept my congratulations for the excellent service provided by the United Press on Election Night. You covered the country in a remarkable way, and it was a great achievement for you to furnish a service so quick and accurate.

Your service for the SUN, broadcasting elections by Radio through WEAF Station, was all that could be desired. You and the other men on the United Press, who took part in the arrangements and the general election work, ought to be proud of your accomplishment.

Very truly yours,

Frank Speed

Managing Editor.

TRADE BODY WAGING WAR ON FRAUD ADS

U. S. Commission Issues Cease and Desist Order Against Varnish Firm—Cigar Maker Also Cited

Warfare against misleading advertising appeared particularly active this week, when the Federal Trade Commission in Washington took steps against a cigar manufacturer, a varnish concern, and three New York furniture firms, charging misrepresentation in advertising copy.

The commission issued an important cease and desist order against the Donolac Company of Rochester, covering the objection of the National Varnish Manufacturers Association on misrepresentation in advertising.

An unfair competition complain, charging misrepresentation and misbranding in the advertisement and sale of cigars was directed to Julius Klorfein, New York cigar maker, while three complaints were issued against New York firms, charged with misleading the public in advertising furniture.

Under the law whenever the Commission has reason to believe that an unfair method of competition has been used against the public interest it shall issue its complaint. However the question whether or not such method has been used is not passed upon by the Commission finally until after respondents have had thirty days in which to answer and the issue has been tried.

Daily's Plant Nearing Completion

Work is proceeding quickly in the erection of new plant started late last month by the Cape Giradeau (Mo.) Southeast Missourian, an evening daily. When completed the new building will cover more ground than any other commercial building in Cape Giradeau, measuring 125.6 feet by 113. The Missourian will occupy a part of the ground floor, the remainder of the two-story stucco building being fitted for stores and offices.

SCRANTON TIMES TO BUILD

Four Story Modern Plant to Be Constructed Early Next Year

E. J. Lynett, editor and publisher of the Scranton (Pa.) Times, has announced plans for a new four story building for the Times at the corner of Penn avenue and Spruce street, construction work to be started the first of the year. The new plant will be erected on a plot adjoining the present structure owned by Mr. Lynett, and will have a ground area 80 by 173 feet.

Davis and Lewis, of Scranton, have been retained as architects, S. P. Weston of New York on newspaper engineering and plant design, Dwight P. Robinson Company, New York, on engineering and construction. In addition to the new building the Times will install entirely new press equipment, adopting the straight line unit layout. The press room and reel room will be located in the Spruce street frontage at street level. A number of features will be included in the new Times Building which have not heretofore been used outside the major cities.

OCTOBER ANOTHER BANNER MONTH IN NEW YORK ADVERTISING

NEW YORK daily newspapers last month published the second largest volume of October advertising in their history, their total, according to the New York Evening Post Statistical Department, being 15,598,282 agate lines, or 867,858 lines less than in October, 1923, the previous high mark for the month and for all months, all years. It may be recalled that the 1923 figure was swollen by efforts of advertisers during the first ten days to catch up with the publicity they lost during the pressmen's strike of late September. And it may also be noted here that the last few days of this October were marked by some slackening due to uncertainty as to the election's outcome. With these factors eliminated, it seems probable that November and December will set new records for their respective periods. The figures in detail follow:

Pages 1924	Pages 1923		Percentage of total space	1924	1923	Gain	Loss
1,354	1,304	American	8.2	1,279,726	1,408,092	.....	128,366
...	1,022	Herald	...	.....	§1,066,654	.....	.....
1,314	1,040	Herald Tribune	10.0	1,397,140	970,456	426,684	.....
828	....	*Mirror (Tabloid)	2.1	334,100	‖.....	.....	.....
1,156	1,088	News (Tabloid)	3.7	581,906	495,346	86,560	.....
1,826	1,618	Times	16.4	2,563,230	2,438,942	124,288	.....
1,280	1,254	World	10.0	1,559,278	1,654,118	.....	94,840
400	....	*Evening Bulletin	1.8	282,656	**.....	.....	.....
1,282	1,268	*Evening Journal	9.7	1,516,514	1,567,228	.....	50,714
....	658	*Evening Mail	...	.....	¶798,620	.....	.....
806	554	*Evening Post	3.0	459,916	407,250	52,666	.....
810	726	*Evening World	5.5	854,992	870,004	.....	15,012
1,000	862	*Sun	8.9	1,382,630	1,231,822	150,808	.....
696	636.	*Telegram & Mail	5.1	791,052	††758,064	32,988	.....
1,178	1,182	Brooklyn Eagle	9.4	1,473,250	1,555,462	.....	82,212
578	634	Brooklyn Times	2.8	443,420	461,164	.....	17,744
646	664	Standard Union	4.4	678,472	782,918	.....	104,446
15,154	14,510	Totals		15,598,282	16,466,140	.....	867,858 Net Loss

*No Sunday edition.
¶Telegram and Mail combined January 28, 1924. Sunday issue discontinued March 16, 1924.
††Evening Telegram carried 107,728 lines in the 4 Sunday issues of October, 1923; this lineage is included.
§Herald and Tribune combined March 19, 1924.
Evening Bulletin first issue June 19, 1924.
‖Mirror (Tabloid) first issue June 24, 1924.

	1924	1923	1922	1921	1920	1919	1918
American	1,279,726	1,408,092	1,093,872	1,056,762	1,031,432	1,103,590	810,446
Herald	.....	1,066,654	1,240,434	1,167,942	1,285,416	854,692	663,226
Herald-Trib.	1,397,140	970,456	952,746	940,708	1,033,188	886,774	487,220
Mirror (Tab.)	334,100	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
News (Tab.)	581,906	495,346	329,318	324,884	209,570	.....	.....
Times	2,563,230	2,438,942	2,504,096	2,154,542	2,234,254	2,084,150	1,289,726
World	1,559,278	1,654,118	1,826,518	1,405,766	1,682,738	1,692,936	1445,486
Eve. Bulletin	282,656	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Eve. Journal	1,516,514	1,567,228	1,187,118	1,081,276	1,028,202	1,085,464	748,435
Eve. Mail	.....	798,620	579,432	590,152	607,106	582,890	377,208
Eve. Post	459,916	407,250	346,740	411,884	533,542	432,783	362,248
Eve. World	854,992	870,004	834,958	854,040	947,318	979,102	579,158
Globe	.....	.....	‡.....	753,302	718,454	765,398	981,850	624,960
Sun	1,382,630	1,321,822	961,798	789,506	870,724	985,036	599,857
Teleg. & Mail	791,052	758,064	639,008	601,478	623,894	852,996	726,670
Bklyn. Eagle	1,473,250	1,555,462	1,502,974	1,409,590	1,277,986	1,166,432	821,327
Bklyn. Times	443,420	461,164	326,040	336,808	382,564	†.....	†.....
Stand. Union	678,472	782,918	792,610	657,726	787,566	741,550	591,545
Total	15,598,282	16,466,140	15,870,962	14,501,518	15,300,898	14,430,335	10,127,512

†Figures not recorded.

‡Sun and Globe combined June 4, 1923, name changed to Sun March 10, 1924

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

The High Cost of Postponing Permanent Highway Building

Poor motor roads stifle industry and agriculture, waste huge sums annually in high maintenance costs, and greatly increase gasoline, tire and repair bills.

There is not a state, not a county, not a community, that isn't paying a heavy price for having too few permanent roads.

There are still many sections of the country — even whole states — that are trying to operate twentieth century traffic over nineteenth century roads.

This is costing millions of dollars every year, and will keep on costing millions until we have well developed permanent highway systems everywhere.

Even what we often call the more progressive communities are far behind the demands of modern highway traffic with its 16,000,000 motor vehicles.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to Mexico, we need more Concrete roads—the roads for twentieth century traffic.

Your highway officials want to be of the greatest possible service to you. Get behind them with ways and means that will provide more Concrete roads and streets. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION
111 West Washington Street
CHICAGO

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

OFFICES IN 29 CITIES

EDITORIAL

RETURNS BY RADIO

THE American people, to all intents and purposes, got their election returns on Tuesday night by radio.

If this new communication science has not now demonstrated to American newspaper publishers its threat or its promise we are indeed blind.

The main facts are:

(1) Newspaper men and newspaper organizations contributed the biggest interest of four years to a medium other than print. We have no quarrel with this. It is as stupid to fight against radio as to ignore it.

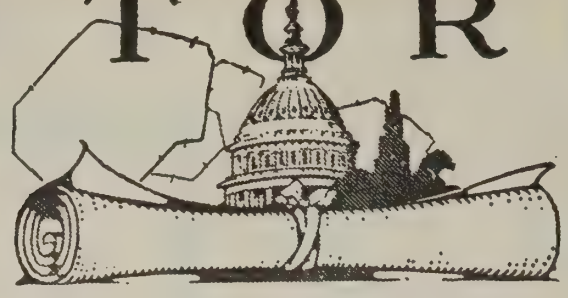
(2) Newspapers have never expected to make great profits from election night service, but it is obvious that radio made this news service pay, with advertising disguised as "legitimate program" and stupendous profits flowing in to the radio interests through sale of equipment.

(3) Newspaper extras and bulletin boards looked like stage-coaches in the airplane age to the average citizen whose home was equipped with radio, and if there were crowds around newspaper offices on election night they demonstrated, not that home radio is unappreciated, but that a large number of radio sets are still to be sold.

(4) Radio broadcasters could not themselves collect election returns, so they borrowed our tools.

There were many unequal conditions in newspaper offices throughout the country on election night. Not every publisher who wanted to was able to engage in broadcasting returns. But those newspapers that found it possible to get into the game were in splendid company, were marked for enterprise and their publishers demonstrated that they are not yet ready to yield the interest of their local fields to any outside force.

Radio has become one of the greatest problems in journalism. For nearly a year the point has repeatedly been urged in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. We believe this new art has a legitimate place in the scheme of American life. We do not believe that it can possibly supplant the newspaper, partly because of radio's limitations, such as its inability to select interest, and definitely because the sense of hearing does not satisfy the same intellectual craving as does the sense of reading. We do believe that ways can be found to make radio broadcasting profitable.



EDITOR & PUBLISHER's proposition is and has been that either journalism shall capture and control radio as an auxiliary force, or that outside forces shall find their way into local fields, not to occupy the place now filled by the daily newspaper, but to find a new and in a sense competitive market for news entertainment, and perhaps advertising.

As sure as tomorrow's sun press telegraph service will be delivered to the newspapers of this country by radio instead of wires. That is the business of the press services. For newspapers it should mean a vastly increased volume of material, for automatic radio transmission has stupendous wordage possibilities, many times the capacity of the telegraph key. Large volume means broad selection and opportunity to serve any possible class of general information.

An interesting list of American newspapers today own and operate broadcast outfits, or have satisfactory arrangements with commercial concerns which yield the same result. These newspapers have not been content to lose any part of their control. In instances it has been an expensive development. Not every publisher could withstand the drain. Radio broadcast is a public gift, compensated for only in the intangibles of prestige. The exceptions are in the instance of publishers who have found a means of making indirect profits from broadcasting, perhaps through great enterprise in selling radio advertising or through profit-sharing in the local sale of equipment.

Whatever the means used, we believe it is good sense and good enterprise to accept radio in principle and in fact. It lies in the province of journalism. The science has arrived, the practice has been demonstrated—what are you going to do with it?

Get set for a holiday trade of good proportions.

ST. MATTHEW

Chapter XVI—26

For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

NEWS IN AD-COPY

SUPREMACY of the newspaper as an advertising medium is unquestioned when copy has a spot news value, which is the most effective copy that can be written. Why is spot news neglected so often in advertising? Is is because of a lack of news sense on the part of advertiser or agency? Do the mere implements of the trade stand in the way of action—such as typography which satisfies "all hands," cuts made just so, mats prepared to meet some difficult specification with all of the red tape of putting through a national schedule to be unwound? Does this prevent a news flavor in national copy?

EDITOR & PUBLISHER recently noticed how John Lucas & Co., Philadelphia paint manufacturers, got news action on an incident which bore on their trade. The morning newspapers carried a story about the collapse of an old fire escape, which crushed out the life of a child. Some man in the paint concern, with abstract ideas, immediately said when he had read that story: "That is the result of not saving the surface and protecting all—if that fire-escape had been painted it would not have rusted and collapsed."

In advertising which appeared in the evening newspapers the morning story was reproduced in facsimile and the paint concern told the average householder of the perils of rust and how its paint would preserve such iron work.

Nothing could be more obvious—yet how rare and refreshing it is to see this copy! Every day's news is brimming with suggestions for advertisers. Such advertising copy can be depended upon to yield tangible and immediate results.

It is a notion of ours, often heretofore expressed, that the day will come when certain types of national advertising will be so in tune with the day's news that it will be telegraphed like a press report across this country.

If in your advertising copy superlatives have been exhausted and exaggeration beggared, why not try to describe your article in simple language for plain people?

November 8, 1924 Volume 57, No. 24

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors,
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London Editor: Herbert C. Ridout, 10 Radcliffe Road, Winchmore Hill, N. 21.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34, rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokyo: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50

BITTER INGRATITUDE

IT is a commentary on civilization, but neverthele true that most of a business man's life is a figh In the battle the more sensitive and the mo original and creative types suffer most at the han of the phlegmatic, who are usually non-creative. Th struggle is all about us in journalism.

This editorial is suggested by an interview we ha just had with the general manager of a newspaper the middle west. He is one of the cleverest, mo resourceful, most scientific newspaper managers our acquaintance. A few years ago, as an employ he was placed in charge of a daily which was bad on the losing side, the tail-ender in the field. Throu his skillful operation this paper has out-distanced rivals in every department, and whereas our frie has profited in reasonable measure the stock values the ownership have increased more than 1,000 p cent and the chief stockholder is rich, whereas faced bankruptcy less than ten years ago.

While fighting the battles of these stockholde none of whom is competent to do the work as t past record shows, this manager has been compell he tells us, to maintain a constant fight upon the the beneficiaries of his work, in order to effect t obvious and elemental means of making the newspa stand up in the community and progress. They ha plagued his life and with a sort of fiendish gl Unable to meet him on any ground of candor or match wits with him on any business problem, th interference has been covert and insulting, larg through others, including local advertisers.

Our friend's equity in this really monumen achievement is his salary; the obstructionist own ship refuses to sell its interest at even fabul profits. His problem is to resign and begin life o again, at middle-age, or stick it through. He ele the latter, but some day inevitably his fine spirit w force him to resign. The owners will search t country for a man to fill his shoes.

What is this perversity? There is nothing politi or industrial in the objects of the obstructing owne They are only interested in their newspaper dividen Is it ordinary jealousy? Could the psychoanaly determine their complexes?

Good men are scarce—really good men, who kn how to make a newspaper pay without resorting any of the dangerous "sell-outs" that shysters u It is inconceivable that men should be so stupid those who, out of mere cussedness, stalk a man of a job which not one in ten thousand co fill so well as he. It is bitter ingratitude. It is bo headed business.

Public opinion—greatest force in modern life and least understood.

A WOMAN'S VIEW

MRS. FLORENCE RIDDICK BOYS, wome editor of the Plymouth (Ind.) Pilot tells n editors some valuable inside secrets conce ing what women want in newspapers. We find remarks in a recent bulletin published by the U versity of Missouri. It behooves the writers of per cent of newspaper material to give sharp ear:

Don't write "down" to women; many women intellectual and enjoy literature.

Don't play up the seamy side of life, nor be cyni or pessimistic.

In writing to women you must make your co interesting, "homey," human, cheery and decent.

Don't use jokes which have a sting or a reflect on womankind, as the mother-in-law joke, or th implying that women talk too much.

Avoid preachy propaganda, wrangling, low gr drivel, "heart problems," love triangles, political ar ments, extremism, hobbies and fads.

Write to the home woman, but don't forget busin and club women, the school girl and the elde woman.

Fully 90 per cent of the newspaper is written men, but women buy seven-eighths of the goods s over the counter.

A home paper is worth more than a street pa and to get in the home you must appeal to wom

A woman expects news, but she also expects ent tainment, inspiration, broad views, intellectual fo practical help, idealism.

PERSONALS

GUY U. HARDY, editor and publisher of the Canon City (Col.) Record, was re-elected to Congress.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis was a White House caller this week.

Senator Arthur Capper, publisher, Topeka Capital, who was returned to the United States Senate this week, will again have the company in the Kansas House delegation of D. R. Anthony, Jr., Leavenworth (Kan.) Times, and Homer Hoch, Kansas weekly publisher and member of the House postal committee.

Laurence Hills, editor of the Paris Herald Tribune, has arrived in this country on a two weeks' visit. He will spend most of the time in New York.

Urey Woodson, of the Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger, figures prominently in reminiscences of free silver politics by Clinton W. Gilbert, in the New York Evening Post.

Len Small, who was re-elected Governor of Illinois, is interested in the publication of the Kankakee (Ill.) Republican.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

LIN BONNER, lately managing editor of the Newark (N. J.) Ledger, has joined the copy desk of the New York Evening World.

V. V. Hostetter has resigned from the copy desk of the New York World.

Leo J. Rosche, formerly of the New York World, and Norman S. Hall, formerly editor of Foreign Service, have joined the copy desk of the New York Evening Graphic.

William S. Hines, formerly city editor of the San Francisco Examiner has been named managing editor of the San Francisco Bulletin.

Everett Delgrave, courthouse reporter for the Tacoma (Wash.) Daily Ledger, is seriously ill.

Walter E. Myers, who succeeded Arthur F. Stone early this year as editor of the St. Johnsbury (Vt.) Caledonian-Record, has resigned his position and has returned to Boston to join the Edison Electric Company.

Gilbert I. Garretson, the Medill School of Journalism has been appointed editor and general maanger of the Dundee (Ill.) Valley News, published by the Associated Editors, Inc., Chicago.

Roy A. McMillan, desk man for the Tacoma News Tribune, is teaching a class in journalism at the Tacoma City College.

C. D. Hannon, editor of the Erie (Ill.) Independent is recovering from a serious illness at the home of his son in Davenport, Ia.

Roy C. Beckman, courthouse reporter for the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, has returned to work after an absence of six months caused by illness.

John L. Southwick, for 28 years editor of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, who was obliged to give up work earlier in the year on account of ill health, is back at his desk.

C. A. Holding of Waurika, Okla., is now editor and manager of the Comanche (Okla.) Reflex.

Vann L. Marsh has been appointed editor of the Spray (N. C.) Arrow succeeding Stuart O. Bondurant.

Allen Carncross, formerly with the Long Beach (Cal.) Press, and Spencer Williams, formerly with the Utica (N. Y.) Press, are now on the copy desk of the San Diego (Cal.) Union. Frank Mullock, reporter on the same paper, has gone to Michigan to undergo an operation.

Miss Mary Margaret McBride, formerly on the staff of the New York Evening Mail, is now assistant editor of the Paris (Mo.) Mercury.

A. H. Montgomery, formerly editor of the Clinton (Ill.) Daily Public, has purchased a grocery store in Clinton and will devote his time to that business.

T. V. Bodine, for a number of years managing editor of the Paris (Mo.) Mercury has purchased a half interest in the Mercury Printing company, formerly held by the late W. H. Alexander.

Harlan Miller, an assignment man for the New York Evening Post, left Wednesday for a 10-day vacation in Des Moines, Ia.

W. D. Taunton has been appointed editor of the Halifax (N. S.) Sunday Leader, to succeed P. J. Giffen.

R. V. Sharpe, who has been local feature writer on the Sydney (N. S.) Record for the past five years, has joined the reportorial staff of the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star.

Lester M. Hunt, political editor of the Tacoma Daily Ledger, and Mrs. Hunt are parents of a son born Oct. 26.

Joe Cornish, former high school correspondent, is now a regular member of the staff of the Tacoma News Tribune.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

RALPH SPANGLER has joined the advertising staff of the Charlotte (N. C.) Evening News, going to that paper from the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal.

Joseph Bannon, circulation manager of the New York American, sailed on the Berengaria from New York this week for a six weeks' pleasure trip abroad.

W. H. Ward, formerly circulation manager of the Halifax (N. S.) Chronicle is now circulation manager for the Toronto Globe. Edwin C. Young, formerly business manager of the Chronicle, is now business manager of the Toronto Globe.

Frank L. Yorke, formerly on the advertising staff of the Halifax (N. S.) Herald and Evening Mail, is now on the advertising staff of the Toronto Globe.

MARRIED

JOHN R. MORRIS of the Tokyo Japan Advertiser, to Miss Bernice Thomure of the Philadelphia Public Ledger staff in Bonne Terre, Mo., Oct. 27. The couple plan to sail for Japan early in December.

Charles H. Eagan, sports writer on the Washington (D. C.) News, to Miss Ruth Dietrich of South Bend, Ind., at Trenton, N. J., last Saturday.

Robert Bryant Carr, editorial writer of Providence to Dorothy Halsey Doris, also of Providence.

Valentine J. Oldshue, former city editor of the Pittsburgh Gazette Times, to Miss Agnes C. Waldmeier, in Pittsburgh, Nov. 5.

Herbert D. Frey, auditor of the San Diego (Cal.) Union and Tribune, to Miss Elvina B. C. Lawson of that city, recently.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

FRANK H. KING, a member of the staff of the London Bureau of the Associated Press, is visiting his parents in Columbia, Mo. He will return to New York next week to sail for London. King stopped in St. Louis before coming to Columbia to marry Miss Olga Opie of Oakland, Cal.

Winder Harris of the Washington bureau of the Universal Service will sail from New York, Nov. 8, to spend about two months in Geneva, Switzerland, to report the proceedings of the narcotic section of the League of Nations.

Kenneth Duncan, former Minneapolis and Chicago newspaper man, has been appointed chief of the International News Service bureau at Kansas City, Mo., replacing William S. Sullivan, resigned.

Gus Robbins, former chief of the United Press, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., bureau, which was closed with the establishment of a printer circuit there, is temporarily attached to the New York office.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

SINCE Hal E. Hoss was 19 years old, he has been in the newspaper business, starting as a contributor to the Salem Statesman. He is now managing editor of the Oregon City Enterprise, and for the second time has been elected president of the Oregon State Editorial Association.

HAL E. HOSS

Following his work on the Statesman, he was offered a position as cub reporter on a Seattle paper but declined this to take a partnership in the Weekly Visitor published in Salem.

"My job," he says ruminatively, "was to write the news and editorials, to help print and fold and deliver the 3000 copies to most of the urban population."

The position of correspondent on a Portland paper for several Oregon beach resorts during one summer, met with such success that he entered the Courier office in Oregon City, that fall, working as a reporter. After several months on the Courier he took over the management of the Banner, another weekly in the field and after acquiring a part interest in the Banner Hoss effected a consolidation of the Banner and Courier.

His desire to work on a daily led him to sell out his interests and enter the offices of the Oregon City Enterprise, where he is now managing editor, virtually directing the policies of the paper in the absence of E. E. Brodie, owner of the Enterprise, who is American minister to Siam.

Mr. Hoss has never had a high school education but at the University of Oregon, where he is a frequent visitor, the students have recently recognized his ability and his personal qualities by electing him to the membership of Sigma Delta Chi, national honorary journalistic fraternity for men, and to Phi Sigma Pi, social fraternity.

WITH THE SPECIALS

CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN, publishers representatives, New York, have been appointed to represent the Hollywood (Cal.) Daily Citizen.

Fralick & Bates, Inc., New York, have been appointed to represent the Shawnee (Okla.) News in the East and West.

C. L. Houser Company has been appointed the national advertising representative in the East and West of the Lima (O.) Star.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

LEO H. WISE, from assistant sporting editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) Evening News, to associate news editor, Hendersonville (N. C.) Daily Times.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

EDWARD S. MORSE has resigned as advertising director of Lord & Taylor, New York department store, effective Nov. 15. A. E. McElfresh, advertising manager of the Stewart Dry Goods Company of Louisville, Ky., has been appointed his successor.

Harry A. Porter, advertising manager of the Syrup Pepsin Company of Monticello, Ill., since 1911, has resigned to become vice-president and executive director of the Earle B. Barber Company, Chicago.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

FOREST CITY (N. C.) COURIER has moved into its new home on East Main street. A new model 14 linotype has been installed.

Winston-Salem (N. C.) Sentinel has installed a new model 8 linotype.

Ironwood (Mich.) Daily Globe, has recently installed a 40-5 h. p. alternating current Cline-Westinghouse double motor drive equipment for the purpose of driving the 32- page Goss web perfecting stereotype press in its plant.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

PITTSBURGH (KAN.) SUN, a 25-page Style and Exposition Week edition.

Weirton (W. Va.) Leader-News, an 88-page edition in honor of the 15th anniversary of the founding of the town.

Town of Union (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch, a 212-page Golden Jubilee edition, Nov. 1.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

W S. CAUCH, former publisher of the Elsinore (Cal.) Lake Elsinore Valley Press, has purchased from H. A. Perkins the Fallbrook (Cal.) Enterprise.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

E. L. LAWRENCE has been appointed manager of the job printing department of the Ft. Madison (Ia.) Democrat.

How many advertising and editorial ideas for your newspaper does this EDITOR & PUBLISHER contain?

One of the best ways in which a newspaper can render a direct service to its subscribers is to let Frederic J. Haskin answer all questions of fact its readers may ask. All correspondence on your special stationery. All the original letters and coupons are returned each week to publications taking the service.

ASSOCIATIONS

VIRGINIA PRESS ASSOCIATION executive committee, has been called to meet in Richmond, Wednesday, Nov. 12, to decide the time and place for the mid-winter meeting.

Association of Canadian Advertisers will hold its annual meeting at the Prince George Hotel, Toronto, on Nov. 27 and 28.

Advertising Club of New York heard Jean Patou, famous French fashion designer and sportsman, at a special luncheon of its members on Nov. 6. Next Monday, Nov. 10, the club will hear Mr. Godfrey L. Cabot, of Boston, president of the National Aeronautic Association, and Rear Admiral W. A. Fullam, in a talk on the aviation situation in the United States today. On Nov. 12, Wednesday, the president of the American Bankers Association, Mr. W. E. Knox, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, is to speak to the members.

Pacific Coast and Inter-Mountain Newspaper Executives will gather in San Francisco Nov. 20, for their second annual convention.

New England Advertising Clubs of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World have prepared an elaborate program of addresses on advertising subjects for their annual convention to be held at Hartford, Conn., Nove. 16 to 20. Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant, will be one of the chief speakers.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

IN A. H. Gravenhorst, editor of the Effingham (Ill.) Review, the Illinois Press Association, has an army veteran for its 1924 president.

A. H. GRAVENHORST

Mr. Gravenhorst served on the Mexican border from 1916 to 1917 with the 4th Illinois Infantry as a captain, and in the world war from 1917 to 1919. He saw a year's active service in France, where he was made a major of infantry in November 1918.

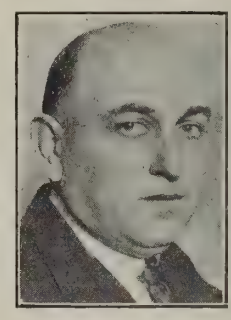
He comes from an old newspaper family, and started his newspaper work as "devil" in his father's newspaper plant, the Effingham Review, in 1902. He became editor of the same newspaper in 1908, a position he has held ever since, except during periods of his army service.

From 1913 to 1917 he was president of the board of managers of the Illinois State Reformatory, being the youngest man who has ever held that office.

In 1923 he was made first vice-president of the Illinois Press Association, and was elevated to the presidency at a recent convention, succeeding John H. Harrison of the Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News.

Graham Hemminger, recently connected with Drug Topics, in New York, has joined the staff of Eastman, Scott & Company, Atlanta, Ga. Hemminger was formerly associated with the Richard A. Foley Agency, of Philadelphia, and the Massengale Advertising Agency, of Atlanta.

Wolf Rothband and Lawrence H. Flynn have joined the Ethridge Company, New York advertising agency, as members of their art staff.



J. H. Newmark, Inc., New York, has taken over the account of the Twin-High Corporation, distributing the Twin-High Transmission for Ford cars and trucks. The account of the Rawlings Company of Ameria is now also being handled by this advertising agency.

Former Hearst Editor Dies

Philip Francis, 67, former leading editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, died of heart disease in Oakland, Cal., Nov. 2. At one time Mr. Francis was editor of the Stockton (Cal.) Mail and later was employed by the San Francisco Call and Examiner, going east to become editorial writer for the New York American and political writer in Washington.

CLIMBING

WILLIAM M. HINES has been appointed managing editor of the San Francisco Bulletin, recently purchased by a syndicate of wealthy San Francisco business men.

WILLIAM M. HINES

Only 36, Hines began his newspaper career as San Jose, Cal., correspondent for the San Francisco Examiner, working his way up from the ranks to news editor of that newspaper.

While city editor of the Examiner, Hines solved the Father Heslin murder mystery, for which William Hightowe is now serving a life sentence. He also arranged the first air-transport for newspaper service, the bringing of the Toledo Willard-Dempsey fight pictures to the Pacific Coast by 'plane, beating the other San Francisco newspapers by 48 hours.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

W. A. LYDIATT, publisher since 1914 of Lydiatt's Book and since 1918 of Marketing, the Canadian advertising journal, has severed all connections with these publications and along with W. G. Abel of the Smith, Denne & Moore Agency has formed W. A. Lydiatt, Limited, a new advertising agency, at 27 Wellington street, East Toronto.

Mr. Lydiatt began his advertising career 25 years ago with George P. Rowell, New York. Following several years with other agencies in New York, he was for nearly two years in Toronto as an advertising specialist. He was then associated with J. J. Gibbons Agency, Toronto, and the Butterick publications, New York, successively, establishing his own business in 1914.

Mr. Abel was recently on the staff of the Grain Growers' Guide, Winnipeg, and for the past year with the Smith, Denne & Moore Agency, Toronto.

Establishment of the Carl Reimers Company, Inc., advertising agency, with headquarters in the Gotham National Bank Building, Broadway at 59th street, New York, was announced this week. The incorporators are Carl Reimers, Charles H. Bauer, and Boyden Sparkes. Sparkes, who is a political writer on the staff of the New York Herald Tribune, plans to continue in newspaper work, being only financially interested in the new agency. He returned to New York this week from Evanston, Ill., where he covered the wind-up of the Dawes campaign for Vice-Presidency.

The fifth anniversary of the founding of the Syverson-Kelley Advertising Agency, Spokane, Wash., was to be celebrated by a reception and dance to be held in Spokane, November 7. Officials of the agency are Alfred H. Syverson Raymond P. Kelley, Hervey L. McCowan, Sam E. Smyth, Lee R. Double, Dorothy Egan, and Lois Koss.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Columns

"If You Believe It, It's So!"—Daily.
"Direct from Broadway"—A weekly theatrical survey.
"Between the Lines"—About Authors & Books.
Tri-Feature Synd. Service, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.
2048 East Wilmot St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
Unexcelled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., N. Y.

Radio

RADIO NEWS AND FEATURES
Two columns weekly by Carl H. Butman. Washington Radio News Service, Room 201, 1422 F St., Washington, D. C.

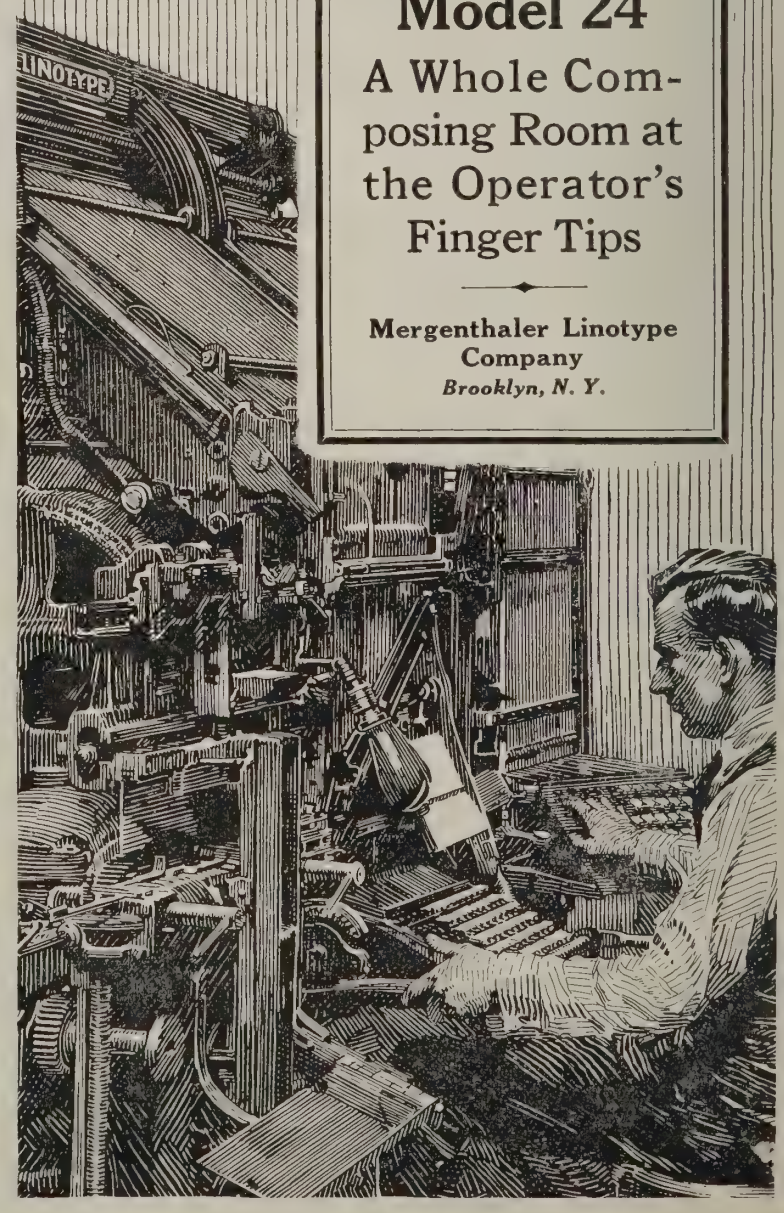
Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.



Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Theatrical

"DIRECT FROM BROADWAY"
A weekly column by one of New York's best informed theatrical personages.
Tri-Feature Synd. Service, 110 W. 40th St., N. Y.

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

Model 24

A Whole Composing Room at the Operator's Finger Tips

Mergenthaler Linotype Company
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Composed on the Linotype in the Cheltenham Bold and Antique No. 1 Series

It Pays to Advertise in the SOUTH

For the year 1923, the total value of crops produced by the Southern States was $6,127,400,000 or approximately 42% of the entire crop value of the United States.

The increase in value of the cotton crop of the Southern States has been considerable, but the great increase in diversified farming in the South has been responsible for the vast proportion of this increase in the value for 1923.

The South's estimated area of all farm crops is 130,250,000 acres, which is over 35 per cent of the total crop area of the United States. Out of this acreage, about three-fourths of the farming area in the South is devoted to diversified agriculture and only one-fourth to cotton.

Because of the large value of her crop, the South finds herself supplied with plenty of money to spend.

The listed newspapers cover the most populous portion of the South and the use of these dailies will enlist the local dealers for pushing your product.

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham Age-Herald	(M)	33,184	.08	.08
Birmingham Age-Herald	(S)	41,448	.10	.10
Birmingham News	(E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News	(S)	86,185	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item	(E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register	(M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register	(S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News	(ES)	3,165	.03	.03
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville	(M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald	(M)	18,300	.06	.06
Orlando Sentinel	(S)	21,681	.07	.07
†St. Petersburg Independent	(M&S)	5,965	.035	.035
Tampa Times	(E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Tribune	(M&S)	15,176	.05	.05
		24,783	.07(.08S)	.06(.07S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald	(E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald	(S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph	(M)	26,222	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph	(S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372	(S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader	(E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader	(S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun	(E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen	(M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen	(S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News	(M)	24,423	.07	.06
Greensboro Daily News	(S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer	(M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer	(S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel	(E)	15,025	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record	(E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record	(S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State	(M)	24,246	.06	.06
Columbia State	(S)	24,442	.06	.06
Greeneville News	(M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal	(E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726	(S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times	(M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times	(S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner	(E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner	(S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee	(M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)		7,184	.05	.05
Newport News Times-Herald	(E)	7,326
Newport News Daily Press	(S&M)	5,622	.05	.05
Roanoke Times & World-News	(M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times	(S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader	(E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

PEARSON AND CURTIS CONSULT COOLIDGE

President Tells Them Congress Must Act on Second Class Mail Report Before He Can Move

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The forthcoming report of the Post Office Department to Congress on mail costs, including second class matter, is understood to have been discussed by A. C. Pearson, national chairman of the American Publishers' Conference, and Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the Philadelphia publisher, with President Coolidge at the White House Thursday.

It was understood from a White House spokesman the President informed Mr. Pearson, Mr. Curtis and others present at the conference in the President's private study that the report was one for Congress and not for him to pass upon first. As Congress had specifically authorized and otherwise provided for an extensive investigation of mail costs to the government which has now been going on for a long time.

Postmaster General Harry S. New announced after the White House conference the report would not be made public until it is submitted to Congress after the national legislative body meets in December.

Nor was it revealed clearly whether recommendations by the Post Office Department would accompany the report, or the department would depend upon whatever recommendations Congress may make on the basis of the report.

Neither Mr. Pearson nor Mr. Curtis would discuss any phase of their conference with the President, nor the subsequent one they are said to have had with the Postmaster General.

Their visit to the White House revived the question of whether promised increased pay for postal employes is to be met by increases in first, second or third class mail rates.

The President has assured callers at the White House he will now sign a postal pay raise bill if proper means are found to finance it. Congressman Martin B. Madden, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who was also a visitor to the White House Thursday, reiterated his opposition to increased mail rates being employed for such a purpose.

"BETTER AD WEEK" URGED

Carmical, of Chicago American, Addresses Direct Mail Association

Hope for creation of a "Better Advertising Week," was expressed by A. L. Carmical, director of promotion publicity of the Chicago American, when he addressed the Direct Mail Advertising Association Convention, held last week at Pittsburgh.

"If a lot of advertisers would see the way some advertising is brought into the world, some advertisers would hang their heads in shame," he declared.

Carmical said that no newspaper places more emphasis on the value of direct mail advertising than the Chicago American which sent out 3,000,000 pieces of direct mail matter last year in efforts to build up circulation and advertising. He contended direct mail advertising can be made as fresh as newspaper advertising.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

SOME years ago the Hartford Courant, the oldest and certainly—barring its abominable politics—one of the best of New England newspapers, boasted that the widow Watson, who owned and published that paper in 1776, was "the first woman editor in the United States."

It would appear from the following notes that the South Carolina widow Timothy preceded Mrs. Watson by 38 years.

The five South Carolina women here briefly considered were not literary women whose novels, dramas, reviews, translations or poems are described and criticised in "Southland Writers," "Women of the South Distinguished in Literature," Davidson's "Living Writers of the South," Miss Jennie T. Clark's "Songs of the South," Ludwig Lewisohn's "History of Literature in South Carolina," Prof. G. A. Wauchope's "The Writers of South Carolina," or other compendia of the kind, but women who were directly concerned in managing or editing newspapers; members of "the fourth estate," co-workers in "the art preservative of all arts."

Mrs. Alice Morse Earle, in an article in the New York Independent, regarded it "a curious circumstance that on the eve of the Revolution, so many Southern newspapers should have been conducted by women," and observed: "Long ere that, from 1738 to 1740, Elizabeth Timothy, * * * publisher of the South Carolina Gazette, carried on that paper after her husband's death, and her son Peter Timothy succeeded her."

All "country newspaper" men of the old days have read, and a great many of them wrote earnest appeals to subscribers to "pay up" their dues, but the appeal of Louis Timothy's widow in The Gazette in 1738, which apparently escaped Mrs. Earle's notice, is probably unique in American journalism. * * * She announced, in December, 1738, that she would continue the paper as usual, and asks patrons "to continue their favors and good offices" to the "poor, afflicted widow, and six small children, and another hourly expected."

In 1782, Anne, the widow of Peter Timothy, revived the Gazette, as had her mother-in-law before her, and published it successfully twice a week for 10 years, till her death in 1792. Mrs. Earle says: "She had a large printing house, corner of Broad and King streets, Charleston, and was printer to the State, truly a remarkable woman!"

Peter Timothy's sister Mary married Charles Crouch, who was drowned when on a vessel bound for New York. He was a sound Whig and had set up a paper in opposition to the Stamp Act, called the South Carolina Gazette and Country Journal. This was one of the four Charleston papers all entitled "Gazette," in order to secure such advertisements as were directed by law "to be published in the South Carolina Gazette." Mary Timothy Crouch continued the paper for a short time after her husband's death, and in 1780, before the surrender of the city to the British, went with her printing press and type to Salem, Mass., where, for a while, she printed the Salem Gazette and General Advertiser.

After the Colonial period, the first South Carolina woman journalist of whom the writer has any record is Sarah Clarke Faust, the wife of "General" Jacob John Faust, State Printer and editor of the South Carolina State Gazette and Columbia Advertiser; the first newspaper published at the state capital. It was published certainly during the year 1801, and probably prior and subsequent to that year.

Mrs. Faust was the daughter of Blake L. White of Charleston, by his marriage with Elizabeth Bourquin, granddaughter of Abraham Bourquin, a Huguenot refugee to South Carolina, and a sister of the Hon. John Blake White, an eminent artist, scholar and playwright of Charleston in its palmiest days. Mrs. Faust was described by her nephew, the late T. G. White of Beaufort, as "a brilliant and cultured woman, a Greek and Latin scholar, who conversed fluently in French, Spanish and Italian. She was a mistress also of the piano, violin and guitar." Her home was the focus of fashion in Columbia and according to Colonel White, "there was shaped much of the policy of the State during her editorial influence."

"But," he continues, "it was not only in the graces and amenities of life that she excelled, for her style of writing was forcible and caustic."

Her private diaries, which are said to prove her "unbounded courage and self-confidence," were in the possession of her nephews, Dr. Octavius A. White of New York and Col. T. G. White. It is to be hoped that they are still in existence and will yet see the light, judiciously edited by some careful student of the old regime.

The fame of the newspaper editor is probably the most ephemeral of all and Mrs. Faust's accomplishments may have been exaggerated; but surely so accomplished a gentlewoman as Mrs. Faust should not be utterly forgotten!

So far as the writer knows, there is no file of General and Mrs. Faust's Columbia Gazette in existence.

One of the most gifted South Carolina women who combined the flowers of literature with the drudgery of newspaper work was the late Miss Esther B. Cheesborough of Charleston, for many years a resident of New York City. She was perhaps the first South Carolina woman of the Sixties to adopt journalism as a profession. She wrote for the Charleston Courier when under the editorship of Mr. Yeadon, the Southern Literary Gazette edited by Mr. Richards and subsequently by her lifelong friend Paul H. Hayne; the Columbia Phoenix, the News and Courier, and was a not infrequent contributor to Russell's Magazine and the Southern Episcopalian. For 15 years she was connected with the Darlington Southerner, much of that time editorially; furnishing editorials, polished and otherwise, serial and short stories, essays and poems. She filled every department in newspapers, except type-setting, and in 1887 won the prize offered by the Abbeville Press and Banner for the best essay on "The Mission of the Press."—Y. S. in the Columbia (S. C.) State.

35,434

Net paid (1923) Average.
An increase of
47% in 7 Years.

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

OF the entire population of the state of Utah, 263,340 people, or 53 per cent. live within a 44 mile radius of Salt Lake City.

The Deseret News

THE Deseret News delivers daily to this territory 18,887 papers, or a paper to every 2.9 families.

Foreign Representatives
CONE, HUNTON & WOODMAN
New York — Chicago — Detroit
Kansas City — St. Louis — Atlanta
Pacific Coast Representatives
CONGER & JOHNSTON
Los Angeles — San Francisco

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

The Plain Dealer

has the largest circulation of any Cleveland daily newspaper—

205,569

—over 10,000 more than the second newspaper—evening.
—over 40,000 more than the third newspaper—evening.

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory. A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 126,763
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Utah, Southern and Eastern Idaho, Eastern Nevada and Western Wyoming—the territory served by
THE
Salt Lake Tribune

No other section of the country offers the advertiser the opportunity of practically covering four states by using one newspaper.

FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency
New York—Chicago—Detroit—St. Louis—Kansas City—Atlanta.
PACIFIC COAST REPRESENTATIVE
M. C. Mogensen & Co., Inc.
Los Angeles—San Francisco—Seattle

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

HERMAN BERNSTEIN, author, editor and former European correspondent for the New York Times, Herald, American, and Sun, is sailing Nov. 27, on a six months' trip through Europe and the Near East for the Federal Feature Syndicate, New York, to write a series of 100 "Close-Ups" describing political and social conditions in these countries. He will specialize in interviews with ading personalities and in human in- rest sketches of the day-by-day life in ese countries.

HERMAN BERNSTEIN

Mr. Bernstein's latest book, "Celebri- es of Our Time," consisting of 31 in- rviews with world notables, based on rmer newspaper articles, has just been iblished by Joseph Lawren.

His first trip to Europe was as a spec- l correspondent for the New York imes in 1908. He travelled through urope again in 1909, 1911, and 1912 for e Times.

In 1917 he was sent to Russia by the ew York Herald to report the Revolu- n, where he secured the Willy-Nicky legrams, the secret correspondence be- een the Czar and Kaiser, which Lord orthcliffe characterized as the "biggest urnalistic scoop of the war."

The next year he visited Russia to in- stigate the Bolshevist regime, and was en sent by the Herald as war corre- ondent with the A.E.F. in Siberia and er to the Czecho-Slovak front in the ral Mountains. He also represented e Herald at the Peace Conference. In 20-21 he served as special correspon- nt of the New York American, describ- g the new states created by the Ver- illes treaty.

The Republic Syndicate, New York, s joined the increasing ranks of Cross ord Puzzle distributors. Maggie Daley creator of the puzzle now being offered a daily feature by this syndicate.

Damon Runyon has transferred his of- e from the New York American edi- ial rooms to the offices of King Fea- es Syndicate, Inc. He will continue cover assignments for Universal Ser- e.

The Ullman Feature Service, Wash- ton, D. C., has added a new feature its list to run under the caption "Win- Motor Car Care."

Mrs. Florence Riddick Boys, political iter, who syndicates a page of woman's features from the Plymouth (Ind.) Pilot, edited by Samuel E. Boys, has completed work directing the women speakers during the political campaign in the Chicago headquarters of the Republican National Committee.

J. P. McEvoy, formerly of the Chicago Tribune and creator of the "Potters," Sunday feature handled by the King Features Syndicate, Inc., recently entertained more than 100 Chicagoans bearing the name Potter at a performance of "The Potters," his comedy, while it was playing at the Great Northern Theatre.

George W. Wightman, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, this week announced appointment of a special committee to study the player-writer tennis rule, interpretation of which involves William Tilden, who writes tennis articles for the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia. The committee follows: Arthur Hellen, S. W. Merrihew, J. W. Mersereau, W. T. Tilden, 2nd., Senator George Wharton Pepper, Devereaux Milburn and Grantland Rice, of the New York Herald Tribune. Conclusions of the committee in the from of recommendations will be submitted to the executive committee of the U. S. L. T. A. at its December meeting.

Six new features, designed to appeal to the woman reader, last week were added to the list of N. E. A. Inc., Cleveland. "Care of the Babies," by Dr. Stanley Gibson, of Chicago; "Cynthia Grey," advice to women; "A Fashion Smash," from an exclusive designer in New York; "The Psychology of Love," the old story told in a new way; "Make Your Own Christmas Presents," and "Love Stories of Famous Americans" are the new additions. N. E. A. is now sending out seven sheets from Cleveland and two from New York to its full service clients.

Rube Goldberg, who draws for the McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, and Harry Hershfield, creator of Abie the Agent for, the King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, have drawn cartoons of themselves, appearing in the current issue of the New York Theatrical News, a monthly publication, which made its initial appearance with last month's number.

Dr. Frank Thone, assistant managing editor of Science Service, Washington, D. C., is making an editorial trip to the mid-West, covering scientific and industrial centers of Chicago, Pittsburgh, Dayton, and other cities.

Clare A. Briggs, cartoonist, who draws for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate, New York, and Mrs. Briggs this week announced the engagement of their daughter, Sarah, to Reuben Alexander Lewis, Jr., of Birmingham.

ADDITIONS TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S ANNUAL SYNDICATE DIRECTORY

FEATURE	AUTHOR	SYNDICATE
: of Advice, The (D)	Clark Kinnaird	Central Press Association, Cleveland, O.
Game Stalking (h. p. ill.) (W)	Joseph C. Grew	Houghton Mifflin Company, 4 Park St., Boston, Mass.
get Service (news, features, mics, pictures) (D)		Central Press Association, Cleveland, O.
oons (human interest) (D)	Kessler	Metropolitan Newspaper Service, 150 Nassau St., New York.
oons (Sport) (3 col.) (3 tw.)		Central Press Association, Cleveland, O.
orial Page (mats. 8 col. any pth) (D-W)		Central Press Association, Cleveland, O.
o Comic ("Ticklers") (1 col.))		Audio Service, 30 N. Dearborn St., Chicago.
o Program Service (mat. and ɔy) (D)		Audio Service, 30 N. Dearborn St., Chicago.
o Time Table (mat.) (D)		Audio Service, 30 N. Dearborn St., Chicago.

The following offerings of the Interstate Commercial News Service, 38 Park Row, New , omitted from the EDITOR & PUBLISHER ANNUAL SYNDICATE DIRECTORY were received too to classify in the additional list appearing above:
Market Barometer (d) E. Walter Mockler; Market At A Glance (d) Staff; Commercial (d) Staff; Editorials, Business (d) Guy W. Beardsley; The Business Week (w) Hugh ll; Commodity Markets (d) Staff; Financial Tables (d-w) Staff; Market News (d) Staff; Wire Service (d) Staff; Assignment Wire Service (d) Staff; Query Wire Service (d)

Education a Great Asset to Merchandising

WEST VIRGINIA is justly proud of her educational system and expends millions of dollars annually in this project. These huge investments in the mental welfare of the rising generation, are considered by WEST VIRGINIANS to carry greater promise than any other investment activities.

You, Mr. National Advertiser, are in line to draw your dividends from this investment, since an educated public is a discriminating public and will accept a product at its full face value provided its merits are presented to them in an intelligent, dependable manner.

With a population of over 90 per cent native Americans, WEST VIRGINIA has established compulsory educational laws for children from 8 to 14 years of age. These laws apply to both white and colored population for whom separate schools are furnished.

WEST VIRGINIA people are educated people and in consequence straight forward advertising in these daily newspapers is most effective.

When you desire the greatest return on an advertising investment choose these daily newspapers listed here.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,605	.05
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,501	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,265	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,830	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,085	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.025
*News	(S)	8,840	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

"IDEA MILL" CUTS OPERATION COSTS ON THE NEW YORK SUN

Edwin S. Friendly, Business Manager, Snares Suggestions and Puts Them to Work for Newspaper by Unique Business Council IDEAS are valuable, but far too often they are allowed to lie untroubled in a thinker's brain to pass eventually into the place of forgotten things.

EDWIN S. FRIENDLY

Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Sun, realizing this truism, has set about to dam the flow of ideas from the brains of his workers, and put them to work in the business administration of his publication.

What is more, he stimulates the creation of ideas, the "idea mill" of his fashioning taking the form of a weekly business council held in the Sun offices over which he presides regularly.

These meetings are attended by:

H. B. Fairchild, advertising manager; C. F. Colborn, assistant advertising manager; H. Buggeln, publication office manager; H. L. Goldman, classified advertising manager; E. A. Sutphin, national advertising manager; J. E. Martin, superintendent of production; Geo. Benneyan, manager of statistical department; Sam Wolfenden, manager of the accounting department; J. E. Hasenack, circulation manager; C. E. Luxton, office manager; Don Williams, promotion manager; H. B. Ward, auditor.

Products from the "idea mill" since its inauguration have ranged from extremely small details to investigations which it is estimated will result in saving the Sun upwards of $25,000 per year. In the short time it has been going 34 different ideas have been suggested, investigated, and favorably acted upon.

"Ideas come best from the inquisitive," Mr. Friendly reasoned.

Consequently he chose a unique method for conducting his business council. Instead of asking the advertising manager to investigate his own department and report ideas, he appoints the circulation manager, or office manager, believing that a person unacquainted with the working of a department other than his own, would ask more questions, and therefore learn a great deal more.

Thus weekly, committees are named by Friendly to look into some phase of the newspaper office of which they do not expertly know, and to report back such ideas as occur to them for improvement.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER sought from Mr. Friendly a summary of results. It follows:

"Among the matters brought to attention was the manner in which printed matter for the Sun was being purchased.

"After careful investigation by a committee it was decided that in the future all printing orders should be submitted to not less than three printers, who by reputation were considered in an equal class one with the other. This has put the Sun's printing on a competitive basis. This system has been in operation for four months, and during that time, of the 31 jobs printed, there has not been one instance of an unsatisfactory job.

"The total money saving between the lowest and the highest bids received, amounts to several thousand dollars. The savings covering a period of one year should amount to at least $10,000, inasmuch as the system has been used thus far only during the summer months when activities are at a low ebb.

"Another point was the manner of receiving incoming mail. A committee report resulted in the complete revision of the plan for receiving and delivering incoming mail. This also resulted in greater efficiency and the avoidance of possible monetary losses because of slow service in editorial and advertising mail.

"An investigation of the telephone service disclosed the fact that there were too many operators employed at the telephone switchboard and that there were many extensions throughout the office which were not necessary, and which were subsequently removed. This resulted in a saving of approximately $1,800 in salaries and rentals.

"It has been the practice of the Sun to purchase through a news-dealer copies of other papers for use in the Sun office. A committee appointed to see if it were not possible to reduce the number of copies reported the combination use for papers and various eliminations which reduced the annual paper bills by approximately $500.

"It was discovered by a committee appointed that the stenographic work of the organization could be curtailed by consolidation with the result of a saving in annual salaries of approximately $5,000.

"The Sun had been receiving complaints from advertisers and advertising agents whose names were on the mailing list of the Sun that checking copies were not being received regularly. A committee appointed to investigate this suggested employing the service of an advertising checking bureau, which was adopted. Immediately all these checking copies were removed from the mailing list, which netted a saving of approximately $1,500 annually and has eliminated complaints concerning the receipt of checking proofs.

"It was pointed out at one of the business meetings that on rainy and stormy days many copies of the Sun were spoiled en route from the mailing room to the delivery wagons on the street. By the erection of a steel canopy which extends out over the sidewalk from the building, all this waste has been eliminated in addition to giving protection to employes.

"It was discovered that the publication office was faulty in its methods of handling drawings from advertisers and advertising agents, which had resulted in the loss of several drawings. A set of rules was adopted by a committee which was the means of keeping a record of the drawings, and since its adoption there have been no further losses, and the system is working smoothly.

"It was discovered that the Sun was delivering one dozen proofs on all 'wait order' advertisements, whether this number was required or requested. It was decided to reduce the number of proofs of each advertisement to six, which was satisfactory to all concerned and saved labor in the composing room.

"With a constantly increasing cost of production it was found expedient to go over the list of copies of the Sun distributed to advertisers and advertising agents. The reduction effected produced a saving of approximately $1,000 annually. Daily reports of the mailing and press rooms disclosed the fact that there was a large number of unaccounted for copies between the number delivered to the mailing room and the press indicators. After several months of investigation on the part of the committee appointed, automatic numbering indicators were installed in the mail room, which are checked with the presses after each run. This system is just starting. It is hoped it will reduce the unaccounted for to a minimum, thereby saving many thousands of dollars in the course of the year.

"An advertising censorship committee was formed which adopted a set of regulations for the acceptance or rejection of all advertisements offered for publication in the Sun. This committee passes upon any doubtful advertisement and acts as a board of censorship. All the facts pertaining to the acceptance or rejection of advertisements are heard by the committee.

"It was discovered that many employes had never seen the press-rooms, mechanical departments, and in fact, some of them had never seen any department other than the one in which employed. A committee was organized for conducting a tour of inspection for such persons. All employes of the Sun now have a knowledge of what the different departments or the organization are like and what they accomplish. In this connection the Business Meetings have been of inestimable value to various department heads, as they now have a closer understanding of what each is endeavoring to accomplish and this, perhaps, more than anything else has proven a great boon to the organization as a whole."

Forestry Conference Nov. 19-20

Commemoration of the services of the late Secretary of Agriculture, Henry C. Wallace, will feature the forthcoming National Conference on Utilization of Forest Products, set for Nov. 19 and 20, in Washington, it was announced this week. Secretary Wallace originated the conference and directed its program. The conference will discuss plans for better utilization of forest resources and create a nationally representative advisory committee to assist the Secretary of Agriculture in formulating and carrying out adequate measures to insure the efficient development and use of the forests of this country.

THE TACOMA NEWS TRIBUNE

TACOMA

Population, 112,600 People

20 lumber mills in city limits which shipped products valued at over $36,000,000 last year; largest production fir doors, wood columns and veneer in U. S. 19 furniture factories manufacturing $6,000,000 worth of furniture annually.

You can blanket the rich and prosperous territory of Tacoma and Southwest Washington through the columns of the News Tribune; A.B.C. Audited Circulation, 32,643.

Frank S. Baker, President — Charles B. Welch, Editor and Gen. Mgr.

ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES

David J. Randall, 341 Fifth Ave., New York City — Ford, Parsons Co., 360 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois

R. J. Bidwell & Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World. MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg., Chicago — General Motors Bldg., Detroit

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION 167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

first!

—in circulation
—in lineage
—in reader interest
—in proved results

The Indianapolis NEWS

On and after September 6th, 1924

The New Orleans States

Will be represented in the East and West by the

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY

New York Office—Canadian-Pacific Bldg.
Chicago Office—Mallers Bldg.
Also in Detroit, Atlanta, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco

Over—

200,000

CIRCULATION

in less than 3 years.
—because Detroiters want it.

DETROIT TIMES

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

BANEFUL SOPORIFICS

"HUMAN heads carry brains; doll's heads are stuffed with sawdust. The editorial columns of a newspaper should represent its mental force, its convictions, its personality, rather than being crammed with the puppet-filling stuff of sawdust and shavings. The "canned" editorial is narcoticizing newspaper influence on public opinion in American communities. Editors need not mourn that fewer people read the editorial page than formerly, as one Wisconsin editor did the other day, till they are prepared to cut out the baneful soporific of the "canned" editorial, roll up their sleeves and turn to the production of their own editorial matter, which if it be not fully up to the metropolitan standards of pungency and information, will at least express individuality and newspaper personality."—Editorial, Beloit (Wis.) Daily News.

* * *

NEWSPAPERS HAVE NO SECRETS

"THE press has immense power, terrifying power if it be misused, but it is easily within your power to hold it in order. Unlike other kinds of business, the newspaper has no secrets to the discerning eye. With a little study, one can by examination of the paper itself tell what its revenues are, whence they come, and how they are expended. Circulation and advertising space are all that it has to sell, the prices are pretty well standardized and may be ascertained, and four times a year the names of its owners are required by law to be published. It is for you to acquire a justly critical attitude toward your newspaper, not to be content merely with reading it, but to read it between the lines, seeing for yourself whether it print the news fully and fairly or whether it distort and suppress news."—Prof. W. W. Ball, Dean of the School of Journalism, University of South Carolina.

* * *

PRESS RESPONSIBILITY

"THE printing of sensational news and gruesome details of crime are generally considered wrong. I believe that the minds of the people should be turned in a better direction and that the responsibility is upon the shoulders of the press of the country. Just as thrilling stories can be written of discoveries in the field of science and of other worthwhile effort of men and women, and they will prove just as valuable in the promotion of circulation. Constructive news is one of the most vital things of the time."—Edgar T. Cutter, Central Division Superintendent, Associated Press.

AD TIPS

Aitkin-Kynett Company, 1516 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing account of the Colonial Chemical Corporation, Reading, manufacturers "Flyosan," "Phenosan," "Red Head." Also placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Frank H. Fleer Company, "Checker Berry" gum, Philadelphia.

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for Manning, Bowman & Company, nickel plated ware, Meriden, Conn.

Earle S. Barber, Wrigley Building, Chicago. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for the Pepsin Syrup Company, Dr. Caldwell's Syrups, Monticello, Ill.

Thomas E. Basham Company, Inc., Inter-Southern Life Building, Louisville. Placing account of the Brillion Iron Works, Brillion, Wis., manufacturers of soil pulverizers.

Calkins & Holden, 247 Park avenue, New York. Renewing some newspaper contracts for the Southern Cotton Oil Company, "Wesson Salad Oil and Snowdrift Shortening," New York.

Campbell-Ewald Company, 5 S. Wabash avenue, Chicago. A general list of newspapers is receiving copy on the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, Detroit.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 500 N. Dearborn street, Chicago. Copy is being sent out to a general list of papers on the Jo-Vex Chemical Company, Akron, O.

Frank M. Comrie Company, 2104 Straus Building, Chicago. Placing account of C. A. Shaler Company, Waupun, Wis., manufacturers vulcanizers for auto tires.

H. H. Good Company, 45 Murray street, New York. Renewing newspaper contracts for the Carter Medicine Company, "Carter's Little Liver Pills," New York.

Charles C. Green Agency, 450 4th avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for David H. Fulton Company, "Dreco," Baltimore.

Guenther-Bradford Company, Inc., 7 S. Dearborn street, Chicago. Contracts on the Kolar Laboratory, Chicago, are going out to a general list of newspapers. One hundred-ninety-two line, single time; insertions on the Marlow Manufacturing Company are also being distributed.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., 95 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in cities where F. M. Hoyt Shoe Company, "Beacon Shoes," Manchester, N. H., have distribution.

Honig-Cooper Company, 507 Montgomery street, San Francisco. Placing orders with Pacific coast newspapers for Albers Bros. Milling Company, San Francisco.

Charles W. Hoyt Co., Inc., 116 West 32nd street, New York. Placing account of C. F. Church Company, Holyoke, Mass., manufacturers "Sani White" toilet seats.

Johnson, Read & Company, 202 South State street, Chicago. Has secured the accounts of the Premier Electric Company, Chicago, manufacturer of radio parts, the Franklin Radio Company of Newton, Ohio, the Economy Electric Lantern Company and John Sexton & Company, wholesale grocers, Chicago, the Crescent Calendar Company, Newton, Ohio, manufacturers of personal checks.

H. W. Kastor & Sons, Lytton Building, Chicago. Again placing orders with newspapers for the Foot Remedy Company, Chicago.

Kling-Gibson Company, 220 S. State street, Chicago. A list of Indiana towns has been selected for a try-out campaign on Edna Wallace Hopper (water softener).

Littlehale Advertising Agency, 175 Fifth avenue, New York. Has secured the account of the Everlastik Company, elastic webbing, New York.

Fred M. Randall Company, 6 N. Michigan avenue, Chicago. A small list of newspapers in scattered territory is being prepared for use on advertising of National Butter Producers.

Joseph Richards Company, 247 Park avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Manhattan Electrical Supply Company, New York.

Rogers & Smith, Inc., 326 W. Madison street, Chicago. Contracts for six insertions are being sent to newspapers on the Elto Outboard Motor Company.

Arthur Rosenberg Co., 110 West 34th street, New York. Has secured the account of the Herzog Radio Corporation of Brooklyn.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 242 Madison avenue, New York. After January 1, 1925, will handle account of Kops Bros., "Nemo Corsets," New York.

J. Walter Thompson Company, Inc., 14 E. Jackson boulevard, Chicago. A small list of newspapers throughout the middle west, mostly those with roto sections, however, is being made up to receive copy on Libby, McNeil, and Libby, Chicago (evaporated milk), sometime after the first of the year. The account of the Colortex Company, Chicago, formerly placed by the Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, Chicago, has been obtained, although nothing is contemplated on this account outside of Chicago until after the first of the year.

Frank Seaman, Inc., 470 4th avenue, New York. Handling account of Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., manufacturers of Lenses, Baloptiocons, etc.

Smith, Sturgis & Moore, 1463 Broadway, New York. Now handling account of the Innovation Trunk Company, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for the Briarcliff Lodge Hotel, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y.

Gerald B. Spiero Company, 1 West 34th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for Simon & Schuster, publishers, New York.

F. R. Steel Company, 201 East Ontario street, Chicago. Small schedules are being sent out to a general list of newspapers in the middle west on the Grein Pahls Food Products.

United Advertising Agency, 339 5th avenue, New York. After January 1, 1925, will handle account of B. T. Babbit Company, Babbit lye and cleanser, New York.

Alfred Wallerstein, Inc., 70 West 40th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Piso Company, medical, Warren, Pa.

World's Dispensary Medical Association. Making contracts with newspapers generally directly through W. H. Stuart, advertising manager.

YOU NEED ILLINOIS' APPROVAL

before your trade mark can be permanently planted in the Middle West.

In every section of the country there is one particular territory that is the recognized leader in all things. The rest of the section merely accepts the choice of this leader.

In the Middle West Illinois' approval is a guarantee that your merchandise will be accepted throughout this territory.

With the possible exception of New York, more merchandise of every kind is distributed through Illinois wholesalers, jobbers, and mail order houses than through any other state in the Union.

Illinois sets standards—is the headquarters for people from the Middle West and West.

Advertising placed in Illinois daily newspapers—telling people about products which may be procured from Illinois jobbers, links such merchandise to retailers who take their cue from Illinois, so it really has a tremendously far-reaching influence.

Succeed with These Dailies

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	16,982	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
†††Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune	(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Dispatch	(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Monmouth Daily Review Atlas	(E)	5,314	.035	.035
*Peoria Star—(E) 29,197	(S)	22,236	.085	.07
*Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
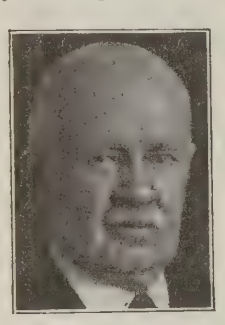
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.



ELLIOTT LOOKS BACK OVER FOUR FRUITFUL DECADES

New York Advertising Agent Came to New York in 1884 After Seven Years As a Chicago Reporter—His Office Has Been for Many Years on Street He Made Early in His Career

By A. R. ELLIOTT

EDITOR & PUBLISHER takes pleasure in granting the privileges of its columns to Mr. Elliott, who since 1884 has stood for all that is worthy in advertising and publishing practice. We join his many friends in wishing him long continuance of his fruitful labors.

IT was Dec. 2, 1884, when I began my career in New York, after seven years' experience in Chicago, where I began newspaper work Sept. 6, 1877, feeding a press, setting type, handling news boys, a cub reporter on the Chicago Times, and the Chicago Herald, doing editorial work on the Chicago Commercial, and finally a traveling correspondent for three Western newspapers. Then I decided to establish an advertising agency in New York.

A. R. ELLIOTT

At first I located at 2 College Place, which then extended from Chambers street, four blocks south to Barclay street. College Place was confusing; there is a College street on the East Side. I went to see Mayor Grant one day in 1889, and told how two College streets mixed up the mail.

"See your Alderman, Cornelius Flynn," he replied. "He keeps a sailor's saloon, down in Thames street."

I saw Flynn.

"What is it worth to yez?" said he. "Not one cent!" said I. "All right, I'll fix it," said he. He did, and in 1895 they pulled down all the buildings on the west side of College Place, to widen the street twenty feet. Then the three streets, South Fifth avenue, West Broadway, and College place, from Washington Square south to the intersection of Greenwich street, was called West Broadway. I had changed the map of the City of New York, with the help of the Board of Aldermen. I liked to get out of old ruts; and I was new from Chicago. I felt better; my business increased; and I moved north, three blocks to 166 West Broadway.

During my forty years in New York I have made the acquaintance of many publishers of magazines and daily newspapers. Some of them are still busy catering to the American reading public.

For example, just around the corner, at 81 Warren street, Frank Munsey was publishing a periodical called the Argosy. He was traveling no easy road then, but judging from the way his affairs are spoken of now, he has pulled through in pretty good shape, and has climbed high on the ladder of success. Munsey was born in Maine, the Scotland of America, and he comes from a stock of men reared in a climate that clears the brain, hardens the muscles, and gives a stout heart for a long race. I know, for my grandparents were from Maine and they raised me according to Maine ethics. When I did anything unfair they were as cool as ice. They did not believe in sparing the rod and spoiling the child.

I remember very well their application of Maine ethics.

Another man who has come to be very well known in the publishing business, used to drop in at my office frequently was Cyrus H. K. Curtis. He was from Philadelphia and was then engaged in pushing a woman's publication of an entirely new and progressive sort, and his Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post have arrived at the very peak of periodical publishing. I was always impressed with the fact that he was not content to sit in the little place on Arch street and wait for business to arrive, he went after it.

To save carfare, I established my domestic plant near my office. I was domiciled in a room on the top floor of Simm's old boarding house in Murray street. The room next to me was occupied by a young newspaper reporter named Arthur Brisbane, who at that time was a reporter on Dana's New York Sun. Brisbane was a live wire and could turn out more good, readable copy, than any newspaper writer I have ever known.

Eventually, Simm's hunger resort was about to be torn down, to make room for modern improvements. I met Arthur Brisbane one day and he said to me, "Elliott, they are tearing down Simm's hash factory. Before they destroy it let's go up and see the old rooms we used to occupy." We climbed up to the fourth floor and look the last look of the rooms that held for both of us, so many pleasant memories.

One day I chanced to call on William J. Rogers, secretary of the New York Condensed Milk Company (now the Borden Company), then in a small four-story building at 79 Murray street.

"Our firm has never really done any advertising," said Mr. Rogers.

"Why not begin," said I.

"All right!" said he, "write me some three-line squibs to run on the first page of every daily in New York; that will locate them beneath reading matter." It paid and we kept it up. We covered all the dailies in the Eastern States with those pungent readers. Later we used every leading daily in the country and then shifted to display copy. That first order is framed and hangs in my private office now, dated "February 28, 1890." For thirty-four years the name of this great company has not been off my books, and I am said to be one of its "large stockholders." In all these years I have placed millions of dollars for "The Borden Company."

In 1897 I was given a very substantial order for advertising from John Duncan's Sons, for Lea & Perrins' Sauce, that great English condiment that is known in many countries, by lovers of appetizing food. The account is still on my books and millions of dollars for publicity have been placed with my agency, in the last twenty-seven years.

In August, 1898, I made a call on the J. L. Prescott Company, now proprietors of about every brand of stove polish worth naming in the United States.

Mr. Prescott was about to leave his office one day for his summer outing in his camp in the Maine woods. "Mr. Elliott," said he, "I will think over this matter of advertising and let you hear from me."

He went away, and in about three weeks he wired me: "Come up here and catch fish." I like trout fishing and I found him in his camp. Nothing was said about advertising for a week. We were busy fishing and we caught fish; and I was also fishing for Prescott! I was leaving for New York Sunday night. As I was going he handed me an envelope. "Elliott," said he, "I like those ads very much; here is an order for you. Begin placing it at once!" When I opened the envelope on the train I had in hand an order for nearly $100,000 worth of advertising, to tell his story to American housekeepers. I had caught my largest fish. This account during twenty-six years, has been continuously on my books.

Good service holds customers.

I have been forty-seven years in newspaperdom—forty years in New York on the second day of December of this year. Many of my accounts have remained through all these years. I have never put doubtful accounts on my books and have never handled advertising for products that were unworthy of the confidence of the public. My losses for forty years have not been one-half of one percent. I have tried to give every customer a square deal. There is no other way to build up a business. I have seen scores of advertising agencies in New York come and go. When I began business here in 1884, there were not a dozen advertising agencies in the city; now there are said to be more than three hundred.

I wish them all well and as long a life in the field as it has been my good fortune to have been in it. In my employ I have had many faithful workers. They have been my right hand. I love newspaper and advertising work. If I were to live my life over again I would want to be back in the field where I have had so many happy years, and where I have made many good friends among advertisers and publishers, who I hope hold me in the high esteem in which I hold them.

CAMDEN DAILY TO BE SOLD

Articles of Incorporation Filed by New Company—Patterson Present Owner

The Camden (N. J.) Post-Telegram, for many years published by Representative F. F. Patterson, Jr., will change hands about Nov. 15, it was learned this week.

Articles of Incorporation have been filed for the Camden Post Telegram Company, with David Baird, Jr., Joseph H. Forsyth and Pierrepont I. Prentice named as the incorporators. Prentice, who was formerly connected with the New York Herald Tribune, will be general manager under the new ownership.

No more definite facts about the transfer could be learned, when EDITOR & PUBLISHER sought information this week. A statement would be forthcoming shortly, it was declared.

"EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE—
OUR RELATION TO SUBSCRIBERS"

When a publisher decides to take on our checking proof service—he hires us on the same basis as he would an employee—with the same privileges of hiring and firing.

We do not try to hold him on an iron-bound contract—because we don't believe in them where a personal service is concerned.

If we "make good" we expect to continue in his employment—otherwise he has the option of discontinuing on 30 days' notice.

The fact that we hold our subscribers—year in and year out—must indicate that we are trying our level best to please our "bosses" and that we are succeeding can readily be understood.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

The Business Men of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Babson News Service, Division of BABSON INSTITUTE, Babson Park, Mass.

SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 42,171 Average

Bought every day by more New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston—New York—Detroit—Chicago

Annual Review Number

Out in January. Elaborate issue of more than 200 pages. A complete advertising directory and handbook of the far West.

WESTERN ADVERTISING
566 Market St., San Francisco

6 months' trial subscription with Big January Annual $1

"KEEP MY NAME OUT" PLEA WEIGHED

(Continued from page 7)

argument that the original verdict would have been printed in the case of an unimportant citizen contains the fallacy that publicity for the fact in the two cases would have caused equal embarrassment, which was probably not true. At all events, the safe rule, "when in doubt, don't print," justifies the decision.

Case. A young business man was arrested in a neighboring town and fined for drunkenness. He returned home and begged the editor to withhold the story. He had borne a good reputation and was succeeding well in his first business venture. He assured the editor that he would never get drunk again. The item was withheld.

Comment. The editor embraced an opportunity to hold his newspaper as a disciplinary club over the head of a first offender. Few memories give an editor more satisfaction than those of the instances in which he took pity on youthful or other first offenders.

However, there should be a definite limit to the editor's forbearance.

Case. A telegraph story was sent to a large number of newspapers giving the results of an inquiry among married women as to their attitude towards marriage. As one editor viewed it, its effect was in the direction of discontent and cynicism.

He killed the story.

Comment. "Don't irritate people needlessly," is not a bad principle.

"DON'T VIOLATE A CONFIDENCE."—Suppression of news received in confidence is a matter in which considerable variance exists between theory and practice. The theory is admirable. Not only journalists but statesmen, speaking after dinner, laud the scrupulous care with which newspaper men hold inviolate confidential information. And it is all true, but it is not the whole truth. The fact is that newspapers are so often imposed upon in such cases as to discourage idealistic notions. Just as, under certain circumstances, men offer evidence in court in exchange for immunity, so they seek to trade confidential news in exchange for protection from publicity. Many revelations labeled as confidential are in fact not at all exclusive; may be likely any day to reach other newspapers. In some cases the public has a clear right to the information. And so it is not strange that newspapers sometimes evade the restrictions of a confidence—without damage to their consciences.

Case. A correspondent at the state capitol obtained a story in confidence. He was afraid it would "leak" to the other papers.

He wrote it under a date line from the other end of the state, injecting, "according to reliable information from the state capitol," and attaching a note to the state editor explaining the situation. It was printed.

Case. A reporter got a tip in confidence that a grand jury was to be called.

He reported to the city editor that the prosecutor had given him the information in confidence. Acting on the tip, the city editor was able to get the information from another source. Then he printed it.

Comment. The standing rule in newspaper offices to respect confidence is good policy as well as good ethics. Evasion or deception here, as anywhere else, can be justified only by the motive—the end. But reporters may well be cautioned against making any promises of suppression for their paper, if not for themselves. The man higher up is the only judge in such cases.

"DON'T BE A TOOL." A newspaper may be "used" sometimes in giving publicity to a story, sometimes in withholding it. All kinds of people try to use the newspaper to punish their private enemies or to promote their private interests. When known, they lose popularity with the editor.

Case. The day before an automobile show was open in a large city, a resolution was introduced into the city council calling for searching investigation by fire, police and building committees into the conditions at the exhibition hall. Speeches were made on the necessity for safety precautions of all kinds. The horrors of a recent disaster in another city were graphically painted. But the reporters knew that the whole rumpus grew out of what the members of the council regarded as a niggardly allowance to them of complimentary tickets. By frightening the people away from the show, they hoped to make the management of the hall "come across."

No paper printed a word of the story.

Comment. An excellent example of salutary suppression.

"DON'T ADD FUEL TO A FIRE." No greater responsibility rests on a newspaper than that of helping to maintain order and obedience to law, and to discourage class antagonism or race hatred.

Case. At a time when race prejudice in a southern city was threatening violent expression, a story was brought to a newspaper that a young white woman had been insulted by a negro as she stepped into the elevator which he operated in a downtown store. The editor knew that only an insignificent spark was needed to start a conflagration.

The story was suppressed.

Comment. This case invites comparison with another in which the bloody riots in a race war in a southern city were generally ascribed to the sensational and therefore inflammatory articles printed in one of the daily papers.

As an eastern metropolitan newspaper states the matter in its office rules: "Don't stress the fact that the villain of your story is a negro, or an Italian, or a Methodist, unless that fact is essential. It is injurious to the interests of the paper to indict a race, or a nationality, or a religion, for the misdoing of an individual."

"DON'T LEAVE THE FIELD TO RUMOR." The most primitive newspapers recognized and proclaimed their purpose to "discourage rumors."

Case. An automobile driven by a prominent business man and a member of one of the "first families" of the city was wrecked on the road from a neighboring town late at night. The man suffered broken legs and other injuries. With him was a married woman, also of a leading family in the city, who received severe injuries and was taken to a hospital in the city. The morning paper made no mention of there having been a woman in the accident. A brother of the injured man was quoted as saying he was alone in the car. Relatives interviewed the editor of the evening paper and asked him to save a scandal by suppressing the facts. Moreover, the father-in-law of the woman said that she had spent the previous day visiting friends in the neighboring town and while waiting to board an interurban car for her return had been offered a ride home by the young business man. He insisted that the meeting was entirely unpremeditated and innocent. The victims of the accident were old friends and had not been the subject of previous gossip.

The paper printed the entire story, including the father-in-law's explanation of the circumstances.

Comment. The newspaper is not a regulator of people's private lives, though the fear of publicity, like the fear of the police judge or the penitentiary, is a wholesome influence. But in this case the editor who mutilated the story in the morning paper made himself ridiculous. His only choice was between printing the whole story or suppressing the whole story. Moreover, suppression was ineffective. Rumor about the woman in the case spread quickly over the city. The explanation given by the father-in-law did not go along with them. The evening paper, in giving a full account of the affair, really did a kindness to all concerned—a fact that was later acknowledged by them.

"PUBLICITY AS A BIG STICK." The threat of publicity has been as a corrective influence, or, as in the following case, as a means of bringing about action desired by the editor.

Case. A judge of a state supreme court, according to evidence laid before the editor of a metropolitan newspaper, was guilty of questionable professional conduct. The judge said he was innocent but that he was an old man and "broke," and that the publication of the story would lead to tragedy. He agreed to resign from the court if the story was withheld.

The story was suppressed and the judge resigned.

Comment. The editor in this case sat as an extra-legal judge, heard the evidence, and passed sentence. The power of his authority came not from the law but from his engine of publicity. Neither can it be said that the threat of publicity would have been impotent if the law also had not been against the accused judge. Many an innocent man has been injured by ruthless publicity. The decision in the case seems highly questionable.

Canadian Newspapers Meet Nov. 14

The annual meeting of the Canadian National Newspapers' and Periodicals' Association takes place at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on Nov. 14.

JANUARY
5th
Release Date for the First of
HERMAN BERNSTEIN'S
100 Daily Close-Ups of Europe
The FEDERAL FEATURE SYNDICATE
160 Fifth Avenue
New York City

Ten Months' Lead

In ten months of this year The New York Times published 21,568,274 agate lines of advertising, a gain of 1,786,864 lines over the corresponding period of last year and an excess over the second New York newspaper of 7,548,298 lines.

THE same standards of quality are maintained by The News today that caused this paper to be recognized as one of America's best dailies long years ago.

The Dallas Morning News
Supreme in Texas

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
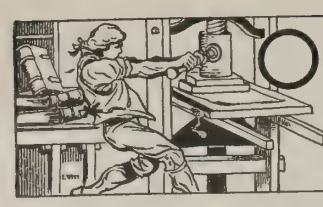
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

KANSAS
is an agricultural state. 1924 is its best crop year in a decade. The towns and cities share with the farmers in the new prosperity. Topeka, the capital city, is the buying center for the rich Kaw Valley.

Primary Distribution



Owing to the class of its merchants, its strategic sales territory and the cooperation given by the CAPITAL, most national advertisers include Topeka in their primary distribution campaigns.

Topeka Daily Capital
Member A. B. C.
Arthur Capper, Publisher
Marco Morrow, Asst. Publisher

A Stable Market

THE Milwaukee-Wisconsin market offers your most dependable sales opportunity in 1924! The first city of diversified industries located in the world's richest dairying center—an unbeatable combination — thoroughly covered by one advertising medium—

The Milwaukee JOURNAL
FIRST - by Merit

OUR OWN WORLD OF LETTERS

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

AMERICAN journalism changed more during the administration of Andrew Jackson than during any other period in its history. Consequently, "Party Battles of the Jackson Period" by Claude G. Bowers (Houghton-Mifflin Company) contains much that both entertains and instructs the newspaper man of today in matters relating to press and politics.

The volume graphically describes the battle between Jackson and the opposition press, and the fight waged by the old United States Bank on certain newspapers of the time. Interesting glimpses are given of Mordecai Manuel Noah, Amos Kendall, James Watson Webb, Francis P. Blair, Duff Green, Isaac Hill, Moses Dawson, Major Henry Lee—half brother of Robert E. Lee, and other great editors of the period.

When Jackson sent his list of nominations to the Senate he certainly did include a "batch of editors"—mostly for comparatively minor positions. Even Schouler, as Mr. Bowers points out, was distressed to find so many mere "press writers on the list. But Mr. Bowers insists that the fact that they were mere editors is not sufficient to make them "infamous characters," and he adds that the "batch of editors" whose names Jackson sent to the Senate were men who had long been attached to the cause that Jackson personified.

The story that Mr. Bowers tells about this stirring period of American political history compares favorably, from the viewpoint of interest, with any political story of today that is marked by the chief editor, "First page, must."

John Farrar and Stephen Benet, both of whom are connected with The Bookman, recently produced a play entitled "That Awful Mrs. Eaton." For the details about how Mrs. Eaton wrecked Jackson's cabinet the reader is referred to "Party Battles of the Jackson Period." In making this comment I hope I am not following in the footsteps of a somewhat distinguished literary critic, who said in a department of one of the leading publications for women, "This is a book that no young lady ought to read." Up to that time the volume, though somewhat salacious, had not sold many copies. But after the remark made by the distinguished literary critic the presses could not print editions fast enough.

But to be more serious, "Party Battles of the Jackson Period" is a more interesting volume to me than any of the recent novels. Its accuracy of statement is unquestionable, and its character delineation is extremely well done.

* * *

THE attitude of Grover Cleveland toward the press was, in some particulars, similar to that of Andrew Jackson. This fact is well brought out in an article, "Grover Cleveland—Estimate of His Character and Work," by George F. Parker in The Saturday Evening Post for October 25. Cleveland's relation with the press may be found specifically mentioned on page 121 of that issue.

Mr. Parker says:

Cleveland's attitude toward the newspaper was clear. He did not believe that it fairly reflected the intelligence, the good will or the morals of our people. He had an unconquerable horror for exclusive news about his movements or opinions, and if he found that someone had obtained access to something of the sort, he would go out of his way to make it useless by insisting that it be given to another. He was as incorrigible in this respect with the greatest editors as with the humblest reporters.

* * *

THE A. S. Adell Company, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, has just issued a revised edition of "The Making of a Newspaper" by Henry Edward Warner. The new edition contains some very valuable historical matter about the contributions of the Baltimore Sun to American journalism. I refer specifically to the pony expresses, the use of pigeons to convey news, and the first use by a newspaper of the electric telegraph invented by Samuel F. B. Morse of New York University.

The revised edition contains an excellent portrait of Arunah Sheperdson Abell—the founder of the Sun. Other illustrations make this revised edition especially attractive. Copies of the booklet may be obtained from "Seeing The Sun" Department, Sun Square, Baltimore.

The story told by Mr. Warner is so entertaining that I am sure that if his booklet falls into the hands of a literary advisor of one of the book publishing houses it will not be long before Mr. Warner is asked to enlarge his pamphlet into a book for general distribution.

* * *

J. W. CUNLIFFE, director of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, in reviewing "Cobb of The World" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) for the Journalism Bulletin gives one of the best sketches of Cobb's career that has yet appeared in print. The same issue of the Bulletin contains a sketch of William Allen White by Helen O. Mahin, who is connected with the School of Journalism at the University of Kansas. The Journalism Bulletin is the official organ of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism.

* * *

THOMAS L. SIDLO, attorney for the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance, is publishing a series of articles on libel for The Service Paper—a sort of house organ distributed by the Newspaper Enterprise Association of Cleveland, Ohio. This series of articles has more "guts" than anything I have seen in a long time on the subject of libel.

The future is unusually bright. We will not have to look at pictures of candidates milking cows and pitchforking hay up into the loft.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

ABBOTT TO ADDRESS SIGMA DELTA CHI

Boston Editor Principal Speaker at National Convention of Journalistic Fraternity at Indiana University —Dailies to Entertain

Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, will be the principal speaker at the national convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 17, 18 and 19. Delegates from all of the 38 active chapters at universities and colleges throughout the country will be in attendance.

In addition to the address by Mr. Abbot, the program includes an address by William Lowe Bryan, president of Indiana University; T. Hawley Tapping, national president of the fraternity; F. W. Beckman, past honorary president; Professor J. W. Piercy, head of the journalism department of the university, and other national officers and leaders in the organization. Members and delegates will journey to Indianapolis the third day of the convention, where a business session will be held at the Claypool Hotel in the morning. A lunch will be given by the Indianapolis Star at noon. Another business session will be held in the afternoon, and the Indianapolis Times and the Scripps-Howard Company will be host at a 6 o'clock dinner. The closing event of the day's program will be a theatre party given by the Indianapolis News. Tours of the Indianapolis newspaper plants will be on the program.

The convention was held at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, last year.

VANDERBILT CAPITAL INCREASED

Stockholders Vote $10,000,000 Additional Stock in His Newspapers

Stockholders of Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., voted to increase the capital stock of that organization from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000 at a meeting held in the plant of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, Oct. 27. There were 33,751 votes favoring the increase and but 57 against.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., stated that the increased capitalization was desired for the enlargement of his present plants and for the construction of new plants and possibly for the construction of his own pulp and paper mills.

Sues for Ad Commission

Claiming that he procured advertising contracts worth $16,500 for the South Norwalk (Conn.) Evening Sentinel in the time when Emma L. Golden and Agnes L. Golden-Kelly, widow and daughter respectively of James L. Golden, founder of the publication, were still publishers, and that he was paid but $1,600 in commissions, Thomas J. McDonald, of New York City, has brought suit in the Superior Court of Fairfield county, Bridgeport, Connecticut, for the balance of his commission which he claims was to be $4,125. The case has not yet been assigned for trial.

A wife is a great comfort to her husband during those distressing times a single man never has.—Miami (Okla.) News-Record.

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

Daily Circulation.....130,891
Sunday Circulation....182,313

Member A. B. C.

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Always Reliable

The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

Do Something For the Community

Did you read in this space a week ago the suggested copy to stimulate church attendance, to be used on the Saturday preceding Thanksgiving?

Look up last week's Editor and Publisher.

Many publishers believe the use of such material will help the community, and thereby, their own paper. The material published last week is one of 52 advertisements which comprise Series No. 6. The series is sold for use to only one paper in a town at a cost of 3 cents per week per thousand circulation.

If you desire a full set of proofs, ask Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising
383 Madison Ave.

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS OF THE WORLD — TRUTH

Clubs of the World
New York City

CIRCULATION

FOR ALL DISTRIBUTORS OF DAILY NEWSPAPERS

By J. Omansky

ONE of the hardest jobs circulators have is to get newsstand owners to take the handling of newspapers seriously and give the paper end of their business the attention it deserves.

We are referring to the owners of drug stores, confectioneries, groceries and the like who handle newspapers as a side-line and often consider them a necessary evil.

Waking dealers up to the big profit in selling papers and getting them to push your own paper can be done if some of the methods employed by mercantile houses are resorted to. When the "Cure-em-Quickly" man calls on a druggist he tells him what profit he can make on his product, gives him window displays and other selling helps, and the home office keeps the dealer interested with letters and bulletins from time to time.

In just the same way newspapers can show dealers that they make from 50 to 100 per cent profit on papers, that no investment is required, that there is practically no loss, and that most of the paper buyers are also customers for more expensive articles. District men should drive these thoughts home continually and the office should follow up with frequent letters that would call attention to the superior qualities of the paper, special features, new serial stories and the like. When you get the news dealers to read your paper regularly they will recommend it.

* * *

We were visiting recently with a man who was in the newspaper business for more than a score of years as reporter, editor, and manager of one of the largest syndicates in America. During his later years in the business he dealt largely with features and believed that they had more to do with getting and holding circulation than any other part of the paper. Now, after being only a newspaper reader for about a year he is convinced that people want news above all else and that the average paper must concentrate on giving all the news to be successful.

* * *

We mention this here because circulators are prone to pay more attention to features, to advertise them almost exclusively and often overlook the news departments. We catch ourself every once in a while stressing the importance of features when we should be checking the news columns to see that our paper has clear, concise, yet complete accounts of all events. Printing all the news first and using whatever space is left for features is the product circulators should try to get.

* * *

How about editorials? We don't care much what the editor says on his page just so he says it vigorously and keeps away from the news room.

* * *

About four years ago we quit using express altogether in favor of baggage. Almost all railroads are glad to handle papers and their rates average 50 per cent less than the rates charged by the express companies. We really believed that the switch from express to baggage was general throughout the country but we were surprised to learn the other day of several papers that are still using express service.

Another way to cut shipping costs is to eliminate as much as possible the sending of dealers' bundles by mail. It is so easy for dispatch clerks to slap bundles on the mail galley that it is necessary to go over the dealers' mail lists frequently and transfer as many bundles as possible to baggage or even express which is also cheaper than mail.

* * *

Interest in radio is picking up again. Papers with special radio sections or pages will, we believe, get an increase in sales from now until Spring. The pick up will probably not be as great as it was last year because radio fans do not seem to be building as many sets themselves but they are still intensely interested in the subject and read all the radio "dope" they can get.

Now is a good time to advertise your radio department with office ads and window cards in newsstands and radio stores.

* * *

James McKernan, veteran circulator of New York City, advocates frequent luncheons and meetings between competing circulators. We subscribe heartily to Mr. Kernan's plan and believe that its general adoption would tend to reduce much of the existing senseless and futile competition. When we break bread with a man or take a drink with him we are not so apt to throw bricks at him or take an unfair advantage of him in a situation of which we happen to be in temporary control.

This association and fostering of good will in the business is one of the most profitable accomplishments of the I. C. M. A. and the state organizations. Now it's about time for rival circulators to get together in an informal, friendly manner.

* * *

The tendency to kill out technical language from financial and sport stories and music and book reviews will be welcomed by every circulator in the land. We were past 20 before we knew the difference between "bull" and "bear" and even now we are often bewildered with the bourse lingo which financial writers inflict on us.

When a music critic writes that a soloists' tone was blurry or that the intonation was bad that means nothing to us. We want to read a criticism in our language and so do most concert goers.

Sport writers would also make more readers for their stuff if they would sacrifice some of their picturesque language for the sake of simplicity.

* * *

The Richmond (Va.) Times Dispatch is getting out an interesting carrier paper. The October issue had two pages of carriers' pictures, several columns of personality stories about boys, plenty of jokes and "wise cracks" and it had less propaganda than is found in most house organs. The paper would be much improved if it were printed more carefully and a bigger type used.

DIXIE CIRCULATORS ELECT CORBIN

Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News Man New President of Carolinas-Virginia Association—Greensboro Named 1925 Convention City

W. T. Corbin, of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News, was elected president of the Carolinas-Virginia Circulation Managers' Association in annual convention at Charleston, S. C., last week. Greensboro also was chosen as the convention city for next year.

A. F. Carrere, of the Charleston News and Courier, was named vice-president; H. F. Shaner, of the Lynchburg (Va.) News, second vice-president, and C. E. Ader, of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, secretary and treasurer.

V. L. T. Cooper, of the Charleston Evening Post, was chosen a director of the association, succeeding H. L. Strickland, of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer, and Will X. Coley, of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, was named on the directorate in place of Mr. Shaner who was elevated to a vice-presidency.

Mayor Stoney formally welcomed the circulation managers from the principal cities of Virginia and the two Carolinas to Charleston when the convention opened at the Fort Sumter Hotel. A banquet Monday night tendered by the publishers of the Charleston Evening Post and the Charleston News and Courier, together with an inspection of the U. S. S. Arkansas in the harbor for Navy Day exercises were entertaining features of the convention.

At the business sessions experiences were exchanged and methods compared.

ISSUING FUR DICTIONARY

Will Carry Correct Trade Names and Rules for Advertising

The National Association of the Fur Industry, to curb misrepresentation in fur advertising, is issuing a "Dictionary of Fur Names," with rules for advertising. Dealers are being instructed to follow these suggestions in their public announcements.

In describing a fur, the correct name must be used, and if any dye or blend is used in imitating another fur, the word "dyed" or "blended" must be inserted between the true name of the fur, as "Seal-Dyed Muskrat" or "Mink-Dyed Marmot."

All furs shaded, blended, topped, dyed or pointed, must be described as such; as "Black-Dyed Fox," or "Pointed Fox."

Where the name of any country or district is used, it shall be the actual country of origin of the fur.

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service

21 Spruce St., New York

again

ON THE

San Francisco Chronicle

Both in the methods we use and in the results we obtain, we please the publishers of great metropolitan dailies throughout the country. That is why we are constantly being invited to repeat our successes for the same papers, as we are now doing for The San Francisco Chronicle.

HOLLISTER

CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION

717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

YOU MUST TELL THE BUSINESS MEN OF YOUR TOWN ABOUT

BUSINESS

If you don't it will COST YOU MONEY

John T. Flynn's Daily Business Reviews deal with fundamental business conditions of vital interest to every business man. They are backed by the greatest business news collecting organization in America, The United Publishers Corporation, publishers of Iron Age, Dry Goods Economist and a score of other nationally known business publications.

Write for Particulars to

Edward F. Roberts, Editorial Director

U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, INC.

243 W. 39th St., New York City

a Commissioner writes of DOPE

Official revelations by the greatest living expert on narcotics—

DR. CARLETON SIMON

Actual stories more thrilling than any imagination could invent. 20 weekly articles including—"Between Whispering Curtains," "Women of the Shadow World," "The Decay of a Doctor," etc., under the general heading THE MENACE OF DOPE.

First release Sunday, November 16, 1924
Wire or write.

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.

799 Broadway New York City

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service

Home Life Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Times Building, New York

NEWS EDITORS FILE:

Los Angeles and So. Calif. News Dispatches Filed to You Promptly Over W. U. or Postal at Regular Rates.

SOUTHLAND NEWS SERVICE
418 Lissner Bldg., Los Angeles

BARNARD RESIGNS AS VIGILANCE CHIEF

Director of A.A.C.W.'s Anti-Fraud Committee Takes Managership of Detroit Better Business Bureau—W. P. Green in Charge

Kenneth Barnard, director of the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World resigned this week to become manager of the Better Business Bureau of Detroit. The managing committee has empowered William P. Green, an associate director of the Vigilance Committee with full responsibility for the direction of the department.

KENNETH BARNARD

Mr. Barnard, who has been one of the leaders in the "Truth in Advertising" movement, leaves national headquarters with the movement operating at its greatest efficiency. Under his administration, rapid strides have been made. Through the development of a Case Department to serve industries along specialized lines, more complaints involving advertising suspected of being deceptive are being successfully handled than at any time in the history of the movement. Better Business Bureaus have increased to 40 in number and one department at headquarters now devotes its entire attention to the gathering of information for them and other organizations engaged in curbing deceptive and fraudulent advertising practices.

During Mr. Barnard's administration, hundreds of federal indictments and prosecutions culminated the committee's drive against fake oil stock promoters in Texas and California.

In commenting on Barnard's resignation, Herbert S. Houston, chairman of the Vigilance Board of Trustees, said that it indicates the tremendous growth of the bureau movement, in that four former directors of the National Vigilance Committee are now at the head of strong local organizations.

When the Merchandise Section of the New York Bureau begins operations the first of December, the bureau will have a total budget for financial and retail work in excess of $100,000 a year. The Detroit Bureau has more than doubled its budget within the last three months and on the new basis will be expending around $40,000 a year. This latter figure is more than the National Vigilance Committee itself was spending six years ago.

Business Bureau Director Resigns

Walter B. R. Wright has resigned as managing director of the Better Business Bureau of the Baltimore Advertising Club to become executive secretary of the Maryland Motor Federation.

INSURANCE NEEDS ADVERTISING

Newspapers Lauded as Media at Pittsburgh Insurance Meet

Insurance companies are directly responsible for the large "mortality" or failures, among their agents because they have not given them the proper amount of advertising, Homer J. Buckley, president of Buckley, Dement & Co. told members of the Insurance Advertising Conference, an affiliation of the A. A. C. W. at its convention last week in Pittsburgh. Mr. Buckley, who is also chairman of the Postal Committee of the National Advertising Commission, was the chief speaker at the sessions. His subject was "Turning Cold Prospects Into Live Leads."

In connection with his remarks upon the failure of the large insurance companies to back their agents with advertising, Mr. Buckley, although a direct-by-mail enthusiast, paid tribute to the power of newspaper advertising. Others of the 150 life insurance company advertising managers, in general discussion, also put their stamp of approval upon newspaper advertising, many claiming it to be more valuable than any other medium.

The two day convention closed with a banquet at the William Penn Hotel.

Edward A. Collins of New York, president of the Insurance Advertising Conference, presided at the sessions.

Bill Permits State Advertising

A bill to provide for newspaper and magazine advertising of the State of North Carolina has been drawn up by the Legislative Advertising Committee of the North Carolina Real Estate Board in session at Raleigh. The bill will be submitted to the General Assembly for ratification in January. The committee also indorsed a bill authorizing cities and other municipal divisions to use funds derived from taxes for advertising purposes.

Heydon Heads New York B.B.B.

H. R. Heydon has been appointed manager of the merchandising section of the New York Better Business Bureau, which will start operation Nov. 15, with the purpose of eliminating untruthful and misleading advertising and to improve the confidence of the public in advertising and retail stores in general.

Chevrolet Offering Ad Service

The Chevrolet Motor Company, through it advertising department, recently established a dealer's advertising service to aid in raising the standard of Chevrolet newspaper advertisements placed in the local press and paid for by the dealers. The service consists of mats and stereos and advertisements prepared by skilled advertising writers.

Fire Damages Canadian Plant

The building occupied and owned by the Glace Bay (N. S.) Maritime Labor Herald, a weekly, was severely damaged by fire recently. Pending repairs the Labor Herald is being printed in Halifax.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.
Nine Partlow mouth and throat unit heat controls for Intertypes, Linotypes, and Ludlow. Cost new $110.00. Used three months. Will sell for $85.00. Address Post Office Box 1131, Lancaster, Pa.

For Sale
Sixteen-page Potter web press, printing 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 16 page papers, 22½ inches long, 7 columns 13 ems wide, extra color on four pages. Speed 10,000 per hour. Papers folded to half page. With stereotype machinery and motor. A good press at a low price. Send for details and price (our No. 589). Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York. (Many other machines for sale, "Used but Good." Let us know your wants.)

For Sale.
Cox Duplex Flat Bed Web press, printing 4, 6 or 8 pages 7 col. 13 ems; or 8 col. 12 ems. Paper page 17½x22½ inches. Replaced by 16-page web press—must be moved quick—very low price. Price and sample of its work on application. Wire or write for details, referring to our No. 590. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York.

For Sale.
32 page Goss Straightline Press, full color equipment, immediate delivery; 48 page Goss Sextuple High Speed, full color deck, delivery January, 1925; 48 page Hoe Sextuple, delivery January, 1925. Consolidation of newspapers puts these presses on market at most attractive prices. Further information from Press-Telegram, Long Beach, California.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Used Newspaper Presses

Scott Quadruple Press Four Deck Two Pages Wide prints 4 to 34 pages.

Hoe Right Angle Quadruple Press, prints 4 to 32 pages.

Hoe Sextuple Press, prints 4 to 24 pages.

These three presses cut off pages 22¾ inches long, print 7 or 8 columns to the page.

PRESSES AVAILABLE FOR EARLY DELIVERY

Walter Scott & Co.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO
1457 Broadway, NEW YORK

N. Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT
SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE MEMPHIS APPEAL
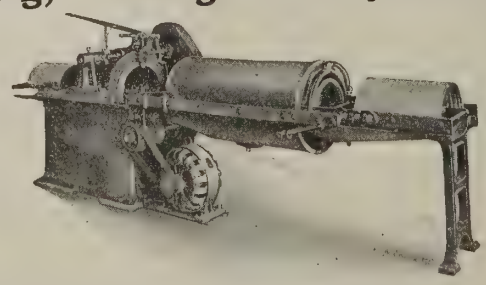
Memphis, Tenn.
We refer you to them for their opinion



CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO
QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE, Fisher Building, 343 S. Dearborn St., CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE, Marbridge Building, Broadway at 34th St., NEW YORK

GOSS
STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
The Goss Mat Roller rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Also supplied for wet mats only. Impressions accurate — both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Bed can be furnished long enough to roll a double page form. Write for complete catalog. The Goss Printing Press Company, Chicago.

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Finishing, Cooling and Drying Machine

Trims, tail-cuts, shaves, cools and dries six plates a minute.

R. HOE & CO.
504-520 Grand Street, New York City
7 South Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL. 7 Water St., BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man.
Display, classified. Contracts. Features. New accounts. Copy writer, 11 years' experience. Large and small cities. Married. Family. Age 31. Permanent connection as solicitor or manager desired. Short trial will prove ability. Address B-933, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Advertising man, 8 years' experience, seeks advancement, preferably as Advertising Manager with a small but go ahead paper. Can handle entire work of Advertising Dept. efficiently, is conscientious worker, with plenty of modern ideas, ability to spot opportunities and make the most of them. Can control and produce 100% efficiency from a sales force. Also adaptable to circulation work, special features, contests, etc., and willing to include this work if needed. Willing to go anywhere. Married, age 28. Moderate salary to commence. Box 956, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager—Solicitor.
Have you a place in your organization for a capable young advertising executive, copywriter and solicitor? All my working life has been spent in the newspaper business; have a working knowledge of every department including mechanical end. Pleasing, energetic, convincing personality; the ability to meet and talk to one or a hundred men, a thorough knowledge of advertising and merchandising methods, including the discernment as to the advertiseability of products and a good creative imagination that can dig up possibilities and develop them into space users. Available now for job as advertising manager—solicitor on strong small daily. Salary about $3,000 a year. Aged 31, family. Splendid recommendations. Address B-938, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist
Desires position that can offer better future than one he now holds. Experienced in all newspaper art. Address B-939, Editor & Publisher

Circulation and Promotion Manager.
Will promote and maintain staple circulation of all classifications at a moderate cost. Economist, keen executive. Salary $5,200. Contract after 3 months' employment. B-958, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager,
, married, desires immediate connection with evening newspaper. Able executive; 20 years' experience in circulation and promotion. Highest references. Willing to go anywhere. Address Box B-960, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager,
employed, wants to make change soon. Excellent references. Prefer paper in city of 50,000, or more. Have made good. Can again. Second paper no objection. Write Box B-961, care Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor.
Who plays ball with advertising and circulation departments, now in market for high-class connection. Nationally known publisher paid him as managing editor an annual bonus for phenomenal circulation building without premiums. Thoroughly conversant with all departments and fit of operating them. Long experienced. In the prime of life. Clean-cut, dynamic, versatile. At the top of his game now. Address Box 946, Editor & Publisher.

GETTING INTO PRINT

IF you build a new plant or put over a worth-while scheme you want everyone to know about it. So, you get it into print.

If you want a man to fill a vacancy; if you want a job; if you want capital or equipment; or if you want to sell your old equipment, why not

Get It Into Print

in

The Market Place of the Newspaper

Situations Wanted

Columnist.
Well known and popular columnist open for connection with newspaper or magazine. Writer of editorials, reviews, humorous articles, special articles, interviews, satire and poetry for best known papers and magazines. Box B-954, Editor & Publisher.

Deskman.
Last three years in Boston, rapid, accurate, absolutely dependable, American, 31, best of references, wants desk job on high-grade daily; size of paper or city immaterial; available immediately. B-959, care Editor & Publisher.

Financial Editor.
Young man, college educated, sound knowledge of business finance, investments, accounting and stock market, wants position as financial editor. Man who can make financial page interesting to small investor as well as to large capitalist. B-922, Editor & Publisher.

Managing or Executive Editor.
Can show record as circulation builder. Now employed city of 200,000. Box B-957, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor for Small Daily.
Widely trained news executive, business and circulation builder available for Eastern paper where future and part ownership in addition to salary are assured. Columbia graduate; 14 years' experience, including 5 years N. Y. Times as well as small cities. Now Army officer, recently handling Plattsburg Camp publicity. Lieut. C. E. Lovejoy, care Editor & Publisher.

News Editor.
Ten years' experience in South and Southwest. Know news, understand men. Will locate in East or Northwest where salary is liberal and authority is unhampered. Age 35, married, sober, and hard worker. B-952, Editor & Publisher.

Office Manager.
Seven years' experience in office routine, on newspaper 30,000, from clerk to bookkeeper, classified to display solicitant, wants position near New York. What have you to offer for a man of 30. Write Box B-948, care Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Experienced Bookkeeper
wanted by a suburban daily convenient to New York City; one familiar with newspaper accounting and office systems preferred; steady employment for right person; must have highest references as to character and ability and be willing to be bonded at employer's expense. Give full particulars, including salary expected, in first letter. Address Box B-951, Editor & Publisher.

High Type Salesman.
Newspaper syndicate located in New York City wants high type salesman to call on newspapers. Excellent opportunity for the right man. Replies treated confidential. B-947, Editor & Publisher.

CIRCULATION BUILDERS

100% Circulation Increase for Daily Times, Kingsport, Tenn. Our campaign will give you the circulation you have longed for and we guarantee you satisfactory results. Make arrangements now for a campaign during the dull months of Jan. and Feb. Indiana Circulation and Advertising Co., Toney E. Flack, Shelbyville, Ind.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Newspaper Brokerage and Appraisal Company
Will sell established concern. Large clientele. Responsible party. Might arrange terms. Substantial cash payment required. Exceptional opportunity. Address B-953, Editor & Publisher.

Newspapers Wanted.
Newspaper Publisher of years' experience wants to buy New England daily in good live city or would consider buying a substantial or controlling interest if proposition is right—ample capital. Address in strictest confidence for interview. Box B-950, Editor & Publisher.

One-Third Interest
in well equipped young advertising agency located in thriving section of country in city of 25,000 midway between New York and Chicago for $8,500.00. Unexcelled opportunity for man 30 to 40 that knows advertising and can sell it. Agency incorporated, virgin field, good salary and expenses. B-955, Editor & Publisher.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PAYING OVER 16% and $2,000 SALARY can be bought for $5,800—part deferred. Owner has opportunity to purchase job printing plant, which he prefers. Outlying towns swell advertising volume; job printing from two important educational institutions. Equipment includes Linotype, Miehle cylinder (recently installed) and two Gordons. Our No. 6830.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SWOPE TO ADDRESS MICHIGAN EDITORS

Attendance of 225 Expected at Meeting of University of Michigan Press Club to Be Held in Ann Arbor, Nov. 20-22

Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the New York World, will be the principal speaker at the sixth annual conference of the University of Michigan Press Club, No. 20 to 22, inclusive, at Ann Arbor.

Registration will begin Nov. 20, the first event being a luncheon meeting of the Associated Press, Michigan League of Home Dailies, Michigan Press Association and the League of Press Women.

In the afternoon President A. L. Miller, editor of the Battle Creek Inquirer and News, will appoint committees, after which Professor E. G. Burrows, of the university department of journalism, will speak on "Teaching Theory and Practice in Journalism." A round-table discussion of "The Plan of the Community Weekly in Modern Newspaper Development," will be held during the afternoon.

The evening of Nov. 20, the annual Press Club dinner will be held at the Michigan Union, presided over by Dean John R. Effinger of the literary college. Herbert Bayard Swope will speak on "Is the Newspaper Fulfilling Its Mission," after which Professor William A. Frayer, of the history department of the University, will tell of "The Historian Looking Over the Newspaper."

Friday morning Stuart H. Perry, editor and publisher of the Adrian (Mich.) Daily Telegram, will speak on "Contempt in Newspaper Libel Cases," upon which subject he recently delivered an address before the Inland Daily Press Association at its meeting in Chicago. Dean Henry M. Bates, of the University law school, will lead a discussion on "Libel and Its Penalties." Arthur R. Treanor, Saginaw News Courier, will speak on "Newspaper Features and Their Uses."

Friday afternoon Professor Jesse S. Reeves, of the political science department of the University will deliver an address on "Domestic Perspective in Foreign News," and Professor Joseph R. Haydon will tell of "News In and From the Philippine Islands."

Willis J. Abbott, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, and Dean Edmund E. day, of the University school of business administration will speak Friday evening. Election of officers and a business session Saturday morning, followed by a visit to the Iowa-Michigan football game will close the 1924 gathering.

OCEAN DAILIES MERGE JAN. 1

Chicago Tribune's Oceanic Edition Will Combine with Ocean Times

Definite arrangements have been concluded by the Chicago Tribune for consolidation of its Oceanic Edition with the Ocean Times, a daily paper published by the Wireless Press, a subsidiary of Marconi Limited, London.

The combine will become effective Jan. 1, when the new publication resulting will take the name Chicago Tribune-Ocean Times.

The Tribune's Oceanic Edition was established in May, 1923, for distribution on all passenger vessels operated by the United States Shipping Board upon the Atlantic. The Ocean Times is now being distributed on boats operated by the International Mercantile Marine and the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company.

Arrangements for the amalgamation were consummated [illegible] Col. R. R. McCormick [illegible] Paris early this

BARNJUM QUITS PULP EMBARGO FIGHT

Canadian Leader of Embargo Forces, Disgusted With Politicians, Offers His Mills and Timberlands For Sale

Frank J. D. Barnjum of Ottawa, one of the leaders in the endeavor to have an embargo imposed on the export of pulpwood from Canada, has given up the fight and is offering for sale all of his properties in Nova Scotia. In an unusual announcement of his decision, he states that governmental indifference concerning the country's diminishing forest resources has resulted in him becoming ashamed of his citizenship.

Barnjum has been a prominent figure in the pulp and paper industry for several years. He retired from active business three years ago, and since then has devoted his efforts and a considerable part of his wealth to the cause of forest conservation. His almost lone crusade has accomplished little, in his estimation, and in writing "30" to it he has not hesitated to say what he thinks of "the politicians and exploiters who can see nothing beyond their own petty interests, and to whom public welfare is a joke."

In offering his pulp mills, lands and other properties for sale, Barnjum declares he does so through sheer disgust "notwithstanding my conviction that timber lands will double in value in two years." He predicts a panic in timberland prices once the various interests concerned become fully aware just how small the remaining resources are.

Barnjum charges criminal deception concerning the extent of Canada's forests, and in support of this statement cites the fact that an aerial survey of a large Quebec area shows it to be 75 per cent burned. He also declares that between six and nine million acres were burned in that province in 1923, instead of the 3,000,000 reported by the provincial government.

Barnjum asserts that not a pulp company in Canada is operating at a profit, and contends that every paper company would be operating at a loss if a proper charge were made for depreciation of properties and loss through depletion of limits from various causes. The remaining stand of timber in Canada he says, is smaller than that of the United States, but withal the federal government displays no intention of trying to intelligently protect the remaining resources. He's through, and intends to become a U. S. citizen after disposing of his Canadian interests.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

PRE-ELECTION promises have never been regarded as negotiable paper, but the many postponements and other contingent declarations of business men during the past three months should be followed up.

Run over the local list for such names! Write to your "specials" to follow-up such prospects in the national field!

YOU can sell the photographers in your city some advertising right now! The Christmas rush for photographs will soon be on, and many photographers will not be able to handle their orders. However, if people started having their sittings now, it would mean more business. Perhaps some photographers would offer a discount for early sittings! You can get this advertising, and it will run until Christmas.—R. John Gibler, 2100 Pine St., St. Louis, Mo.

The Santa Ana Register, of Southern California, found it a good stunt to get ten of the independent filling stations of the city to come in on a weekly advertisement used for the purpose of getting the people of the territory to patronize the independent stations. The theme of these advertisements was that the filling station is a home town industry and so is worthy of home town patronage. All the names and addresses of all the filling stations which were in on the proposition appeared in each advertisement in the three months' campaign conducted by the independents.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

Cash in on your football games. One good stunt is to take a page using the top as a heading with appropriate football cuts of players in action, announcing the game and giving the details of the contest. For the remainder of the page, divide each column of the paper to represent a line on the football field, making the page look as if it were a football field laid out with only the eight lines. Each of the columns can be sold to some concern, sporting goods, restaurants, smoke shops, etc. It works.—Chas. H. Carson, Roanoke, Va.

Cross word puzzles are the rage just now and one Cleveland theatrical house found it got wonderful results from using a cross word puzzle for an advertisement. Keith's Palace theater ran a puzzle as a paid advertisement and offered six free tickets to the one who solved it and sent the answer in first. A total of 4,361 replies were received next day, most of them by special delivery. This ought to be a good dollar puller for business concerns in all lines and in all sections.—M. R. H.

The Market Basket Page pulls two full pages for a Middle West newspaper. Recipes and helpful hints are included under the heading. These are surrounded by special offerings of various merchants. A fine idea in so many towns where there is unusual competition among a group of grocers.—George C. Marcley.

Do you run a job press in connection with your newspaper? If you do, now is the time to get Christmas work from the merchants. Mailing folders, letterheads, pamphlets and letter inserts are needed now to help boost sales. Bright colored Christmas price tags on goods make them sell quicker. Get up a few ideas and go after this profitable business.—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

Some Saturday or light day, get a restaurant proprietor to run his Sunday menu in the center of a page and around it run ads of buttermaker, dairy, ice man, baker, butcher, grocer, laundry, cigar-maker, etc. It's easy to get them in and tie up with a customer in this way. Donald O. Ross, Washington, Iowa.

Interesting and constructive of civic betterment are the suggestions printed each day by the Washington (D. C.) Herald, under the title "What is Wrong With Traffic Here." From society debutantes who drive motor cars, prominent professional and business men, city officials and taxi drivers these suggestions emanate.—C. M. Littlejohn, Washington, D. C.

Let editors have their reporters interview people in the public eye on matters pertaining to literature. What does President Coolidge read? Is Davis familiar with the verse of Edna Millay? What literary genius inspires Governor Bryan? What does La Follette think of Mencken? Such a galaxy of facts would not only interest the public, but it would also serve as a guide post to those Bohemians who judge a man by the books he reads, and perhaps influence them in their political choices. Anyway, let's try it!—Hyman Gershon.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

IF you want to build up your Letters From Readers department, use one communication each day in a box on the first page and invite other readers to submit their views on the subject of the first writer. It's a sure-fire way to get your readers' viewpoints.—R. C. Bolton, Jr.

"Where the South Bend Tribune May be Purchased by Travelers" was the subject of a half-page ad displayed in a recent issue of that newspaper, listing the news dealers in cities where the Tribune may be obtained. Your subscribers when away from home would like to know where they may obtain their favorite paper. Such an ad gives them just that information.—Robert L. Beard, Fort Wayne, Ind.

In every city there are especially dangerous corners which are as yet unguarded by traffic cops. A service to the public would be performed in pointing out the most dangerous ones and thus emphasizing the necessity for avoidance or precaution which may ultimately mean the establishment of a new traffic regulator.—C. M. Litteljohn, Washington, D. C.

Many city folks imagine all a farmer has to do in the winter time is to sit around the fire and take it easy. You can set them straight with a good feature that will please both the rural and urban reader.—B. A. T.

With winter almost here motorists have the tendency to perform repair work upon their automobiles within their private garages. Write up a story calling their attention to the accumulation of the poisonous carbonoxide gas, produced by allowing the motor to run. Many fatalities due to this careless practice occur yearly. In addition to a news story, it is a well given tip to mankind.—A. Sauers, Logansport, Ind.

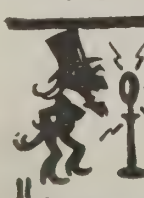
Society features! Even if your town is a little town,, it has at least a dozen women's clubs. Many women belong to more than one club. Few women know much about those to which they do not belong. A series of very short features telling about the women's clubs in your town, decribing one each day, will make an interesting feature for your society page. Too, by listing the members of each club along with its description, you get people's names into the paper. And that's what they look for! You can put this feature over big. And it's new!—R. John Gibler, St. Louis, Mo.

NEA NEA

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

Write for samples and rates



NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Here's Ours

F	R	A	N	C	H	I	S	E
O	A	R		A		O	A	T
P		T	A	T	O	U		C
	C		N	A	P		U
M	O	N	U	M	E	N	T	S
	T		R	A	N		E
F		P	A	R	S	E		H
E	G	O		A		L	O	O
B	A	L	A	N	C	I	N	G

6 Days a Week.
2 col. Puzzle, 1 col. Solution.
Complete Mat
THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE
373 Fourth Ave., New York City

A SERIAL FOR
Any locality, any reader, any season.
E. J. Rath's latest fiction success
The Dark Chapter
By the author of
"The Nervous Wreck"
SERVICE FOR AUTHORS, INC.
Dept. I. 33 West 42nd Street
New York City

"Listening in on the United States"
by Robert D. Heinl
Washington D.C.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFFICE

A Leacock Laugh is a Laugh that Lingers!
STEPHEN LEACOCK
"Ace of Humorists"
Once-a-week
Illustrated by KESSLER
Metropolitan Newspaper

All-Star Features
Comics
Magazine Pages
Editorials
Special Articles
Fiction
Send now for
THE GREEN CATALOG
of
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
M. Koenigsberg, President
NEW YORK CITY

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

New York State
MUST BUY ITS FOODSTUFFS

In New York State there are 8,589,844 people known as "city folks." These 8,589,844 people can eat a lot of food, which they must buy, since they cannot grow what they eat.

Besides these 8,589,844 food consumers, hundreds of thousands of people from all parts of the country—all parts of the world, in fact, come to New York State on frequent trips—and must also be fed.

The United States Census Statistics of Occupations show that 90.7 per cent of the people are engaged in various manufacturing, trading, professional, clerical and domestic pursuits.

IT IS HARD TO IMAGINE MORE IDEAL MARKET CONDITIONS FOR FOOD PRODUCTS OF ALL KINDS

In this market is represented nearly one-tenth of the total population of the United States.

There are 29,203 retail grocery and delicatessen stores in the State of New York. Of these retailers, 18,914 are in New York City, the others are scattered throughout the state.

The influence of the New York Daily Newspapers is one-tenth that of all other newspapers in the United States.

These daily newspapers represented in this list form a powerful combination for successful business building.

THE GREATEST MARKET PLACE ON EARTH

		Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News	(E)	21,987	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press	(M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press	(S)	53,649	.13	.13
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat	(E)	7,502	.04	.04
†††Auburn Citizen	(E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News	(E)	8,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press	(E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle	(S)	77,839	.22	.22
Buffalo Courier and Enquirer	(M&S)	78,058	.18	.13
Buffalo Courier	(S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News	(E)	125,618	.25	.25
Buffalo Evening Times	(E)	100,236	.18	.18
Buffalo Sunday Times	(S)	100,005	.18	.18
*Buffalo Express	(M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express	(S)	53,362	.18	.14
†††Corning Evening Leader	(E)	8,307	.04	.04
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser	(E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
Geneva Daily Times	(E)	5,537	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican	(E)	6,852	.035	.035
Ithaca Journal-News	(E)	7,308	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post	(M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press	(E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus	(E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News	(E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star	(E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York	(E)	253,763	.60	.54
†New York Times	(M)	352,100	.70	.686
†New York Times	(S)	563,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune	(M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune	(S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World	(M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World	(S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World	(E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette	(E)	18,103	.055	.055
*Port Chester Item	(E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise	(E)	12,110	.05	.05
Rochester Times-Union	(E)	66,574	.20	.13
†††Syracuse Journal-Union	(E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record Journal	(M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1923.
A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

RIGHT AGAIN!

WHILE David Lawrence was the only correspondent to predict with accuracy the result of the close election in 1916, there were many writers who in 1920 and 1924 forecast as he did the Republican victory.

David Lawrence had the distinction this year however of being the first to announce definitely that the election would not be thrown into the House, that La Follette would not be a decisive factor in the West and that the third party would not get the electoral vote of more than one or two states.

On October 14th, fully three weeks before election, David Lawrence, after completing a personal investigation of the West, disclosed the emptiness of the La Follette claims and demonstrated that the election of Coolidge was inevitable.

On October 31st, summing up the results of a 9,000-mile journey from coast to coast, David Lawrence said President Coolidge would receive at least 333 votes and a possible 366. This was not guesswork but a reporter's feat in getting the facts from those who knew the situation in all the Northern and Western States.

Readers have confidence in David Lawrence's dispatches because he devotes himself every day to the task of interpreting national affairs, gathering his material first hand and without prejudice.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York
Eighth Floor
World Building

Chicago
Fourth Floor
Daily News Building

San Francisco
Third Floor
Spreckels Bldg.

Paris
Fourth Floor
19 Rue d'Antin

Digitized by the Internet Archive

LIBRARY U. OF L. URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA
3 0112 072556811